

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

I. ANSWER, UNDER THE OLD SYSTEM.

Its general Form, Nature, and Effect.

1. In a redemption suit, the bill charged that the habere was executed "on or about the 18th of Nov., and possession was on that day taken." Answer:—"It is not true, as in bill untruly stated, that said habere was executed on the 18th of Nov., for that the defendant believed it was executed on the 17th of Nov." Held, that the precise day of the execution of the habere was sufficiently put in issue.—Fitzgerald v. Hussey, 3 I. E. R. 319. (E.E.).

2. If a case, wholly destructive of the foundation of the plaintiff's title, is put forward in the answer of one defendant, and established, the Court will not give effect to it as between the plaintiff and that defendant merely; but it shall enure to the benefit of the other defendants, though they have not made that case by their answers.—Wilson v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

3. The answer of one co-defendant acknowledging the charge cannot read against the other.—Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.)

4. The officer of this Court ordered to attend in the Court of Ch., at the hearing of a cause, with an answer sworn in this Court, the signature to which was impeached as a forgery in the Ch. cause.—Grove v. Bowen, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.)

5. Husband and wife entered a joint appearance, and the husband alone answered. Held, the answer was a nullity, and the plaintiff might proceed as for want of an answer.—Thompson v. Lockwood, 8 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

6. Leave to answer an amended bill after replication is not subject to all the same rules as leave to file a supplemental answer.

If a special case be made, the Court may permit the defendant to file an answer to the amended bill notwithstanding the replication, although the notice of motion does not set out the contents or substance of the intended answer.

The bill was amended on the 1st of April, and notice was served on the defendant that she was not required to answer. She was at the time charged with two criminal offences by the plaintiff. Bills were found on the 9th, and the trials lasted from the 18th to the 21st, when she was acquitted. The plaintiff's solicitor was also his agent for the prosecution. The replication was filed on the 22nd. The Court gave the defendant liberty to answer the amended bill, although she had not, pursuant to the 53rd G. O., served notice of her intention to answer the amendments, and the time for so doing had expired.—Scott v. S., 9 I. E. R. 461. (R.)

I. 1. b. As a Defence.

7. Quare—Whether it is necessary to rely on the Statute of Limitations in the answer, in order to entitle a party to set it up in the office?—Drought v. Jones, 2 I. E. R. 303. (C.)

8. The futility of a defence resting on an unproved prior inconsistent conveyance, evidenced by admissions in an answer to another suit, observed on.

Expenditure on the estate claimed with plaintiff's knowledge, but chiefly in his minority: Held, no defence.—Scott v. S., 11 I. E. R. 487. (C.)

I. 2. Effect of Admission by Answer.

9. An admission in an answer of a document as stated in the bill, qualified by a reference to the document itself for greater certainty, will not authorise the reading of the document from the bill.—Dowling v. Legh, 9 I. E. R. 413; 3 Jon. & L. 716. (C.)

10. In a suit by a principal against his agent for an account, a sum admitted by answer to be due will be ordered to be paid into Court.—Blake v. Comins, 1 I. Jur. 330. (R.)

11. The bill in an administration suit erroneously stated, in respect to dates and other particulars, agreements for leases to the testator. His heir-at-law in his answer admitted the agreements to be of the purport stated in the bill, but for greater certainty referred to the original agreements when produced. He died. The suit was revived as against his son and heir-at-law, T., a minor, who, in his answer (by his guardian) to the original and revived bill, also admitted the agreements to be of the nature set forth in the bill. A decree directed the Master to take an account of the real and personal estate of the testator, and to state whether the premises agreed to be demised to him formed part of his real or personal assets. The original agreements were not produced before the Master; but T. in his charge made an admission similar to that contained in his answer. The Master by his report found that the premises formed part of the testator's personal estate. To that report T. filed exceptions. After the cause was set down for hearing, on the report, exceptions, and further directions, T.'s solicitor, who had also been solicitor for T.'s father, for the first time obtained copies of the agreements. Counsel for T. mentioned at the hearing that the agreements differed from the description given of them in the bill, and tended to show that the testator took a freehold estate in the premises. Other parties in the cause objected to the admission of the original agreements in evidence in opposition to the previous admission in the pleadings. The Court yielded to that objection, and overruled the exceptions; but upon a special motion afterwards made,—Held, that the Master should be directed to review his report; and that T. should be permitted to file a supplemental charge in the office, putting in issue the original agreements, but should pay the costs of the motion, and the costs arising on the new reference to the Master.

That, before the decree to account, T. would have been permitted by supplemental answer to rectify the erroneous admissions; but that, after the decree, leave to file a supplemental answer could not be granted.—Carbery v. Cox, 2 I. C. R. 377; 2 I. Jur. 25. (C.)

1. A statement of an admission, in the petitioner's affidavit in reply, is not a compliance with the rules of equity pleading, requiring admissions to be put in issue.—Corry v. Cremorne, 12 I. C. R. 136; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.)

2. The bill stated that the defendant, a stock-broker, had converted old £3½ per cent. stock, which he had received as the attorney for the plaintiff, to his own use; and prayed a re-transfer. The defendant answered that, on the dissolution of a partnership between him and H., and the formation of two new establishments for carrying on the business of brokers, he, by the directions of the plaintiff, and other customers of the old firm, transferred to H. a large specified sum, of like stock, in which was included the stock belonging to the plaintiff and the other customers of the old firm, who were similarly circumstanced. The plaintiff amended his bill, stating the defence as a pretence; and interrogated as to the quantity of stock vested in the old firm at the time of the dissolution; the quantity that belonged to the customers of the old firm at that time; the name of, and quantity of stock belonging to each of them; the name of, and the quantity of stock belonging to each of the customers of the old firm who transferred their business to H., and the same of those who continued their business with the defendant. Held, that the defendant was bound to answer the interrogatories so far as they related to the old £3½ per cent. stock, but not as to other stocks.

That the defendant was bound so to answer, although to give the discovery sought would be a breach of faith on his part with his other customers.—Flanagan v. Williams, 2 Jones, 557. (E.E.)

3. An information against distillers charged them with distilling large quantities of spirits for which they had not paid duty; they having evaded payment by concealing the distillation, and pretending that their distillery had been silent during the time when the spirits were distilled. The information required them to discover the actual quantities of wort fermented in the distillery, and prayed an account of the duties payable to the Crown on spirits distilled by them. The Att.-Gen. waived all penalties and forfeitures. Held, that the defendants were bound to answer the charges fully; and could not protect themselves on the ground that the facts charged would, if coupled with other facts, show that they had been guilty of a conspiracy to defraud the Crown.—The Att.-Gen. v. Conroy, 2 Jon. 791. (E.E.)

4. A defendant who means to rely on his being a purchaser for value without notice, must, by his answer, deny notice, although it is not charged in the bill that he had notice.—Ireland v. Kidd, Jon. & Ca. 249. (E.E.)

5. The Commissioners of Ch. Don. filed a bill against A. and B., seeking a discovery of the estates in fee-simple, fee-tail, and other freehold and leasehold estates of the testatrix, and all her personal estate and effects, &c.; praying that an account might be taken of her freehold and leasehold estates, &c., and that the title deeds relating thereto might be brought into Court. The bill did not state that the personal assets of the testatrix were insufficient for the payment of her debts; but averred that the defendants had paid a specific bequest in her will mentioned. Demurrer to so much of the bill as sought discovery of the estates tail of the testatrix, and of her personal estate and effects (except chattels real), allowed.—Commissioners of Ch. Don. v. Espinasse, 3 I. E. R. 324. (R.)

6. Three testamentary trustees were made defendants to a bill; and, although in the same interest, answered separately. The Lord Chancellor said, that circumstances might justify the defendants in putting in separate answers; and directed the Master, in taxing the costs, to allow to the trustees the costs as of one answer only, unless he should find that any one had properly put in a separate answer, and then to allow his reasonable costs accordingly.—Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158. (C.)

7. Notwithstanding the 34th G. O. of March 1843, leave was given to defendant to file his answer after an order to take the bill as confessed against him, although more than three years had elapsed after the order to take the bill as confessed was pronounced, and the cause was in the Lord Chancellor's term-list of causes for hearing; the plaintiff having been himself guilty of delay, there being a full affidavit of merits, and the defendant being put under terms not to postpone the hearing of the cause.—Cruise v. Shiel, 6 I. E. R. 132. (R.)

8. The 45th G. O. applies as well to cases in which there is but one defendant, as to those in which there is more than one defendant. Therefore, a sole defendant is not bound to answer more than the interrogatories in the bill.—Millar v. M., 6 I. E. R. 308. (R.)

9. H. was seized in fee of estates in T. and L., and for life of estates in K., with remainder to his son, W., in tail, who had an equitable title to have part of T. settled to the same uses as K., and who claimed a lien under deeds on the rest of T. and L. They, by deed, reciting that H. was entitled to T. and L. in fee, and to K., for life, remainder to W., in tail, subject to charges and trusts, and reciting the embarrassment of H.; that advances had been, and that others were intended to be made by D. to pay debts; con-

18th of Nov., and possession was on that day taken." Answer:—"It is not true, as in bill untruly stated, that said habere was executed on the 18th of Nov., for that the defendant believed it was executed on the 17th of Nov." Held, that the precise day of the execution of the habere was sufficiently put in issue.—Fitzgerald v. Hussey, 3 I. E. R. 319. (E.E.).

1. It is not the right of the defendant to file his answer after a decree on sequestration against him, upon payment of the costs thereof.—M. Carney v. O'Neil, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.).

2. If a case, wholly destructive of the foundation of the plaintiff's title, is put forward in the answer of one defendant, and established, the Court will not give effect to it as between the plaintiff and that defendant merely; but it shall enure to the benefit of the other defendants, though they have not made that case by their answers.—Wilson v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.).

3. The answer of one co-defendant acknowledging the charge cannot read against the other.—Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.).

4. The officer of this Court ordered to attend in the Court of Ch., at the hearing of a cause, with an answer sworn in this Court, the signature to which was impeached as a forgery in the Ch. cause.—Grove v. Bowen, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.).

5. Husband and wife entered a joint appearance, and the husband alone answered. Held, the answer was a nullity, and the plaintiff might proceed as for want of an answer.—Thompson v. Lockwood, 8 I. E. R. 367. (R.).

6. Leave to answer an amended bill after replication is not subject to all the same rules as leave to file a supplemental answer.

2. The bill stated that the defendant, a stock-broker, had converted old £3½ per cent. stock, which he had received as the attorney for the plaintiff, to his own use; and prayed a re-transfer. The defendant answered that, on the dissolution of a partnership between him and H., and the formation of two new establishments for carrying on the business of brokers, he, by the directions of the plaintiff, and other customers of the old firm, transferred to H. a large specified sum, of like stock, in which was included the stock belonging to the plaintiff and the other customers of the old firm, who were similarly circumstanced. The plaintiff amended his bill, stating the defence as a pretence; and interrogated as to the quantity of stock vested in the old firm at the time of the dissolution; the quantity that belonged to the customers of the old firm at that time; the name of, and quantity of stock belonging to each of them; the name of, and the quantity of stock belonging to each of the customers of the old firm who transferred their business to H., and the same of those who continued their business with the defendant. Held, that the defendant was bound to answer the interrogatories so far as they related to the old £3½ per cent. stock, but not as to other stocks.

That the defendant was bound so to answer, although to give the discovery sought would be a breach of faith on his part with his other customers.—Flanagan v. Williams, 2 Jones, 557. (E.E.)

3. An information against distillers charged them with distilling large quantities of spirits for which they had not paid duty; they having evaded payment by concealing the distillation, and pretending that their distillery had been silent during the time when the spirits were distilled. The information required them to discover the actual quantities of wort fermented in the distillery, and prayed an account of the duties payable to the Crown on spirits distilled by them. The Att.-Gen. waived all penalties and forfeitures. Held, that the defendants were bound to answer the charges fully; and could not protect themselves on the ground that the facts charged would, if coupled with other facts, show that they had been guilty of a conspiracy to defraud the Crown.—The Att.-Gen. v. Conroy, 2 Jon. 791. (E.E.)

4. A defendant who means to rely on his being a purchaser for value without notice, must, by his answer, deny notice, although it is not charged in the bill that he had notice.—Ireland v. Kidd, Jon. & Ca. 249. (E.E.)

5. The Commissioners of Ch. Don. filed a bill against A. and B., seeking a discovery of the estates in fee-simple, fee-tail, and other freehold and leasehold estates of the testatrix, and all her personal estate and effects, &c.; praying that an account might be taken of her freehold and leasehold estates, &c., and that the title deeds relating thereto might be brought into Court. The bill did not state that the personal assets of the testatrix were insufficient for the payment of her debts; but averred that the defendants had paid a specific bequest in her will mentioned. Demurrer to so much of the bill as sought discovery of the estates tail of the testatrix, and of her personal estate and effects (except chattels real), allowed.—Commissioners of Ch. Don. v. Espinasse, 3 I. E. R. 324. (R.)

6. Three testamentary trustees were made defendants to a bill; and, although in the same interest, answered separately. The Lord Chancellor said, that circumstances might justify the defendants in putting in separate answers; and directed the Master, in taxing the costs, to allow to the trustees the costs as of one answer only, unless he should find that any one had properly put in a separate answer, and then to allow his reasonable costs accordingly.—Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158. (C.)

7. Notwithstanding the 34th G. O. of March 1843, leave was given to defendant to file his answer after an order to take the bill as confessed against him, although more than three years had elapsed after the order to take the bill as confessed was pronounced, and the cause was in the Lord Chancellor's term-list of causes for hearing; the plaintiff having been himself guilty of delay, there being a full affidavit of merits, and the defendant being put under terms not to postpone the hearing of the cause.—Cruise v. Shiel, 6 I. E. R. 132. (R.)

8. The 45th G. O. applies as well to cases in which there is but one defendant, as to those in which there is more than one defendant. Therefore, a sole defendant is not bound to answer more than the interrogatories in the bill.—Millar v. M., 6 I. E. R. 308. (R.)

9. H. was seized in fee of estates in T. and L., and for life of estates in K., with remainder to his son, W., in tail, who had an equitable title to have part of T. settled to the same uses as K., and who claimed a lien under deeds on the rest of T. and L. They, by deed, reciting that H. was entitled to T. and L. in fee, and to K., for life, remainder to W., in tail, subject to charges and trusts, and reciting the embarrassment of H.; that advances had been, and that others were intended to be made by D. to pay debts; conveyed T., L., and K., in trust to receive the rents, and thereout pay D. past and future advances to H. and W., or either of them, or to pay incumbrances; and on further trust, at D.'s request, by sale or mortgage, the sums necessary to pay D. past or future advances made by him to discharge incumbrances: that the rents remaining after paying the incumbrances should be subject to such annuity for H. as D. should appoint; the overplus to form a fund to make up £30,000, for younger children's portions; after H.'s death, payment of the incumbrances, and the raising the £30,000 for W. in fee. Proviso: that during H.'s life the lands should first be charged with an annuity for W.; proviso empowering D. to restrict the raising of the £30,000: proviso, that nothing therein should invalidate the securities then or thereafter to be vested in D., who should stand in respect of all his advances in the same priority as the incumbrances paid by him. Held, that the deed was not void as against a creditor of H., as containing a power of revocation, or as intended to delay creditors.

F., a simple contract creditor of H., and fully acquainted with this deed, treated for a loan for H. from an Insurance Co. to pay off D., after which F. was to get a second mortgage for his own demand. He afterwards obtained a judgment, and filed the bill to impeach the deed. Sales to a large amount were had under the deed. W. settled his remainder in fee (which settlement was also impeached), and on several other occasions, for nearly twenty years, the deed had been acted on. Held, that F., by his own acts had precluded himself from objecting to the deed, even if it was impeachable; and that, having been thus acted on so long, it could not now be disturbed.

That whatever rights H. took under the deed were subject to the plaintiff's judgment; and, as D. had made no appointment of H.'s annuity, an account was directed to ascertain what allowance had been made to H. under it.

That F.'s right attached only from the time he had applied for a receiver on foot of his judgment, and the account should be limited to that time.

F.'s judgment was impeached in the answer of H. as fraudulently obtained, and his account as usurious and improper. Held, that this case could not be made by answer; but liberty was given to file a cross-bill.—Myers v. The Duke of Leinster, 7 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

1. Plaintiff, by bill, sought to establish his right to fees and dues for weighing and stallage of goods in a market, whether weighed or not, alleged to be immemorially payable in lieu of all other fees and dues in the market; and for an account of those dues claimed to be payable by the defendants from a period at which they had ceased to frequent the market, and had established themselves in shops opening into the street in which the market was held. Plaintiff deduced title, by grant from the lord of the market, of the offices of clerk of the markets and weighmaster within the manor, and "of all fees and dues to the said offices appertaining." The bill alleged that the lords of the market had not been in the habit of receiving those fees, but of granting them to the clerks and weighmasters, and that the plaintiff's predecessor had so enjoyed them, or a composition in lieu of them, from the defendants. Held, that the grant to the plaintiff did not pass those fees, which, if legally payable, belonged to the lord of the market; and plaintiff having failed to show any title whatever to the relief prayed, could not except to the answer for insufficiency in not affording a discovery in aid of an account, the right to which depended on that title.

Semble—Where a bill is demurrable in substance, by reason of a total want of setting out of title to the relief prayed, the 38th and 79th G. O. enable a defendant to decline or omit answering any interrogatory relating to matters connected with the relief prayed, or the title to it.—[See G. O. (1867), 58.]

Quære—Whether in such case defendant might so decline answering other parts of the bill; and whether, if a bill be demurrable on any grounds, he may so decline, according to the decisions of Wigram, V. C., in Tipping v. Clarke, 2 Hare, 383, and Drake v. D., 2 Hare 647; Kaye v. Wall, 4 Hare, 127?—Russell v. Beakey, 8 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

2. To a legatee's bill the executor admitted assets sufficient to pay the legacies, but relied on his right to retain them as an indemnity for the contingent liability on the testator's covenants, and did not set out the amount of the assets. Held, that the answer was insufficient, and that he was bound to set out that amount.—M'Auley v. M'A., 9 I. E. R. 142. (R.)

3. A statement or charge in a bill, though it relates only to one debt, puts the matter of it in issue as to all of them. Therefore, they cannot decline to answer an interrogatory founded on it.—Sherlock v. Disney, 13 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

4. The bill in an administration suit erroneously stated, in respect to dates and other particulars, agreements for leases to the testator, whose heir-at-law, in his answer admitted the agreements to be of the purport stated in the bill, but for greater certainty referred to the original agreements when produced. He died. The suit was revived against his son and heir-at-law, T., a minor, who in his answer (by his guardian) to the original and revived bill also admitted the agreements to be of the nature set forth in the bill. A decree directed the Master to take an account of the real and personal estate of the testator, and to state whether the premises agreed to be demised to him formed part of his real or personal assets. The original agreements were not produced before the Master, but T. in his charge made an admission similar to that contained in his answer. The Master, by his report, found that the premises formed part of the testator's personal estate. To that report T. took exceptions.

After the cause was set down for hearing, on the report, exceptions and further directions, T.'s solicitor, who had also been solicitor for T.'s father, for the first time obtained copies of the agreements. Counsel for T. mentioned at the hearing that the agreements differed from the description given of them in the bill, and tended to show that the testator took a freehold estate in the premises. Other parties in the cause objected to the admission of the original agreements in evidence in opposition to the previous admission in the pleadings. The Court then yielded to that objection, and overruled the exceptions; but upon a special motion being afterwards made—Held, that the Master should be directed to review his report; and that T. should be permitted to file a supplemental charge in the office, putting in issue the original agreements, but should pay the costs of the motion, and the costs arising on the new reference to the Master.

That before the decree to account, T. would have been permitted by supplemental answer to rectify the erroneous admissions; but that, after the decree, leave to file a supplemental answer could not be granted.—Carbery v. Cox, 2 I. C. R. 377; 2 I. Jur. 25. (C.)

I. 4. When the Discovery would tend to criminate, or to create a Forfeiture or Penalty.

1. An information against distillers charged them with distilling large quantities of spirits for which they had not paid duty: they having evaded payment by concealing the distillation, and pretending that their distillery had been silent during the time when the spirits were distilled. The information required them to discover the actual quantities of wort fermented in the distillery, and prayed an account of the duties payable to the Crown on spirits distilled by them. The Att.-Gen. waived all penalties and forfeitures. Held, that the defendants were bound to answer the charges fully; and could not protect themselves on the ground that the facts charged would, if coupled with other facts, show that they had been guilty of a conspiracy to defraud the Crown.—The Att.-Gen. v. Conroy, 2 Jon. 791. (E.E.)

2. When a penalty is imposed upon the doing of an act which a party covenants not to do, he cannot refuse to discover whether he has done it or not, on the ground that it will subject him to a penalty.

If a man enter into a covenant of this nature for payment of a sum of money if he do a particular act, he cannot protect himself from a discovery if he do the act, under the allegation that that discovery will subject him to a forfeiture; because after having covenanted to pay money for doing the act, he cannot be heard to say that it is a penalty, in order to protect himself from discovering whether he has done the act. If he choose to do the act, he must pay the stipulated sum.—French v. Macale, 4 I. E. R. 574; 1 Con. & L. 459; 2 Dr. & War. 269. (C.)

I. 5. When the Defendant may, by Answer, refuse to answer further.

I. 6. What Facts are or must be put in issue by the Answer.

3. A defendant, who means to rely on his being a purchaser for value without notice, must, by his answer, deny notice, although it be not charged in the bill that he had notice.—Ireland v. Kidd, Jon. & Ca. 249. (E.E.)

4. A party, who has failed in the defence set up by his answer, cannot be permitted to try another defence depending on matters not put in issue by the answer, and which, therefore his adversary had not any means of disproving.—Persse v. P., 7 Cl. & F. 279; West, 110.

5. When letters or conversations are relied upon by the plaintiff as taking the case out of the Statute of Limitations, they should be stated in the bill.—O'Hara v. Creagh, L. & T. 65; 3 I. E. R. 179. (E.E.)

6. The Statute of Limitations cannot be relied upon by a defendant who has not made that case by his answer.—Purcell v. Cole, Long. & T. 454. (E.E.)

7. In all cases previous to the recent Statute, if the defendant meant to rely upon the Statute of Limitations, he should do so in his pleading.—Cummins v. Adams, 2 I. E. R. 898. (E.E.)

8. A compromise made after bill filed may be relied on by answer, if it completely disposes of the rights in question; but if its validity be doubtful, or it requires something further to carry it into effect, a bill must be filed to execute or set it aside. A bill claimed a share of property. An agreement to dispose of it, and divide the proceeds in a certain manner, was made, but never carried out. The agreement being impeached by amendments in the bill, the cause was allowed to stand over.—Bristow v. B., 12 I. E. R. 329. (C.)

I. 7. In conjunction with Demurrer.

9. A clerk of a patron, who had recovered in a quare impedit, filed against the wrongfully instituted clerk a bill for an account of intermediate profits; and charged waste by cutting trees, &c. Defendant demurred to so much of the bill as sought an account of the waste, &c., or discovery relating thereto, and put in to the residue an answer offering thereby to account for the trees cut. Held, that the demurrer should be overruled, because the answer to one of the charges of waste had overruled the demurrer; and because the parts of the bill demurred to were not distinctly specified, though the demurrer was taken only to part of the bill.—Crampton v. Bishop of Meath, S. & Sc. 297. (R.)

1. Demurrer to the whole relief. Answer to part of the discovery.

Quære—Whether the demurrer is not overruled by the answer?—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

I. 8. Answer conjoined with Plea.

[See G. O. (1867), 62, 64.]

2. Plea to the whole relief and discovery, except that sought by interrogatories specified in the plea. Answer to the excepted interrogatories. Held, that the answer overruled the plea, notwithstanding the 66th G. R.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

I. 9. What constitutes Scandal or Impertinence in an Answer.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 70, 155.]

3. The defendant being required to set forth whether a document in the plaintiff's possession, purporting to have been signed by the person under whom the defendant derived, was correctly stated in the bill. Held, not prolix, to state that in a book belonging to that person, he found an entry which he believed to be the document referred to in the bill, and to set out a verbatim copy of it in the answer, it differing slightly from the document in the bill.

When the defendant is required to set forth a document at length, it is not impertinent to set forth merely an abstract of it.

When the answer set forth a verbatim copy of a letter of plaintiff to defendant, which was not called for by the bill, nor stated in the answer to be evidence of any fact stated therein as part of defendant's case—Held, that it was prolix and impertinent, though the latter might be material.

An interrogatory called for accounts. Setting out very minute accounts—Held, not to be prolix or impertinent, although they were unnecessary.—Barry v. Harrison, 2 I. E. R. 60; Jon. & Ca. 278. (E.E.)

4. When a defendant by his answer sets up as a defence to plaintiff's case, that the original grant, in relation to which plaintiff had come to a Court of Equity, ought not to have been executed, in general he will not be allowed to impeach the grant in such a way, but must file a cross bill.—Ker v. Dungannon, 4 I. E. R. 343; 1 Dr. & War. 509; 1 Con. & L. 335 (C.)

5. To enforce a defendant's equity by impeaching securities, a cross bill is necessary according to the English practice.

Semble—In Ireland, it may be done by answer.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 668, n.

6. In a suit by the purchaser of a charge upon an estate to enforce his right, it is not competent to the owner of the estate (the defendant) to attempt to reduce the claim, because plaintiff being incompetent to purchase the charge, is only entitled to the amount actually paid for it by him: he must file a cross bill for that purpose.—Carter v. Palmer, 11 Bli. N. S. 397.

I. 11. b. To gain the benefit of the Statute of Frauds and Statute of Limitations.

7. A defendant who does not by pleading claim the benefit of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40, cannot rely upon it in the office, in bar of the account.—Walsh v. W., Jon. & Ca. 52. (E.E.)

8. The defendant's answer submitted, that by reason of the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40, the plaintiff was barred from maintaining his suit against him as the heir-at-law of the conuzor, and that it was a good defence, both as to the real and personal estate of the conuzor; and he relied upon the Statute as if he had pleaded the same. Held, that it was competent for him, as personal representative of the conuzor, to rely on the defence given him by that Statute.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 3 I. E. R. 179; L. & T. 65. (E.E.)

9. When the grantor of an annuity, charged upon lands, sells the lands subject to the payment thereof, in a suit by the annuitant, to which the grantor is not a party, to raise the arrears of the annuity, the Court will not, to avoid circuity of action, prevent the purchaser from setting up the 42nd sec. of 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, against the annuitant.—Kyme v. Dignam, 1 Con. & L. 376; 2 Dr. & War. 295; 4 I. E. R. 562. (C.)

Semle—Mere inconsistency between the proposed matter of defence and the original defence is not sufficient ground for refusing leave to a defendant to file a supplemental answer.—Glacock v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50; 3 I. Jur. 115. (C.)—[Followed: Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)]

2. In pleading a will of real estate it is sufficient to state that it was made in such manner as the law requires for rendering valid devises of real estates, without stating the number of witnesses or mode of execution.—Hatton v. Waddy, H. & J. 601. (E.E.)

3. When a legal remedy to recover a rent-charge exists, a bill in Equity to recover it will not lie, merely because proceeding at Law is difficult. The rule is: that a party must abide by the legal remedy which his deed provides for him, unless the remedy is defeated by fraud, or rendered insufficient by some contingency.—Roberts v. Hughes, Beat Rep. 417. (C.)

4. Semle—If a bill was filed as an illusory proceeding, to evade the Statute of Limitations, the Court might, on a proper application, order it to be taken off the file.—Boyd v. Higginson, 5 I. E. R. 97. (R.)

5. The 12th & 14th G. O. apply to supplemental, as well as to original bills; and when any such bill is filed in violation of those rules, it will be taken off the file of the Court.—Tommey v. White, 6 I. E. R. 308. (R.)—[S. c., 6 Cl. & F. 786; 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 3 H. L. Cas. 49; 4 H. L. Cas. 318.]

6. The 26 G. 3, c. 57 (Ir.), empowers the Crown to grant letters patent to keep a theatre in Dublin, and prohibits all persons from performing plays in Dublin for hire, under a penalty of £300 for each offence, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. Letters patent authorised W. to establish a theatre, and perform plays in Dublin, and contained a clause prohibiting all other persons from doing so, unless duly authorised. Held, that W. could not sustain an injunction bill to restrain unauthorised persons, who opened a theatre, and performed plays contrary to the statute and patent.—Calcraft v. West, 8 I. E. R. 74; 2 Jon. & L. 123. (C.)

7. A., possessed of a term of 820 years in lands and premises at B., in 1822 demised them to C. for 800 years, at a rent of £140, subject to the usual covenants to repair and pay the rent. C. entered and expended money on the premises. Conceiving the rent too high, A., at C.'s solicitation, agreed by letter to reduce it, in consideration of the permanent improvements made, to £130 a-year for the residue of the term. After the date of the letter, C. continued to make improvements; and then sub-let to D., at a fine, at the rent of £140. D. for £100 purchased from C. at a similar reduction in his rent. Thereupon C. handed to D. A.'s letter. For some years A. received the reduced rent, but then insisted on the original rent. C. filed a bill, to which D. was not a party, against A. for specific performance. Held, that D. ought to have been a party.

Semble—At D.'s suit the Court would have entertained a bill for specific performance.—Morgan v. Rainsford, 8 I. E. R. 299. (E.E.)

1. On a bill filed by a termor for years, who had leased for his whole term, reserving a rent, with a power of distress—Held, that a receiver should be refused, since it was doubtful whether the bill could be sustained, ptf. having a remedy at law.—Cremen v. Hawkes, 8 I. E. R. 508; 2 Jon. & L. 674. (C.—[Affg. 8 I. E. R. 158. (R.)])

2. A bill in Equity does not lie to recover the arrears of a rentcharge, unless it be proved that there are circumstances which rendered the legal remedies useless or very difficult.—Brady v. Fitzgerald, 12 I. E. R. 278. (C.)

3. To a bill to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses respecting the execution and attestation of a will of 1845, whereby a will of 1833, under which deft. claimed, was stated to be revoked, deft. pleaded that ptf. put deft., by force, out of a part of the lands, and that the remainder was in the occupation of tenants, under leases, or from year to year, who had not acknowledged ptf.'s title, or paid him rent due; and that ptf. would, by action at law, against the tenants, forthwith try his title. Held, on the authority of Deane v. Clarke, 1 Sim. & Stu. 108, that the plea was good.—Lindesay v. L., 12 I. E. R. 508. (R.)—[Revd.: 1 I. Jur. 289. (C.)]

4. A return made by the registrar of a diocese, in answer to the enquiry of a clergyman whose benefice was under sequestration, enumerating the writs lodged with him, with the dates of the delivery and the sums due, though not proved to be made in virtue of his office, is evidence against the bishop; so are letters of the registrar of a similar character.

The applotment book of a parish is not evidence to prove the value of the benefice in years previous to the establishment of tithe composition in the parish.

A suit is sustainable for an account on foot of a sequestration over a benefice in the diocese against the personal representatives of two successive bishops, and against the present bishop, on the allegation of loss to the creditor by the default of the sequestrator during their respective bishoprics.

Quere—If a sequestration, not issued until the levari on which it is founded is out of return, be not void, although the benefice was in the bishop's hands under a prior sequestration.—Hogg v. Garrett, 12 I. E. R. 559. (C.)

5. Semble—A petition by way of peremptory exception in an interest suit is irregular; and, having an erroneous title, was dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur N. S. 114. (P.)

6. A petition presented under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, praying the extension of a receiver, ought not to be entitled in the suit in which the receiver was originally appointed.—Thunder v. T., 4 I. C. R. 491. (C.)

7. When an administrator has recovered a chattel interest in lands by a decree declaring his costs to be duly charged on the estate, his solicitor cannot file a petition in his own name to realise his own portion of those costs.—In re M'Alister's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 134. (L.E.C.)

II. 2. a. What Facts must be stated; by what Allegations they are put in Issue.

1. Before the Court of Chancery Regulation (Ireland) Act 1850.

8. A defendant, who does not, by pleading, claim the benefit of the Statute of Limitations, cannot rely upon it in the office in bar of the account.—Walsh v. W., Jon. & Ca. 52. (E.E.)

9. Semble—When a bill seeks to open a settled account, some specific error, entitling the party to do so, must be pointed out, even though the transactions at which the account had been settled were impeached, and required subsequent circumstances to confirm them.—De Montmorency v. Devereux, 1 Dr. & Wal. 119. (C.)—[Affd.: 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 7 Cl. & F. 188; West, 64; 4 I. Jur. 403.]

1. In a suit for £6. 1s. 5d. for tithes, the bill did not contain an allegation of any special circumstances arising from combination, or of any right to be ascertained, or any difficulty in the way of proceeding at law. Held, that the bill might have been demurred to, or dismissed at the hearing.—Disney v. Taaffe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 94. (C.)—[Affg. S. & Sc. 105. (R.)]

2. Quere—Whether the evidence of a witness should be read, who had deposed to ptf.'s admission of his having abandoned the contract; the fact of that abandonment, but not the admission itself, having been put in issue by the answer.—Garrett v. Earl of Bessborough, 2 I. E. R. 180; 2 Dr. & Wal. 441. (C.)

3. The general rule was that a bill, filed by the judgment creditor during the conuzor's life, should state that ptf. had issued an elegit. When, however, the conuzor was seized only of an equity of redemption upon a mortgage in fee, and it had been decided on motion that the conuzee was not entitled to issue an elegit—Held, that the bill need not contain that statement.

Neither need ptf. have revived his judgment within a year before.—Handley v. Lord Langford, 2 Jon. 421. (E.E.)

4. Evidence cannot be received of admissions made by a party, unless they are properly put in issue by the pleadings, so that he may have an opportunity of contradicting them.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[See 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 85.]

5. In a bill to foreclose and sell, ptf. set forth so much of a mortgage deed as showed it to be in the nature of a Welsh mortgage, and at the hearing his counsel sought to read in aid of the bill, the deed, which contained an express trust for sale. Held, that it should not be read.—O'Connell v. Cummins, 2 I. E. R. 251. (R.)

6. The bill charged "that A., the surviving executor of B., was long since dead, intestate; although plaintiff has made enquiry, he cannot now set forth the name of the person who, plaintiff is informed, administered to the said B. with his will annexed, since the death of said executors; and plaintiff has applied to the several confederates herein named for discovery of the name of such administrator, but which, although well known to them, they refuse to discover." Demurrer, because B.'s personal representative (who was confessedly a necessary party) was not made a party to the bill, overruled, a sufficient excuse for not making him a party being suggested by the bill.—Ryan v. Cambie, 2 I. E. R. 328. (E.E.)

7. If the frame and prayer of a bill be essentially those of a creditor's bill, the omission of the usual introductory statement—that it was filed on behalf of the plaintiff, and of the other creditors who should come in and contribute, &c., is immaterial, being only matter of form.

A creditor coming in under a decree cannot rely upon a will as creating a trust in his favour, unless it has been sufficiently put in issue for that purpose, by the pleadings, or by the charge or discharge.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 2 I. E. R. 361. (E.E.)

8. In the Court of E. E., a puisne mortgagee need not, in a bill for foreclosure and sale, offer to redeem a prior mortgage. The puisne mortgagee may insist on the sale. The prior mortgagee cannot resist it, but must be paid his debt and costs of suit first. If there be a judgment or other incumbrance prior to the first mortgage, such prior incumbrance must be paid out of the purchase-money, and that in priority even to the prior mortgagee. This rule holds good, even though such judgment or other prior incumbrance happens to be vested in the puisne mortgagee who files the bill for foreclosure and sale. In the Court of Ch., the puisne mortgagee must by his bill offer to redeem the prior mortgage.—Perrott v. O'Halloran, 2 I. E. R. 428. (E.E.)

9. When the assignee of a deceased insolvent files a bill to administer his after-acquired estate, on behalf of the dissatisfied creditors, he ought to specify in his bill the debts remaining unpaid.—Byrne v. B., Fl. & K. 433. (R.)—[Affd.: 4 I. E. R. 621; 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189. (C.)]

10. Semble—That when a bill is filed by two stockholders entitled to separate sums of stock, on behalf of themselves and all other holders of the same stock, praying relief; if it appears that one of the plaintiffs is not entitled to relief by reason of some equitable circumstances peculiar to himself, the Court may, nevertheless, in that suit, give the relief sought, and is not bound to dismiss the bill.—Corballis v. Undertakers of the Grand Canal, 3 I. E. R. 29. (E.E.)

11. A sequestrator appointed over a parish, at the suit of judgment creditors of the incumbent, presented a memorial, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, for arrears of tithe composition, due before the sequestration issued. A sum was accordingly lodged in the Treasury, on account of those arrears. Before payment the incumbent died, and the memorial having stated, by mistake (as alleged), that he was entitled to the arrears, his personal representative claimed the money against the sequestrator. The officer refused to pay either party without the order of this Court. A bill was filed in the names of the sequestrator, and the judgment creditor in whose behalf he was appointed, as co-plaintiffs, against the personal representative of the incumbent, stating the foregoing facts, and praying that the sequestrator might be decreed to be the person entitled to receive the money. Held, that a general demurrer should be allowed to the bill upon two grounds: first, that the sequestration was not retrospective, but attached the future accruing tithe only; and, therefore, did not entitle the plaintiffs to the money; secondly, that, at any rate, the sequestrator could have had no interest or title in this suit, and should not have been made a co-plaintiff. —Egan v. Heenan, 3 I. E. R. 50. (R.)

1. A bill for an injunction to restrain debts from disturbing ptf.'s possession of ferries cannot be sustained as a possessory bill, unless there be an averment of three years' possession. A statement that ptf. had recovered judgment against one of the debts in an action for disturbing him in the enjoyment of the ferries is not enough.

A ptf., in applying ex parte for an injunction, must state all the facts fairly. If any material fact be suppressed, that is ground for dissolving, with costs, the injunction in this Court, and in the Court below.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 3 Dr. & War. 183; 2 Con. & L. 76. (C.)

2. Letters or conversations relied upon by ptf. as taking the case out of the Statute of Limitations, should be stated in the bill.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 3 I. E. R. 179; Long. & T. 65. (E.E.)

3. The bill was for payment of a debt due by a banking company, formed pursuant to 6 G. 4, c. 42. It stated that the personal estate of the company was sufficient to pay their debts, and prayed for an account of the personal estate only. On demurrer, Held sufficient. The Bankers Act, 33 G. 2, c. 14, is not repealed by the 6 G. 4, c. 42. Upon the stoppage of payment by a joint-stock banking company formed under the latter statute, a trust is created—in favour of the creditors, and affecting all the property of the shareholders—under the Bankers Act, which may be administered by this Court, at the suit of any creditor, against the public officer of the company, instituted without making the other creditors of the shareholders parties; it being stated in the bill that the co-partnership assets are sufficient to discharge the liabilities of the company, and it not appearing that the shareholders have any liabilities other than those of their co-partnership.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 232; Flan. & K. 100. (R.)

4. In a suit for an account of an intestate's personal estate, the bill sought to charge the administrator with wilful default, and contained charges to that effect. The decree directed only the ordinary accounts. Held, that the Court would, nevertheless, direct an enquiry as to wilful default, if there appeared on the Master's report facts to warrant enquiry. The 24th Rule does not take away the discretion of the Court respecting the rate of interest to be charged upon balances in the hands of executors, administrators, &c.—Cuffe v. C., 3 I. E. R. 469. (C.)

5. In a suit for the administration of assets, the report, but not the bill, made a case for charging the executor with the interest upon balances in his hands. Held, that the proper mode in which to bring the question before the Court was to present a petition stating the special matter, and praying that the cause might be set down to be heard for further directions.—Cleary v. C., 3 I. E. R. 562. (E.E.)

6. A decretal order declared (amongst other things) that P. and C. were entitled to certain sums. To a bill filed to (amongst other purposes) set aside that order, P. and C. were not made parties. Demurrer for want of parties. Held, that, the interest of P. and C. not appearing on the order as set out in the bill, the debt. could not refer to the order itself.—D'Arcy v. Beytagh, Fl. & K. 481. (R.)

7. The Court will not allow a bill to be filed without the name of a solicitor affixed thereto.—O'Shea v. —, Flan. & K. 666. (R.)

8. Matters of title must be stated precisely, and not left to surmise, or to be spelled out by inference. From the statement that the ptf. "heard Mrs. O. died in or about the year 1830" (the time of the death being material), the Court would not infer that she died in that year.—Cocking v. Golding, 4 I. E. R. 169. (R.)

9. In an ordinary case, it is quite clear that it would be necessary to allege and prove an error in a settled account, in order to entitle the party to surcharge and falsify it.—Lawless v. Mansfield, 4 I. E. R. 192; 1 Dr. & War. 556. (C.)—[See Blagrove v. Routh, 2 Kaye & J. 509; 8 De Gex, M. & G. 620.]

10. The original bill had been filed by a ptf., who afterwards became insolvent; Held, that the title of the assignee appointed subsequently was good by relation.—Cashell v. Kelly, 1 Con. & L. 246; 2 Dr. & War. 181. (C.)

11. An allegation that "the trustees, or some them," are in collusion with the other debt., is an uncertain and imperfect averment.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 266. (R.)

12. The rule of this Court respecting the opening of an account, requires errors to be charged in the bill as well as proved at the hearing, and it is founded on justice, to prevent a defendant being brought here in the dark and taken by surprise—to allow him an opportunity of explaining them by statement and evidence.—Holland v. H., 6 I. E. R. 418. (C.)

13. Ptf. by bill, filed to establish a lease, alleged that one of them claimed under one of several lessees, not stating which; "that all the legal and equitable estate and interest of W., the original lessee, by mesne assignments or otherwise, duly came to and was vested in the ptf. and one C." (who was not a party to the suit), "and that they were equitably entitled to the portions of the lands in their possession respectively" Held, on de-murrer; that the title of ptf. was not stated with sufficient certainty, the rule of Law and Equity being the same, that the ptf. must allege his own title particularly; that in a suit to establish the lease, all the tenants should be before the Court; and that there was not, therefore, a sufficient privity established between the ptf. and deft.

Tenant for life made a lease exceeding his power, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment for himself and those claiming under him. He and the remainderman subsequently conveyed the estate in fee subject to the tenants' leases; Held, that this did not amount to a confirmation of the lease by the remainderman, there being no contract between him and the tenants, nor any stipulation between the tenant for life and remainderman, that the latter should not impeach the lease.

Quere—Is the insanity of the ptf., at the time of the filing of the bill in his name, but without his authority, available on demurrer?—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 283. (R.)

1. The omission in the prayer of a bill, that it may be taken as a cross-bill, is not material; nor a test to try the question whether it be a cross-bill or not, when the pleading is substantially that of a cross-bill.

If a bill have the properties of a cross-bill, though not professing to be such, it should not be filed without the affidavit and certificate required by the 60th G. O.—Mahony v. M., 7 I. E. R. 629. (C.)

2. A judgment creditor, in applying for a receiver under the Judgment Acts, should state every material fact affecting his demand. If he withhold any he will not be allowed his costs.

In calculating the amount of his demand, the creditor is bound to deduct such interest as is barred by the Statute of Limitations.—Lane v. Townsend, 8 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

3. The Court will not suffer a party who has not relied on the Statute of Limitations by his discharge, to do so by a supplemental discharge.—Kelly v. Rutledge, 8 I. E. R. 378. (R.)

4. Plaintiff, claiming as assignee of F., sought an account of the real and personal estate of F., to which he was entitled under his father's will; and alleged by his bill that F., trading in Australia, was duly adjudged an insolvent according to the meaning and effect of the laws there with respect to insolvent debtors; that all his estate, &c., there and in this kingdom, thereupon became duly vested in H., and afterwards became duly vested in plaintiff "in manner as appears by the petition of plaintiff to C., Chief Justice; the fiat of C., the adjudication and vesting order signed by C., and the other orders in the matter, to which the ptf. refers," &c. F. was a minor at the time of the insolvency. His parents had previously resided and died in this country. Held, on demurrer, that the ptf.'s title, as assignee, was sufficiently stated; the profert of the proceedings in the foreign Insolvent Court being sufficient proof of the preceding allegations that F. was duly adjudged, &c.

It does not seem contrary to natural justice, that if a minor may trade by the laws of a foreign country, he may also be made an insolvent there; and the Court, upon demurrer, will assume the law of the Colony to be so.

Semble—An infant trading in a foreign country may acquire a domicile there.—Stephens v. M'Farland, 8 I. E. R. 444. (R.)

5. J. bequeathed, amongst other property, a chattel real to his executors, in trust, after payment of two legacies, for H. for life, remainder to B. absolutely. H. paid off the legacies and debts, and died intestate. His personal representative, filing a bill against the executors to be repaid these sums out of the general assets of J., and for an account, did not make B. a defendant by subpoena; but served him with notice under the 15th G. O. A decree to account having been obtained, the ptf. filed the present bill, charging that the general assets were deficient; that the executors had, without consideration, given B. possession of the chattel real; and making him alone a defendant by subpoena, but serving the executors with notice under the 15th G. O.; and praying that the bill might be taken as an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill in aid of the original decree; and for the same relief against B. in respect of the chattel real as was had against the executors in the original cause. Held, that the bill was demurrable, the executors not having been made parties to it.

Semble—The relief sought by the two bills was inconsistent, one seeking relief against parties against whom the other waived all relief.

Quere—Is the service of notice under the 15th G. O. a waiver of any right to seek relief against the party?—Harpur v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 456. (R.)

6. Conversations, containing admissions which go to the gist of the case, ought to be put in issue by the bill.—Donohoe v. Conrahy, 8 I. E. R. 679; 2 Jon. & L. 688. (C.)

7. Plaintiff, by bill, stated that A., by deed, conveyed to trustees, to the use of B. for life, remainder to his issue male, lands which were held by A. "under and by virtue of certain leases or agreements for leases for lives renewable for ever, or certain terminable leases or agreements for terminable leases;" the dates and particulars of which plaintiff could not set forth, by reason of the same and the other muniments of the title being lost, or in defendant's possession, having been delivered to him by B. on a sale to him of B.'s interest. The plaintiff, as first tenant in tail, sought a discovery of the deeds, and that renewals obtained by B. in his own name might be decreed a graft on the original leases, and for an injunction to stay waste. Held, on demurrer, that the reasonable construction of the statement was, that the lands were held by A. at the time of the execution of the deed; that the statement of the title of A. was not, under the circumstances, open to demurrer, inasmuch as the same principle which excuses a ptf. from setting out a deft.'s title ought to excuse him setting out the title of a party under whom ptf. derives, while the deft. wrongfully withholds the possession of the title deeds from him.

Semble—Such objection cannot be made upon a general demurrer for want of equity.

Held also, that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—Hill v. Mill, 9 I. E. R. 164. (R.)

1. Specific execution of a written agreement for a lease decreed at the suit of the tenant, with several additions contemporaneously agreed on by parol, set up by the answer, but omitted in the bill; the ptf. paying the costs of the suit.—Warren v. Thunder, 9 I. E. R. 371. (C.)

2. A judgment creditor, filing a bill to sell his deceased debtor's freehold estate, need not aver on the face of his bill that he has sued out an elegit on his judgment.—Ryan v. Cambie, 9 I. E. R. 378. (E.E.)

3. The ptf., by bill, filed in 1846, to raise the amount of a judgment of 1781, did not state that the judgment had been ever revived, or that payment had been made of any part of the principal or interest, or that there was any acknowledgment in writing of the right thereto; but stated a suit instituted for the same purpose in 1808, by the persons then entitled to the judgment, against the executors and devisees of the conuzor and others; which bill stated that the conuzor of the judgment died on the 8rd of March 1803, having first made his will, duly attested, and thereby charged his debts on his real estate, and created an express trust for payment of his debts. The date of the will was not stated. Held, on demurrer, that the Statute of Limitations was a bar to the ptf.'s demand, a devise for payment of debts not preventing the setting up the statute, where the time had run before the testator's death.

Even assuming the ptf. was entitled to the benefit of this suit of 1808, that nothing was stated on the bill to take the case out of the operation of the 8 G. 1, c. 4, the statute in force when the suit of 1808 was instituted.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 10. (R.)—[Affd.: ibid, 265. (C.)]

4. In a suit to raise the amount of a judgment after the death of the conuzor, seeking the usual accounts of his real and personal estates, it was never necessary, previous to the suit, to sue out an elegit.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

5. A statement or charge in a bill, though it relates to only one deft., puts the matter of it in issue as to all the defts.—Sherlock v. Disney, 18 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

II. 2. a. What Facts must be stated, and what Allegations proved, under the Ct. of Chancery Regulation (Ireland) Act 1850.

[See 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, ss. 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, and G. O. of July 1851.]

6. It is indispensable that in every petition under the Court of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, s. 11, the documents relied on shall be fully set out; or that copies of them shall be furnished to the Court and to the parties.—In re O'Reilly, petitioners, 1 I. C. R. 208; 3 I. Jur. 205. (C.)

7. The petition should state such legal proceedings as, within the knowledge of the petitioner, have been taken respecting the subject matter of the petition.—Bartlett v. O'Donnell, 3 I. Jur. 37. (C.)

8. When a suit has been instituted and a cause petition subsequently presented for the same object, the petition should state the existence of the suit. It is no objection to a motion to discharge the order made by the Court that the respondent did not appear in the Master's office.—M'Conkey v. Gwynne, 3 I. Jur. 146. (C.)

9. An irregularity in the heading of a cause petition is waived by the filing of the affidavits in reply.—Bell v. M'Carthy, 3 I. Jur. 190. (C.)

10. A petition presented to obtain an order for the appointment of a person to convey to a purchaser an estate or right in law, belonging to a party to a suit, barred by a decree or order thereon, must be further entitled in the matter of the "Trustees Extension Act, 1852."—Ex parte Conroy, 6 I. Jur. 26. (R.)

11. A petition to appoint new trustees should be entitled in the matter of the trusts of the settlement and of the Act.—Therry v. T., 6 I. Jur. 61. (R.)

12. In an administration suit the Court does not, before decree, order the executor or administrator to bring money into Court, unless on a distinct admission that he has assets in hands. In a case referred to the Master, under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, s. 15, an executor de son tort by his discharge stated that he had not any sum whatever of assets in his hands; but was in advance beyond any sum which had been realised out of the assets. Held, that the Master's order directing him to bring money into Court was irregular.

A man was discharged as an insolvent in 1848. In 1850 his wife became entitled, on the death of her brother, to a moiety of the personal estate, as one of the next-of-kin. The assignee of the insolvent filed a cause petition against the executor de son tort of the brother, stating that he sued "as such assignee," but without stating that he was a creditor of the insolvent, or that he had entered judgment against him pursuant to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, ss. 78, 79, and without making the wife of the insolvent a party. Held, that the suit was unsustainable for want of title (the property not being vested in the assignee), and for want of parties; and that the Master had no power, in a matter referred to him under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, s. 15, to make a decretal order directing the executor to bring a part of the assets into Court, and appointing a receiver to recover the residue.

A suit may, under particular circumstances, be sustained in the name of a schedule creditor of an insolvent, to make the property of the insolvent, acquired after his discharge, liable to his debt; but the assignee cannot maintain such a suit unless he be a creditor, or has entered up judgment against the insolvent, pursuant to the 78th & 79th secs. of the Insolvent Act.—Glenny v. Woolsey, 4 I. C. R. 636. (R.)

1. In a suit against a land agent, an account of what he might, without wilful default, have received, will not be directed by the decree, unless a special case be made by the petition, and proved.—Brooke v. Elliott, 6 I. C. R. 310; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 362. (R.)

2. Matters not put in issue by the petition, or by amendment thereof, cannot be relied on at the hearing of a cause petition. To put them in issue by an affidavit in reply is not sufficient.—Murphy v. Jackson, 7 I. C. R. 189; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 132. (R.)—[Affid.: 7 I. C. R. 502; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 288. (C.A.)]

3. A petitioner who means to rely upon the respondent's waiver of a right arising out of the contract, must, in the petition, put the waiver specifically in issue.—Barry v. Burns, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (C.)

4. Waiver of a demand under the Tenantry Act, if the petitioner intends to rely upon it, should be put in issue by the petition; not by an affidavit in reply.—Ex parte Bull, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 332. (R.)

5. An executor lodged in Court the amount of a charitable legacy, and presented a petition praying a reference to obtain the Master's approval of a scheme. Held, that the petition ought to be entitled under the 52 G. 3, c. 101; and ought to be sent to the Att.-Gen.—In re the Trusts of Kelly's Will, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 273. (R.)

6. A testator described himself as of L. in Ireland, at present at St. D. in Grenada. Having died there, the Court assumed that Ireland was his domicile.

To raise the point, the question of domicile should be pleaded, as well as the law of Grenada, if different from that of Ireland.—Kennedy v. Kelly, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 326. (P.)

7. When an agreement is alleged in a petition for specific performance, it is not necessary to put in issue the written document as evidence of that agreement.

Lands were conveyed by a registered deed, "subject to existing leases and lettings." The vendor had previously contracted to grant a lease, and there was written evidence of that agreement. The vendee had no express notice of it. Held, that the vendee was bound to execute a lease according to the terms of that agreement.—[Reversing Rolls decision: 11 I. C. R. 510.]—Rice v. O'Connor, 12 I. C. R. 424; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 109. (C.A.)

8. Semble—That a judgment creditor claiming against an assignee for value, should aver notice, to give himself any equity.—In re Grady's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 154. (L.E.C.)

9. General allegations of wilful neglect in a petition against a land agent, though supported by specific evidence of neglect in particular cases, are not sufficient to entitle the petitioner to an enquiry respecting wilful neglect.—Bond v. M'Watty, 13 I. C. R. 174; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

10. A petition which makes unsustained charges of fraud, is not, on that account, to be dismissed, if there be in it facts properly pleaded and sustained in proof, which, if not connected with the charge of fraud, would confer a right to relief.—[Wilde v. Gibson, 1 H. Lds. Cas. 605, considered and explained.]—Beale v. Billing, 13 I. C. R. 250. (C.)

11. It is erroneous to describe a cause petition as under the 15th sec., until an order of reference has been made. — v. Keogh, 13 I. C. R. 495. (C.)

12. The rule of pleading, which, to justify the Court in decreeing an account for wilful default against a land agent, requires some instance of wilful default to be specified in the petition, and proved at the hearing, is not satisfied by the petition containing reference to accounts furnished by the agent which show remission of rents by him, though there is evidence establishing that the remission was wrongful.—Pennefather v. Bolton, 14 I. C. R. 335; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 221. (C.A.)—[Varying the Rolls order: 14 I. C. R. 234; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 45.]

13. H., tenant for life, with remainder to his children as he should appoint, in default of appointment to them equally, appointed to his eldest son, subject to charges for his adult younger children.

The tenant for life and the appointees joined in executing to the appellant a mortgage, to secure a debt of the tenant for life.

The eldest son afterwards filed a petition, alleging the appointment to have been made in pursuance of an agreement between the tenant for life and the appellant; and that the mortgage was a fraud on the power.

The petition also contained charges of actual fraud by the appellant upon the appointees.

The petition prayed that the mortgage might be set aside, as fraudulent, and as a fraud on the power. Held, that, at the hearing, the petition might be amended, by praying that the deed of appointment might be set aside.—Stelton v. Flanagan, 14 I. C. R. 484. (C.A.)—[See 15 I. C. R. 303.]

II. 2. b. Mode of Statement.

1. In pleading a will of real estate, it suffices to state it was made in such manner as the law requires for rendering valid devises of real estates, without stating the number of witnesses, or the mode of execution.—Hutton v. Waddy, H. & J. 601. (E.E.)

2. If the frame and prayer of a bill be essentially that of a creditor's bill, the omission of the usual introductory statement, that it was filed on behalf of the ptf. and the other creditors who should come in and contribute, &c., is immaterial; such averment being matter of form merely.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 2 I. E. R. 361. (E.E.)

3. An allegation that "the trustees, or some of them," are in collusion with the other debt., is an uncertain and imperfect averment.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 266. (R.)

II. 2. c. Offer to pay just Demands.

4. The proviso in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, exempting from the operation of the Act purchasers who became such before its commencement, applies only to purchasers for value.

Quere—Whether a judgment creditor, made a respondent to a petition by a puisse incumbrancer, can ever require an offer to redeem him in the petition.—Gillichan v. M'Gusty, 5 I. C. R. 348. (C.)

[See under Ch. Reg. Ir. Act, 1850:—Carey v. Doyle, 5 I. C. R. 104. (R.); O'Brien v. Consideane, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 5; Richardson v. Goodman, 3 I. Jur. 317; Irvin v. Frew, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 72.—See 4th General Order 1857.]

II. 2. d. *Waiver of Penalties: Forfeiture.*II. 2. e. Multifariousness.

5. A., by will, devised his lands subject to his debts, to D. and H., in moieties, for life, with a power to each to charge £10,000 upon his moiety. D. by will appointed the £10,000 in different shares among his children. Upon demurrer to a bill filed by the appointees under that will, to raise that sum, and praying for an account of the real and personal estate of A., and, if necessary, of the personal estate of D.; Held, that the bill was not multifarious.—D'Arcy v. Beytagh, Fl. & K. 481. (R.)

6. Quere—When a bill contains statements made merely to prevent a demurrer for multifariousness, whether the objection may be taken at the hearing, if the statements are unproved?—Nixon v. Robinson, 7 I. E. R. 520; 2 Jon. & L. 4. (C.)

7. The administrator of the executor of a surviving trustee of money charged on real estate—Held, not to represent the trustee in a suit to raise money; and a demurrer for want of parties allowed on that ground.

Semble—A bill by same person to raise two sums charged on different estates vested in the same debt. is not multifarious, though some of the persons interested in the one estate are not interested in the other estate.—Van Reitzenstein v. Magan, 12 I. E. R. 415. (R.)

8. Bill by A., B., and C., against X. tenant for life, and Y. tenant in tail in remainder. Y. filed a bill against A., B., and C., and D., solicitor to the ptf. in the original cause; and prayed that the bill might be taken as a cross bill against A., B., and C., to set aside the mortgage and other deeds; an account against D. of the sums due to him on a judgment obtained by him after the mortgage; and that bills of costs, which formed part of the sum secured by the judgment, might be taxed. Demurrers for multifariousness by A., B., and C., and by D., were allowed.—Crofts v. Allman, 1 I. Jur. 118. (R.)—[Affirmed on appeal, 2 I. Jur. 9. (C.)]

9. By a mortgage deed, executed by a tenant for life and remainderman, the solicitor for the mortgagees was appointed receiver over the mortgaged lands at a percentage. He covenanted that he would apply the rents in payment of head rents and the interest of the mortgage, and pay the residue to the mortgagees.

A foreclosure bill having been filed, the remainderman filed a cross bill against the mortgagees and solicitor, impeaching the mortgage as fraudulent; praying that policies of assurance should be kept up out of the rents to indemnify the ptf. against the mortgage; a declaration that the mortgagees were bound to keep down the head rent; an account of the rents against them as mortgagees in possession; and an account against the solicitor of the sum for which a judgment was entered up as a collateral security. The bill did not pray costs against the solicitor. Held, on demurrer, that the solicitor having no interest with respect to any part of the relief sought, except the last, the bill was multifarious both as to him and the mortgagees.

In a suit to impeach a deed for fraud, a solicitor or agent concerned in procuring it may be made a party, but the bill must pray costs against him.—Crofts v. Allman, 12 I. E. R. 451. (R.)

10. All the parties to the original bill being dead, the cause was set down in the names of the parties to a supplemental bill only. Held, regular; that parts of the answer to the original bill could be read as of an answer in the cause at hearing; and that it was not to be treated as an answer in another cause.

The allegation made in a bill to prevent a demurrer for multifariousness was unproved; but it appeared that the accounts might be such as to render the suit not multifarious. Held, an objection for multifariousness, though made by the answer, could not be sustained.

Quere—If the objection should not be pleaded?—Anderson v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

1. Bill to raise £1500, secured by marriage articles and also by mortgage, against J., tenant for life of the land charged, and trustee in whom the £1500 would vest. The bill stated that J. was insolvent, and should be removed from the trust, and the fund transferred; and as evidence thereof stated that he refused to transfer another sum to which plaintiff was entitled, but which did not form any part of the trust fund. The bill also prayed that the £1500 might be raised by a sale, and that J. might be removed from being such trustee; and the fund transferred. A demurrer for multifariousness was overruled. Burke v. Jennings, 2 I. Jur. 179. (R.)

2. When a bill would not be sustainable, a petition under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, cannot be supported. Such a petition is open to an objection for multifariousness.—Cuming v. Taylor, 1 I. C. R. 25; 3 I. Jur. 65. (C.)

3. A. tenant for life without a leasing power, made a lease in 1832 to F. for three lives or 31 years, G., the sister of E. and the petitioner in the suit, being one of the c. q. vies. F. left the country in 1834, and had not been since heard of. G. entered into possession of the demised premises. The rent having fallen into arrear, an ejectment was brought by A. Subsequently A. and G. arranged that G. should pay the arrear and give up possession; and should receive an annuity for life to the amount of the profit rent in the premises. There was no written agreement produced, except letters from A., and B. his son, to G. relative to the payment of the annuity. Upon the death of A., B., his heir-at-law, took possession, being also A.'s personal representative. Having refused to continue paying the annuity because A. had no power to create such a charge beyond his own life, G. filed a petition praying for an order that B. should pay what was due on account of the annuity; a decree that the annuity was an equitable charge upon the lands demised; and a receiver, and that the annuity should be payable out of the assets of A. Held, that G. was entitled to a personal annuity for life; and that the assets of A. were liable thereto.

That the real estate was not liable to the charge.

That the petition was not bad for multifariousness or misjoinder.—Gibbon v. Cloncurry, 7 I. Jur. 171. (C.)

II. 2. f. What amounts to Scandal and Impertinence.

4. The statement in a bill of facts relevant and material to the equity of the case stated, and the relief prayed, is not scandalous, though it be such as the deft., whom it concerns, should not be obliged to answer. If it be libellous, the person affected thereby may have an action at Law.—Everard v. —, 1 I. E. R. 421. (R.)

II. 2. g. Charging Part.

5. A petitioner claimed a legacy by her petition and charge; and claimed priority for it over other legacies, by reason of a contract with the testatrix that the legacy should be bequeathed to her in consideration of her services as companion. The alleged contract was denied by the discharge, and no evidence was given to prove it. Held, that having claimed as legatee, by her petition and charge, she could not, on an appeal from the Master's decree, abandon the legacy and claim as creditor.

That she could not claim as a creditor, having given no evidence to support her claim as such.—Dyer v. Bessonett, 4 I. C. R. 382. (R.)

II. 2. h. 1. Interrogatories.

Before the Court of Chancery Regulation Ireland Act 1850.

6. Plaintiff may read part of defendant's answer to a personal interrogatory.—Sherrock v. Chartres, 2 I. E. R. 230, n. (R.)

7. No prayer to remove trustees is necessary to give the Court jurisdiction to remove them.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.)

8. A bill, not containing a prayer for an answer or for subpoena, cannot be sustained as a common bill for injunction on title.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 6 I. E. R. 57; 3 Dr. & War. 183; 2 Con. & L. 76. (C.)

9. When a defendant, a merely formal party to a suit, resides out of the jurisdiction—Semble, the bill should merely pray against him the usual process of subpoena.—Wallace v. Mitchell, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.)

10. The costs of a suit, to set aside a deed for fraud, will not be given against a solicitor, party to the fraud, and party in the suit, in respect of other liabilities, unless the bill prays them against him.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

11. Plaintiff, by bill, stated, that having a charge affecting the lands of M., held by defendant under a lease, an arrangement was entered into between them; that defendant should, in lieu of plaintiff's charge, grant him an annuity for the lives of himself and his sister, charged on properties, including M., and an agreement for other security. Defendant having broken penal covenants in the lease of M., his interest was evicted by the landlord, C., between whom and defendant an agreement was then entered into to give defendant a new lease. The bill charged various acts to show that defendant evaded performing his agreement, and in order to extinguish plaintiff's claims on the lands, aided C. to evict the interest in them on a previous promise of a new lease, and prayed that the new lease might be decreed liable to plaintiff's demand. Defendant demurred to the relief and discovery, assigning as a cause, inter alia, that part of the discovery was immaterial, being in relation to the new lease, as to which plaintiff had no title to relief. Held, that the demurrer in relation to this relief could not be sustained, and that the interrogatories being in part material, the plaintiff was entitled to the discovery; that the demurrer, so far as related to the relief of part performance, with indemnity and compensation, would, if so confined, be good; but the demurrer, being bad as to the former part, was bad altogether.—Southwell v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 7. (R.)

1. When a bill seeks a discovery of necessary parties, an objection for want of parties will not in general be allowed.

A statement or charge in a bill, though it relates only to one defendant, puts the matter in issue as to all the defendants. They cannot therefore decline to answer an interrogatory founded on it.

A bill, that lands might be declared bound by marriage articles, stated that the defendant, A., pretended that neither he nor any person in trust for him was seized of any part of the lands bound by the articles, but at other times admitted the contrary, and refused to discover the particulars to the plaintiff; and contained interrogatories as to incumbrances and parties. Another defendant was required to answer the interrogatories, but he filed a plea of want of parties, which was overruled. Sherlock v. Disney, 13 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

II. 2. h. 2. Interrogatories under the Court of Chancery Regulation (Ireland) Act 1850.

[See 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, ss. 6, 7, & 8; General Order of 1851, No. 16, now repealed by The Chancery Act 1867.]

2. Interrogatories having been annexed to a cause petition without the leave of the Court, an order was made that they should be allowed to stand, reserving the costs occasioned by them until the hearing of the cause.—O'Malley v. Denny, 1 I. C. R. 118. (R.)

3. Practice as to annexing interrogatories to petitions under Chancery Regulation (Ir.) Act 1850.—Sheridan v. Cannon, 1 I. C. R. 245; 3 I. Jur. 250. (C.)

4. If interrogatories be annexed to the petition, and the respondent is required to answer them by the notice, he must move for security for costs before he takes a step in the cause, and before the time for answering has expired.

In England the motion may be made at any time before the defendant takes a step in the cause; in Ireland at any time before he has taken a step in the cause, unless he is in contempt.—Long v. L., 1 I. C. R. 618. (R.)

5. Semble—That, when an interrogatory is leading, the Court will, at the hearing, suppress the deposition to that interrogatory. Where, however, only part of an interrogatory is leading, the Court will not suppress more of the deposition than replies to that part.—Wright v. Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695; 3 I. Jur. 188. (C.)

[The mode of filing interrogatories under

The Chancery (Ireland) Act 1867, 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, is regulated by secs. 63, 65, 72, and 87, and General Orders of 1867, Nos. 41–45.]

II. 2. i. Prayer.

[Subpœna abolished by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 54.]

6. When a bill is filed to raise the amount of a legacy given to a child of the testator, interest for maintenance will be decreed (if the case be a proper one therefor) although it is not specifically prayed for.—Russell v. Dickson, 1 Con. & L. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 133; 4 I. E. R. 339. (C.)

7. When parties, against whom no direct relief is sought by the bill, are resident out of the jurisdiction, the proper course is, to pray subpœna against them, with liberty to serve them with the notice under the 15th G. O. The Court may then give leave to serve the subpœna and the notice on the defendant, out of the jurisdiction, pursuant to the 22nd G. O. Fulton v. D'Orsay, 5 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

8. When a defendant, who is merely a formal party to a suit, resides out of the jurisdiction; Semble—The bill ought merely to pray the usual process of subpœna against him.—Wallace v. Mitchell, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.)

9. It is not enough to state that persons who, in respect of interest, are necessary parties to a suit, are out of the jurisdiction; the bill must pray process against them when they come within the jurisdiction.—Bayly v. Cumming, 10 I. E. R. 405. (R.)

10. The replication should not be filed against persons against whom process is prayed, only when they come within the jurisdiction.—Stephens v. O'Shaughnessy, 11 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

11. A bill of discovery in aid of a defence at law will not lie against one who is not a party to the record at law.

If a bill prays relief and discovery, the plaintiff cannot waive the relief, and insist on the discovery.

A bill by the directors of an Insurance Company stated matters which amounted to a legal defence, and prayed a discovery; that a policy of assurance might be delivered up to be cancelled; and an injunction to stay an action at law brought on it. The bill was against A., administratrix of the assured, and B., assignee of the policy, in concert with whom, and by whose directions the bill charged the policy to have been effected; but who was not a party to the action. The Court refused the injunction on the bill as a bill of relief, because it stated facts amounting to a defence at law, or as a bill of discovery, because it prayed relief which the plaintiff could not waive.—Anderson v. Dowling, 11 I. E. R. 590. (R.)

12. An agreement "to sell the interest of A. in the lands of Whiteacre" does not absolve

A., the vendor, from the necessity of proving his lessor's title.

Nor is there any waiver of that necessity by the mere fact of the vendee having taken possession of the lands before production of the lessor's title.

When an agreement for sale of a leasehold is silent as to the production of the lessor's title, parol testimony is admissible in proof of facts and circumstances constituting a waiver by the vendee of production of the lessor's title.

Scmble—That if such a waiver be proved, the Court will declare it to be established, although the bill contains no prayer to that effect.—Wright v. Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695; 3 I. Jur. 138. (C.)

1. In and before 1853, J. was indebted to S. by simple contract. At that time J. was possessed of considerable farming stock and household furniture; of a judgment for £2500; and of leaseholds; he was also seized of a freehold interest in the lands of D. The leaseholds and freeholds were subject to a charge in favour of his sister H. J. being indebted to his sister M., in Jan. 1853, assigned to her his farming stock at a valuation, in part payment of the debt. By deed of the 25th May 1853, he conveyed to her his interest in D., for £600; and by another deed assigned the judgment. By deed of the 28th of June 1853, he mortgaged the leaseholds and household furniture to M. to secure £3200. This mortgage was to be redeemable on the 28th June 1856; and contained a provision that M. should not, when in possession of the lands, be charged with a greater sum than £150 per annum; and that if J. died before the period for redemption without paying the sum due, the right to redeem should be at an end.

By deed of 7th Jan. 1854, J., in consideration of the charge in favour of H., conveyed his equity of redemption to a trustee for her. This purported to be an absolute conveyance, but contained a provision, that it should not prejudice the charge. S. obtained a judgment against J. on foot of his demand, on the 29th April 1854, and registered an affidavit of ownership against J. S. afterwards filed a petition charging that those deeds were executed with intent to defeat and delay creditors; that the property of J., if duly applied, was sufficient to pay the claims of M. and H., and also the petitioner's debt; and that £3200 was not due from J. to M. The petition prayed that the assignments and conveyance might only stand as a security for so much as was actually due to M., and prayed redemption of the mortgage.

M. by her answering affidavit relied on accounts settled by J. on the 28th June 1853, and relied on the conveyance of D. as an absolute sale for £600.

Affidavits in reply were filed by the petitioner, alleging that D. was worth more than £3000. Held, that the petitioner was not, as claiming under J., bound by the accounts settled by him; but that, not having impeached them by his petition, they were to be treated as binding on him.

That the petition having been filed before the period for redemption arrived, the prayer for redemption of the mortgage could not be sustained.—Stanton v. Donohoe, 4 I. C. R. 554; 7 I. Jur. 37. (C.)

2. It is a sufficient compliance with the 6th G. O. of 1851, to name the respondent in the petition with the description of "respondent," and to refer to him in the prayer as "the said respondent."—Nowlan v. Evans, 5 I. C. R. 356. (C.)

3. The board of the College of Physicians resolved that B. should be accepted of as a tenant of a farm for 31 years, at a rent of £1. 10s. 0d. per acre, as the nominee of P., a former tenant, who had, by another resolution, been allowed to dispose of his interest. F., B.'s solicitor, acting under a general authority, wrote to the solicitor of the board that, in consequence of B.'s dangerous illness, he had not finally concluded with P., and could not take out the lease. After the death of B., P. filed a cause petition for specific performance of the agreement contained in the resolution. The solicitor for the College in his affidavit stated an agreement of 1846, for a lease for 21 years, at a rent of £1. 17s. 0d. per acre, with the brother of P., who had formerly been a tenant of the farm, and whose administrator and creditor P. was, of which agreement P. was ignorant. P. amended his petition, and as such administrator prayed in the alternative a specific performance of that agreement. Held, that, having regard to the 19th G. Order of May 1857, the misjoinder could be set right at the hearing, by amendment of the prayer.

Quære—Whether that Order applies to misjoinder of causes of suit as well as to misjoinder of parties?

On the authority of Lindsay v. Lynch (2 Sch. & Lef. 1) that the petition should be dismissed as praying relief in the alternative under two inconsistent agreements; the Court gave leave to amend the petition by abandoning the relief prayed by the original petition. Power v. The College of Physicians, 7 I. C. R. 104. (R.)

4. After an absolute order for the sale of lands in the I. E. Court, a petition was presented in the Court of Chancery, praying a sale of the same lands, and in the meantime a receiver. Held, that the receiver was ancillary only to the sale, and that the prayer for the sale being bad under 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, the petition must be amended by praying the receiver only, and this without prejudice to any question as to costs incurred in the Master's office on the petition before amendment.—O'Beirne v. Reade, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (R.)

II. 2. j. Affidavits annexed.

5. A., on behalf of herself and her infant children, filed a bill against B., tenant in common with her husband, C., alleging that at C.'s death, B. entered into receipt of the whole rent, claimed the whole, and kept possession of the title deeds, for want whereof pifs. could not proceed at law. The bill prayed that the ptfs. might be put into possession of C.'s moiety; an account of its rents since his death; and for the deeds. A. did not make an affidavit that the deeds were not in her possession. Held, that such an affidavit is not necessary in a case in which ptfs. have a right to sue in Equity alimunde, and that a demurrer for want of it was bad in substance.

The demurrer did not state specifically the parts of the relief or statement to which it applied. Held, bad in form.

The mother was a co-ptf. Held, not a misjoinder.—McCarthy v. Hatch, 9 I. E. R. 206. (R.)

1. A petition under the Court of Chancery Regulation Ireland Act 1850 may be verified by the affidavit of the solicitor, when the short form prescribed by the Act cannot be used; but the facts must not be verified in that form.—Bennett v. Cooper, 3 I. Jur. 3. (C.)

2. No summary order can be made on a petition not verified pursuant to the 15th sec. of the Court of Chancery Regulation Ireland Act 1850. In such case it must be heard as a cause petition.—Stackpoole v. Stott, 3 I. Jur. 52. (C.)

3. In general cause, petitions should be verified by the petitioner.

Form of order on an application that a petition be received without the affidavit of the petitioner.—Montgomery v. Eyre, 1 I. C. R. 120; 3 I. Jur. 28. (R.)

II. 2. k. Suppression of Facts.

4. In applying for a receiver under the Judgment Acts, the judgment creditor should state every material fact affecting his demand. If he withhold any, he will not be allowed his costs.—Lane v. Townsend, 8 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

5. A conditional order for the appointment of a receiver under the Sheriffs Act (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55) having been obtained in the Court of Exchequer, the solicitor for another judgment creditor, who had knowledge of the Exchequer order, presented a petition for a receiver to the Lord Chancellor suppressing the fact of the Exchequer order. The Court dismissed the petition, and directed that the solicitor should not have the costs of the petition against his client.—Daly v. D., 9 I. E. R. 461. (R.)

6. An order, for the appointment of a receiver, should state that the Court has been informed by the petitioner's solicitor that no order for a receiver has been made over any part of the lands of the respondent, either in this Court or the Court of Exchequer, unless a special case is made for the appointment of a second receiver.—Clarke v. McMahon, 9 I. E. R. 462. (R.)

II. 3. Supplemental Bill.

7. Ptf., having charged C., named a deft., to be out of the jurisdiction, but having omitted to pray process against him on his coming within the jurisdiction—Held, entitled, nevertheless, to costs of a supplemental suit instituted to compel him to join as a conveying party in the deed to the purchaser under the decree.—Oldham v. Willens, 1 Dr. & Wal. 717. (C.)

8. Semble—That when a suit abates by the death of the personal representative, the administrator de bonis non of the deceased may be brought before the Court by bill of revivor; and a supplemental bill is not necessary.—McTiernan v. Bell, 3 I. E. R. 193. (E.E.)

9. Whenever an old interest is transmitted to, or a new interest vested in a new party, after the institution of the suit, strictly speaking, that is supplemental matter, although it occurs before issue joined. In some cases, the new party has been brought before the Court by amendment.—Carnegie v. Johnson, 3 I. E. R. 197. (E.E.)

10. If a party, who has been made a deft. as assignee of an insolvent debtor, dies pending the cause, a supplemental bill is necessary to bring the new assignee, appointed in place of the deceased, before the Court. The forty-first section of the late Insolvent Act (3 & 4 Vic. c. 107) applies only to the cases of plaintiffs, and not to defendants.—Meagher v. O'Mara, 3 I. E. R. 471; FL & K. 269. (R.)

11. When a plaintiff assigns his interest, the Court will not allow his assignee to come in by an amended bill, but will leave him to file a supplemental bill.—Magrath v. Heron, FL & K. 237; 3 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

12. When the cause abates by the death of a sole plaintiff, and it becomes necessary to file a bill of revivor and supplement, it may be done without the order of the Court first obtained.

But when the cause abates by the death of one of several defendants, and it becomes necessary to file a bill of revivor and supplement, the leave of the Court must be first obtained.—Brown v. Allen, 3 I. E. R. 503. (E.E.)

13. Semble—If no title is shown by the original bill to maintain the suit, the defect cannot be remedied by a supplemental bill stating supplemental matter which gives a title.—Byrne v. B., 4 I. E. R. 621; 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189.—[Affg. FL & K. 435. (R.)]

14. The plaintiff claiming under a judgment, sought by her bill to have the benefit of decrees in former suits by which real estates of the deceased debtor were decreed to be sold to pay the judgment and other incumbrances; and for a sale of other estates of the debtor which had not been included in those decrees. Held, that the bill was a supplemental bill, and not an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill, the principle of the decrees being, that the real estates of the debtor which descended were liable to pay the judgment, and this bill only supplying the omission in the former decrees.

Passage in Mif. Pl. 73, as to the right to make a new defence to an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill, commented on and limited.—Baylee v. Browne, 10 I. E. R. 180. (R.)

1. A bill, filed in 1844, to raise a sum secured on a term created by a settlement of 1773, stated the proceedings in a suit of A. v. B. by a prior judgment creditor, and prayed the benefit of the decrees and accounts therein; that the decrees might be carried into execution, so far as necessary for the plaintiff's relief; and a sale of the term. The cause stood over at the hearing to make two minors parties by supplemental bill. One of them, X., by answer, impeached the decrees in the suit of A. v. B., and both claimed as purchasers for value, under a settlement of 1842, made by W. At the hearing of the supplemental cause in June 1847, plaintiff contended that X. could not impeach the decrees, as he claimed under W., who had acquiesced in them; and an order was made that the further hearing of the cause should stand over, with liberty to the plaintiff in the meantime to bring before the Court the parties beneficially interested in the decrees in A. v. B. The plaintiff filed a supplemental bill, setting out the whole of the proceedings in A. v. B., and the suit of 1844; assignments of the judgment and sum decreed in A. v. B. for the benefit of W., charging that W. and X., and the parties claiming under the assignment in A.'s right, could not object to have the decrees carried into execution; and praying that they might be carried into execution against them, and that the plaintiff might have the benefit thereof; or, if the Court should be of opinion that they could not be carried into execution according to the terms thereof, with such modification as to the Court should seem meet; and that plaintiff's claim, and all prior and contemporaneous charges, might be raised by a sale of the term of 1773. The Court refused to take the bill off the file as irregular; but—Held, on demurrer, that the order of June 1847, though it authorised the filing of a supplemental bill to bring new parties before the Court, did not warrant the making of a new case; and that the case of estoppel, and the prayer that the decrees might be modified and altered, was a new case and not warranted by the order.

Semle—The frame of the suit and relief prayed being altered, all the necessary parties to the suit of 1844 should be parties, particularly the party representing the term of 1773.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 527. (R.)—[Affd.: 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)]

2. All the parties to the original bill being dead, the cause was set down in the names of the parties to a supplemental bill only.—Held, regular; that parts of the answer to the original bill could be read as of an answer in the cause at hearing; and that it was not to be treated as an answer in another cause.

The allegation made in a bill to prevent a demurrer for multifariousness was unproved; but it appeared that the accounts might be such as to render the suit not multifarious. Held, that an objection for multifariousness, though made by the answer, could not be sustained.

Quere—If the objection should not be pleaded?—Anderson v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

3. When a deft. becomes insolvent pending the suit, the provisional assignee is properly made a party thereto by supplemental bill.—Roddy v. Molloy, 13 I. E. R. 90. (R.)

4. Chattels real were mortgaged, and judgments were recovered by the mortgagee against the mortgagor, as collateral securities for the sums advanced on mortgage. The mortgagor having died, a bill was filed against his personal representative praying an account of the sums due in respect of the mortgages; a foreclosure and sale; and an account of the personal estate of the mortgagor. The personal representative, in her answer, stated her belief that the chattels real were adequate to discharge the sums due. A decree was then taken for an account of those sums, and of the incumbrances prior or contemporaneous therewith, but not directing any account of the personal estate of the mortgagor. A report pursuant to that decree having been made, a decree for sale of the chattels real was pronounced. The proceeds of the sale were insufficient to pay the sums due on the mortgages. Held, that a supplemental bill, afterwards filed by the mortgagee against the personal representative of the mortgagor, praying an account of the personal estate of the mortgagor, could not be maintained; such a bill was accordingly dismissed, with costs.—Joly v. Leyden, 13 I. E. R. 444. (C.)

5. In 1803 a pension was granted to M. for life. In 1811 he, by indenture, assigned it for value to D., his heirs, executors, &c. D. effected two policies of insurance on the life of M., and died intestate in 1813, leaving W. his heir, and seven next-of-kin, of whom W. was one, and P. was another. W. died in the same year, having devised and bequeathed to his son N. all his real and personal property, and having appointed testamentary guardians of N., an infant. They appointed X., a solicitor, son-in-law of P., their general and law agent in the management of the property of N. The administrators of D., treating the pension as personal property of D., in 1813 authorised M. to receive it. He, until 1852, paid the premiums on the policies out of the pension, and equally distributed the surplus amongst the seven next-of-kin of D., or their representatives or assigns. In 1820 N. attained age, and continued X. as his general and law agent until the latter's death, in 1825. P. died in 1824, and from her death until that of X., in 1825, he, in right of his wife, received a moiety of P.'s supposed one-seventh of the pension. In 1821 N. obtained letters of administration de bonis non to W., and in 1826 he obtained like letters to D. In 1842 M. repurchased, for value, their supposed shares of the pension and policies from some of the next-of-kin of D., and in the same year re-purchased also, for value, from N., his supposed one-seventh of the policies and pension, which latter he had up to that time received from M., as residuary legatee of W., one of the seven next-of-kin of D. The deed by which N. assigned that one-seventh to M. was prepared by M., and in reciting the deed of 1811, by which M. had assigned the pension to D., his heirs, &c., it omitted the word "heirs." N. was executor and co-trustee with T. of the will of P., and in 1826 N. and T. filed a bill in Chancery to administer P.'s personal estate; and as she was entitled to one-seventh of the personal estate of D., as one of his seven next-of-kin, in 1828 N. and T. amended their bill by making all those next-of-kin and their representatives, &c., parties; and by praying an account and administration of the personal estate of D. also. In 1832 the usual decree to account was pronounced. O. was the solicitor of N. and T., as plaintiffs in the suit; but M. acted in it as solicitor for N. in his capacity as administrator of D. and W. The deed of 1811 was never produced before the Master. In a charge filed in 1850 by O., on behalf of the plaintiffs, the pension was treated as part of the personal estate of D., and, as such, divisible, together with the policies, amongst his seven next-of-kin. Their dealings (which had been numerous) with it since 1813 were specified in that charge (including the re-purchases by M.). Its devolution in the character of personalty, together with that of the policies, was traced from 1813 to 1860. In May 1861, the Master, by his report, also treated the pension as personalty, and allocated it and the policies amongst the seven next-of-kin of D., and their representatives; and (inter eos) to M., the shares which he had re-purchased. No exception having been taken to that report, it was confirmed by a final decree in July 1861. In Feb. 1861, a demand had been made, on behalf of the Revenue, of legacy duty upon the pension. N., being advised to resist it, for that purpose obtained a copy of the deed of 1811 from M., in whose custody it had always remained, and then first became aware of the limitation of the pension to D. and his heirs. N. then expressed his wish to O. and M. that the report should not be signed until the liability of the pension to legacy duty should be decided. The Master having set aside a sum to meet the amount of the legacy duty. O., thinking N. thereby sufficiently protected, and being pressed forward by other parties in the cause, caused the report to be signed, and set down the cause for hearing; and the final decree of July 1861 was then made. In Jan. 1862 the Court of Exchequer decided that the pension was not liable to legacy duty, inasmuch as, upon the death of D., it devolved, under the deed of 1811, upon his heir, W. Accordingly N., as devisee of all the real estate of W., presented a petition praying that the decree of July 1861 should be re-heard, the report reviewed, and all its findings with respect to the pension struck out, and that it should be declared that the premiums on the policies should have been borne by the personal estate of D., and not by the pension; and that in taking the account of that personal estate, credit should be given to N. against it, for the premiums paid out of the pension, and that provision should be made for their future payment out of the personal estate of D. The cause came on for re-hearing simultaneously with a motion on behalf of N., that the report should be sent back to be reviewed. Held, that the mistake in supposing the pension to form part of the personal property of D., was common to all parties, and that there was not any fraudulent suppression of the deed of 1811, or of the nature and contents of it by X. or M., or any other person.

That the title of the next-of-kin of D., and their representatives, for so many years, followed by possession, and acquiesced in by N., ought not to be disturbed; and that even were the Court disposed to grant relief to N., no conditions which it could impose would sufficiently protect purchasers and others claiming under the next-of-kin of D.; and that the petition should be dismissed, and the motion refused, with costs.

That N. could not have obtained relief by a supplemental bill, in the nature of a bill of review, because he had become aware of the contents of the deed of 1811 before the report was signed, or the decree of July 1861 pronounced.

Quære—Whether it was not alone a fatal objection to the petition of re-hearing and the motion, that they were on behalf of N. only, and not joined in by his co-plaintiff, T.?—White v. Mansergh, 2 I. C. R. 398; 5 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

II. 4. Supplemental Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Review.

1. A petition for the renewal of a lease was dismissed on the ground that the respondent was a purchaser of the reversion under a deed for valuable consideration, without notice of the lease. The petitioner afterwards discovered from the witness to this deed, who had been solicitor for the grantor, that the lease sought to be renewed had been handed over to the purchaser at the time of the execution of the deed. It not appearing whether the name of the witness could have been previously discovered from the memorial of registry—Held, that the petitioner should be at liberty to file a supplemental cause petition, in the nature of a petition of review, to have the cause reheard.

The practice of a solicitor voluntarily making an affidavit revealing circumstances connected with the business of his former client, whereby that client may be rendered liable to an action, disapproved of.—Barton v. Sampson, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 361. (R.)

II. 5. Supplemental Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Review.

2. When, after decree, the interest of the principal defendant was assigned, the assignee was not permitted to intervene without being made a party by supplemental bill.—Crofts v. Mitchell, 6 I. E. R. 373. (R.)

1. The Court has authority, under the 5 & 6 Vic., c. 105, to permit the assignee of a judgment creditor to continue in his own name the proceedings of his assignor under the Judgment Creditors Acts.—Daly v. Blake, 10 L. E. R. 36. (R.)

2. When a personal representative sues or is sued, and dies, the administrator de bonis non may proceed or be proceeded against by bill of revivor, or by bill of revivor and supplement. But he is not bound so to frame his bill; he may at his election file an original bill. An administrator obtained a decree declaring a judgment to be held on trusts. The judgment was afterwards fraudulently assigned, and the administrator de bonis non filed a bill stating the proceedings in the original suit, making the assignee a party, and praying that he might be declared entitled to the benefit of the decree, and accounts and inquiries thereby directed, and to an assignment of the judgment or original relief, if he was not entitled to the benefit of the suit and decree. Held, on demurrer, that the bill, being an original bill as to the assignee, the ptf. could not have proceeded by bill of revivor; and although the bill might have been filed as a bill of revivor and supplement as against the representative of the deft. in the original suit, it was sustainable as against him either as an original bill, or as an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill.

3. A bill was filed to set aside a f. f. grant, and a subsequent sale to the grantee of the rent reserved thereby. The decree declared the f. f. grant void as against the ptf.; but that he was not entitled to impeach the sale of the rents; that W., and other defts., and all proper parties, should join in conveying the lands to the ptf.; that he and all proper parties should join in proper clauses and covenants in such conveyance, or by a separate deed, as the Master should approve of, to secure the rent; that W. and other defts. should pay the ptf. the costs of setting aside the f. f. grant; and further directions were reserved. W. died. The ptf. filed a bill of revivor and supplement against his personal representative, who demurred. Held, that the Court would not assume that nothing remained to be done under the decree by the deft., as the final decree might direct an account of the rents, or that the deft. should join in the conveyance, and therefore the case fell within the exception to the rule against revivor for untaxed costs.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadler, 12 L. E. R. 136. (R.)

4. When a deft. becomes insolvent pending the suit, the provisional assignee of the Insolvent Court is properly made a party to the suit by supplemental bill.—Roddy v. Molloy, 13 L. E. R. 90. (R.)

5. A supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, founded on newly discovered facts, cannot be maintained when these facts, if known, would not have interfered with the decree.—Nason v. Peard, 10 L. C. R. 233. (C.)

II. 6. When a Bill of Review lies—necessary steps to bring it, by and against whom it may be brought.

6. K. devised a fee-simple estate to his eldest son, F., in tail male, with power to charge £200 each for his daughters; remainder to W., K.'s second son, in tail male; and left to each of his ten younger children, a legacy of £100 net, charged on the estate. On F.'s marriage, a portion of his wife's fortune was applied in discharge of these legacies. F. died without issue male, but leaving two daughters, who entered into possession, claiming under a prior will by which F. was made tenant in fee. An ejectment was brought by W. There was a reference to arbitration, a bill and cross bill; and a decree in 1816 establishing the later will; and declaring that whatever the Master should find had been paid by F. in exoneration of the estate should be charged on it. This decree was not enrolled. In 1820 the Master found that certain sums had been advanced by F. in payment of the legacies to his brothers, and in exoneration of the lands, and among others £100 paid to W., as a younger child. There was a final decree in 1831, by which the report was confirmed, and a sale ordered, to pay these sums. In 1840 a bill was filed to reverse the proceedings in the cause, and the decrees of 1816 and 1831. Held, that as the decrees did not declare the legacies a charge on the lands, and as it did not appear on what the Master's report was founded, there was no error apparent on the face of the record; and that as to W.'s £100 the decree was right.

Difference between a bill of review, and a bill in the nature of a bill of review; and doctrine of the Court respecting them. The time for filing a bill of review is regulated by analogy to the time limited by the 6 G. 1, c. 6, (Ir.) for bringing a writ of error, i.e., twenty years after the judgment, and five years after the disability of the ptf. in error, if any, has been removed.—Kelly v. Lennon, 1 Jon. & L. 305; 7 L. E. R. 98. (C.)

7. In a renewal suit against the defendant, tenant for life, and his eldest son, the question was, whether the denomination X. was included in the lease, or was part of an adjoining farm held by the plaintiff for a determinable interest? A decree was made for a renewal, referring it to the Master to enquire and ascertain the boundaries. The interest in the farm having afterwards expired, the defendant brought an ejectment for X., which the plaintiff defended, and obtained a verdict. Defendant's son having died, and his second son, a minor, become tenant in tail, a new bill was filed against the defendant and this son, which stated the ejectment, and that the question tried in it was identical with that involved in the reference; but the decree made in 1844, which accorded with the prayer, only directed the former decree to be carried out between the parties. In 1845, the son, being of age, barred the entail, and conveyed the fee to the deft. A bill was then filed relying on the ejectment, and praying a declaration that it was unnecessary to carry on the reference, and that the former decrees might be in other respects carried out. Held, that such relief was a variation of the decree of 1844, which could not be given without rehearing the cause; and Semble, this was a bill of review, which should not have been filed without leave of the Court.—Chute v. M'Gillcuddy, 11 I. E. R. 312. (C.)

1. To sustain a bill of review, proceeding on facts discovered after the decree complained of was pronounced, it must be shown that leave to file it was regularly obtained from the Court.

To sustain a bill of review, for error apparent on the decree complained of, it is not enough that the bill contains allegations that the decree is erroneous; error on the face of the decree must be shown.—Tommey v. White, 1 H. L. Cas. 160.—[See 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); 6 Cl. & F. 786; 3 H. L. Cas. 1; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.)]

II. 7. a. Bill of Revivor: Original Bill in the Nature of a Bill of Revivor.

2. Semble—A suit may be revived for costs, where the party to receive them, or the party to pay them, has died before taxation.—Barry v. Stawell, Flan. & K. 1; 3 I. E. R. 18. (R.)

3. It is not necessary to revive a cause, to enable the Court to discharge itself of the fund.—Fetnam v. Kirby, 4 I. E. R. 322. (E.E.)

4. Husband and wife file a bill respecting the real property of the wife. Husband dies before decree. Thereupon the deft. enters a rule that the wife surviving do revive or continue the cause within ten days, or in default that the bill be dismissed with costs. This rule is irregular, and will be set aside with costs.—Johnson v. Biron, 5 I. E. R. 154. (E.E.)

5. A cause abated by the death of a sole plaintiff. His executor filed a bill of revivor, not seeking an answer, and served subpoenas, but did not (although the defts. had appeared) enter the rule to revive. Motion that the bill of revivor be dismissed with costs for want of prosecution, pursuant to the 82nd G. O., refused with costs; that Order not being an authority for such an application. The defendant subsequently moved for an order that the plaintiff might enter the rule to revive within a limited time, and in default of his so doing, that his bill be dismissed with costs. The Court granted the motion.

Semble—Lee v. L., 1 Hare, 617, was rightly decided.—Power v. Davies, 5 I. E. R. 448. (R.)

6. Quære—Whether a cause, in which there has been no subpoena served, and no appearance, can be revived by bill of revivor?—Foster v. Thompson, 2 Con. & L. 568; 6 I. E. R. 168. (C.)

7. The provisional assignee of the Insolvent Debtors' Court was made a deft. to the suit, and died. Held, that the new provisional assignee might be made party to the suit by bill of revivor merely.—M'Colham v. Crawford, 6 I. E. R. 217. (E.E.)

8. On the argument of a plea to a bill of revivor the Court is not at liberty to look into the original bill. The case must be decided on the facts stated in the bill of revivor and the plea. When the facts did not fully appear therein, the Court reserved to the deft. the benefit of the plea, and directed it to stand over until the hearing of the cause.

A suit may be revived as to part of the matter in litigation.—Duggan v. Kelly, 10 I. E. R. 295. (R.)

9. When matter of defence arises subsequently to a decree in a cause which afterwards becomes abated, it may be pleaded to the bill of revivor. It is not necessary to file a cross bill to get the advantage of it.—Daly v. Kirwan, 10 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

10. Under the decree to account in a suit instituted by A., a creditor on the inheritance, B. having a puisse charge on a 500 years' term, proved it, and it was reported. The cause was brought to a final hearing, and a decree made for a sale of the inheritance, to pay A. and the other creditors. Supplemental suits were afterwards instituted by A.'s representatives, who were ultimately settled with, and no sale was had. B.'s representatives filed a bill praying the benefit of the former decree, and to have a sale of the term, making A.'s representative a notice party. Held, that as B. was not entitled to such a decree as was made in A.'s suit, it could not be carried out for the plaintiff, or cut down so as to be limited to the term, at least in the absence of A.'s representatives, who might still have rights under it.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 455. (C.)

II. 7. b. Bill of Revivor under the Chancery Regulation (Ireland) Act 1850.

11. When a sole petitioner dies, the matter cannot be revived by suggestion under the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850. An order must be obtained, authorising the petitioner to file a petition in the nature of a petition of revivor. Form of order in such a case.—Wray v. Pollard, 2 I. C. R. 78. (R.)

12. No order to revive is necessary after service of notice of a suggestion under the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, if the parties served are not under a disability.—Wildridge v. M'Kane, 2 I. C. R. 333. (R.)—[See also Purcell v. Gibbings, 2 I. C. R. 480. (C.); Long v. L., 6 I. Jur. 194. (R.); Nason v. Peard, 2 I. C. R. 553, and 5 I. Jur. 347. (R.); Bowes v. Watson, 7 I. Jur. 138; Ryall v. Farmer, 5 I. Jur. 347; Martley v. M., 4 I. Jur. 333; Johnson v. Madden, 6 I. Jur. 161. (R.); M'Mahon v. O'Kelly, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 251; Corr v. C., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 211. (R.)

1. When an assignee in bankruptcy or insolvency has been changed, the leave of the Court of Chancery must be obtained for filing the suggestion to revive, pursuant to the 283rd sec. of the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act.—M'Conkey v. Gwynne, 8 I. C. R. 33. (R.)

2. The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor filed a bill for an account and for redemption of a mortgage. Two cause petitions, for the same purpose, were afterwards filed, but were dismissed with costs. A new assignee having been appointed, he moved under the Bankrupt Act (20 & 21 Vic., c. 60), to be substituted by suggestion as ptf. Held, that the costs of the dismissed petitions must be paid before the suggestion could be entered.—[Affg. s. c., 8 I. C. R. 33. (R.)]—M'Conkey v. Gwynne, 10 I. C. R. 261. (C.A.)

3. A suit to revive a decree for payment of money must be brought within 20 years from the date of the decree, if there has been no payment or acknowledgment of payment in the meantime.—Dunne v. Doyle, 10 I. C. R. 502; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.)

4. The Court cannot order service out of the jurisdiction of the notice of a suggestion to revive.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 489. (C.)

5. When a petition under the Mortgage Acts has abated, it must be revived by petition and not by motion.—Burke v. Mahony, 5 I. C. R. 345. (R.)

[For Revivor under The Chancery (Ireland) Act 1867, see sec. 157 of 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44; and General Orders of 1867, Nos. 141 to 143 inclusive.]

II. 8. Amended Bill.

6. A demurrer does not lie to an amended bill for referring throughout to the original bill, and repeating its entire contents and prayer.

Semble—A deft. may move for all costs unnecessarily occasioned by such an amended bill, or refer it for prolixity.

Ptf., in his original bill, made out title to an estate, and prayed relief as heir-at-law; but afterwards, and after all the defts. had answered, discovered a marriage settlement, which limited the estate to a trustee for the use of ptf., his brother, and sisters, in equal shares. Held, that ptf., in his amended bill, might vary his case so as to make out title, and pray relief according to his real rights.—Peed v. Cussen, S. & Sc. 161. (R.)

7. Ptf. and her younger children filed their original bill to raise a jointure and portions out of T. Deft., her eldest son, by answer, insisted that ptf.'s husband, tenant in tail of T., had not done any act to bar the entail; and claimed T. as issue in tail. Ptf. filed an amended bill, making her younger children defts., and claiming dower or jointure out of T. Quære—Was this an original, or an amended bill?—Walsh v. W., Jon. & C. 52. (E.E.)

8. After the defts. had answered in a suit by husband and wife, relating to the wife's separate estate, leave was given to amend the bill by striking out the name of the husband as a co-ptf., he having lately become insolvent, and by substituting in his stead the name of a party to sue as the wife's next friend; and also by inserting the names of the husband and his assignee, as parties defts., upon the terms of the proposed next friend giving security by recognizance, with sufficient sureties, for the costs already incurred; the Court declining to require such security for future costs.—Ring v. Nettles, 3 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

9. Before issue joined, an infant tenant in tail, born pendente lite, may be made a party by amendment.—Greer v. Mercer, 3 I. E. R. 385. (E.E.)—[Apportionment of the costs; Greer v. Mercer, 4 I. E. R. 705. (E.E.)]

10. A bill stating new matter, conformably to the 52nd G. O. of 1834, is to be considered as one record with the original bill. Therefore, a party brought before the Court by it cannot demur to it for want of equity, if there be sufficient in the two bills to sustain the case against him.—Byrne v. B., 4 I. E. R. 621. (C.)

11. An order to amend without prejudice to process, is a side-bar rule which the ptf. takes at his peril.

A deft. who has answered cannot be struck out of the bill by amendment. — v. Zwickerman, 5 I. E. R. 22. (E.E.)

12. When a contract has been executed, a deft. cannot impeach it without a cross bill.—Nash v. Flynn, 6 I. E. R. 565; 1 Jon. & L. 162. (C.)

13. Under the 75th Rule the ptf. has six weeks to except to the answer to an amended bill for insufficiency.—Garvey v. Hayes, 11 I. E. R. 270. (R.)

14. A bill by an executor to carry into execution the trusts of a will, and for payment of an annuity thereby granted, stated that an agreement had been entered into by the deft. with one K. to pay the annuity, and that premises had been assigned to secure it; and that, after the death of K., R. procured an assignment of the premises. The answer stated that the ptf. had assigned the premises. The bill was amended, praying that the assignment might be declared fraudulent and void. Held, that the amended bill was not a departure from the original bill, nor was there any misjoinder.—Tomlinson v. Cox, 1 I. Jur. 17. (C.)

15. Striking a ptf.'s name out of the bill is not an amendment by side-bar rule within the 49th G. O. 1843.—Vance v. Ranfurley, 1 I. Jur. 284. (R.)

16. Amendments of cause petitions are to be made without alteration, erasure, or interlineation, by stating the matter of the amendment at the foot of the petition after the

A solicitor may be made a party to a bill to set aside a deed for fraud if he be a party to the fraud, and costs are prayed against him.—Kelly v. Jackson, 13 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

II. 11. Bill for Discovery only.

1. The Commissioners of Ch. Don. filed a bill against A. and B., seeking a discovery of the estates in fee-simple, fee-tail, and other freehold and leasehold estates of the testatrix; and of all her personal estates and effects, &c. The bill set out the will, from which it appeared that the testatrix devised all her freehold and leasehold estates to A. for life, remainder to B. for life; remainder (except as to a certain rent) to the Commissioners, upon trust to renew leases and apply rents, &c.; and appointed A. and B. executors of her will. The bill prayed that an account might be taken of her freehold and leasehold estates, &c., and that the title-deeds relating thereto might be brought into Court; but did not state that the personal assets of the testatrix were insufficient for the payment of her debts. It, however, averred that the debts had paid a special bequest in her will mentioned. Demurrer to so much of the bill as sought discovery of the estates tail of the testatrix, and of her personal estate and effects (except chattels real), allowed.—Commissioners of Ch. Don. v. Espinasse, 3 I. E. R. 324; Fl. & K. 164. (R.)

2. When a bill seeks a discovery of necessary parties, an objection for want of parties will not generally be allowed.—Sherlock v. Disney, 13 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

II. 12. Interpleader Bill.

3. On application for an injunction in a possessory suit, a conditional order for both injunctions to issue (to the party and the Sheriff) will be granted.—Biddulph v. Molloy, 2 I. E. R. 228. (R.)

4. Course of proceeding in possessory suits.—Sherrock v. Chartres, 2 I. E. R. 230. (C.)

5. It seems that a possessory bill is not a proper remedy when ptf.'s legal title to the possession is not clear, and matters of account touching ptf.'s claim are in dispute between the parties.—Ball v. O'Grady, 2 I. E. R. 235. (R.)

6. Two policies of insurance effected with the same company, one by the party insured in his own name, the other in the name of a trustee, were assigned by deed to the trustee in whose name the one had been effected, upon the trusts declared in a contemporaneous deed. Those trusts were, first, to pay debts due by the assignor, which were not specified, including advances made by the trustee himself, the amount of which was not fixed; and to hold the surplus as a provision for the daughters of the assignor, in such shares as he should appoint. Neither of the deeds contained any declaration that the trustee's receipts should be good discharges. After the death of the insured, his administrator served a notice upon the company, requiring them to pay him the amount of both policies. Notices were served by one of the daughters of the insured and the husband of another daughter, cautioning the company not to pay the amount of the policies to the executor of the trustee. The company refused to pay the amount of either policy, without getting a release from the parties beneficially interested in the surplus after payment of the debts, as well as from the administrator; and filed a bill of interpleader. After the filing of the bill the administrator withdrew his notice. Held, that as to the policy effected in the name of the trustee, there was no case for interpleader, as the trustee's executor could have given a valid discharge for the amount of it; and as to that the bill was dismissed with costs against the trustee's executor; but the parties who served the notices got no costs.

That as to the policy effected in the name of the insured himself, the administrator's notice justified a bill of interpleader, but that when that was withdrawn the ptf's should have proceeded no farther, and were not entitled to costs after that date.

To support a bill of interpleader there must be a clear conflict of claims; and a claim by a trustee who has the legal title, and claims by various contingent trustees, who dispute one another's rights, do not constitute a case for an interpleader bill.—Glynn v. Locke, 2 Con. & L. 21; 3 Dr. & War. 11; 5 I. E. R. 61. (C.)

7. When an injunction and interpleader bill is filed, the Court will continue the injunction to the hearing, if there is a question to be disposed of on the hearing.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 6 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

8. A. lodged B.'s money at a bank, and took a deposit receipt in B.'s name. Afterwards A. lodged another small sum; and, by B.'s authority, took a deposit receipt for the whole in the name of B.'s daughter, X., stating that it was a provision for her. After B.'s death A. refused to give X. this receipt; and, as B.'s administrator, claimed the money. The bank refusing to pay X. without the receipt, X. and A. each brought an action against the bank. Held, that the dealing conclusively constituted the bank debtor of X. only, and that they could not sustain an interpleader suit.

An interpleader bill cannot be sustained, unless the claim of at least one deft. is colourable.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 8 I. E. R. 241; 2 Jon. & L. 380. (C.)

9. A bill of interpleader having been filed against husband and wife, separate subpoenas and notices were served under an order for the substitution of service, requiring them to appear and answer at different times. The husband appeared and filed a separate demurrer, which the ptf. set down to be argued, and afterwards moved to set it aside for irregularity. The Court refused the motion, and made an order nunc pro tunc that the husband and wife should defend separately.

By a deed of separation, a husband and wife conveyed the wife's property in trust to pay an annuity to the husband, and the residue, after payment of her debts, to the wife; and the trustee covenanted to pay the annuity to the husband. The wife afterwards required the trustee not to pay the annuity to the husband; alleging, on the opinion of foreign counsel, that the marriage was void. The husband brought an action of covenant for the annuity against the trustee, who, having lodged the amount in bank, filed a bill of interpleader against the husband and wife. Demurrers to the bill by the husband allowed with costs.—Doyle v. Lumoncel, 11 I. E. R. 342. (R.)

1. To support an interpleader suit, there must be conflicting claims. Therefore, when a reversion subject to a lease for years was devised, and the testator's heir-at-law did not claim the rent, a petition of interpleader by the tenant against the heir-at-law was dismissed with costs, although there was a question whether the devise was not void for remoteness.

A., and a married woman and her husband were entitled to the reversion upon, and the rent reserved by a lease. A. was entitled to one moiety; but between the husband and wife arose the question, on a settlement, whether she was entitled to the other moiety to her separate use? All three brought ejectment for non-payment of rent, and the lessee filed a petition of interpleader. Held, that the petition, as against A., should be dismissed.

Semble—If several are entitled to rent, and all concur in demanding it, though there be conflicting claims between them, the tenant cannot maintain an interpleader suit.—Elliott v. Kempston, 15 I. C. R. 120. (R.)

2. L., agent at Belfast for the owner of a ship chartered to that port, had acquired equitable charges on the freight and cargo, and was also agent for the charterers and consignees. On the vessel's arrival he took possession of her; and in his name the cargo was landed, and stored with the harbour commissioners' wharfingers. Afterwards a company, claiming to be assignees of the ship under a bill of sale, served on them a notice purporting to be under the 25 & 26 Vic., c. 63, s. 68, cautioning them against allowing the cargo to be removed from their wharves or warehouses, until the company's lien for freight was discharged. The commissioners thereupon refused to deliver any portion of the cargo to L., who brought against them an action of trover and detinue to recover it. The commissioners applied for an order of interpleader, but no rule was made on the motion to show cause against their summoning order being made absolute. The commissioners then commenced this interpleader suit, and moved for an injunction to stay the proceedings at law. Held, that, notwithstanding the provisions of the above-mentioned Act, the case properly formed the subject of an interpleader suit; and that this Court's jurisdiction was not affected by the decision of the Court of Law.—Belfast Harbour Commrs. v. Lawther, 16 I. C. R. 34. (C.)—[See s. c., 17 I. C. R. 54. (C.)]

II. 13. Bill of Peace and Quia Timet.

3. Persons entitled, as executors, to a lease of ferries over the river Liffey, filed a bill, stating a patent by which the Crown had granted all the ferries on that river to the Corporation of D., and that the Corporation had granted a lease of them to their testator; that one of the defendants having been in the habit of ferrying passengers over the river for hire, they brought an action against him, and obtained a verdict in 1841; but that he and two other persons continued to carry passengers across the river for hire. They prayed that the defendants might be restrained from ferrying passengers across the river for hire, within the limits of their ferries. One of the defendants, who was not a party to the action, stated by affidavit that the right of the Corporation was repented to be confined within limits, within which he had not infringed upon their right; and that neither the Corporation, nor any one claiming under them, had, within the memory of living men, claimed or exercised any right outside those limits, or disturbed the ferries of other persons beyond them. He also stated that the plaintiffs had recently brought an action against him for the disturbance of their ferries, which was still pending. Held, that the plaintiffs were bound to show upon their bill an actual possession of the premises for three years at least before the filing of the bill, and that they had not done so in the present case.

That they should have stated their case fully in the first instance.

That the plaintiff has recovered judgment against the defendant, in an action on the case, brought for disturbing him in the enjoyment of the possession which the bill seeks to recover, is not a sufficient statement of title of plaintiff in a possessory bill.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 6 I. E. R. 57; 2 Con. & L. 153; 3 Dr. & War. 183. (C.)

II. 14. To Perpetuate.

4. A bill to perpetuate testimony, stated that in 1838 L. made a will. In 1845 he made another, which he destroyed in 1846. L. died intestate in 1848. His heir-at-law entered into possession. The bill then stated a claim by the widow of L. under the will of 1838; and prayed that the testimony of the witnesses thereto, as well as of the witness who destroyed the second will, might be perpetuated. Plea: that there were tenants in possession of the real estate who had not paid rent to, or acknowledged the title of the plaintiff; and that she could have an immediate remedy at law. Held, a bad plea.—Lindsey v. L., 1 I. Jur. 289. (C.)—[Rev. 12 I. E. R. 508. (R.)]

II. 15. Bill for Partition, and other matters.

1. The bill stated that the lands of B, part of which contained 159 acres, and part 46 acres, had been for many years before 1794 held by the same tenants, so that the boundaries became confused. That in 1804 A. was seized in fee of the 159 acres, and held the 46 acres under a lease from X. for a term. That the mearings and boundaries of the 46 acres had not since been ascertained, the entire of the lands having been since the lease, as they had been for 100 years before, held by the same persons, who were owners of the fee-simple lands. That they had been so mixed up that it was impossible to discover the boundaries, or to ascertain where the 46 acres were situated. The bill, after deducting the title of the ptf. from A., stated that the deft. claimed to be entitled to the 46 acres as assignee of X., and that the ptf.'s interest under the lease had determined; and prayed a partition, or a commission to ascertain the boundaries. Held, on demurrer, that the bill could not be sustained for a partition, as no title to a partition at law was shown; nor as a bill to ascertain boundaries, as the parties were independent proprietors; the inference being that the deft. was in possession of the 46 acres, and that the owner of the fee-simple lands, and not the deft., was responsible for the confusion of boundaries.

Confusion of boundaries, unless it arose from the deft.'s misconduct, is not per se a ground for a bill to ascertain boundaries.

A partition will be decreed in Equity only where the ptf. would be entitled to a partition at Law.—O'Hara v. Strange, 11 I. E. R. 262. (R.)

II. 16. Discharge. See PRACTICE, CHARGE.

2. The Court will not permit a discharge, sworn and filed, to be amended; but will, in a proper case, permit a further discharge to be filed.—Fenton v. F., 8 I. E. R. 363. (R.)

II. 17. Bill, Possessory.

3. In cases between landlord and tenant a triennial possession is not necessary to sustain a possessory bill.

Semble—That the purchaser of a reversion expectant on a demise made by the vendor may, on its expiration, maintain a possessory bill on the vendor's possession, though the tenant has not acknowledged the purchaser as his landlord.

Triennial possession is necessary only in cases of forcible possession or detainer.—Lefroy v. Lee, H. & J. 721. (E.E.)

4. Injunction order in a possessory suit set aside, because the ptf. had not, in the first instance, fully and fairly stated his case.—Dease v. Plunkett, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 255. (C.)

5. Commissioners appointed by a grand jury sold the materials of the old County Court-house; and in 1852, with the grand jury's approval, permitted the site to be used as a market-place. In 1859 they gave permission to a committee to erect a statue upon a spot within that site; the committee gave C. permission to erect a house on the corner of the site. Held, that the commissioners had sufficient possession of the site to enable them to maintain a suit in the nature of a possessory bill.—O'Brien v. Considine, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 5. (C.A.)

6. A possessory petition should not rely on any title other than the triennial possession.

A possessory petition cannot be amended.—O'Neill v. M'Érlaine, 16 I. C. R. 280. (R.)—[But see s. c., 17 I. C. R. 86. (C.A.)]

II. 18. Petition under the Court of Chancery Regulation (Ireland) Act 1850.

[See 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, now repealed in part by the 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, sch. A, save as to pending suits. Secs. 1 to 14 point out the mode of proceeding by petition under the Act of 1860, instead of by bill.—General Orders, and Orders of the Masters for regulating the practice under the Act of 1850, were made pursuant to the power given by the statute, on the 31st July 1851, 20th Oct. 1851, 1st Nov. 1851, 26th Jan. 1852, 2nd Feb. 1852, 17th April 1852, Nov. 1852, 25th April 1853, 13th Nov. 1854, 19th Jan. 1855, 23rd March 1855, 13th June 1856, 26th March 1857, 19th May 1857, 24th June 1857, 29th June 1857, 28th April 1858.—[See Gamble's Chancery Orders.]

Secs. 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, of the Act of 1850, regulate the mode of referring cause petitions in a summary way to the Master of the Court for final decision.

By the 15th sec. of the Ct. of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, and the 9th G. O. of July 1851, certain classes of petitions were allowed to be referred summarily to the Masters of the Court for decision.

By the Act:—

- I. With respect to the Administration of the Real and Personal Estate, or the Personal Estate of a Deceased Person.
- II. With respect to the Foreclosure and Redemption of Mortgages.
- III. With respect to the Appointment of New Trustees under any Deed, Will, or other Instrument.
- IV. With respect to the Appointment of Guardians, and the Allowance of Maintenance to Infants.
- V. With respect to the taking of Partnership Accounts.

And under the General Order:—

1st. Petitions for payment of judgment debts, or debts by recognizance, by the sale of lands or otherwise.

2nd. Petitions for payment of the arrears of annuities, or tithe or other rentcharges.

3rd. Petitions for payment of any charge or incumbrance on land, whether by sale or out of the annual rents and profits.

7. A petition for payment of a legacy charged on lands comes under that G. O.—Kirk v. Edmonstone, 1 I. C. R. 17. (C.)

1. When a bill would not be sustainable, a petition under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, cannot be supported. Such a petition is open to an objection for multifariousness.

Upon a petition, plainly open to such an objection, the Court will not pronounce a summary order of reference, without notice.

Costs of proceedings before the Court in such a petition are within the jurisdiction of the Court only, and not of the Master. On petitions for the administration of assets, the Court in making an order of reference to the Master will include a direction that the ptr.'s costs already incurred shall be payable to him in the same order as his demand (if any), and out of the same fund or by the same party.—Cuning v. Taylor, 1 I. C. R. 25; 3 I. Jur. 65. (C.)

2. Practice as to making summary references.—Murphy v. Keller, 1 I. C. R. 104. (C.)

3. Though a bill has been filed on the authority of a reported decision, which is afterwards reversed, the Court has not jurisdiction, on a motion under G. O. 82, to order that it be dismissed without costs.—Cronin v. Murphy, 1 I. C. R. 233. (R.)

4. Practice as to setting down the petition in the list of causes under the 15th sec.—Livesay v. Maxwell, 1 I. C. R. 254; 3 I. Jur. 250. (C.)

5. As to petitions by several legatees.—O'Brien v. Westropp, 1 I. C. R. 371; 3 I. Jur. 367. (C.)

6. Petition, by an incumbrancer and annuitant, praying—not redemption, foreclosure, or sale—but the appointment of a receiver over lands, subject to his (the petitioner's) incumbrance and annuity, referred under sec. 15; although a petition for the sale of the same lands has been previously presented in the Incumbered Estates Court by the owner of the lands.—Carter v. C., 1 I. C. R. 592. (C.)

7. When a petition is presented praying that the trusts of a will may be carried into execution, and the accounts of the real and personal estate taken under the direction of the Court, it will be referred under sec. 15.—French v. Craig, 1 I. C. R. 593. (C.)

8. Petition, praying merely a receiver over the lands referred.—Bennett v. Briscoe, 1 I. C. R. 594. (C.)

9. Petition, praying the extension, of a receiver, appointed in an annuity cause, to the petition referred.—Puxley v. Hutchins, 1 I. C. R. 595. (C.)

10. The 8th G. O. of the 31st July 1851 applies only to cause petitions presented with respect to the administration of real or personal estate, when a summary order is sought for under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, sec. 15.—Holmes v. Walker, 1 I. C. R. 596. (C.)

11. A cause petition stated a mortgage of lands in 1815, for £600, containing a covenant by the mortgagor to insure his life for that sum, and to assign the policy to the mortgagee as a further security for the mortgage debt; and prayed the usual accounts on foot of the mortgage, a foreclosure, a sale of the lands, and that the petitioner might be declared entitled to such of the policies mentioned in the deed of 1845 as should appear to have been effected as a further security for the mortgage debt. Held, that notwithstanding the prayer for relief in respect of the policies, the Court had power, under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, s. 15, to make a summary order of reference upon the petition.

That when such an order has been made, the Master has authority to deal with all objections to the petition on the ground of multifariousness, or of the absence of proper parties.—Taylor v. Young, 1 I. C. R. 650; 4 I. Jur. 88. (C.)

12. A cause petition presented by a legatee to administer the real and personal estate where some executors had proved but others had not. Held, a proper case for a summary order under the 15th sec.—Agnew v. Connell, 1 I. C. R. 716. (C.)

13. In making the order on summary petitions no special directions regarding priorities will be given, these being matter for the Master.—Roche v. Keller, 3 I. Jur. 3. (C.)

14. When from a cause petition presented under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 15, it appears that a sale of the realty was the only relief to be had, the Court would not make an order under that sec.—Rigney v. Coppinger, 3 I. Jur. 137. (C.)

15. When a cause petition, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 15, is of such a nature as to be a general creditor's administration suit, the Court will make an order, though a sale of the realty be a portion of the relief prayed.—Minz v. M., 3 I. Jur. 137. (C.)

16. The Court will not make a summary order of reference upon a petition under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, to which interrogatories are annexed.—Ryan v. Mulligan, 1 I. C. R. 20; 3 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

17. The Court will, in order to save expense, refer in the first instance to the Receiver Master a cause petition under the 15th sec. of the Court of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850.—Murphy v. Harman, 2 I. C. R. 39. (C.)

18. The Masters have not jurisdiction to hear and determine causes except in the absence of the Lord Chancellor, unless the case is within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850. Nor can the Lord Chancellor depute them to hear causes irrespectively of the Act. Therefore when a summary order was made under the 15th sec., and it turned out upon facts which appeared in the office, but were not stated in the petition, that the case was not within the 15th sec.; Held, that the Master had not jurisdiction to hear or to dismiss the petition. If the Court itself has not jurisdiction in a cause, it must be dismissed; but if the particular branch of the Court before which the cause is heard has not jurisdiction, it should be remitted to that branch of the Court which has jurisdiction.—Wade v. Stewart, 2 I. C. R. 166. (R.)

1. The summary order on petitions presented as within the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, s. 15, merely decides that the subject matter of the suit is within that sec.—Graham v. M'Dermott, 3 I. C. R. 488. (C.)

2. When a petition to administer the assets of a testator is filed by the executor, who thereby submits the construction of the will to the Court, such petition comes under the words of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850 s. 15.—Spratt v. Dowling, 5 I. Jur. 155. (M.O.)

3. A cause petition to raise money charged upon lands, alleging that the respondent pretended that he had paid the charge, was held within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850.—Swan v. Urquhart, 6 I. Jur. 237. (C.)

4. Dismissal of petition on payment of charge.—Dwyer v. Baker, 6 I. Jur. 341. (R.)

5. A petition, praying an account of the partnership, is within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850.—Owens v. Oliver, 6 I. Jur. 349. (C.)

6. A petition to sell lands for the vendor's lien.—Anderson v. L. & E. Ry. Co., 4 I. C. R. 254. (C.)

7. A petition praying for the dissolution of a partnership, as ancillary to taking partnership accounts, comes within the jurisdiction conferred by the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, s. 15.—Wright v. Perrin, 4 I. C. R. 492. (C.)

[See also Walsh v. Kinnelly, 4 I. C. R. 510. (C.)]

8. The Masters have power, in cases referred to them under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, to order, in administration suits, that a personal representative shall file a discharge setting forth an account of the assets; and to grant an attachment against him if he disobeys the order.

The practice in this respect certified by the five Masters.—Glenny v. Woolsey, 4 I. C. R. 615. (R.)

9. In an administration suit, the Court does not, before decree, order the executor or administrator to bring money into Court, unless on a distinct admission that he has assets in his hands. In a case referred to the Master under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, an executor de son tort, by his discharge, stated that he had not any sum whatever of assets in his hands; but, on the contrary, was in advance beyond any sum which had been realised out of the assets. Held, that an order made by the Master, directing him to bring money into Court, was irregular.

A. was discharged as an insolvent debtor in 1848. In 1850 his wife became entitled, as one of the next-of-kin, on the death of her brother, to a moiety of his personal estate. The assignee of the insolvent filed a cause petition against the executor de son tort of the brother, stating that he sued "as such assignee;" but without stating that he was a creditor of the insolvent, or that he had entered judgment against him pursuant to ss. 78 & 79 of the Insolvent Act (3 & 4 Vic., c. 107), and without making the wife a party. Held, that the suit was unsustainable for want of title, the property not being vested in the assignee, and for want of parties; and that the Master had not power, in a matter referred to him under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, to make a decretal order directing the executor to bring part of the assets into Court, and appointing a receiver to recover the residue.

A suit may, under particular circumstances, be sustained in the name of a scheduled creditor of an insolvent, to make his property, acquired after his discharge, liable to his debt. The assignee cannot maintain such a suit, unless he be a creditor, or has entered up judgment against the insolvent, pursuant to ss. 78 & 79 of the Insolvent Act.—Glenny v. Woolsey, 4 I. C. R. 636. (R.)

10. The petition may, in certain cases, be verified by the solicitor.—Byrne v. Coleman, 7 I. Jur. 63. (C.)

11. Semble—A cause petition cannot be filed under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, against a trustee for an account.—Pounden v. Harvey, 7 I. Jur. 284. (C.)

12. A cause petition may be presented under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850 for sale of a policy of insurance.—Brahan v. Lawder, 7 I. Jur. 283. (C.)

13. Quare—Whether a cause petition, praying for the administration of personal assets, for the purpose of obtaining the possession of a specific chattel, comes within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850?—O'Flaherty v. O'F., 7 I. Jur. 283. (C.)

14. When a petition has been referred to the Master, under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, sec. 15, the Master has power to direct the service of notice, under the 32nd G. O. of 1851, for the purpose of binding persons by the proceedings in the cause.—Stanley v. S., 5 I. C. R. 416. (C.)

15. A cause petition, praying an account of the partnership profits, and for a dissolution of the partnership, is within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, and should be adjudicated upon by the Master.—Bolton v. Carmichael, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 5. (C.)

16. Petition praying a dissolution of partnership and an account is within the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850.

A partnership was entered into by deed between petitioner and respondent as solicitor and attorney, for the term of seven years, the petitioner advancing a sum of £250 to the respondent in consideration of the benefits to be derived from the partnership; the profits to be divided in the proportions of three-fourths to the respondent, and one-fourth to the petitioner; half-yearly accounts of the profits to be kept; the petitioner to be entitled to at least £150 per annum, whether the profits admitted of such proportion or not. After the partnership had continued for 14 months, during which no account of the partnership profits was rendered by respondent, the latter complained of offensive expressions of the petitioner, which were repeated to him by a third party; took steps to dissolve the partnership; and refused to account, or return the premium or any part of it. Held, that petitioner was entitled to a return of a proportion of the premium equal to the unexpired term of the partnership—the acts of the respondent having led to the dissolution before the expiration of the term.—Bolton v. Carmichael, 1 L. Jur. N. S. 298. (M.O.)

1. A., entitled to the lands of G., devised them to B. B. mortgaged G. and X. to C. A. was at the time of his death indebted to D. On a petition filed by D., praying for an administration of A.'s assets, and that C.'s mortgage might be thrown on X. in the first instance. Held, that the suit came within the jurisdiction conferred by the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, s. 15.—Murray v. Madden, 6 I. C. R. 228. (C.)

2. The jurisdiction given by the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act does not extend to a petition for the appointment of a new trustee, when it prays the removal of an existing trustee.—Mills v. O'Loghlin, 6 I. C. R. 565. (C.)

3. In cases under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, s. 15, the M. R. acts ministerially only.—Johnson v. Worthington, 2 L. Jur. N. S. 75. (R.)

4. The jurisdiction of the Court to make a summary order of reference upon petition under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, praying the appointment of guardians, allowance of maintenance, settlement of a scheme of education, &c., in minor matters, will be exercised with great reluctance.

Semble—It is better to present a summary petition in the minor matter.—Garnett v. G., 2 L. Jur. N. S. 314. (C.)

5. The jurisdiction of the Court to make a summary order of reference upon petitions under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, sec. 15, praying the appointment of guardians, allowance of maintenance, settlement of a scheme of education, &c., in minor matters will be exercised with great reluctance.

Semble—It is better to present a summary petition in the minor matter.—Fetherstone v. Moore, 2 L. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

6. When a tenant for life permits arrears of interest upon charges affecting the inheritance to accrue due, the claim of the remainderman to impound the produce of the life estate is a fit subject for reference, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15.—Kilworth v. Mountcashel, 7 I. C. R. 60. (C.)

7. A petition of supplement and revivor, where the original suit has been referred under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, may be referred under that sec.—De Bury v. Cooke, 7 I. C. R. 273. (C.)

8. On a petition presented under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, for the appointment of a guardian of a minor, the Court does not in general make a simple order under that sec.

Proper form of order.—Bagnall v. B., 7 I. C. R. 514. (C.)

9. The 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act is not imperative. The power conferred by that section of summarily referring to the Master petitions for the appointment of guardians and the allowance of maintenance to infants ought not to be exercised.—Charleville v. Tighe, 9 I. C. R. 309; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 613. (C.)

10. The Masters have jurisdiction in cases referred to them under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, to make orders for substitution of service. Splaine v. S., 10 I. C. R. 49. (R.)

11. In 1828, a bill to raise a charge out of lands was filed in the Exchequer. A decree to account was made in 1830. Held, that a petition praying the benefit of the former proceedings could not be referred under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15.

Leave given to amend the petition to be referred on production of the certificate of amendment.—Neary v. Callan, 10 I. C. R. 285. (C.)

12. Under pressing circumstances, an order of reference, under sec. 15, was made, although the petition had not been set down in time.—Ward v. W., 10 I. C. R. 465. (C.)

13. Time within which the final order on a petition under the 15th sec. should be made.—Moore v. Keogh, 10 I. C. R. 501; 5 L. Jur. N. S. 501. (C.)

14. The Masters have jurisdiction to re-hear causes referred to them under the Court of Ch. (Ir.) Reg. Act, sec. 15, but have only the same power and authority as the Court, and are bound in the same manner as the Court in respect to the period within which causes may be re-heard.

Observations on the practice in the Master's office in administration suits.—Nason v. Peard, 12 I. C. R. 30. (R.)

15. Summary order of reference of a suit for administration and a receiver, made without the three weeks' demand of account required by the G. O.—Wales v. Grier, 12 I. C. R. 88. (C.)

1. A petition by an executor, to administer the testator's personal estate, stated and relied on a deed, whereby a portion of the assets was assigned to petitioner. The petition having been referred to the Master, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, no charge or affidavit was filed impeaching the validity of the deed. Held, that the Master had no jurisdiction to decide, on oral evidence, and documents produced before him, whether the deed was or was not fraudulent and void against creditors, under the 10 Car. 1, c. 3 Ir. (13 Eliz., c. 5, Eng.)

That it was not necessary, to give the Master such jurisdiction, that a cross petition should be filed to set aside the deed.—Carter v. Dickinson, 13 I. C. R. 109. (R.)

2. A petition by a vicar of parish, to recover tithe rentcharge from the owner of the lands, is within the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, and the 9th G. O., 1851.—Phuket v. Malley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 83. (M.O.)

3. When a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, has been verified by the solicitor and not by the petitioner, in the form given by the Act, the Court will not make a summary order under the 15th sec. Notice must be served of the petition, and it must be set down for hearing as a cause petition.—Stackpole v. Stott, 1 I. C. R. 22. (C.)

4. The jurisdiction created by the Court of Ch. Reg. Act, s. 11, is one to be exercised with the greatest possible caution. All facts material to the formation of a correct decision upon each case should be contained within the four corners of the petition.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 497. (C.)

5. The Court will not entertain a petition solely to appoint trustees under the Ch. Reg. Act.—Gabbett v. Lloyd, 3 I. Jur. 286. (C.)

6. When a petition, in the nature of a special case, is presented under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act, s. 11, it is not necessary to its maintenance that all the parties interested in the question for adjudication should concur in the statement of facts put forward in the petition.

Nor is the sanction of the Master necessary to such a petition when a party interested, but not a petitioner, is under any of the disabilities mentioned in that section.

Whether the rights of persons, under such disabilities, should be bound adversely, must be considered in each case.

It is indispensable in every petition under that sec. that the documents relied on should be fully set out in the petition, or that copies of them should be furnished to the Court and to the parties.

A petition under that sec. prayed a declaration of the invalidity of an appointment under a power, and of the validity of a subsequent appointment. Held, that the donee of the power and an appointee (a feme covert), whose husband was a party, were necessary parties.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 208; 3 I. Jur. 205. (C.)

7. B.'s partner in trade died, bequeathing to his wife, whom he appointed sole executrix, his term of years in the business premises, and all other his property whatsoever, to be by her divided, at her death, or sooner, if she should think fit, amongst his children and grandchildren. She, for the purpose of continuing the business with B., entered into a partnership agreement with him, and raised money on the security of the leasehold interest. The petitioners, the lenders, had express notice of the purpose for which the money was borrowed; but relied on advances subsequently made to the children and grandchildren out of the profits of the business. The petition referred solely to the securities given by the borrower in her character of executrix. Held, that under such a petition advances subsequently made could not be relied on; and that the petition as framed should be dismissed, because the securities were originally void, the money having been lent for an improper purpose.—In re Johnston's Estate, 15 I. C. R. 260. (L.E.C.)

III. DEMURRER.

[Under the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Regulation Act 1850, demurrers were abolished.

By The Chancery Ireland Act 1867, the Act of 1850, and the practice thereunder, was abolished; and, by sec. 64, demurrers again allowed. The practice as to filing demurrers is regulated by the 46th, 47th, 48th, 53rd, 54th, 55th & 64th General Orders of 1867.]

Under the Old System.

1. The general Form.

2. Speaking.

3. When it lies.

a. In general.

b. For want or Misjoinder of Parties.

c. For Matter of Form, or Defective Statement.

4. When overruled by Answer or Plea. See PLEADING, ANSWER 7.

5. Amendment of.

Under The Chancery (Ir.) Act 1867.

III. 1. General Form of Demurrer.

8. The clerk, deft., demurred to so much of the bill as sought an account of the alleged waste, or any discovery relating thereto; and answered the residue, offering to account for the profits of the trees, the cutting of which was one of the alleged acts of waste. Held, that the demurrer should be overruled; because, being a demurrer to parts of a bill, it omitted to specify those parts; because the answer to one of the charges of waste had overruled the demurrer.—Crampton v. The Bishop of Meath, S. & Sc. 297. (R.)

9. A general demurrer will lie when one of several co-ptfs. has not any interest in the subject matter of the suit.

Quere—Should this objection prevail if made only at the hearing?—Egan v. Hoeman, 3 I. E. R. 50; Fl. & K. 39. (R.)

1. A creditor of a Banking Company formed under the 6 G. 4, c. 42, after the Co. stopped payment, filed a bill on behalf of himself and all other creditors, &c., against one of the public officers, as sole deft. The bill prayed that in pursuance of the 38 G. 2, c. 14, their demand might be paid out of the society's personal estate, and by the society, if the estate proved insufficient. It prayed an account of the personal estate. Demurrer for want of equity and want of parties. Held, that the 38 G. 2, applied to Companies formed under the 6 G. 4; that deft. sufficiently represented the shareholders; that the prayer for an account of the personal estate of the partnership was sufficient, since the bill stated it was sufficient to pay the debts.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 232; Fl. & K. 100. (R.)—[Overruled: O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469.]

2. Demurrer to so much of the ptf.'s bill as seeks any discovery from the deft. whether the deceased was possessed of any, and what property, at the time of her death (except leasehold estates, or chattels real, and shares in the Dublin Cemetery Company), and of the profits thereof; and whether deft. possessed himself of all, or any and what part of such personal estate. Held, sufficiently specific.—Commissioners of Charitable Donations v. Espinasse, Fl. & K. 164; 3 I. E. R. 324. (R.)

3. The 8 G. 1, c. 4 (Statute of Limitations), does not extend to Crown bonds or recognizances, though in them the Crown is but a trustee for a subject. A demurrer to a plea of payment founded on that statute, put in to a sci. fa. on a receiver's recognizance, was therefore allowed.—Reg. v. Bayley, 4 I. E. R. 142; 1 Dr. & War. 213. (C.)

4. A demurrer, in form to the part of the bill not covered by plea, but in fact to the whole bill, is bad. The 66th G. R. does not extend to a plea and demurrer.—Bayley v. Browne, 10 I. E. R. 180. (R.)

5. A., on behalf of herself and her infant children, filed a bill against B., tenant in common with her husband, C., alleging that, on C.'s death, B., entered into receipt of the entire rents, claimed the whole, and kept possession of the title deeds, for want of which the ptf.s. could not proceed at law; and praying that they might be put in possession of C.'s moiety; and an account of the rents of it since his death; and the title deeds. A. did not make affidavit that the deeds were not in her possession. Held, that such affidavit is not necessary in a case where the ptf.s. have a right to sue in Equity alivide, and that a demurrer for want of it was bad in substance; that the demurrer, not stating specifically the parts of the statement or relief to which it applied, was bad in form; that though the bill could not be sustained for an account between tenants in common, yet the infant ptf.s. were entitled to such account against the deft.; and that the mother being a co-ptf. was no misjoinder.

A demurrer ore tenus cannot be more extensive than the demurrer on the record.

The uncertainty of a statement is ground of special demurrer, and cannot be relied on upon a general demurrer.—M'Carthy v. Hatch, 9 I. E. R. 206. (R.)

6. The Statute of Limitations is a good defence on general demurrer.—Dunne v. Doran, 13 I. E. R. 545. (E.F.)

III. 2. Speaking Demurrer.

7. A decretal order in another cause declared, that persons had interests in the subject matter of the present suit, in which the bill did not state those interests, or make those persons parties. Held, on demurrer, for want of parties, that the defts. were not at liberty to refer in support of their demurrer to the decretal order, to show the interests of the parties; and that as the demurrer stated, and relied upon facts not appearing upon the bill, it was a speaking demurrer, and as such should be overruled.—D'Arcy v. Beggagh, Fl. & K. 481, 500. (R.)

III. 3. When it lies.

a. Generally.

b. For Want or Misjoinder of Parties.

c. For Matter of Form or Defective Statement.

III. 3. a. When it lies generally.

8. An allegation of a grant made in the reign of Edward III, in Ireland, for the improvement of a city and the support of public buildings, bridges, highways, and establishments therein—Held, a sufficient statement of a charitable use, and of a use which, though made to a civil corporation, will be enforced in this Court as a trust.

Such a gift from the Crown is sufficient to create a condition; and the Crown might insist on the forfeiture, or waive it on the performance of the condition, so as to give this Court jurisdiction on an information.

An information against a corporation, and also against an individual officer of it, making a case in which he would be personally liable, is not demurrable.—The Att.-Gen. v. The Corp. of Limerick, Beat. Rep. 563. (C.)

9. In a tithe suit—Held, that the bill might have been demurred to, or would have been dismissed at the hearing, on account of the smallness of the demand; the proper remedy in such a case being by civil-bill in the county wherein deft. resided, though the lands were situate in another county.

In a suit in Ireland for £6. 1s. 5d. for tithes—Held, that the bill might have been demurred to, since it did not allege any special circumstances, arising from combination or any right to be ascertained, or any difficulty in the way of proceeding at law.—Disney v. Taaffe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 94; S. & Sc. 105, 113, n. (C.)

1. The clerk of a patron, who had recovered in quare impedit, filed a bill under the 1 G. 2, c. 23, against the presenting bishop and his clerk, for an account of the intermediate profits. The bill charged acts of interference with the profits, and of waste by cutting trees and otherwise, "by the defts., or one of them," and of a conversion of a portion of the profits "to their own use." A general demurrer by the bishop was allowed.—Crompton v. The Bishop of Meath, S. & Sc. 297. (R.)

2. When a bill is filed for relief, which the plaintiff may obtain under a decree in another cause; Semble—A demurrer for want of equity on that ground cannot be supported. The proper course is, to obtain a restraining order.—D'Arcy v. Beytagh, Fl. & K. 481. (R.)

3. To a bill by the heir-at-law against a mortgagor's devisee, C., stating (inter alia) the outstanding mortgage in fee, and praying that ptf. should be declared entitled to the mortgagor's real estate, notwithstanding the will; and that C. should deliver up possession thereof, and of the title deeds, and should account as trustee for the rents already received; a demurrer for want of parties was filed. Held, that the mortgagee was not a necessary party, since his rights were admitted, and not affected by the suit.

The bill stated that in 1822, C. married D., a deft., and that C., knowing D. to be alive, but concealing her marriage, and bearing her maiden name, in 1826 married the testator, who never discovered the prior marriage; but, believing C. to be his lawful wife, devised to C. as his "dear wife C. M." all his real estate, &c. The bill charged that testator's belief, that C. was his lawful wife, was the sole motive of the devise; and insisted that it was therefore void. Demurrer for want of equity. Held, that since it might be inferred, though not conclusively, from the statement, that C.'s supposed character was the sole motive of the devise, ptf. had a right to rely upon the charge, as part of the case made by his bill.—M'Dermott v. Everitt, 1 I. E. R. 96. (R.)

4. Deft. demurred to the bill, on five grounds, one of which suggested a fact dehors the bill, and another contained an inadmissible averment. Demurrer overruled. Held, that, nevertheless, at the hearing, deft. was entitled to demur ore tenus, and newly assign some of the original causes; but, if he did so, should pay the costs of the hearing.—Daly v. Kirwan, 1 I. E. R. 156. (R.)

5. A bill stated several distinct matters of agreement, all of which might be described as "partnership" matters. In the statement, charges, and interrogatories, the bill applied the term "partnership" exclusively to one which embraced several transactions; and prayed an account of all the "several co-partnership transactions, &c., and that the deft. might be decreed to pay the sum found to be due," &c. The deft. demurred to so much of the bill as related to the agreement therein called the "partnership," and to the prayer for an account of all the co-partnership transactions, &c. As to the other matters of complaint, deft. fully answered the bill. The prayer being single—Held, that the words "all and every the said co-partnership transactions" must be construed to include all the matters of complaint, and that therefore the answer overruled the demurrer.

Since the Court would not enforce any discovery respecting the contract, called the partnership, it being against the policy of the law, and ptf. being particeps criminis, it was ordered that deft. might file another demurrer, confined to so much of the bill as sought discovery or relief touching that partnership.—Fitzgerald v. Arthur, 1 I. E. R. 184. (R.)

6. In 1772, V. devised real estates on trust to pay an annuity to his daughter, C., and apply the surplus rents in paying debts; after her death, in trust for her second son and the heirs male of his body; it being V.'s intention that such second son should take till he became an eldest son, and "so shall each and every second and younger son or sons enjoy the estates according to seniority, and the heirs male of the body of such second son;" in default of such issue, the estates were devised to C.'s daughters as tenants in common in tail. C. had four sons, W., J., D., and B. In 1793, J. joined his father and C. in suffering a recovery to C.'s use for life; then to himself for life; remainder to his sons in tail; remainder to D. and B. successively for life; remainder to their issue in tail male. J., dying without issue, pre-deceased C., on whose death D. filed a bill against his own son and B., claiming as tenant in tail under the will of 1772, or as tenant for life under the deed of 1793. On D.'s death, the ptf., D.'s son, filed a bill against B. and B.'s three sons, to have the benefit of the former proceedings, and suggesting that deft. claimed an interest in the estates. Demurrer for want of equity: because this, being in the nature of a supplemental suit, could not be maintained against the defts., who were not parties to the former suit. Held, too wide; it should have been applied only to the part asking the benefit of the former proceedings.

2nd. Because, if ptf.'s title be under the will, the three defts., sons of D., were not necessary parties, as having no interest; and, if ptf.'s title was under the deed, their interest was too remote. Held, that the deed showed, under the shifting clause, such an interest as made them necessary parties; though, Semble, a general allegation, that defts. claim some interest, would be insufficient.

3rd. Because ptf. showed no title to the estates.—Marquis of Ormonde v. Wandesforde, 1 I. E. R. 238. (R.)

7. To an amended bill (filed before answer) stating matters some of which appeared prior, and others after the filing of the original bill, but not re-stating ptf.'s whole case as he intended it to appear on the record, deft.

demurred, specially, because it violated G. Os. 51 & 52. The demurrer was allowed.—Mounatorris v. Fetherston, 2 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

1. It is irregular to introduce in a supplemental bill, filed after issue joined, and before hearing, charges contained in the original bill. Demurrer on that ground allowed.—Richards v. Page, 2 I. E. R. 223. (R.)

2. That one of several co-ptfs. has no interest in the suit, is a ground of general demurrer.—Egan v. Heenan, Fl. & K. 39. (R.)

3. Quære—Is ptf.'s insanity, at the time of filing a bill in his name, but without his authority, available on demurrer?—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 238. (R.)

4. Ptf. and deft. agreed that deft. should grant an annuity for lives, charged on the lands of B., and others, including D., on which ptf. had a charge; and that deft. should assign to ptf. a judgment affecting B. Deft. was unable to do so; and, having broken covenants in the lease of D., was evicted by C., who agreed with deft. for a new lease. Ptf. alleged that deft. evaded performing his agreement, and aided C. in evicting himself on a previous promise of a new lease; prayed specific performance; that the new lease might be declared liable to ptf.'s demand, and charged with the annuity; that if, by reason of the incumbrances on B., deft. could not fully perform the agreements, then he might do so as far as possible, and indemnify ptf. against incumbrances; for a reference or issue to ascertain ptf.'s loss by deft.'s inability to perform his agreement fully; and that deft. should pay the amount. Deft. demurred to the relief and discovery, assigning as causes that part of the discovery sought, being in relation to the new lease, was immaterial, as respecting it ptf. had not any title to relief; and that, since the bill prayed specific performance, ptf. could not seek part performance, with indemnity and compensation. Held, that the demurrer respecting the relief, seeking to make the new lease liable was unsustainable, and that ptf. was entitled to discovery, the interrogatories being in part material; that the demurrer, so far as it related to the relief of part performance, with indemnity and compensation, would, if so confined, be good, but that the demurrer, being bad as to the former part, was bad altogether.—Southwell v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 7. (R.)

5. Ptf., by bill, stated that A., by deed, conveyed lands to trustees to the use of B. for life, remainder to his issue male; and that the lands so conveyed were held by A. "under and by virtue of certain leases or agreements for leases for lives renewable for ever, or certain terminable leases or agreements for terminable leases;" the dates and particulars of which ptf. could not set forth, by reason of the same and the other muniments of the title being lost, or in defendant's possession, having been delivered to him by B. on a sale to him of B.'s interest. The ptf., as first tenant in tail, sought a discovery of the deeds; that renewals obtained by B. in his own name might be decreed a graft on the original leases; and for an injunction to stay waste. Held, on demurrer, that the reasonable construction of the statement was, that the lands were held by A. at the time of the execution of the deed; that the statement of the title of A. was not open to demurrer, inasmuch as the principle, which excuses a ptf. from setting out a deft.'s title, ought to excuse him from setting out the title of a party under whom ptf. derives, while the deft. wrongfully withholds the possession of the title deeds.

Semble—Such objection cannot be made upon a general demurrer for want of equity.

Held also, that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—Hill v. Mill, 9 I. E. R. 164. (R.)

6. When, on the bill's face, the time, which operates as a statutable bar, appears to have lapsed, the Statute of Limitations may be relied on by demurrer.—Ferguson v. Livingston, 9 I. E. R. 202. (R.)

7. Semble—A deft., who has answered the original bill, may demur to the whole of the amended bill, if the objection appears for the first time on the bill as amended.—Bayly v. Cumming, 10 I. E. R. 405. (R.)

8. A notice party to a bill did not enter a common, or a special appearance, and a memorandum of service on him was entered. At the hearing the cause was ordered to stand over to amend the bill by adding parties. The same party was required to answer by the amended bill. Held, that he might demur to the amended bill.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 13 I. E. R. 365. (R.)

9. A bill, filed by the owner of a leasehold, stated that a Railway Co., whose railway was intended to intersect the ptf.'s lands, served upon her the usual notice to treat: that no agreement having been come to between the parties, the company issued their precept; that the jury awarded her a sum for purchase-money, and a sum for compensation; that the ptf., offering to perform her part of the contract, made frequent applications to the company to complete their part, which they failed to do; that the ptf. could have adequate relief in Equity only; and prayed specific performance, payment of the sums awarded by the inquisition, and interest thereupon from the date of the inquisition. A demurrer, for want of Equity, and on the ground that the ptf.'s remedy was at Law, was overruled.—Doherty v. Wat. & Limk. Ry. Co., 13 I. E. R. 588. (C.)

10. The Statute of Limitations is a good defence on general demurrer.

The right of simple contract creditors to proceed against real estates, devised by the debtor under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 100, is barred by the Statute of Limitations in six years from the death of the debtor.

A devastavit by an administrator only creates a simple contract debt to the next-of-kin.—Dunne v. Doran and Doyle, 13 I. E. R. 545. (E.E.)

III. 3. b. Demurrer for Want or Misjoinder of Parties.

[But see 30 & 40 Vic., c. 44, ss. 66, 67.]

1. A suit by a married woman, suing for her separate estate, with her husband a co-ptf., is, upon demurrer, a misjoinder.

Semble—An objection could be sustained at the hearing.—Sweeney v. Hall, 1 I. E. R. 22; S. & Sc. 662. (R.)

2. The bill charged "that A., the surviving executor of B., was long since dead, intestate; although ptf. has made enquiry, he cannot now set forth the name of the person who, ptf. is informed, administered to the said B., with his will annexed, since the death of the said executors; and ptf. has applied to the several confederates herein named for discovery of the name of such administrator, but which, although well known to them, they refuse to discover." Demurrer, because B.'s personal representative, confessedly a necessary party, was not made a party. Held, that the demurrer should be overruled, as the bill suggested a sufficient excuse for not making him a party.—Ryan v. Cambie, 2 I. E. R. 328. (E.E.)

3. A decretal order in another cause declared that parties had interests in the subject matter of the present suit, in which the bill did not set forth those interests. Held, on demurrer taken to the bill for want of those parties, that the defendants were not at liberty to refer to the decretal order to show the interests of those persons.

A demurrer, which states and relies upon facts not appearing on the face of the bill, is a speaking demurrer, and must be overruled on that ground.—D'Arcy v. Beytagh, Fl. & K. 481. (R.)

4. J. bequeathed, amongst other property, a chattel real to his executors, in trust, after paying two legacies, for H. for life; remainder to B. absolutely. H. paid the legacies and some debts, and died intestate. His personal representative filed against J.'s executors a bill to be repaid those sums out of J.'s general assets, and for an account; but did not make B. a deft. by subpoena, though he served B. with notice under G. O. 15. A decree to account having been obtained, ptf. filed the present bill, charging that the general assets were deficient, and that the executors had, without consideration, given B. possession of the chattel real. Ptf. made him alone a deft. by subpoena, but served the executors with notice under G. O. 15, and prayed that the bill might be taken as an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill in aid of the original decree; and for the same relief against B., respecting the chattel real, as was had against the executors in the original cause. Held, that the bill was demurrable, the executors not having been made parties.

Semble—The relief sought by the two bills was inconsistent, one seeking relief against parties against whom the other waives all relief.

Quere—Is service of notice under G. O. 15 a waiver of any right to seek relief against the party?—Harpur v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 456. (R.)

5. Under her father's will, and an appointment by her mother, his executrix, ptf. was entitled; and, being in embarrassment, without professional advice, and ignorant of the amount of her claims, G., her solicitor, induced her, in 1833, to convey to him all her rights (which he represented to be only one-half of their actual amount), for a rentcharge on the lands thus conveyed to him, payment to be personally secured by him. G. drew the deed, which did not contain any clause of re-entry, or any covenant by him to pay. A non-alienation clause was inserted, fraudulently, as was alleged. In 1836 G. ceased to pay. In 1845 the bill was filed to set aside the deed; to carry the trusts of the will into execution; for an account of testator's property, so far as was necessary to ascertain ptf.'s rights; and, if necessary, of the mother's personal estate. B. the mother's executor and the father's administrator de bonis non, was made a party. The trustee of the will was not. Held, that there was not any misjoinder or multifariousness; that, if, as to B., the bill was multifarious, G. could not raise the objection; that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—O'Kelly v. Glennay, 9 I. E. R. 25. (R.)

6. A bill filed by the owner of a charge on a term stated certain settlements of the estate, and a former incumbrancers suit, in which decrees for sale of the inheritance for payment of charges, including those on the term, were made; and prayed the benefit of the decrees, and to have them carried out by a sale of the term. The cause, being defective for want of the parties interested under the former decrees, was ordered to stand over, with liberty to amend; under which order a supplemental bill was filed, making parties persons stated to be all those interested under the decrees; and praying to have them carried out or executed with such modifications as should be fit; and stating new matters intended to bind the defts. by the former proceedings, and which might affect the parties to the former suits, or their representatives deriving under the settlement. Held, that the bill was not sustainable without making the latter persons parties; and Semble, a suit so framed, praying to correct a former decree if erroneous, and have the benefit of it if not, is on that ground demurrable.

On an appeal from an order allowing a demurrer, counsel for the ptf. begins.—M'Namara v. Blake, 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)

7. The administrator of the executor of the surviving trustee of money charged on real estate—Held, not to represent the trustee in a suit to raise the money. A demurrer, for want of parties, was allowed on that ground.—Van Reizenstein v. Magan, 12 I. E. R. 415. (R.)

1. A judgment debtor, C., was possessed of A., for a term, and seized of B. By two contemporaneous deeds, C. conveyed A. & B., subject to terms for paying his debts, to his own use for life; remainder to E. for life; remainder over; and X. to Z. and his heirs. Z. died after devising X. to his wife, who married S. After C.'s death, the judgment creditor proceeded by elegit against X. Against him, S. and his wife filed a bill for an injunction, and to carry the trusts of the deeds into execution; but were compelled to pay the amount due on the judgment. The decree ordered that C. should pay S. and his wife the amount due by them, with interest, or, in default, that A. and B. should be sold for the terms; and that S. and his wife should, out of the produce, be paid the sum decreed them. S. assigned the benefit of the decree to R., who filed a bill to carry it into execution. On demurrer—Held, that the personal representative of C. was not a necessary party to the latter bill, nor was it necessary to revive the former suit against him.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 13 I. E. R. 365. (R.)

III. 3. c. Demurrer for Matter of Form or Defective Statement.

2. In 1837, a bill was filed stating that in 1773 C. devised estates for sale to pay charges; subject thereto, to his wife for life; after her death, to "The Incorporated Society in Dublin for promoting English Protestant Schools in Ireland," and their successors, for ever; that the wife paid the charges, and in 1801 assigned all her title in the estates to J., subject to the charges after her decease; that she died in 1801; that afterwards ptfs. got into possession of part of the estates, but that J., and the defts. as his devisees, retained possession of the greater portion of the estates, and also of all the common title deeds, which they refused to deliver up. The bill charged that defts. alleged that the charges remained unpaid; and that, after the wife's death, J. never denied ptf.'s right to the estates subject to J.'s own lien for the charges, but merely professed to hold the lands until the account on foot thereof should be closed; and even offered to refer to arbitration all questions touching such account as the only matters in dispute between him and ptfs. Demurrer: that by the laws of Ireland, no corporation or body politic can take by devise any estates of inheritance in lands. Demurrer, ore tenus, relying on the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27. Held, that independently of the question upon the Irish enactments, the demurrer on record was too extensive; ptfs. being entitled to a discovery of the common title deeds, and to have them brought into Court, and to be informed whether the sum was due on foot of the charges affecting all the estates; and also because defts., who claimed under C.'s will, had not any right to resist that part of the bill which sought to establish the will against the heir.—Incorporated Society v. Richards, 8. & Sc. 559. (R.)

3. To a sci. fa. upon a receiver's recognizance, the sureties pleaded performance of its condition. Replication: that, after the making of and entering into the recognizance, the receiver was directed to account; and that on passing his account a balance was certified as being in his hands; that an order to lodge that balance was made, but that the receiver had refused to do so. On demurrer, Held, that the record sufficiently alleged that the receiver had notice of the order.

Quære—Is an averment of notice necessary?—The King v. Lidwell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 26. (C.)

4. Ptf. must, by his bill, show that he has a good title at the time of filing it. An after-acquired title, put forward by supplemental or amended bill, will not support his case.—Byrne v. B., Fl. & K. 493. (R.)—[Confirmed on appeal: 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189; 4 I. E. R. 621. See Magrath v. Heron, 3 I. E. R. 476; Fl. & K. 237. (R.)]

5. A legatee's assignee filed a bill against the administrator, pending a suit to establish an alleged will, to preserve the assets; for a receiver, and an account of the personal estate; to compel the administrator to bring in the assets received by him, and to restrain him from further receiving them; and praying that ptf.'s rights under the will might be ascertained. Demurrer thereto. Held, that the demurrer embraced the former as well as the latter relief, and was therefore bad as covering too much.—[Phipps v. Steward, 1 Atk. 286, observed on.]—Tom v. Deane, 8 I. E. R. 39. (R.)

6. A judgment creditor filed a bill against the conuzor and prior incumbrancers, without having issued an elegit, or showing that he was entitled to issue it, but charging that the lands of the conuzor were an ample fund for satisfying all incumbrances; and praying a sale, and payment, of his own and all prior charges, or that the lands might be sold, subject to prior incumbrances; but did not offer to redeem the prior incumbrances. Demurrer, by a creditor made a deft., whose incumbrance was prior to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, allowed.

Semble—Where several co-trustees are made defts., one of them may demur alone.—Kirwan v. Earl of Portarlington, 8 I. E. R. 593. (E.E.)

7. A demurrer ore tenus must not be more extensive than that on the record.

Uncertainty of statement is ground of special demurrer, and cannot be relied on upon a general demurrer.—M'Carthy v. Hatch, 9 I. E. R. 206. (R.)

8. It is no objection to a replication in sci. fa. on a recognizance, that it purports to be pleaded by the Queen, and not by her Attorney-General.

An allegation in pleading a breach of a recognizance, that a receiver did not, nor would not, account, but on the contrary refused to do so, though ungrammatical, is not open to demurrer. A statement that the receiver received moneys while he was receiver, and afterwards was required to account, is also sufficiently certain without stating that he was receiver when required to account, or showing how he was required.—Reg. v. Bowen, 13 L. E. R. 241. (C.)

III. 4. When Demurrer is overruled by Answer or Plea.

1. A demurrer does not lie to an amended bill for referring throughout to the original bill, and repeating its entire contents and prayer.—Feed v. Cussen, S. & Sc. 161. (R.)

2. A clerk of a patron, who had recovered in quare impedit, filed a bill against the presenting bishop and his clerk, for an account of the intermediate profits; and charged waste by cutting trees, &c. Deft. demurred to so much of the bill as sought an account of the waste, &c., or discovery relating thereto; and put in to the residue an answer offering to account for the profits of the trees cut. Held, that the demurrer should be overruled, because it did not distinctly specify the parts of the bill demurred to; and because the answer to one of the charges of waste had overruled the demurrer.—Crompton v. Bishop of Meath, S. & Sc. 297. (R.)

3. This Court will not enforce a discovery respecting a contract made in evasion of, and contrary to, the meaning and policy of a statute.

The bill stated several distinct matters of agreement, all of which might be described as "partnership" matters. The prayer was for an account of all the co-partnership transactions, and that deft. might be decreed to pay the sum due. Deft. demurred to the prayer "for an account of all and every the said co-partnership transactions," &c., to several of which deft. had fully answered. He did not pretend that an account should be refused. Held, that the demurrer covered too much, and was overruled by the answer.—Fitzgerald v. Arthur, 1 L. E. R. 184. (R.)

4. Demurrer to the whole relief. Answer to part of the discovery.

Quere—Does the answer overrule the demurrer?—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 L. E. R. 186. (R.)

5. A deft. by his answer objected to an interrogatory, because by answering it he might subject himself to pains, penalties, and forfeitures; and, by a plea, he declined to answer a part of the same interrogatory, because the subject of it came to his knowledge in the character of solicitor to the other deft. Held, that the answer being equivalent to a demurrer, the case did not fall within the 66th G. R., and that the answer overruled the plea.

A bill to set aside leases for fraud made the solicitor who had prepared them a deft., charging him with being a party to the fraud, and praying costs against him, and interrogating him as to his being privy to the fraud, and as to transactions regarding the preparation of the leases. The solicitor pleaded that he knew nothing as to the matters, save as the attorney of the other deft., and therefore was privileged from giving discovery. The plea did not deny the fraud or the facts stated in the bill as evidence of it.

Held, that the ptf. being entitled to relief, was entitled to the discovery as incidental to the relief.

The privilege of a solicitor is confined to confidential communications with his client, and does not extend to his own acts, though done in the character of solicitor.

A solicitor may be made a party to a bill to set aside a deed for fraud, if he be a party to the fraud, and costs are prayed against him.—Kelly v. Jackson, 13 L. E. R. 129. (R.)

III. 5. Amendment of Demurrer.

6. An order made ex parte to amend a demurrer, a copy of which had been ordered and signed by the officer, set aside, it being doubtful whether the copy had been actually taken out, and the order being founded on a statement that it had not.—Keatings v. Garde, 12 L. E. R. 310. (R.)

7. Quere—Whether the 19th G. O. of May 1857, under the Ch. Reg. (Ireland) Act 1850, applies to misjoinder of causes of suit, as well as to misjoinder of parties?—Power v. The College of Physicians, 7 L. C. R. 104. (R.)

Under The Chancery (Ir.) Act 1867.

IV. INFORMATION.

8. An information against a corporation and also against an individual officer of it, making a case in which he would be personally liable, is not demurrable.—The Att. Gen. v. The Corporation of Limerick, Beat. Rep. 563. (C.)

9. An information against distillers charged them with distilling large quantities of spirits for which they had not paid duty; they having evaded payment by concealing the distillation, and pretending that their distillery had been silent during the time when the spirits were distilled. It required the defts. to discover the actual quantities of wort fermented in the distillery, and prayed an account of the duties payable to the Crown on spirits distilled by the defts. The Attorney-General waived all penalties and forfeitures. Held, that the defts. were bound to answer the charges fully; and could not protect themselves on the ground, that the facts charged, if coupled with other facts, would show that they had been guilty of a conspiracy to defraud the Crown.—The Attorney-General v. Conroy, 2 Jon. 791. (E.E.)

10. Relators refused to proceed further. New relators were substituted, who offered an indemnity for all past and future costs.—Att.-Gen. v. The Corporation of Cashel, S. & Sc. 333. (R.)

1. A cause petition, by way of information and bill, should state, and proof should be given of, the individual interest of the person named as relator.

Quære—Whether in the title of the petition, and in the verifying affidavit, it suffices to describe the relator as “a ratepayer”?—Att.-Gen. v. Le Hunte, 8 I. C. R. 437. (R.)

V. 1. a. General Effect of Want or Misjoinder of Parties: how to be taken advantage of.

2. Quære—Whether the owner of the inheritance is a necessary party to a suit against a tenant for life for specific performance of an agreement for a lease for lives renewable for ever?—Lowry v. Dufferin, 1 I. E. R. 281. (C.)

3. Sequestrators in possession of a benefice, and who have been appointed merely for the purpose of paying curates, &c., are not necessary parties to a bill by an annuitant whose annuity is charged upon the benefice.—Stannus v. Robinson, 2 Jones, 498. (E.E.)

4. In a suit to renew a lease, a person entitled to part of the interest sought to be renewed may be made a deft.—Butler v. Earl of Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

5. On a mere question as to the construction of an instrument, no persons should be made parties except those who claim under the instrument. It is better to leave other parties who may turn out to be necessary parties, to be brought before the Court by supplemental bill.—Alloway v. A., 2 Con. & L. 509; 4 Dr. & War. 376. (C.)

6. When the objection for want of parties is clearly untenable, the ptf. should not set down the cause under the 47th G. O.—Whittle v. Halliday, 2 Con & L. 430. (C.)

7. Deft., by his answer, insisted that he was entitled to relief against A. for whatever amount deft. should be decreed to pay ptf. Between A. and ptf. there was not any priority. Held, that A. was not a necessary party to the suit.—Att.-Gen. v. Trimleston, 5 I. E. R. 511. (Rev. E.)

8. The ptf. in the original suit is a proper party to the bill of review, although no relief is prayed against him.

The trustee of a term of twenty years was improperly made a party, the term having expired before the institution of the suit.

If the ptf., or a person standing in the situation of a ptf, purchases under the decree, the transaction is to be examined with the utmost strictness; and if the decree be reversed for error, the sale cannot be upheld.—Talbott v. Minnett, 6 I. E. R. 83. (E.E.)

9. The 15th and 23rd G. O. of March 1843, have a prospective, and not a retrospective operation. Their meaning is to bind, by the future adjudication of rights in the cause, a party who, having been duly served with the prescribed notice, has had the option of becoming a defendant, or having notice of the proceedings, with the right of interfering, if necessary, to protect his interests. After decree in a mortgage cause, judgment creditors were, by supplemental bill, made parties in the mode prescribed by the 15th G. O. of March 1843, and being served with the notice under that order, some of them entered special appearances, and the others did not appear. The Court refused the ptf.'s motion for an order, binding them by the proceedings in the original cause; holding, that they could not be bound by these proceedings otherwise than by a decree in the supplemental cause.—O'Brien v. Creagh, 6 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

1. The receiver in the cause is the proper person to present the petition, and to make the verifying affidavit, for a receiver under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 55, upon a tenant's recognition.—Daly v. Lynch, 9 I. E. R. 2. (R.)

2. Semble—A defendant who has answered the original bill may take a demurrer applying to the whole of the amended bill, if the objection for the first time appears on the bill as amended.

Semble—Legatees, whose legacies are charged on real estate, are necessary parties to a bill for a sale of such estate in cases not provided for by the 24th, 25th, and 26th General Orders.

A testator directed three trustees named in his will, out of the residue of his real and freehold estates, in aid of his personal estate, by sale, mortgage, or perception of the rents and profits, to levy legacies for his children, A., B., and C. One of the trustees renounced. A bill was filed for the administration of the real and personal estates of the testator, and to make them liable for a breach of trust, to which the two acting trustees were parties, and which charged A., B., and C. to be out of the jurisdiction, but did not pray process against them. On a demurrer for want of parties—Held, that the legal estate being in the two acting trustees, the case was within the 24th G. O., and A., B., and C. were not necessary parties to the suit.

It is not enough to state that persons who, in respect of interest, are necessary parties to a suit, are out of the jurisdiction; the bill must pray process against them when they come within the jurisdiction.—Bayly v. Cumming, 10 I. E. R. 405. (R.)

3. A bill, filed in 1844, to raise a sum secured on a term created by a settlement of 1773, stated the proceedings in a suit of A. v. B. by a prior judgment creditor, and prayed the benefit of the decrees and accounts therein; that the decrees might be carried into execution, so far as necessary for the plaintiff's relief, and a sale of the term. The cause stood over at the hearing to make two minors parties by supplemental bill. One of them, X., by answer, impeached the decrees in the suit of A. v. B., and both claimed as purchasers for value under a settlement of 1842, made by W. At the hearing of the supplemental cause, in June 1847, plaintiff's counsel contended that X. could not impeach the decrees, as he claimed under W., who had acquiesced in them, and an order was made that the further hearing of the cause should stand over, with liberty to the ptf. to bring before the Court the parties beneficially interested in the decrees in A. v. B. The ptf. filed a supplemental bill, setting out the whole of the proceedings in A. v. B., and the suit of 1844; assignments of the judgment and sum decreed in A. v. B. for the benefit of W., charging that W. and X., and the parties claiming under the assignment in A.'s right, could not object to have the decrees carried into execution; and praying that they might be carried into execution against them, and that the plaintiff might have the benefit thereof; or if the Court should be of opinion that they could not be carried into execution, according to the terms thereof, with such modification as to the Court should seem meet; and that ptf.'s claim and all prior and contemporaneous charges might be raised by a sale of the term of 1773. The Court refused to take the bill off the file as irregular; but Held, on demurrer, that the order of June 1847, though it authorised the filing of a supplemental bill to bring new parties before the Court, did not warrant the making of a new case; and that the case of estoppel, and the prayer that the decrees might be modified and altered, was a new case, and not warranted by the order.

Semble—The frame of the suit and the relief prayed having been altered, all the parties necessary to the suit of 1844 should be parties, particularly the party representing the term of 1773.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 527. (R.)—[Affid.: 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)]

4. Estates A. and B. were subject to an ancient rent. A. being sold, the vendor (T.'s ancestor) covenanted to indemnify the purchaser (C.'s ancestor), and paid the entire rent since 1776. A suit against T. decided that so much only of the rent as was payable out of B. could be recovered, and a decree was made for so much, the amount of which was defined. In a subsequent suit against T. and C., to recover the remainder of the rent payable out of A.; Held, that the former suit afforded no defence to T., and that he was a proper party to the new suit, either as claiming a part of the lands charged, or in respect of the remedy over against him.

In a suit to recover a rent stated by the bill to be payable out of lands named, "with others," the evidence as to the precise lands charged with it being very indefinite—Held, that an objection for want of parties could not be sustained on the suggestion, unproved, that there were other lands contributory, the owners of which were not before the Court.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

5. The administrator of the executor of a surviving trustee of money charged on real estate—Held, not to represent the trustee in a suit to raise the money, and a demurrer for want of parties allowed on that ground.

Semble—A bill by the same person to raise two sums charged on different estates vested in the same defendant is not multifarious, though some of the persons interested in the one estate are not interested in the other estate.—Van Reitzenstein v. Magan, 12 I. E. R. 415. (R.)

1. By a mortgage deed executed by a tenant for life and remainderman, the solicitor for the mortgagees was appointed receiver over the mortgaged lands at a percentage, and covenanted that he would apply the rents in payment of head rents, and the interest of the mortgage, and pay the residue to the mortgagees. A foreclosure bill having been filed, the remainderman filed a cross bill against the mortgagees and solicitor, impeaching the mortgage as fraudulent; praying that policies of assurance should be kept up out of the rents to indemnify the ptf. against the mortgage; a declaration that the mortgagees were bound to keep down the head rent; and an account of the rents against them as mortgagees in possession; and, lastly, an account against the solicitor of the sum for which a judgment was entered up as a collateral security. The bill did not pray costs against the solicitor. Held, on demurrer, that the solicitor having no interest with respect to any part of the relief sought, except the last, the bill was multifarious, both as to him and the mortgagees.

In a suit to impeach a deed for fraud, a solicitor or agent concerned in procuring it may be made a party, but the bill must pray costs against him.—Crofts v. Allman, 12 I. E. R. 451. (R.)

2. A decree against several, for payment of costs, is joint and several; and a receiver may be appointed over the lands of one of them, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, without having the others parties to the petition.

The costs given by a joint and several decree for payment of costs are in the nature of a debt. Therefore, there must be contribution between the parties liable.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 13 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

3. Executors, legatees, and heirs, who should be parties on rehearing.—White v. Mansergh, 2 I. C. R. 893; 5 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

V. 1. b. Misjoinder.

4. R., by will, directed his executors to invest £1500, and pay the interest thereof to his wife during her life; then, to divide the £1500 equally among his five children. Only one executor proved the will. He possessed himself of the assets; set apart the £1500; paid the interest to R.'s wife during her life; and made some payments to the children. Upwards of thirty years after their right accrued to the children, their representatives instituted a suit to recover the children's respective shares, and prayed that the executor might be declared to have been a trustee of the £1500 for the children. Held, that those executors who had not proved R.'s will were not necessary parties.—Daly v. Kirwan, 1 I. E. R. 156. (R.)

5. Semble—The objection, that a husband has been made a co-ptf. with his wife in a suit for her separate estate, though ground of demurrer, cannot be sustained at the hearing.—Sweeny v. Hall, 1 I. E. R. 22; S. & Sc. 662. (R.)

6. Semble—That, when a bill is filed by two stockholders, each entitled to separate sums of stock, on behalf of themselves and of all other holders of the same stock, praying relief, if it should appear that one ptf., by reason of some equitable circumstances peculiar to himself, is not entitled to relief, the Court may, nevertheless, in that suit, give the relief sought; and need not dismiss the bill.—Corballis v. Undertakers of the Grand Canal, 3 I. E. R. 29. (E.E.)

7. When one of several co-ptfs. has no interest in the suit, a general demurrer lies.

Quære—Whether this objection can be made at the hearing?—Egan v. Heenan, 3 I. E. R. 50; Fl. & K. 39. (R.)

8. A bill, for a renewal, stated a conveyance to have been made to one ptf. in trust for another, and no evidence of the existence of the trust was given. Held, that it was not a misjoinder to make them co-ptfs.—Butler v. The Earl of Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Con. & L. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20. (C.)

9. An objection to the suit for misjoinder of parties must be taken by demurrer.—Cashell v. Kelly, 1 Con. & L. 246; 2 Dr. & War. 181. (C.)

10. The equitable mortgagee of a leasehold estate, which had been by settlement vested in a trustee, joined the c. q. trusts, as ptfs. with him in a bill to redeem after eviction under the Ejectment Statutes, for non-payment of rent. Held, not to be a misjoinder of parties.

If a bill for redemption is filed within the time prescribed by the statutes, by the parties entitled to redeem, the Court clearly has jurisdiction to allow the cause to stand over in order that formal parties may be added.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239. (C.)

11. In a bill for redemption, after eviction, a leasehold interest vested by settlement in a trustee who had died, the equitable mortgagee of the interest and the c. q. trusts were co-ptfs.; and the landlord and the personal representatives of the deceased trustee (who had refused to join as co-ptf.) were defts.; Held, that the suit was properly constituted.—Malone v. Geraghty, 3 Dr. & War. 271. (C.)

12. Some of several persons had been made ptf. in a suit without their authority. Their names were struck out of the suit, upon motion and before the hearing. If the defts. shall be awarded costs, they will be ordered them against the solicitor filing the bill, he to have them over against the ptf. who employed him.

If there be a contest between a party to a suit and the solicitor, as to the authority given to the latter, the Court will decide against the solicitor unless he has a written authority.—Beddy v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 667. (R.)

1. Plaintiff was entitled under her father's will, and an appointment by her mother, his executrix. She being in embarrassed circumstances and without professional advice, and ignorant of the amount of her claims, G., her solicitor, induced her in 1833 to convey to him all her rights, which he represented to be only half what they amounted to, for a rentcharge on the lands so conveyed to him, the payment to be personally secured by him. The deed was drawn by G. and contained no clause of re-entry or covenant by him to pay; but a non-alienation clause was inserted; fraudulently, as alleged. G. ceased to pay in 1836, and the bill was filed in 1845, to set aside the deed and carry the trusts of the will into execution, and for an account of the testator's property, so far as to ascertain ptf.'s rights; and, if necessary, of the personal estate of her mother. B., executor of the mother and administrator de bonis non of the father, was made a party, but the trustee of the father's will was not. Held, on demurrer by G., that the time since the execution of the deed, falling short of twenty years, could not be set up by him on demurrer; that if it could, the case was one of actual fraud, and time would not bar; that there was no misjoinder or multifariousness; that if multifarious as to B., G. could not raise the objection; that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—O'Kelly v. Glenny, 9 I. E. R. 25. (R.)

2. A., on behalf of herself and her infant children, filed a bill against B., tenant in common with her late husband, C., alleging that on his death B. entered into receipt of the entire rents, claiming the whole, and kept possession of the title deeds, for want of which the ptf. could not proceed at law; praying that they might be put in possession of C.'s moiety; an account of the rents of it since his death; and for the title deeds. A. did not make affidavit that the deeds were not in her possession. Held, that such affidavit is not necessary in a case where the ptf. have a right to sue in Equity aliunde, and that a demurrer for want of it was bad in substance. That the demurrer not stating specifically the parts of the statement or relief to which it applied, was bad in form. That, though the bill could not be sustained for an account between tenants in common, yet, that the infant ptf. were entitled to such account against the deft.; and that the mother being a co-ptf. was no misjoinder.

A demurrer ore tenus cannot be more extensive than the demurrer on the record.

The uncertainty of a statement is ground of special demurrer, and cannot be relied on upon a general demurrer.—M'Carthy v. Hatch, 9 I. E. R. 206. (R.)

3. Parties, having adverse or inconsistent rights in the subject matter of a suit, cannot be joined as co-ptfs., nor can one who has not any interest be joined as a ptf. with one who has.—Fulham v. M'Carthy, 1 H. L. Cas. 703; 12 Jur. 757.—[Affg. (but on the ground of misjoinder of co-ptfs.) 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.)]

4. T., a trustee, lent trust-money on mortgage to M. By an arrangement, on the marriage of M.'s daughter, a valuable leasehold interest was granted by M. out of the mortgaged premises, and put in settlement, T. being the person who managed it, and the solicitor who prepared the lease and settlement. The daughter or her husband was not informed of the mortgage. T., afterwards, with his co-trustee and their c. q. trusts, filed a bill to foreclose the mortgage and sell discharged of the lease, if necessary. Held, that the parties deriving under the settlement must be fixed with notice of the mortgage and trust, and could not rely on T.'s conduct as a defence even against him, and therefore could not object to T.'s being a co-ptf.

Quare—Whether, if notice were not shown, such an equity against a trustee would be a defence?—Twycross v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 250. (C.)

5. An objection for want of parties, though it would be ground of demurrer to a bill, will not be an answer to a motion for an injunction in a cause petition.

Semble—The Court has authority to allow an amendment in a cause petition, so as to get rid of the objection of misjoinder.—Foster v. Hornsby, 2 I. C. R. 426; 5 I. Jur. 279. (R.)

6. R., and M. his wife, representatives of a sub-lessor's interest in a sub-lease for lives renewable for ever, assigned that interest to D. This deed was duly acknowledged by M. Subsequently, R., M., and D. filed against the representatives of the sub-lessor's interest a bill for a renewal of the sub-lease for the same life as had been inserted in the head-lease by a renewal thereof before the assignment to D.; but of which renewal R. and M. were, when they assigned, unaware.

Semble—That making R., M., and D., co-ptfs. amounted to a misjoinder.—M'Birney v. Allen, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 169. (C.)

7. The Board of the College of Physicians resolved that B. should be accepted of as a tenant of a farm for thirty-one years, at a rent of £1. 10s. an acre, as the nominee of P., a former tenant, who had by another resolution been allowed to dispose of his interest. F., the solicitor of B., acting under a general authority, wrote to the solicitor of the college, that, in consequence of the dangerous illness of B., he had not finally concluded with P., and could not take out the lease. Held, that the letter amounted to a waiver of B.'s right to the lease.

Quære—Whether, if there had been no waiver, P. could have compelled the execution of a lease to the representative of B., who was a banker, and would not have resided on the farm?

P., after the death of B., filed a cause petition for a specific performance of the agreement contained in the resolution. The solicitor for the college, in his affidavit, stated an agreement, made in 1846, for a lease for twenty-one years, at a rent of £1. 17s. an acre, with the brother of P., who had formerly been a tenant of the farm, and whose administrator and creditor P. was; of which agreement P. was ignorant. P. amended his petition, and, as such administrator, prayed in the alternative a specific performance of that agreement. Held, having regard to the 19th Order of May 1857, that the misjoinder could set be right, by amendment of the prayer at the hearing.

Quære—Whether the 19th Order of May 1857 applies to misjoinder of causes of suit, as well as to misjoinder of parties?

Held, on the authority of Lindsay v. Lynch (2 Sch. & Lef. 1), that the petition should be dismissed, as praying relief in the alternative, under two inconsistent agreements. But the Court gave leave to amend the petition by abandoning the relief prayed by the original petition.

The petitioner had paid the rent of £1. 10s. an acre up to March 1856, and receipts were given by the respondents for each gale. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to a specific performance of the agreement of 1846, on the terms of paying all rent from the 25th of March 1856, at the rate of £1. 17s.; without prejudice to the respondents bringing such action, as they might be advised, for the arrears alleged to be due up to March 1856.—Power v. College of Physicians, 7 I. C. R. 104. (R.)

V. 2. Assignors and Assignees, as Parties.

1. Unless some act is required to be done by them, it is not necessary to bring purchasers, pendente lite, before the Court.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement, lands belonging to the husband were conveyed in trust for him until he should be declared a bankrupt, or should become insolvent, or compromise with his creditors, or take the benefit of the Insolvent Act; and after his decease, or other determination of the trust, during the joint lives of husband and wife, in trust to permit the wife to receive the rents, &c., for her sole use and benefit. The husband took the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Held, on a petition filed by his assignee, that the Court had jurisdiction to make a decree declaring the limitation to the separate use of the wife, on the husband's insolvency, fraudulent and void, although it might be void at law, and although the legal estate should be in the wife, and not in the trustees.—Clarke v. Chambers, 8 I. C. R. 26. (R.)

V. 3. Att.-General, or Solr.-General, as Party.

3. Semble—That the Att.-General, without taking out administration, sufficiently represents, for the purposes of a suit, a bastard's estate.—McKiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 269; Fl. & K. 352. (R.)

4. A principal, after selling part of his property to an agent, devised his property generally to his wife, an alien, for life; remainder to his children, who filed a bill to set aside the sale. Held, that the Att.-General was properly made a deft. in respect of the wife's interest, though no office was found.—Murphy v. O'Shea, 8 I. E. R. 322; 2 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

5. A person of weak mind, but not either lunatic or idiot, filed a bill by his next friend to recover the arrears of an annuity. Held, that the Att.-General was not a necessary party, the plaintiff not having been found to be a lunatic by commission.—Carr v. Osborne, 1 I. Jur. 2. (R.)

6. The Att.-General should be fully apprised of all the proceedings relating to charities. Pleadings and briefs must be sent to his counsel.—Potts v. Turnly, 1 I. Jur. 57. (C.)

7. The Att.-General was made a notice party in respect of a recognizance by a receiver, as if within the 15th and 23rd G. O. 1843, when he should have been an answering party. His counsel appeared at the hearing, and consented to be bound. The Court made a decree.—Abbott v. A., 1 I. Jur. 155. (R.)

8. In incumbrancers' suits the Att.-General, made a party in respect of a recognizance, sufficiently represents the parties interested in it for all purposes; and it should be reported an incumbrance, though the condition be not broken.—Delany v. Kirwan, 12 I. E. R. 304. (C.)

9. The Att.-General made a party, in respect of a recognizance or otherwise, cannot be made a notice party, but must be required to answer.—Fauzett v. Biggs, 12 I. E. R. 305. (C.)

10. If any corporate or other body usurps, without express authority, the power of granting degrees, proceedings are properly taken in the Att.-General's name.

Quære—Can one body, to whom the privilege has been granted, file a bill against another body, which has usurped that privilege, without having first established its right at law.—The Att.-Gen. v. The K. & Q. Coll. of Phys. in Ireland, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 362. (C.)

V. 4. Banks; Shareholders therein.

1. The depositors (in a savings' bank) have not a common interest in the funds, but have each severally a legal debt due to them by the trustees. They cannot, therefore, sue as co-pts., or on behalf of themselves and other depositors.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 266. (R.)

V. 5. Bankrupts and Insolvents; their Assignees.

2. The 53 G. 3, c. 138, does not oust the jurisdiction of the Court of Chancery to entertain a bill, by the assignee of a deceased insolvent, to administer his after-acquired property on behalf of the unsatisfied creditors in the insolvent matter.—Byrne v. B., Fl. & K. 433. (R.)—[Confirmed on appeal, 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189; 4 I. E. R. 621. (C.)]

3. An insolvent is not a necessary party to a suit by his assignee.

Quære—Is it a misjoinder to make an insolvent a party to suit by his assignee?—Cashell v. Kelly, 1 Con. & L. 246; 2 Dr. & War. 181. (C.)

4. The grantor of a rentcharge, though discharged as an insolvent, continued in possession of the lands. Held, that his assignee ought to be made an answering party to the grantee's bill to raise arrears by means of a receiver.—Curtin v. Darcy, 2 Jon. & L. 718. (C.)

5. A plaintiff may rely on a title acquired in point of form after he filed the bill, if it be not inconsistent with his original claim, and is capable of having relation back. The devisee of an insolvent debtor filed a bill to renew; and the objection being raised, afterwards procured himself to be appointed assignee, and amended the bill, stating that fact. Held, that he could sustain the bill.—Doyle v. Callow, 12 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

6. When a debt. becomes insolvent pending the suit, the provisional assignee of the Insolvent Court is properly made a party to the suit by supplemental bill.—Roddy v. Molloy, 13 I. E. R. 90. (R.)

7. W. owned in Ireland fee-simple estates, which, on his marriage, he charged with a jointure. There was issue, one son, H. After W.'s death, the jointure fell into arrear for some years. Under the settlement, the jointress entered into possession of the estates, and received the rents. H. becoming insolvent, the customary assignments were executed. Afterwards, H. mortgaged his interest in the estates to B., without giving B. notice of the insolvency. As a further security, H. gave a bond and warrant of attorney, providing that B., on redemption, should reconvey the lands, and sign satisfaction on any judgment which might have been entered up on the warrant.

The mortgage, having been duly registered, took priority over the unregistered assignments, under the Irish acts. B. filed a bill for foreclosure or redemption, and made the jointress, H., and the assignees, parties. The jointure was decreed to be the first charge on the estates; and the mortgage to be the second. Accounts were directed to be taken accordingly. The assignees did not appeal against this decree. H. died. Held, that H. ought not to have been made a party to the suit, and therefore could not appeal against the decree.—Rockfort v. Battersby, 2 H. L. Cas. 388; 14 Jur. 229.—[See Battersby v. Rockfort, 9 I. E. R. 191. (C.)—Rev., on re-hearing, 8 I. E. R. 284. (C.)]

V. 6. Co-obligors, and others having Joint Interests and Liabilities.

8. A bill, filed on behalf of himself and all other creditors, by a creditor of a banking company, formed pursuant to the 6 G. 4, c. 42, stated that the society's personal estate was sufficient to pay all their debts; and prayed for an account of that personal estate; that the demands of ptf. and the other creditors might be paid thereout: and that, if it proved insufficient, the society should pay them. On demurrer—Held, that the company's public officer sufficiently represented their interests for the purposes of the suit; and that the shareholders need not be made parties.—Fawcett v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 232; Fl. & K. 100. (R.)—[Overruled by O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 6 H. L. Cas. 142; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469.]

V. 7. Debtor to Testator's Estate.

9. In a legatee's administration suit against an intestate's personal representative, ptf. made debt., a third person, whose real estate had been charged under a power with a sum payable to the intestate, charging that the personal representative was insolvent, but not charging collusion with the debtor. The answer denied the insolvency, which was not proved by ptf. Held, that the debtor was improperly made a party to the suit. As against him, the bill was dismissed with costs.—Philips v. P., 6 I. E. R. 509. (R.)

V. 8. Debtor and Creditor.

10. B. and his eldest son C., being embarrassed, executed in 1818 a trust deed, to which the scheduled creditors were parties of the fourth part. Ptf., a creditor of B., refused to execute the deed, and proceeded at law against B., to recover his demand. That action having abated by B.'s death, ptf., with the trustee's assent, submitted his claim to arbitration. The amount due to ptf. having been then ascertained, the trustee permitted him to subscribe the deed. In a suit by ptf. to carry into execution the trusts of that deed—Held, that the other subscribing creditors were not necessary parties.—Field v. Lord Donoughmore, 2 Dr. & Wal. 630; 1 Dr. & War. 227. (C.)

11. Creditors by judgment and recognizance, though scheduled to a trust deed executed for their payment, are within the G. O. of 22nd June 1842, when a suit in this Court is instituted to carry the trusts into execution by a sale.—Harvey v. Lawlor, 3 Dr. & War. 168. (C.)

1. When a judgment creditor, served with notice under the 15th G. O., entered a common appearance under the 18th G. O., he is a deft. in the cause, as if he had been served with subpoena to appear and answer. Aliter, if the appearance entered be a special one under the 19th G. O.—Bryson v. M'Cluskin, 6 I. E. R. 77. (R.)

2. After the G. Rules of March 1843 came into operation, ptf. filed a supplemental bill against judgment creditors of the inheritor, to have the benefit of a decree for sale made in 1839. Held, that creditors by judgment, obtained before the original bill was filed, were properly made notice parties. They were given a time within which to surcharge and falsify the accounts taken in the original cause; and it was further decreed that they, if they did not do so, should be bound by the decree and proceedings in the original cause. Held, that creditors by judgments obtained pendente lite, which affected the legal estate in the lands, were not unnecessary parties in the suit, and were properly made notice parties.

That a creditor by judgment, obtained before the original bill was filed, who in another right had been made a party to the original suit, was an unnecessary party to the supplemental bill.—Rutledge v. R., 8 I. E. R. 84; 3 Jon. & L. 307. (C.)

3. A judgment creditor filed a bill against the conuzor and prior incumbrancers, without having issued an elegit, or shown that he was entitled to issue it, but charging that the conuzor's lands were an ample fund to satisfy all incumbrances, and praying a sale, and payment out of the proceeds of his own and all prior charges, or that the lands might be sold subject to prior incumbrances. He did not offer to redeem those incumbrances. Demurrer, by a creditor, a deft., whose incumbrance was prior to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, allowed.—Kirwan v. Earl of Portarlington, 8 I. E. R. 593.

4. The Sheriff ought not to be made a party to a cause petition for an injunction to restrain the sale by him of chattels which, after seizure, have been found to be the property of the execution debtor.—Jackson v. Rossiter, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 411. (R.)

V. 9. Ecclesiastical Persons.

V. 10. Executors or Administrators as Parties.

a. In general.

b. Of Deceased Personal Representative.

V. 10. a. Executors or Administrators generally.

5. When, upon a renunciation of a sole executor, administration cum t. a. is granted, the renouncing executor is not a necessary party.—Houston v. O'Connor, H. & J., 718. (E.E.)

6. After appointment of a receiver under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 55, the petitioner died, having appointed two executors, of whom only one proved the will. The proceedings in the petition matter must be continued in the names of both executors.—Anon., 2 Jon. 731. (E.E.)

7. M. having granted an annuity of £300, charged on all his property, to A. and her assigns for ever, devised his estates, upon trust to pay debts, &c.; and as to the residue, to the use of his illegitimate daughter, E., for life; remainder to K. and his heirs. A. now filed her bill, after nineteen years from M.'s death, and shortly after the death of E., against K., the executor and trustee of the will, and the Att.-Gen., stating facts, whereby it appeared that no demand on account of the annuity was ever made upon E.; that during E.'s life A. was ignorant of her rights, and that E. also was ignorant of them.—[It did not appear that E. was ever in receipt of the rents for her own use.]—Further stating that E. was a bastard, and died intestate, unmarried, and without issue; and that upon her death all her property vested in the Crown; and praying that the arrears of the annuity from the time of M.'s death might be raised, &c. Upon demurrer to this bill, Held, that the personal representative of E. was not a necessary party. That supposing her personal estate should have been represented, the Att.-Gen. should, in right of the Crown, and without any grant of administration, have sufficiently represented it.—M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 269; Flan. & K. 353. (R.)

8. An ejectment was brought to impeach a lease, as contrary to the powers of the lessor under a settlement; and a bill was filed by a tenant to restrain proceedings, on the ground that the ptf. at law had confirmed the lease. Held, that the personal representative of the lessor was not a necessary party in the cause, although the lease contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment by the lessor.—Stoughton v. Crosbie, 5 I. E. R. 451. (E.E.)

9. In an administration suit by a legatee against the personal representative of an intestate, the ptf. made deft. a third person, whose real estate had been charged under a power with a sum of money payable to the intestate, charging that the personal representative was insolvent, but not charging collusion with the debtor. The insolvency was denied by the answer of the personal representative, and not proved by the ptf. Held, that the debtor was improperly made a party to the suit; and the bill, as against him, was dismissed with costs.—Philips v. P., 6 I. E. R. 509. (R.)

10. K. bequeathed, amongst other property, a chattel real to his executors, in trust, after payment of two legacies, for H. for life, remainder to B. absolutely. H. paid the legacies and debts, and died intestate. His personal representative filed a bill against the executors to be repaid these sums out of the general assets of K., and for an account. He did not make B. a defendant by subpoena, but served him with notice under the 15th G. O. A decree to account having been obtained, the ptf. filed the present bill, charging that the general assets were deficient, and that the executors had, without consideration, given B. possession of the chattel real; making him alone a deft. by subpoena, but serving the executors with notice under the 15th G. O., and praying that the bill might be taken as an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill in aid of the original decree, and for the same relief against B. in respect of the chattel real as was had against the executors in the original cause. Held, that the bill was demurrable, the executors not having been made parties to it.

Semble—The relief sought by the two bills was inconsistent, one seeking relief against parties against whom the other waived all relief.—Harpur v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 456. (R.)

1. To a legatee's bill the executor admitted assets sufficient to pay the legacies; but relied on his right to retain them as an indemnity for the contingent liability on the testator's covenants, and did not set out the amount of the assets. Held, the answer was insufficient, and that the executor was bound to set out the amount of the assets.—M'Auley v. M'A., 9 I. E. R. 142. (R.)

2. The resp. in a petition matter under the Judgment Acts died. Held, that, before the Court distributed the funds, his personal representative should be made a party.—Lord Cloncurry v. Piers, 9 I. E. R. 407; 3 Jon. & L. 573. (C.)

3. A. bequeathed a life estate in £2000 to B.; remainder to X. for life; remainder over. B.'s executor was personal representative of A., and as such entitled to funds realised in the I. E. Court. A creditor of B. obtained judgment for his debt, and got liberty to transfer the fund there realised to the credit of this suit. A petition was then filed by the legatees entitled in remainder to the corpus of the £2000, and an order was made in the I. E. Court that the fund should remain in Court until the rights of the last-mentioned petitioners were decided; but allowing B.'s creditor to apply to have the fund transferred to the credit of this matter, unless the petitioners in the other matter made him a party to their suit. A conditional order was granted for the service of a notice under the Act and Rule for this purpose; and on motion to show cause against it—Held, that the creditor of B. could not be made a party to a suit instituted by the legatees in remainder to administer the estate by such notice.

The fund was directed to be transferred to the credit of both matters, and a reference granted to the Master to ascertain the rights of all the parties. The question of costs was reserved.—Going v. Harding, 6 I. Jur. 17. (R.)

V. 10. b. Executor or Administrator of Deceased Personal Representatives.

4. R., by will, directed his executors to invest £1500, and pay his wife the interest for life; then to divide the £1500 equally amongst his children. Only one, C., of the executors proved the will. C.'s two executors proved C.'s will. One of them died. Afterwards, all but one of R.'s children instituted a suit to recover their respective shares of the £1500, against C.'s surviving executor. Held, that the personal representative of C.'s deceased executor was not a necessary party.—Daly v. Kirwan, 1 I. E. R. 156. (R.)

5. In a suit for an account and to administer the personal estate of a testatrix, the personal representative of a deceased executor of the testatrix may be properly made a co-deft. with the surviving executor, only where it distinctly appears that the deceased executor possessed himself of assets. From the statement in the bill, that the executors, A. and G., both proved the will, &c., but that G., who was dead, alone acted as executor, the Court will not infer that G. possessed himself of assets, so as to justify the ptf. in making his personal representative a co-deft. with the surviving executor.—Cocking v. Golding, 4 I. E. R. 169. (R.)

6. A person acting in the management of assets, though there be an executor who afterwards proves the will, is liable as an executor de son tort, unless it clearly appears that he was only an agent. When the evidence left this in doubt an enquiry on the subject was directed.

An executrix and A., who was not named an executor, acted, and died without proving the will, which was proved by the surviving executor named in the will. The latter and A. afterwards obtained a release from the parties interested in the assets. In a suit to set it aside, and for an account—Held, that the personal representative of the deceased executrix was a necessary party, especially as A. set up a defence that he was only her agent.

The cases, in which the personal representative of a deceased executor may be dispensed with in suits against a surviving executor, considered.—Kelly v. Murphy, 12 I. E. R. 614. (C.)

7. A., being liable under a covenant to B. and C., bequeathed legacies, and appointed B. and C. his executors. They both proved the will. B. died, leaving C. surviving him. C. died, having bequeathed legacies, and appointed E. executor. A suit was instituted against E., and a final decree made to administer the assets of C., no claim being made in that suit on foot of the covenant. A suit against E. alone, for an account of the assets of A., by the parties claiming the money secured by the covenant, was dismissed, without prejudice to their proceeding against the legatees of C.—Clarke v. Pope, 13 I. C. R. 91. (R.)

V. 11. Heir-at-law; Next-of-kin.

1. To a bill filed by the devisee of a vendor, to impeach the sale on grounds of fraud, the heir-at-law of the vendor is not a necessary party.—Uppington v. Bullen, 1 Con. & L. 291; 2 Dr. & War. 184. (C.)

2. The devisee of the equity of redemption in trust for other persons is a necessary party to a foreclosure suit.—Scully v. S., 8 I. E. R. 494. (E.E.)

3. It being doubtful, upon the construction of a settlement, whether ptf., his brother, and sister, were entitled to vested or merely to contingent interests—Held, that, the estate being limited to the settlor's heir if the supposed emergency should never arise, and the trustees having refused to become ptf's., the ptf. might, in the character of heir-at-law, maintain a suit to protect the property.—Peed v. Cussen, S. & Sc., 10. (R.)

4. In a prior mortgagee's suit for foreclosure and sale, the heir of the mortgagee of the equity of redemption is not a necessary party.—Whila v. Halliday, 4 Dr. & War. 267; 2 Con. & L. 430. (C.)

5. The inheritor is a proper party to a supplemental bill filed to make incumbrancers parties, when there has been a decree for a sale in the original cause.—Rutledge v. R., 8 I. E. R. 84; 3 Jon. & L. 307. (C.)

V. 12. Husband and Wife.

6. Modern cases have decided that the husband should not be a co-ptf. to a suit instituted in respect of the separate estate of the wife.—Hackett v. Farrell, Fl. & K. 553; 4 I. E. R. 519. (R.)

7. When a married woman is living apart from her husband, who resides out of the jurisdiction, and has no interest in the subject of the suit, the Court will, upon the motion of the ptf., and her assent, permit her to file a separate answer.—O'Brien v. Bernard, 7 I. E. R. 180. (R.)

8. In a suit instituted to set aside securities entered into by the ptf. to trustees for the separate use of one of the defts., as the ptf's. wife, the ptf. alleged that she had been previously married to A.; and examined A., who proved the fact of the marriage—Held, that A. was not a necessary party to the suit.—Scott v. S., 11 I. E. R. 74. (C.)—[See 13 I. E. R. 212; 4 H. Lds. Cas. 1065.]

9. A bill of interpleader having been filed against husband and wife, separate subpoenas and notices were served under an order for the substitution of service, requiring them to appear and answer at different times. The husband appeared and filed a separate demurrer, which the ptf. set down to be argued, and afterwards moved to set aside for irregularity. The Court refused the motion, and made an order nunc pro tunc, that the husband and wife should defend separately.

By a deed of separation a husband and wife conveyed the wife's property to a trustee, in trust to pay an annuity to the husband, and the residue, after payment of her debts, to the wife. The trustee covenanted to pay the annuity to the husband. The wife afterwards required the trustee not to pay the annuity to the husband; alleging, on the opinion of foreign counsel, that the marriage was void. The husband brought an action of covenant for the annuity against the trustee, who, having lodged the amount in bank, filed a bill of interpleader against the husband and wife. Demurrer to the bill by the husband allowed with costs.—Doyle v. Dumoncel, 11 I. E. R. 842. (R.)

10. Bill to set aside a transfer of stock to the deft., as having been obtained by undue influence and imposition. The deft. by answer insisted that he was entitled to the stock, but intended giving it to Mrs. B. The ptf. gave in evidence declarations by the deft. that he took the stock in trust for Mrs. B. Held, that Mrs. B. and her husband were necessary parties.—Ahern v. Daly, 2 I. Jur. 33. (C.)

11. Husband and wife were joined as co-ptfs., the rights of the husband being those of a specialty creditor; the wife's those of a legatee. Held, that the wife was improperly joined as ptf.

The Court allowed the husband to amend by making the wife a deft. to be sued by her next friend.—Evans v. Holton, 4 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

12. A married woman, residing with her husband abroad, filed a cause/petition in the name of a next friend, a person of no substance. The respondent having required security to be given for the costs, the petition was allowed to be amended by inserting the name of the husband, who returned home, as a petitioner, instead of the next friend; the petition to be re-sworn, but not taken out of the office.—Dunne v. Roche, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (R.)

13. A petition under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, s. 11, prayed a declaration of the invalidity of an appointment under a power, and of the validity of a subsequent appointment. Held, that the donee of the power, and an appointee (a femecover), whose husband was a party, were necessary parties.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 497; 3 I. Jur. 205. (C.)

14. Semble—In administration suits, brought by married women, their husbands should be parties.—In Mahony's Goods, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 107. (P.)

V. 13. Legatees and Devisees generally: Residuary Legatees.

[See under Court of Ch. Ireland Reg. Act, 1850 post, and under Ch. Ir. Act 1867, post.]

1. J., by will, devised all his estates, real and personal, to trustees, to pay debts, &c.; next to the use of his son, C., for life, remainder to C.'s issue; if C. died without issue, to W. for life, remainder to such of W.'s children as should be living at her death, in equal shares. C. died without issue. W. had several children living. In a suit by J.'s creditors to have the trusts of his will executed, and praying a sale of the real estate, Held, that all W.'s children were necessary parties.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

2. C., the executor who proved R.'s will, &c., died. Both C.'s executors proved C.'s will, and possessed themselves of assets more than sufficient to pay his debts. One of C.'s executors died; the survivor admitted assets. All but one, of R.'s children instituted against that survivor a suit to recover their shares of £1500 which R. had directed C. to invest, and pay the interest thereof to R.'s wife for life; then to divide the £1500 equally amongst R.'s children. Held, that the omission of one child made the suit defective.—Daly v. Kirwan, 1 I. E. R. 156. (R.)

4. When there is a devise of a fee-simple, and an absolute power to raise, by sale or mortgage, moneys for specified purposes; and that devise enables the trustee to give receipts to the purchasers; he sufficiently represents the estate in a suit for sale, though the person who was entitled, subject to that power, to the first estate of inheritance in the lands, was not a party thereto.—Keon v. Magawly, 1 Dr. & War. 401. (C.)

5. When one deft. died after answer, the Court would not permit his devisee to be made a party by amendment.—Listowel v. Callaghan, 8 I. E. R. 472. (R.)

6. Suit by husband and wife against the sole executor, and against the residuary legatee, to recover the balance of a legacy to the wife. The executor allowed the bill to be taken pro confesso against him, and did not controvert the statement in the bill, that the testator's personal estate and effects had come to his possession. The other deft. demurred, alleging that he was not a necessary party. As against him the bill was dismissed; his costs to be paid eventually by the executor.—Brooke v. Stewart & Wade, 2 I. Jur. 211. (C.)

V. 14. Lessor: Lessees: Sub-lessee.

7. If a mortgagee desires to impeach a lease, made after the execution of the mortgage, he must make the tenant a party to the foreclosure suit.—Martin v. Walker, S. & Sc. 139. (R.)

8. A landlord filed against his immediate tenant a bill to restrain him from cutting turf for sale on a valuable bog appurtenant to the demised lands. The tenant answered that he had never been in actual occupation of any part of the lands; that he never, by himself or any agent, committed the waste charged; and that, if his sub-tenants had cut turf for sale or otherwise, he was unable to restrain them from doing so, the practice having existed before the lands came into his possession. It did not appear whether those sub-tenants held merely from year to year, or had a greater interest. Held, that since they were not before the Court, the injunction could not issue.—Lord Norbury v. Alleyne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 337. (C.)

9. In a suit to establish a lease, all the tenants should be before the Court.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 283. (R.)

10. All the persons entitled to the lessee's interest should be made parties in suits for renewal of a lease.

One of the lives in a renewal was described as "B. C., the younger, son of B. C., of Sion, aged fifteen years, or thereabout." There were two persons of the name of B. C.; one, the eldest son of H. C., of Sion, who was fifteen years old; the other, the fourth son of B. C., of K., who was nine years old. Held, on the evidence, that the latter was the c. q. vic.

The tenant having tendered the renewal fine and interest from the death of the former, without objection on that ground on the part of the landlord—Held, that the tender was sufficient to save a forfeiture, under the Tenantry Act.

There is no general rule as to what shall be deemed reasonable time for payment of the renewal fines. But the Court granted a renewal when a tender had been made within six months of the demand, there being no fraud on the part of the tenant, and no circumstance to establish default, except the lapse of time.

Advertisements in the "Gazette," &c., under the 2nd sec. of the Tenantry Act, are not a sufficient demand where the head rent is paid to the landlord by an agent for the tenants. Such agent ought to be served with notice, if the landlord shall find any difficulty in discovering his tenants, or their assigns.

Semble—When a demand of a renewal fine has been inserted in the "Gazette," under the 2nd sec. of the Tenantry Act, the demand shall not be deemed to have been made on the day of the publication of the first advertisement.

Costs given to a respondent in a decree for the renewal of a lease, under the circumstances of the case.—Colclough v. Smyth, 14 I. C. R. 127. (R.)

V. 15. Lord of Manor.

V. 16. Incumbrancers; Mortgagor and Mortgagee, &c.

[See under the Court of Ch. Reg. (Ireland) Act 1850, post.]

1. The conuzor of a judgment being seized only of an equity of redemption upon a mortgage in fee—Held, upon demurrer, that the mortgagee was not a necessary party to a bill filed by the judgment creditor to raise the amount of his judgment.—Handley v. Lord Langford, 2 Jon. 421. (E.E.)

2. Sequestrators in possession of a benefice, who have been appointed merely to pay curates, &c., are not necessary parties to an annuitant's bill whose annuity is charged on the benefice.—Stannus v. Robinson, 2 Jon. 498. (E.E.)

3. A purchaser under a decree will not be held to his purchase, unless all parties having judgments, &c., appearing on record against the vendor, whether before or after the claim to raise which the bill was filed, are brought before the Court so as to bind their rights.—Piers v. P., 1 Dr. & War. 265. (C.)—[Affg. S. & Sc. 379. (R.)]

4. A bill by the heir against a mortgagor's devisee, stated, inter alia, the outstanding mortgage in fee, and prayed that ptf. should be declared entitled to mortgagor's real estate, notwithstanding the will; that the devisee should deliver up possession thereof, and of the title deeds, and account as trustee for the rents received. Demurrer for want of parties. Held, that the mortgagee was not a necessary party, since his rights were admitted, and not affected by the suit.—M'Dermott v. Everitt, 1 I. E. R. 96. (R.)

5. If a mortgagee of lands subject to an annuity files a foreclosure bill, and makes the annuitant a party, the bill will be dismissed, without costs, as to the annuitant, who is an unnecessary party.—Paynes v. Creagh, 2 I. E. R. 190. (C.)

6. In a bill for a foreclosure and sale of mortgaged lands all the judgment creditors of the mortgagor are necessary parties, whether such judgments are prior or puius to the ptf.'s demand, and whether they are a lien upon legal or equitable estates. This has been decided on principles independent of the operation of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22.—Rolleston v. Morton, 1 Dr. & War. 171; 1 Con. & L. 352; 4 I. E. R. 149. (C.)

7. Judgment creditors of trustees are never parties to suits for administration of trust estates; and in execution of those trusts, sales take place to purchasers who never object, nor would be allowed to do so, that the legal estate is incumbered by the judgments of the trustee, from whom it is to be conveyed to them. The principle is not confined in its application to cases of direct and express trust, it applies, to every species of trust, embracing those which, although they are termed constructive, are by the settled rules of equity as firmly established, and as clearly liable to be enforced and protected, as those which are created by express contract.—Leake v. L., 5 I. E. R. 366. (R.)

8. Judgments entered pending suit against a person who is a party to the cause, are not objections to the title.—Massy v. Batwell, 5 I. E. R. 382; 4 Dr. & War. 56; 2 Con. & L. 418. (C.)

9. In a bill for redemption after eviction of a leasehold interest, vested by settlement in a trustee who had died, the equitable mortgagee of the interest, and the c. q. t. were co-ptfs., and the landlord and the personal representative of the deceased trustee (who had refused to join as co-ptf.) were defendants—Held, that the suit was properly constituted.—Malone v. Geraghty, 3 Dr. & War. 271; 5 I. E. R. 549; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)—[Affd.: 1 H. L. Cas. 89.]

10. Creditors by judgment and recognition, although scheduled to a trust deed executed for their payment, are within the 23rd G. O. of the Court of Ch., and may be made parties by notice to a suit instituted for the purpose of carrying such deed into execution by sale.—Harvey v. Lawler, 3 Dr. & War. 168. (C.)

11. Incumbrancers, who have become such pendente lite, need not be made parties to the suit unless some conveyance is required from them.—Massey v. Batwell, 2 Con. & L. 421; Higgins v. Shaw, 1 Con. & L. 400; 2 Dr. & War. 356. (C.)

12. The Court having decided that the ptf. was entitled to an annuity on the lands of G., on which persons not parties to the suit were entitled to a charge; and a question of priority having arisen between the ptf. and them, the cause stood over to make them parties. Held, that they must be made answering parties, and that it was not sufficient to serve them with notice under the 15th G. R. of March 1843.

Leave given to the ptf. to move for a receiver in a suit defective for want of parties, under particular circumstances.—Sullivan v. S., 8 I. E. R. 72. (C.)

13. W. mortgaged leaseholds to the plaintiff. The deed contained a clause of redemption on payment of the principal and interest on the 1st of May 1842. By a deed of even date, reciting an agreement on the treaty for the mortgage, that the principal should not be called in until after the death of W., and that by mistake it was stated in the mortgage deed that it might be called in after the 1st of May 1842, the plaintiff covenanted that the principal should not be called in until after the decease of W. W. became insolvent, and the interest of the mortgage fell in arrear. The plaintiff paid an arrear of head rent, in order to save the premises from eviction by the head landlord. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to foreclose the mortgage during the life of W., but was entitled to a receiver to keep down the interest on the mortgage, and the advances.

The premises were subject to an annuity prior to the plaintiff's mortgage, and the annuitant was made a party to the suit in respect of the salvage claim. Held, that he was not a proper party to the suit, and the bill was dismissed as against him with costs.—Burrowes v. Molloy, 8 I. E. R. 482; 2 Jon. & L. 521. (C.)

1. Under the decree to account in a suit instituted by A., a creditor on the inheritance, B. having a puisse charge on a 500 years' term, proved it, and it was reported. The cause was brought to a final hearing, and a decree made for a sale of the inheritance to pay A. and the other creditors. Supplemental suits were afterwards instituted by A.'s representatives, who were ultimately settled with; and no sale was had. B.'s representatives filed a bill praying the benefit of the former decree, and to have a sale of the term, making A.'s representative a notice party. Held, that as B. was not entitled to such a decree as was made in A.'s suit, it could not be carried out for the plaintiff, or cut down so as to be limited to the term, at least in the absence of A.'s representatives, who might still have rights under it.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 455. (C.)

V. 17. When they are very numerous.

V. 18. Partners and Part Owners: Joint Tenants: Tenants in Common.

2. In 1790, V. entered into possession of lands as assignee of incumbrances and as purchaser from A., B., C., and D., each of whom was tenant for life of one-fourth. A. died in 1819, and B. in 1836. The next remaindermen (tenants in tail) of their shares filed a bill against V.'s devisees to redeem. Held, that the suit was imperfect for want of parties, as C. and D., still alive, were not before the Court.—Browne v. Bishop of Cork, 1 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

3. A bill, filed on behalf of himself and all other creditors, by a creditor of a banking company, formed pursuant to 6 G. 4, c. 42, stated that the personal estate of the society was sufficient for the payment of all their debts; and prayed an account of the personal estate of the society, and that the demands of the plaintiff and the other creditors might be paid thereout; and if that should prove insufficient, that they should be paid by the society. Held, on demurrer, that the public officer of the company sufficiently represented their interests for the purposes of the suit, and that it was not necessary to make the shareholders parties.—Fawcett v. Hodges, Fl. & K. 100; 3 I. E. R. 232. (R.)—[Overruled: O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. (H.L.); 6 H. Lds. Cas. 142.]

4. Four tenants in common, entitled to the first estate tail in X. under a deed, were before the Court in a suit instituted to establish a will devising Y. The validity of the will depended upon the deed; but in a cross cause impeaching it only two of them were made parties. Both causes having been heard together, a decree was made, on a compromise, setting aside the deed as to X., and directing a reconveyance by all proper parties. A person, who would have been entitled to a prior estate tail in X. under the deed was born. In pursuance of the decree, a conveyance was afterwards executed in which the four tenants in common joined. Held, that, the inheritance having been imperfectly represented in the cross cause, a good title could not be made derived through the decree.—Pasley v. Lord Clanmorris, 7 I. E. R. 442. (C.)

5. A suit was instituted by two members of a joint-stock company, on behalf of a class of scrip-holders who dissented from the acts of the provisional committee, against whom, as representing the scrip-holders assenting to these acts, the bill was brought. It did not appear that there was identity of interest between the plaintiffs and the class of share-holders whom they professed to represent. Held, that the bill was bad upon demurrer.—Dawson v. Tabor, 3 I. Jur. 297. (C.)

V. 19. Parties not interested, as Witnesses, Agents, &c.

V. 20. Tenants for Life and in Tail: Remaindermen.

6. When there is a devise of a fee-simple estate, with an absolute power to raise, by sale or mortgage, moneys for specified purposes, and the same devise enables the trustee to give receipts to purchasers; he sufficiently represents the estate in a suit for sale, though the person entitled, subject to the power, to the first estate of inheritance, is not a party in the cause.—Keon v. Magawley, 1 Dr. & War. 401. (C.)

7. In 1790, V. entered into possession of lands as assignee of incumbrances, and as purchaser from A., B., C., and D., each of whom was tenant for life of one-fourth. A. died in 1819, and B. in 1836. The next remaindermen (tenants in tail) of their shares filed against V.'s devisees a redemption bill. Held, that the suit was imperfect for want of parties, since C. and D., still alive, were not before the Court, nor was the mortgagee's personal representative.—Browne v. Bishop of Cork, 1 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

8. Part of the interest under a lease for lives renewable for ever was assigned to A. in trust for B. There was not any declaration of trust in the assignment, or endorsed on it. To a suit for renewal A. and B. were made parties. The bill alleged that the assignment was made in trust for B. Held, that there was not any misjoinder, and that B. had properly been made a party.—Butler v. Earl of Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

9. The reversioner is a necessary party to a suit respecting registered timber, between a middleman and the sub-tenant, when equities arise out of the contracts made between the middleman and sub-lessee.—Jebb v. Hardman, 1 L. Jur. N. S. 417. (C.)

V. 21. Tithe Causes.

V. 22. Trustees and C. Q. Trusts: Guardian and Infant: Lunatic and Committee.

1. When there is a devise of a fee-simple estate, and an absolute power to raise, by sale or mortgage, sums of money for specified purposes, and in the same devise are contained provisions enabling the trustee to give receipts to the purchasers, such trustee sufficiently represents the estate in a suit for a sale, though the person who was, subject to that power, entitled to the first estate of inheritance in the lands was not a party to the suit.—Keon v. Magawley, 1 Dr. & War. 402. (C.)

2. In a bill for redemption, after eviction, of a leasehold interest, vested by settlement in a trustee, who had died, the equitable mortgagee of the interest and the c. q. t. were co-ptfs., and the landlord and the personal representative of the deceased trustee (who had refused to join as co-ptfs.) were defts.; Held, that the suit was properly constituted.

An equitable mortgagee of a tenant's interest is entitled to file a bill to redeem within six months after execution of the habere.—Malone v. Geraghty, 3 Dr. & War. 271; 5 I. E. R. 549; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)—[Aff'd: 1 H. Lds. Cas. 81.]

3. This Court will not appoint a married woman guardian ad litem of an infant; but if her husband join, will appoint them both.—Jones v. Geale, 8 L. E. R. 239. (R.)

4. To a bill to raise a demand out of property vested in trustees for the separate use of a feme covert, the trustees ought to be made answering parties.—Pepper v. Kelly, 8 L. E. R. 502; 2 Jon. & L. 558. (C.)

5. Trustees to preserve contingent remainders are not necessary parties in a suit to raise a charge affecting the inheritance.—Stewart v. Marquis of Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 621; 2 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

6. A., tenant for life, mortgaged under power the inheritance for £500 and £1000, and afterwards paid the first mortgage, and took an assignment to a trustee. After his death B. became entitled to the mortgages. C., the tenant in tail, being a minor, covenanted by marriage articles in 1827 to convey the lands in trust to sell and pay off the debts then affecting them, and subject thereto for herself for life, remainder to her children; and a recovery was suffered on her majority. B. filed a bill, and obtained a report finding in 1835 that arrears of rent and fines, due in the life of A. and after, were paid off by loan on mortgage; and found this sum and the two mortgages, with interest on them all from before the death of A. to the time of the report, to be due, and a sale was decreed to pay them.

In 1840 B.'s assignee filed a bill, not making the trustee of C.'s settlement a party, and obtained a decree to carry the former decree into execution. Held, that the trustee was a necessary party, as representing the inheritance. That the first decree was erroneous, declaring the inheritance liable for interest payable by the life estates of A. and C., and that a purchaser under the second decree, in which the inheritance was not represented, could not be held to his purchase.

7. Ptf., by bill stated, that A. by deed conveyed lands to trustees to the use of B. for life, remainder to his issue male; and that the lands so conveyed were held by A. "under and by virtue of certain leases or agreements for leases for lives renewable for ever, or certain terminable leases or agreements for terminable leases;" the dates and particulars of which ptf. could not set forth, by reason of the same and the other muniments of the title being lost, or in deft.'s possession, having been delivered to deft. by B. on a sale to him of B.'s interest. The ptf., as first tenant in tail, sought a discovery of the deeds, and that renewals obtained by B. in his own name might be decreed a graft on the original leases, and for an injunction to stay waste. Held, on demurrer, that the reasonable construction of the statement was, that the lands were held by A. at the time of the execution of the deed; that the statement of the title of A. was not under the circumstances open to demurrer, inasmuch as the same principle which excuses a ptf. from setting out a deft.'s title ought to excuse him setting out the title of a party under whom ptf. derives, while the deft. wrongfully withholds the possession of the title deeds from him. Semble, such objection cannot be made upon a general demurrer for want of equity.

Held also, that the surviving trustee was not a necessary party.—Hill v. Mill, 9 L. E. R. 164. (R.)

8. A bill may be filed by the next friend on behalf of a person of weak mind, and the fit subject for a commission of lunacy, his property being too small to bear the expense of a commission.—Carr v. Boyce, 13 I. E. R. 102. (R.)

9. A term of years was created and vested in trustees for the purpose of raising portions. A person entitled to part of the sum secured by the term filed his petition for a sale of the lands, without making the trustees parties. Held, that they were not necessary parties in the first instance.—Townsend v. O'Callaghan, 4 I. C. R. 511. (C.)

10. A cause petition for the distribution of assets had been filed, in which B., a minor, and others were respondents. The minor had come of age, and a side-bar rule had been entered to proceed against him. A notice under the Act and Rules, according to the annexed form, was directed to be served, binding him with all the proceedings already had.

The minor had been served with notice of filing the petition, and an appearance had been entered for him. The notice directed to be served did not contain a copy of the prayer of the petition, as in the case of M'Cormick v. Murphy, 5 I. Jur. 220.—Geraghty v. Rorke, 6 I. Jur. 106. (R.)—[Overruled by Naughten v. N., 6 I. Jur. 309. (R.)]

1. Liberty was given to amend a cause petition, by annexing a statement to the effect that there were six younger children of a marriage, instead of five.

The sole respondent was a minor at the time of filing the petition, and had subsequently attained age. The usual sidebar rule for liberty to proceed had been entered. The Court refused to give liberty to serve him with notice under the 32nd G. O. of 1851, as that order did not apply to a minor who was named a respondent in the petition.—Naughten v. N., 6 I. Jur. 309. (R.)

2. When the report of the Master has found a respondent insane, and that none of his family will act for him, the Court will appoint the Solicitor for Lunatics and Minors guardian ad litem to the respondent, though he has not been found insane by a commission.—Callaghan v. C., 6 I. Jur. 194. (C.)

3. Form of notice and order to bind third parties under the 1st. sec. of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, and the 32nd G. O. of 1851.—M'Cormick v. Murphy, 2 I. C. R. 321; 5 I. Jur. 220. (R.)

4. A fund was vested in trust for A. for life; and after his death in trust for his son, B. The trustees allowed A. to receive it. A. died, leaving assets, and bequeathing personal property, far exceeding in value the trust fund, to B., subject nevertheless to life interests, and having devised to B. real property expressly in satisfaction of the trust fund claimed by him. B. filed a petition against the trustees to compel them to replace the fund, and claiming a right to elect to take it against the devise. Held, that A.'s personal representative was a necessary party to the suit.

In a suit to compel trustees to replace a fund wrongfully paid to a person entitled to a life interest in it, he or his personal representative is a necessary party, notwithstanding the 28th G. O. of the 27th March 1843.—Burrows v. O'Brien, 15 I. C. R. 423. (R.)]

V. 23. Vendor and Purchaser.

5. A purchaser under a decree will not be held to his purchase, unless all parties having judgments, &c., appearing on record against the vendor, whether before or after the claim, to raise which the bill was filed, are brought before the Court so as to bind their rights.—Piers v. P., 1 Dr. & Wal. 265. (C.)—[Affg. S. & Sc. 379. (R.)]

6. Purchasers, who have become such pendente lite, are not necessary parties to the suit, unless the ptf. requires some act to be done by them.—Higgins v. Shaw, 1 Con. & L. 400; 2 Dr. & War. 356; and see Massey v. Batwell, 2 Con. & L. 421. (C.)

V. 24. When one or more of several are made Parties on behalf of themselves and all others interested.

7. The depositors in a Savings' Bank have not a common interest in the funds, but have each, severally, a legal debt due to them by the trustees. The depositors cannot therefore sue as co-ptfs., or on behalf of themselves and other depositors.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 266. (R.)

8. A petition under the 33 G. 2, c. 14 (Ir.), on behalf of the petitioner and all the creditors of an Irish joint-stock bank, to have assets administered under the trusts of that statute is informal. The petition, if maintainable, should be on behalf of all the creditors of the persons constituting the bank; because the statute affords a remedy not confined to debts due by those persons in respect of the bank, but for their debts generally.—O'Flaherty v. M'Dowell, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 469. H. L.; 6 H. Lds. Cas. 142.

V. 25. When leave will be given at the hearing to Amend by adding Parties.

9. If a bill for redemption is filed within the time prescribed by the statutes, by the parties entitled to redeem. The Court clearly has jurisdiction to allow the cause to stand over, in order that formal parties may be added.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239; 2 Con. & L. 235.—(C.)—[Affirmed: 1 H. Lds. Cas. 81.]

10. In a suit to recover a rent stated by the bill to be payable out of the lands named "with others," the evidence respecting the precise lands charged therewith was very indefinite. Held, that an objection for want of parties could not be sustained on the unproved suggestion, that there were other lands which should contribute, but the owners of which were not before the Court.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

Under the Court of Chancery Ireland Regulation Act 1850.

[The practice as to who should be made parties to suits under this Act was regulated by the 6th 10th, 11th, and 14th General Orders of July 1851—(See Gamble's Ch. Orders, p. 115).—and subsequently by the 16th, 17th, and 18 General Orders of May 1857; the practice under which latter Orders was introduced into The Chancery Ireland Act 1867.]

11. A prior mortgagee having the legal estate is not an "owner of land" within the 11th and 12th Orders, and may be served with notice under the 32nd Rule in the Master's Office.—Cleland v. Montgomery, 4 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

1. If a person, who could not be made a notice party under the Rules, is only made a notice party, he will not be bound by the proceedings.—Bristow v. Millar, 6 I. Jur. 285. (R.)

2. A. bequeathed a life estate in £2000 to B.; remainder to X. for life; remainder over. B.'s executor was personal representative of A., and as such entitled to funds realised in the I. E. Court. A creditor of B. obtained judgment for his debt, and got liberty to transfer the fund there realised to the credit of the suit. A petition was then filed by the legatees entitled in remainder to the corpus of the £2000; and an order was made in the I. E. Court that the fund remain in Court until the rights of the last mentioned petitioners were decided, but allowing B.'s creditor to apply to have the fund transferred to the credit of this matter, unless the petitioners in the other matter made him a party to their suit. A conditional order was granted for the service of a notice under the Act and Rule for this purpose. On motion to show cause against it, Held, that the creditor of B. could not be made a party to a suit instituted by the legatees in remainder to administer the estate by such notice.

The fund was directed to be transferred to the credit of both matters, and a reference granted to the Master to decide the rights of all the parties. The question of costs was reserved.—Going v. Harding, 6 I. Jur. 17. (R.)

[See Le Grand v. O'Neil, 2 I. C. R. 571; O'Grady v. Brady, 3 I. C. R. 439 (R.); Hendrie v. Thompson, 1 I. C. R. 278 (R.); Foster v. Hornsby, 2 I. C. R. 426; s. c. 5 I. Jur. 297; McMahon v. O'Kelly, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 281 (C.); s. c. 5 I. C. R. 218; Brown v. O'Donnel, 6 I. Jur. 158 (C.); Persse v. P., 3 I. C. R. 196 (C.); Dill v. Brown, 3 I. C. R. 127 (C.)]

3. When a sole petitioner dies after the petition has been filed, and notice thereof has been served, leave will be granted to file a petition in the nature of a petition of revivor, referring to the original petition, and to be annexed thereto.—Long v. L., 6 I. Jur. 194. (R.)

4. In a suit to charge with interest, a rentcharge charged upon lands, the trustees in whom the lands vested—Held, not necessary parties.—Newcomen v. Hassard, 4 I. C. R. 268. (R.); Townsend v. O'Callaghan, 4 I. C. R. 511. (C.)

5. A person had been named in the prayer of a cause petition as respondent, but had not been served with notice of the petition; and did not appear at the hearing, although aware of the proceedings. His name did not appear in the docket for setting down the petition for hearing; and, a decree having been made in the cause by consent, his name did not appear in the decree. He applied for a re-hearing. Held, that he was not entitled to have the cause re-heard, not being a party to the proceedings.—Handcock v. Delacour, 7 I. Jur. 252. (C.)

6. A lease for 17 years contained a covenant by the lessors to renew, as often as they should obtain a lease of the lands, on the terms of the lessees paying all rent and arrears of rent then due to the lessors, and reimbursing the lessors the renewal fines, payable and paid by the lessors to their immediate lessors, with interest thereon from the time or times the several fines should be paid. After the term expired, rent and fines accrued due, and the lessors' interest was sold in the I. E. Court. On a petition for renewal, filed against the purchaser alone—Held, that the lessee was entitled to a renewal, on the terms only of paying all the arrears of rent and fines due to the lessors and the purchaser.

That the suit was defective, inasmuch as the surviving lessor had not been made a party to it.

The Court decreed a renewal, on payment into Court of the arrears of rent, renewal fines, and interest; and ordered the petitioner in the I. E. Court and the surviving lessor to be served with notice of the proceedings, on a reference directed by the decree to ascertain the amount of the rent and fines.

Quere—Whether the surviving lessor or the purchaser was entitled to the fines which accrued due before the sale and conveyance? —Steele v. McCall, 7 I. C. R. 122. (R.)

7. A., entitled to a portion of lands held for lives renewable for ever, under a lease of 1715, which had been renewed in 1787, made a lease for lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, to B., in 1795. A. afterwards assigned his interest to C. B. granted a rentcharge, and in 1816 devised his interest to his eldest son E., for life, remainder over. An ejectment was brought for non-payment of rent, in 1848. E. and his under-tenants were served with the ejectment; but none of the persons in remainder. E. gave a consent for judgment. The last life in the renewal of 1787 died in 1835. A cause petition was filed in 1856, by the person entitled to the rentcharge, praying that the ejectment might be declared to be invalid, and for a renewal of the lease of 1795, against C.'s heir-at-law. Held, that E., and those entitled in remainder after him to the interest under the lease of 1795, were necessary parties to the suit.

Semble—That as E., during his life, represented the entire interest in the lease of 1795, and had given a consent for judgment, the eviction was valid.

But as the question as to the service of the ejectment was a legal question of difficulty, on which two Courts of Law had differed, the Court directed an ejectment to be brought, notwithstanding the 22nd G. O. of 1857. Held, that if the eviction was valid at law the petition should be dismissed. — Phibbs v. Cooper, 7 I. C. R. 422. (R.)—[See Cleary v. C., 8 I. C. R. 264; Codd v. Trood, 8 I. C. R. 265.]

1. Semble—In a special case under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, parties having conflicting rights should not be made co-petitioners.—In re Charleville, 13 I. C. R. 6. (R.)

2. Semble—A suit will not lie to restrain the respondent from proceeding for an injunction against third persons, who are not parties to the suit.—Oldham v. James, 13 I. C. R. 393. (R.)—[Decision affd.: 14 I. C. R. 81. (C.A.)]

3. Parties moved to have their names removed from the record because they had been used by the solicitor without their authority. He was unable to produce any written authority. Held, that the motion should be refused, since the facts and documents established that the parties had been aware of the use of their names, and had allowed a long space of time to elapse without taking any steps.—McNally v. Knox, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 120. (R.)

4. An agreement recited that A. desired to purchase, and that B. desired to sell to A., for £200, one-half of a schooner; and that B. had agreed to lend A. £370 upon repayment thereof, with interest, being secured on specified property. It was witnessed, that B. agreed to dispose of the schooner to A., and to execute the necessary deed; that the £200 should be part of the £370; that A. should mortgage the schooner to B. as a further security for the £370, which sum, with interest, A. was to repay by annual instalments of £50. If A. neglected to pay off all or any of the instalments, with interest, B. was empowered to call in the £370, or whatever part thereof then remained due. The schooner, proving unseaworthy, was by mutual consent returned to B. Afterwards, A. assigned the other property specified in the agreement to C., who had notice of the agreement. Held, that A. was not a necessary party to a suit against C. for an account of what remained due on foot of the £170, and for a sale; but might be bound by notice under the 32nd G. O. 1851.—Murphy v. Moorehead, 16 I. C. R. 454. (R.)

5. A lease contained a covenant by the lessee, on the decease of any of the lives, to put in another person's life, the lessee, his heirs or assigns, giving notice in twelve months of the decease of the life. The lessee was the last surviving life; and his son and heir-at-law had been abroad for many years, and, having had no communication with his family, was supposed to be dead. He did not hear of his father's death until after twelve months had expired, and did not serve any notice to renew. Held, that there was no ignorance or unavoidable accident which would excuse the non-compliance on his part with the covenant, and a petition for a renewal was therefore dismissed.

Matters not put in issue by the petition, or by amendment thereof, cannot be relied on at the hearing of a cause petition. It is not sufficient to put them in issue by an affidavit in reply. — Murphy v. Jackson, 7 I. C. R. 189; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 132. (R.)—[Affd.: 7 I. C. R. 502; 3 I. Jur. 288. (C.A.)]

1. Its Form and Validity.

- a. Generally.
- b. False Plea.
- c. Uncertainty.
- d. Surplusage.
- e. Double.
- f. Negative.

VII 1. a. Plea, Form and Validity of, generally.

1. Semble—The setting down a plea for argument is not, in this country, as it is in England, an acknowledgment of the truth of the plea. —Howlett v. Lambert, Fl. & K. 226. (R.)

2. It is the duty of the deft. to set down his plea to be argued; and if the ptf. admits the validity, but denies the truth of the plea, the Court will give him leave to file a replication. —Wilson v. W., 5 I. E. R. 514. (E.E.)

3. Ptf. in an original suit, being a creditor on foot of a freehold mortgage, an equitable mortgage, and judgments, died. Her devisees, three of them being also her executors, filed an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor. Defts., entitling their plea as one to a bill of revivor, pleaded in bar, that ptf. in the original suit "by a deed or instrument in writing executed by her, the date, parties' names, and exact contents whereof are wholly unknown to" deft., assigned her interests in the subjects of the suit to B.; and that, therefore, no estate therein passed to ptf.s. as executors. Held, bad in form, as not following the nature of the bill, and as treating ptf.s. as if they were all executors; and bad in substance, since the facts on which it relied, to show want of interest in ptf.s. did not amount to a sufficient assignment of that interest.

Semble—The plea was bad, as being in the alternative and uncertain.—Pike v. O'Connor, 7 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

4. To a bill, praying (inter alia) an account of certain dealings between ptf. and deft., and charging specific errors and omissions in the accounts made more than six years before, but not discovered until long afterwards, deft. put in a plea and answer entitled "a plea to part of the bill, and an answer to the residue;" and (after protestation in the usual form) pleaded, touching so much of the bill as prayed an account, the Statute of Limitations, and that he did not "within six years next before the filing of the bill, and within six years next before suing out process," &c., sign any writing, &c., in the words of the exceptions in the statute. The plea did not negative the allegations respecting the errors in the accounts. Deft. then answered, at length, nearly the whole of the matters in the bill. Held, that the plea was properly entitled; that the portion negating the exceptions in the statute might be rejected as surplusage: that the allegations of errors, even if they amounted to fraud, did not state that the errors had been discovered within six years; and therefore need not be negated by the plea; that the answer, since it did not cover the whole bill, did not, by the 66th G. O., overrule the plea.—Hughes v. Taylor, 7 I. E. R. 80. (R.)

5. A sci. fa. on a recognizance stated, that, "on &c., at B. in the county of G., M., L., and T. came before J., who then and there was one of the Masters Extraordinary, &c., and then and there jointly and severally acknowledged themselves to be indebted." The record of the recognizance did not contain the words in italics; but at foot of it were these words: "Taken and acknowledged before me at B., in the county of G. aforesaid, the day and year above mentioned." Held, on the plea of nul tiel record, that the variance was fatal.—Reg. v. Lynch, 7 I. E. R. 263; 1 Jon. & L. 462. (C.)

6. Of two pleas to a sci. fa. on a recognizance, the second began with an averment "by leave of the Court, &c., pursuant to the statute in that case," &c. On demurrer—Held sufficient, though informal.

A sci. fa. on a recognizance, averred that it was taken in the county of C., before A. B., a Master Extraordinary for the county of C.; Plea:—that A. B. was not a Master Extraordinary for the county of C. Held, good.—Reg. v. Irwin, 9 I. E. R. 546. (R.)

7. Recognizance by E. of Mallard Lodge; sci. fa. against E. of Mallow Lodge. On nul tiel record pleaded; Held, sufficient.—Reg. v. Naghten, 9 I. E. R. 593. (C.)

8. A. obtained a decree directing the deft. to pay him money. A. died. The ptf., as administrator, filed a bill of revivor, to which the deft. pleaded an agreement with A., that if he procured B. to execute his bond and warrant of attorney to enter judgment for part of the money, and paid the remainder, A. would accept the same in full satisfaction and discharge of the sum decreed. That B. executed his bond and warrant to A., on which judgment was entered, and the deft. and his son executed their joint and several bond and warrant to B., on which judgment was also entered; that the deft. paid the balance of the sum decreed; which bond and warrant of B., and balance, A. accepted in full satisfaction and discharge of the sum decreed. The plea further stated, that the judgment entered against the deft. and his son had been assigned by B.; that the defendant had been compelled to pay the amount to the assignee, and the judgment had been satisfied. That A. had assigned the judgment against B. in trust for his daughters, and afterwards by his will bequeathed it on the same trust. The plea then averred, that A. thereby and otherwise recognised and affirmed the said agreement, and admitted that the judgment against B. had been substituted for the debt decreed. Held, that the covenants in the pleas with respect to the assignment of the judgments being immaterial did not make the plea double.

That the agreement stated in the plea was a valid defence in Equity, although the debt was by decree, and the agreement by parol. That the defence was a proper subject for a plea, and that a cross-bill need not be filed to raise it.—Daly v. Kirwan, 10 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

1. A plea may be good in part and bad in part, with respect to the quantity of the bill covered by it; but not with respect to the defence made by it. If part of the defence be bad, the plea must be overruled.

A ptf.'s bill sought a revivor against a deft. in several characters. The deft. pleaded to the whole relief, and the Court was of opinion that the ptf. was entitled to revive against the deft. in one character. The plea was overruled.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

2. A receiver who has gone into receipt of rent under the Court, will not be allowed to plead to a sci. fa. upon his recognizances, that it was taken by an unauthorised person.—Wellesley v. Mornington, 13 I. C. R. 559. (C.)

VII. 1. b. False Plea.

3. A rejoinder falsely traversing matter of inducement contained in a replication to a plea to a sci. fa. upon a receiver's recognizance, taken off the file, with costs.—The Queen v. Foot, 1 I. C. R. 9. (C.)

4. After the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 51, a sci. fa. at the Petty-bag side of the Court of C., upon a recognizance entered into by a surety for a tenant of lands, which were the subject of a suit at the Equity side of the Court of Ex., after reciting the recognizance, proceeded thus:—"As by the said recognizance, which was on, &c., in, &c., duly enrolled in her Majesty's said Court of Exchequer, and now remaining as of record in our said Court of Chancery, by virtue of the statute in that case made and provided, might appear." To this sci. fa. the deft. pleaded that the Court of Ch. ought not to have or take further cognizance of the action, because the recognizance was on, &c., duly enrolled in the Court of Ex., whereby that Court acquired, and still retained, full jurisdiction to award execution against him for the sum of &c., according to the tenor of the recognizance. The plea concluded with the averment, "that there is not any such record of the said supposed recognizance now remaining in her Majesty's said Court of Chancery, as in said writ of sci. fa. is above alleged; and this the said deft. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment whether this Court can or will take further cognizance of the action aforesaid." Upon a motion at the Petty-bag side to take this plea off the file as irregular, as not having been verified by affidavit, and as being false and frivolous, this Court refused to make any rule.

Under the concluding part of the 13th sec. of the statute, such recognizances may, upon agreement between the Lord Ch. and Lord C. B., be delivered over to such persons as may be appointed by the M. R.

Quere—Whether recognizances, so transferred, become records of, and capable of being sued upon in, the Court of Ch., unless perhaps by the Crown, under its special privilege to select its Court?—The Queen v. Jones, 1 I. C. R. 524. (C.)

VII. 1. c. Uncertainty in a Plea.

5. The ptf. in an original suit, who was a creditor on foot of a freehold mortgage, an equitable mortgage and judgments, having died, her devisees, three of whom were also her executors, filed an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor. The defts. pleaded in bar (entitling their plea as one to a bill of revivor), that the ptf. in the original suit "by a deed or instrument in writing executed by her, the date, parties' names, and exact contents whereof are wholly unknown to the deft.," assigned her interest in the subjects of suit to J., and that therefore no estate therein passed to the ptf. as executors. Held, that the plea was bad in form, as not following the nature of the bill, and as treating the ptf. as if they were all executors.

Seem—Also as being in the alternative, and uncertain.

Held, that it was bad in substance, as the facts on which it relied, as showing want of interest in the ptf., did not amount to a sufficient assignment of that interest.—Pike v. O'Connor, 7 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

VII. 1. d. Plea of Surplusage.

6. To a bill praying, amongst other things, an account of dealings between the ptf. and deft., and charging specific errors and omissions in the accounts, and made more than six years before, but not discovered until long afterwards, the deft. put in a plea and answer entitled a plea to part of the bill, and an answer to the residue; and (after the protestation in the usual form) pleaded, as to so much of the bill as prayed the account, the Statute of Limitations, and that he did not "within six years next before the filing of the bill, and within six years next before suing out process," &c., sign any writing, &c., in the words of the exceptions in the statute. The plea did not negative the allegations with respect to the errors in the accounts. The defendant then answered at length nearly the whole of the matters in the bill. Held, on argument, that the plea was properly entitled; that the portion of the plea negating the exceptions in the Statute of Limitations might be rejected as surplusage: that the allegations of errors, even if they did amount to fraud, were not stated to have been discovered within six years, and therefore the plea was not bound to negative them: that the answer, not covering the whole bill, did not by the 66th G. O. overrule the plea.

The 66th G. O. has repealed the old rule of pleading, which overruled the plea in all cases where the answer gave any discovery from which the plea, if allowed, would have protected the debt.—Hughes v. Taylor, 7 I. E. R. 80. (R.)

VII. 1. e. Double Plea.

1. Two pleas to a sci. fa. on a recognizance, the second of which commenced with the averment by leave of the Court, &c., pursuant to the statute in that case, &c., though informal—Held, sufficient, on demurrer.

To a sci. fa. on a recognizance, averring that it was taken in the county of C., before A., a Master Extraordinary for the county of C., it was pleaded that A. was not a Master Extraordinary for the county of C. Held, a good plea.

To a sci. fa. stating a recognizance taken before A., and that it was so taken at X., in C., before the said A., then being a Master for the county of C., duly authorised in that behalf; a plea that the recognizance was not taken and acknowledged in manner and form as in the sci. fa. alleged, at X. in the county of C., or elsewhere in C.; Held, bad for duplicity, and as too large a traverse.—The Queen v. Irwin, 9 I. E. R. 546. (C.)

2. The rule that matter immaterial cannot operate to make a pleading double prevails in Equity as well as at Law.—Daly v. Kirwan, 10 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

3. Liberty given to a debt. to plead double to a bill, she not having entered any appearance, but undertaking to adopt the parliamentary appearance filed by the ptf., and to pay the costs of the motion.—Fitzgerald v. F., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 181. (R.)

7. A debt. who does not, by pleading, claim the benefit of the 8 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, cannot rely upon it in the office in bar of the account.—Walsh v. W., Jon. & C. 52. (E.E.)

8. On a reference to enquire the sum due for principal, interest, and costs on foot of a judgment for which a receiver has been appointed, the respondent is entitled to the benefit of the Statute of Limitations, although not set up in showing cause against the appointment of the receiver; and the petitioner is entitled only to interest for six years from the date of the conditional order for the appointment of the receiver.—Dowell v. Burke, 9 I. E. R. 83. (C.)

9. The bill stated that the executors and others answered a bill of 1808, but the devisees of the real estate "stood out process of contempt; and thereupon a decree on sequestration was obtained against them;" but the nature of the decree was not stated. After the decree on sequestration, the party against whom it was obtained died, and a bill of revivor and three amended bills were filed against W., who derived under the party against whom the decree on sequestration was obtained; but the suit was never brought to a hearing against any of the debts. who had answered. By the practice of the Court, during the pendency of such former suit, an absolute decree on sequestration could not be obtained against a party until the suit was heard against the answering debts. Held, that the statement in the bill, that there was "a decree on sequestration," must be taken to be a conditional decree, which, upon the facts stated, was the only decree which could, according to the practice of the Court, have been obtained; that such conditional decree fell to the ground by the death of the party against whom it was obtained, and the subsequent proceedings against W.; and that W., who had demurred to the present bill, was not precluded by such statement, that there was "a decree on sequestration," from relying on the Statute of Limitations.

That such conditional decree did not prevent the operation of the 81st G. O., and that the suit of 1808 was dismissed before the present suit was instituted, by the operation of that G. O.

That the statement, that there had been "a decree on sequestration," without stating what that decree was, and which might have been consistent with the relief now prayed, was altogether vague and uncertain, even though it were to be considered to have been an absolute decree.

That the defence of the former Statute of Limitations (8 G. 1, c. 4) might have been relied on by demurrer to the bill of 1808; and that statute being now repealed, and there being nothing on the face of the bill to show that the judgment of 1781 was not barred when the bill of 1808 was filed, the present ptf. could derive no benefit from such suit.

That the appointment of a receiver in a cause will not (except under particular circumstances) take the case out of the operation of the 81st G. O., whether as relates to the lands or the funds brought into Court by the receiver.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 10. (R.)—[Affd.: 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)]

VII. 11. Plea of Lis Pendens: former Suit and Decree

1. A former decree, dismissing a bill if not enrolled and pleaded, is not an absolute bar to another suit for the same demand. If it is relied on by answer, and appears not to have been on the merits, it is no defence.—Joly v. Swift, 11 I. E. R. 410. (C.)

2. A demand being assigned, for which a suit is being prosecuted, if the assignee file a new bill, the pendency of the former suit is no defence or objection, at least unless pleaded; but if both causes be brought on, the Court will prevent the double costs.—O'Brien v. Villiers, 12 I. E. R. 21. (C.)

3. A creditor who has brought an action at law against an administrator, and who has notice of a decree for the administration of the assets, is not in general entitled to his costs of appearing on a motion to enjoin him from proceeding with the action.

A civil-bill decree against an administrator is in the nature of a judgment de bonis propriis. Therefore the Court, though it will enjoin a creditor from enforcing such a decree against the assets, when there has been a decree for the administration of them, will not restrain him from enforcing it against the administrator personally.

Semble—A decree for the administration of assets is a defence to a civil-bill against the administrator, if prior to the civil-bill. Secus, if subsequent to the hearing, but prior to an appeal to the Judge of Assize.—Powell v. P., 12 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

4. To a bill to perpetuate the testimony of witnesses with respect to the execution and attestation of a will of 1845, whereby a will of 1838, under which the deft. claimed, was stated to be revoked; the deft. pleaded that the ptf. put the deft. by force out of a part of the lands; and that the remainder was in the occupation of tenants under leases or from year to year, who had not acknowledged the ptf.'s title, or paid him rent due; and that the ptf. would, by action at law against the tenants, forthwith try his title. Held, on the authority of Drew v. Clarke (1 Sim. & Stu. 108), that the plea was good.—Lindesay v. L., 12 I. E. R. 508. (R.)

5. A person having a power to appoint £10,000 secured on a term of years, appointed separate portions of the sum to A. and B. by separate deeds. A. filed a bill, to which B. was made a notice party, and obtained a decree declaring his portion to be well charged, directing the usual accounts of incumbrances, and a sale for payment of them. B. also filed a bill for his portion, praying the same relief, to which a plea of the pendency of the former suit was put in. Held, that the two suits were not for the same matter, and the plea was overruled.

Quere—Whether the existence of the decree (supposing it to be binding on B.) in A.'s suit, would be a defence in bar of B.'s suit?

Semble—The decree was not binding on B., as he should have been made an answering and not a notice party.—Sadler v. Whaley, 1 I. C. R. 167; 2 I. Jur. 305. (R.)

VII. 13. Of Outlawry.

VII. 14. Of Want of Parties.

6. A plea of want of parties, pleaded to the whole bill, will be overruled if, in any one state of facts charged by the bill, the parties would not be necessary.—Homan v. Sheil, 2 Jones, 164. (E.E.)

7. When a bill seeks a discovery of necessary parties, an objection for want of parties will not in general be allowed.

A statement or charge in a bill, though it relates only to one deft., puts the matter of it in issue as to all the defts. They cannot therefore decline to answer an interrogatory founded on it.

A bill, that lands might be declared bound by marriage articles, stated that the deft., A., pretended that neither he nor any person in trust for him was seized of any part of the lands bound by the articles; but at other times admitted the contrary, and refused to discover the particulars to the ptf.; and contained interrogatories as to incumbrances and parties. Another deft. was required to answer the interrogatories, but he filed a plea of want of parties, which was overruled.—Sherlock v. Disney, 13 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

VII. 16. Of Release; Payment; Compromise.

VII. 17. *Of Title.*VII. 18. *When it lies generally.*VII. 19. *Ordered to stand for Answer.*VII. 20. When Overruled by Answer.

1. To a bill, praying (inter alia) an account of certain dealings between ptf. and deft., and charging specific errors and omissions in the accounts, and made more than six years before, but not discovered until long afterwards, deft. put in a plea and answer entitled, "A plea to part of the bill, and an answer to the residue;" and (after protestation in the usual form) pleaded, touching so much of the bill as prayed an account, the Statute of Limitations, and that he did not, "within six years next before the filing of the bill, and within six years next before suing out process," &c., sign any writing, &c., in the words of the exceptions in the statute. The plea did not negative the allegations respecting the errors in the accounts. Deft. then answered, at length, nearly all the matters in the bill. Held, that the answer, since it did not cover the whole bill, did not, by the 6th G. O., overrule the plea.—Hughes v. Taylor, 7 I. E. R. 80. (R.)

2. Plea to the whole relief and discovery, except that sought by interrogatories specified in the plea. Answer to the excepted interrogatories. Held, that the answer overruled the plea, notwithstanding G. R. 66.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadler, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

3. A deft., by his answer, objected to an interrogatory because he might, by answering it, subject himself to pains, penalties, and forfeitures. By plea, he declined to answer part of the same interrogatory, because the subject of it had come to his knowledge in his character of solicitor for the other deft. Held, that the answer being equivalent to a demurrer, the case did not fall within G. R. 66; and that the answer overruled the plea.—Kelly v. Jackson, 13 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

VII. 21. Effect of Allowance of.

4. When the ptf. sets down a plea for argument and does not appear when it is called on, the plea will be allowed with costs.—Walker v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 460. (R.)

5. On the argument of a plea to a bill of revivor the Court is not at liberty to look into the original bill. The case must be decided on the facts stated in the bill of revivor and the plea. But when the facts did not fully appear therein, the Court reserved to the defendant the benefit of the plea, and directed it to stand over until the hearing of the cause.

A suit may be revived as to part of the matter in litigation.—Duggan v. Kelly, 10 I. E. R. 295. (R.)

Under The Ch. (Ir.) Act 1867.

VIII. REPLICATIONS.

See PRACTICE; REPLICATION.

6. The 82nd G. O. will not be relaxed. When the plaintiff cannot show due diligence, and is disabled from filing a replication in consequence of requiring to amend his bill, the bill will be dismissed.—M'Laughlin v. M'L., 8 I. E. R. 109. (R.)

7. The replication should not be filed against persons against whom process is prayed only when they come within the jurisdiction.—Stephens v. O'Shaughnessy, 11 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

8. It is not an objection to a replication in sci. fa. on a recognizance, that it purports to be pleaded by the Queen, instead of by her Att.-General.—Reg. v. Bowen, 13 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

9. The practice of the office at the Petty-bag side of the Court of Ch., requiring special similiter, is erroneous, and is not to be followed. When the replication tenders an issue to the country, the ptf. may make up the issue, unless the replication be excepted to.—Reg. v. Humphreys, 3 I. Jur. 173. (C.)

IX. RIGHT TO SUE.

10. Ptf. being beneficially interested, with others, in an annuity or rentcharge issuing out of lands, and secured by the grantor's covenant, joined in a suit against A., the purchaser of the lands, to whom they had been conveyed expressly subject to the annuity, to recover arrears thereof; and recovered six years' arrears only, more being due. Ptf. then obtained administration to the grantor of the annuity, in order to become deft. to an action on the covenant. Judgment by default was therein obtained against her for the arrears due beyond the six years; damages and costs to be levied de b. t., et si non, de bonis propriis. She then filed against A. a bill to be indemnified against the judgment. Held, that her right to institute the suit depended on the existence of damage sustained by her, or which she might sustain by the judgment; and therefore that she was bound to show that there were assets out of which the judgment might be levied.

Quære—Whether she was entitled to relief on proving the existence of assets, she having obtained administration to the covenantor in order to raise the cause of damage whereof she complained.—Byrne v. Duignan, 9 I. E. R. 295; 3 Jon. & L. 116. (C.)

11. A bill lies to recover an ancient rent, the origin of which is unknown, and the lands charged not accurately ascertainable, especially when the parties liable to pay it have, by selling parts of the lands charged, and charging others by way of indemnity to the purchaser, and long acting on that arrangement, rendered the owner's rights more uncertain.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

1. All the parties to the original bill being dead, the cause was set down in the names of the parties to a supplemental bill only. Held, regular; and that parts of the answer to the original bill could be read as of an answer in the cause at hearing; and that it was not to be treated as an answer in another cause.

The allegation made in a bill to prevent a demurrer for multifariousness was unproved; but it appeared that the accounts might be such as to render the suit not multifarious. Held, an objection for multifariousness, though made by the answer, could not be sustained.

Quære—If the objection should not be pleaded?—Anderson v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

2. If a bill alleges fraud, which is not proved, and also alleges other matters which, being proved, are grounds for a decree, the proper course is to dismiss so much of the bill as is unproved, and to give so much relief as, under the circumstances, ptf. is entitled to.—Archbold v. Comrs. of Ch. D. & B., 2 H. L. Cas. 440.

X. PLEADING IN GENERAL.

3. The ptf. in an original suit, a creditor on foot of a freehold mortgage, an equitable mortgage, and judgments, having died—her devisees, three of whom were also her executors, filed an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor. The defts. (entitling their plea as one to a bill of revivor) pleaded in bar that the ptf. in the original suit “by a deed or instrument in writing executed by her, the date, parties’ names, and exact contents whereof are wholly unknown to the deft.,” assigned her interest in the subjects of suit to J. B., and that therefore no estate therein passed to the ptfs. as executors. Held, that the plea was bad in form, as not following the nature of the bill, and as treating the ptfs. as if they were all executors.

Semble—Also as being in the alternative and uncertain.

Held, that it was bad in substance, as the facts on which it relied, as showing want of interest in the ptfs., did not amount to a sufficient assignment of that interest.—Pike v. O’Connor, 7 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

4. The trustees of V.’s will instituted in the Court of Ch. in Ir. a suit to carry into execution the trusts thereof, and to administer his estate. One of the defts., B., entitled to the residue of V.’s estate, died before a decree. The ptfs. in that suit filed a bill against B.’s personal representatives, and against all the parties interested under his will in his real and personal estates. The Court decreed that accounts should be taken of the personal estates, debts, and legacies, of V. and B. respectively. A subsequent decree (affirmed by the H. L.) declared that certain unpaid legacies bequeathed by B. should, together with the interest thereon, if his personal estate proved insufficient, be charged on his real estates;

but that the principal should not be raised until after the death of C., tenant for life thereof under B.’s will, and that the interest should, during C.’s life, be paid out of the rents. D. was tenant in tail of the real estates in remainder after C.’s life estate. A question afterwards arose between C. and D., whether a fund in Court, which constituted part of B.’s personal estate, should be applied exclusively in paying arrears of interest on the legacies, or rateably in paying the legacies and the interest. The M. R. of Ir. directed that the fund should be applied exclusively in paying the arrears of interest. The Ld. Ch., on appeal, affirmed that order, and refused to direct an enquiry to ascertain how much of the fund in Court was principal, and how much was accumulated interest. On appeal against those orders—Held, that any question touching the application of B.’s personal estate could not be regularly adjudicated, in this form of suit, between the co-defts., C. and D.

The orders were affirmed, with a variation, and a declaration that they should not prejudice any question between C., and D., touching the manner in which the principal and interest of the legacies should be paid.—Coote v. Trench, 9 Cl. & F. 74.

5. A Court cannot, without proof, presume an agreement, on the ground that, if there was not an agreement, there was fraud.

The Court will not act upon fraud or misconduct, unless that fraud or misconduct has been put in issue by the pleadings.—Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.

6. The practical application of Ld. Redesdale’s classification of bills observed on.—Bennett v. Bernard, 10 I. E. R. 584. (C.)

[On re-argument :—12 I. E. R. 229. (C.)]

7. When a personal representative sues or is sued, and dies, the administrator de bonis non may proceed or be proceeded against by bill of revivor, or by bill of revivor and supplement; but he is not bound so to frame his bill. He may file an original bill. An administrator obtained a decree declaring that a judgment was held on certain trusts. Afterwards the judgment was fraudulently assigned, and the administrator de bonis non filed a bill, stating at length the proceedings in the original suit, making the assignee a party, and praying that he might be declared entitled to the benefit of the decree, and accounts and enquiries thereby directed, and to an assignment of the judgment, or to original relief if he was not entitled to the benefit of the said suit and decree. On demurrer—Held, that the bill being an original bill as regarded the assignee, ptf. could not have proceeded by bill of revivor; and, although the bill might have been framed as a bill of revivor and supplement, as against the representative of the deft. in the original suit, it was sustainable as against him, either as an original bill, or as original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill.—Banfield v. O'Shaughnessy, 12 I. E. R. 63. (R.)

1. When a bill seeks a discovery of necessary parties, an objection for want of parties will not in general be allowed. A statement or charge in a bill, though it relates only to one deft., puts the matter of it in issue as to all the defts. They cannot therefore decline to answer an interrogatory founded on it. A bill, that lands might be declared bound by marriage articles, stated that the deft. A. pretended that neither he, nor any person in trust for him, was seized of any part of the lands bound by the articles; but at other times admitted the contrary, and refused to discover the particulars to the ptf., and contained interrogatories as to incumbrances and parties. Another deft. was required to answer the interrogatories, but he filed a plea of want of parties, which was overruled.—Sherlock v. Disney, 13 I. E. R. 233. (R.)

2. It is no objection to a replication in sci. fa. on a recognizance, that it purports to be pleaded by the Queen, and not by her Att.-General.

An allegation in pleading a breach of a recognizance, that a receiver did not, nor would not, account, but on the contrary refused to do so, though ungrammatical, is not open to demurrer. A statement that the receiver received moneys while he was receiver, and afterwards was required to account, is also sufficiently certain without stating that he was receiver when required to account, or showing how he was required.—Reg. v. Bowen, 13 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

3. A bill filed in 1850 to set aside for fraud a limitation under a deed of 1818, which limited the reversion in lands to the deft. for life, stated that he went to America in 1822, to avoid service of subpoena, and there concealed himself, which conduct prevented the grantor from taking proceedings to set aside the deed; and that the grantor devised the lands to the use of the ptf. for life, "with remainder as therein;" and devised the residue of his estate to the ptf. absolutely. Held, on demurrer, that lapse of time was not a bar to the ptf.; and that she might as devisee maintain a suit to set aside the deed, without making the heir-at-law of the grantor a party; but that the persons entitled to the estate after the death of the ptf. were necessary parties.—Johnston v. Howison, 13 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

4. Cause petitions are not pleadings within the meaning of the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850. The Dep. Keeper of the Rolls is bound to receive answering affidavits without an attested copy of the petition being taken out.—Daly v. Wade, 3 I. Jur. 288. (C.)

5. The affidavit of a party in a cause, so far as it states or charges facts merely to elicit a reply, is admissible as a part of the pleadings; but not as evidence.—Kernaghan v. Kells, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (C.)

6. At the hearing, the Court will allow the pleadings to be amended, by filing a further plea to meet the evidence.—Gumley v. G., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (P.)

7. When pleadings in Equity are framed so as to rest the claim for relief solely on the ground of fraud it is not open to ptf., if he fails in establishing the fraud, to pick out, from the allegations in the bill, facts which, if not put forward as proofs of fraud, might have warranted ptf., in asking, and the Court in granting relief.

It is the duty of the Judge to determine whether the two are so interwoven with each other that, on failure of proof of the fraud, it is impossible to treat the other facts as separate allegations justifying a separate mode of dealing with them.—Hickson v. Lombard, L. Rep. 1 H. L. 324.—[Rev. Lombard v. Hickson, 13 I. C. R. 533, (C.A.), which affd. s. c., 13 I. C. R. 98. (R.)]

8. When a cause petition (in Ir.), seeking the cancellation of an agreement to hire property, sets forth facts which go to establish a title to the property itself, and the answering affidavits do not deny these facts, but set up a title in the defts. to the property, the Court may, under the general prayer for relief, make a declaration touching ptf.'s title to the property.—Cooper v. Phibbs, L. Rep. 2 H. L. 149. [Rev. s. c., 17 I. C. R. 73. (C.)]

XI. PLEADING IN THE COURT OF PROBATE.

See PRACTICE: PROBATE, COURT OF.

9. The declaration relied upon a document alleged to be the last will of the deceased. Deft. pleaded a prior will, which, as he alleged, had been destroyed by ptf. Held, that the plea was insufficient, as deft. had not stated his case fully on its face.—Connolly v. Teevan, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

10. Plea.—That the will was executed by the testator according to the provisions of the 1 Vic., c. 26, in presence of the witnesses whose names severally appear upon the said will—Held, bad, for not stating that the witnesses subscribed the will in the presence of the testator, and of each other.—Mitchell v. Huffington, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

11. Parties cited in a cause, instituted to ascertain the validity of a will, cannot therein plead and allege a prior paper-writing as the last will of the deceased.—Custis v. C., 4 I. Jur. N. S. 248. (P.)

12. A plea, that no instructions were given by the testator to the drawer of his will to include therein a certain property, is bad.—Ratty v. Potts, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (P.)

13. A plea, alleging that a testamentary instrument incorporates another testamentary instrument, need not, if they are lodged in the registry, set out the passage in the will or codicil relied on as constituting the incorporation; but the instruments must be specially referred to in the plea as being then lodged in the registry, and thereby their contents will be considered as if fully set out in the pleadings.—Bell v. The Att.-Gen., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 127. (P.)

1. In testamentary causes the husband of a ptf. propounding a will should be joined as a co-ptf.—Gamble v. Williams, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 159. (P.)

2. Declaration propounded a will. Plea alleged undue execution, incapacity, and undue influence, and averred that the will was not the last will of the deceased, for that he made his last will, &c. (alleging a former will); Held, good, provided that the former will be alleged with the same formalities as are required in a declaration.—Berry v. Hillas, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 119. (P.)

3. The deft. propounded a will which named him a legatee and sole executor. A previous will was alleged in the plea by the ptf., whom it named executor jointly with the deft. That will did not make the deft. a legatee. The defendant was testator's next-of-kin. Held, that the earlier will might be alleged; and that the defendant might, in a replication impeaching that will, state his interest as next-of-kin.—Tierney v. Byrne, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 218. (P.)

4. Before 1826, a marriage was solemnized in England, between a gentleman domiciled in Ireland and a lady domiciled in England. By their settlement, which was drawn and executed in England, and of which one of the two trustees was domiciled in England, the other in Ireland; the husband assigned lands in Ireland, of which he was possessed in fee, for 500 years, upon trust (among others) to levy and raise by perception of the rents and profits, or by sale or mortgage, "£5000 of lawful British money," as portions for younger children of the marriage; and to hold it in trust for them, in such shares as the husband should appoint. Held, that the portions should be paid in British money.—In re Boate's Estate, 10 I. C. R. 164. (C.A.)

II. CONDITIONAL PORTIONS, WHEN THERE IS NOT ANY DEVISE OVER.

5. T. devised lands to F., his eldest son, for life; remainder to F.'s first and other sons, in tail male; remainders over; with power to F. to appoint a jointure to any wife he should marry, together with any sum not exceeding £3000 for the younger children of such marriage; provided such marriage should be with the assent of the guardians and executors of the will, or the survivor of them. E., T.'s wife, and two other persons, were named executors of T.'s will. E. alone was named guardian of his children, and proved the will. The other two executors disclaimed. F., in 1843, while a minor, was married to S., by a person in holy orders, but without license or publication of banns; and without the consent of E., who subsequently consented to the celebration of a formal marriage. Held, that the power of charging could not be exercised in favour of the younger children of F. and S., inasmuch as the irregular marriage, not having been avoided by suit under the 9 G. 2, c. 11, was valid ab initio, and the subsequent regular marriage therefore inoperative.—Adams v. A., 8 I. C. R. 41; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 247. (C.)—[See Dobbyn v. Adams, 6 I. C. R. 170. (R.); 7 I. C. R. 193. (C.)]

III. WHEN VESTED: DIFFERENCE WHEN NOT CHARGED ON LANDS.

[See INTERESTS IN PROPERTY, II., III., IV.]

6. The donee of a testamentary power to charge a sum on B.'s estate, "as and for a provision for the donee's lawful issue," exercised the power by a deed which merely charged the estate with the specific sum "as a provision for my lawful issue."

He had one child born before the testator's death; others born before the date of the deed; others subsequently. Held, that all the children were entitled to shares, which vested seriatim on their successively attaining 21, the share of each being proportioned to the number of children in esse when it vested, and then unprovided for, the dates at which the children respectively attained 21 being regarded as successive new periods of distribution, though this decision produced considerable inequality in the shares, and would wholly disappoint any child born after all the others had attained 21. The grandchildren were considered as having been provided for by their parents' shares.

This principle is not applicable to a legacy; the rule being that, whenever a legacy is given to a class of persons, and the gift is immediate, those only take who answer the description at the testator's death; but, when the enjoyment is deferred, as by the intervention of a life estate, or by appointing a future time for payment, those only take who answer the description at the prescribed period.—Norman v. N., Beat. Rep. 480. (C.)

1. Money was settled upon trust to pay the principal among the issue of the marriage, with power of appointment in the parents; and, in default of appointment, to pay those moneys "amongst the said issue, in equal shares and proportions, upon their respectively attaining" age, or marriage (if daughters). The language being ambiguous—Held, that the whole object of the settlement being to provide for the children of the marriage, the Court, in order to effectuate that object, ought not to give them vested interests in their portions.—Richardson v. Goodman, 8 I. Jur. 317. (C.)

2. By ante-nuptial articles, husband and wife covenanted that £2000 should be assigned to A. and B., in trust for the younger children of the marriage, as the husband and wife should jointly, or as the survivor should, by deed, appoint; and in default of appointment, in trust for all the younger children, sons at 21, and daughters at 21, or marriage; if no child should attain a vested interest, in trust for the survivor of the husband and wife; and that the settlement to be made, in pursuance of the articles, should contain a power to the husband and wife to revoke all or any of the trusts, powers, &c., in such settlement contained, of all or any part of the trust fund; and by the same or any other deed or deeds to declare other trusts of the trust premises, the trusts of which should be so revoked. No settlement was executed. The husband and wife, by deed, reciting the power of revocation in the articles, revoked the trusts as to the £1000, and declared that it should be held in trust, to be forthwith assigned to C. and D., whose receipt should be a good discharge for that sum. Held, that the trusts of the marriage articles were revoked, and that the £2000 became the property of the wife.

V. had power to charge real estates with any sum not exceeding £20,000, for portions for his younger children; that sum, or such less sum as should be charged, to be vested in and to be paid to, or shared between and amongst, all and every such children or child, or any one or more of them, exclusively of the others or other of them, at such age or time, or respective ages or times; or, if more than one, in such proportions, and upon such terms and conditions, and in such manner, as he should think proper, and should by deed or will appoint. V., by will, reciting the power, charged £20,000 on the estate, and bequeathed it, share and share alike, to his four younger children. Held, that the shares of the younger children became vested on the death of V., and bore interest from that time.

V. directed that the rents, issues, and profits of property should be vested in the funds, and kept there until his second son should attain age; when the sum so invested should be divided between his younger children. Held, that the shares in the accumulated fund vested at V.'s death.

Semble—In a special case under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, parties having conflicting rights should not be made co-petitioners.—In re Charleville, 13 I. C. R. 6. (R.)

3. A fund was, by deed of 1841, vested in trust for such of four persons as should be living at the determination of life interests limited to their father and mother. On the marriage of A., one of the four, her father being alive, a settlement was executed, which recited an agreement that a share of £2700, and the one-fourth share of the fund, and the interest thereof to which A. should become entitled should be conveyed, upon trusts, and by which A. assigned to the trustees the share of £2700, and all and every other sum or sums of money or other property to which she might thereafter become entitled, upon trusts as to the share of £2700; and upon trust, after the decease of A. and L., her intended husband, to permit the children of the marriage to receive the interest of the share of £2700, and every other sum or sums of money to which A. might become thereafter entitled, in such shares, &c., as A. and L., or the survivor, should appoint; in default of appointment as to the principal, equally among the issue of the marriage; and if but one child, for such child only. It was agreed that the one-fourth of the trust fund, or any other sum to which A. might thereafter become entitled, under the settlement of 1848, should, when received by the trustees of that deed, be paid by them to L. or his assigns, should A. be then living, and not otherwise, the same to be for his sole use. L. died, leaving a son, a minor. His wife, A., survived him. A.'s father afterwards died; whereupon the trust fund under the deed of 1841 became divisible between A. and her sister. Held, that L., having died before A.'s father, did not take a vested interest in the principal of the moiety of the fund, under his marriage settlement.

That A. was entitled to the interest of it during her life.

That the minor, son of L., was entitled to the principal after her death.—In re Jager's Trusts, 14 I. C. R. 155. (R.)

IV. VESTED, BUT NOT PAYABLE IMMEDIATELY.

[See Interest in Property, II. 3, and III. 1.]

1. A fund was assigned by a marriage settlement, on trust, after A.'s death to transfer it and all the interest, &c., unto and amongst all and every the child or children of the marriage, or the issue of any such child or children who might happen to be then dead, leaving issue, or to any one or more of such children, or issue of such deceased children, &c., at such age or ages, time or times, and in such parts, shares, or proportions, if more than one, and with such maintenance in the meantime; and under and subject to such conditions, restrictions, charges, and limitations over (such limitations over being for the benefit of some one of such children) as A., by his will, &c., should appoint; and in default of appointment, to pay the fund between all the children, if more than one, of the marriage, and the issue of any children who should be then dead, leaving issue; and if but one, to such one child; the said fund to be paid, &c., to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or marriage, in case such ages or days should not take place until after the decease of A.; but in case such should happen in his lifetime, then such payment should be postponed until after his decease. A. by will appointed the fund to the children of the marriage, share and share alike, on their attaining twenty-one, or marrying with consent; and directed that the interest should be for their support and maintenance, given in trust to his wife, until the boys entered professions or attained twenty-one, and the girls attained twenty-one, or married with consent. Held, that the portions were by the settlement vested in the children before the period of payment. That the provision in the will as to maintenance was of itself sufficient to vest the portions.

The rules, as to the vesting of portions and legacies are the same.—In re Orme's Trust, 1 I. C. R. 175. (R.)

2. Lands were conveyed, by marriage settlement, to trustees, to the use of A. for life, remainder to trustees for 100 years, remainder to B. (the husband) for life, remainder to trustees for 300 years, and subject to such term to the use of the first and other sons of B. in tail male; in default of such issue, to the use of the daughter and daughters of B. in tail, remainder to the first and other sons of C. (the wife), by any after-taken husband; remainder to the use of A., with power (which he exercised) to dispose thereof by will or otherwise, during his life. The trusts of the term for 300 years were, that if there should be one or more child or children of B. and C., other than an eldest or only son, the trustees should, in the life of B., with his consent, or else not until after his decease, by demise, &c., of the term, raise such sum and sums for the portion or portions of all and every such child or children (not being an eldest son), not exceeding in the whole £1000, as B. should by deed or will appoint; to be divided amongst them as B. should appoint, and in default of appointment equally; the portion or portions to be paid to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or days of marriage, which should first happen; with interest in the meantime from the death of B., if such respective times of payment should happen after his death; but if in his life, within three months after his death, but not sooner, unless with the consent of B. There was issue a son, who died in his infancy; and a daughter, who married, and died in B.'s life. Held, that the portion vested in the daughter, although she died in her father's life, and although the term to secure it was in remainder after his life estate.

That she answered the description of a child other than an eldest or only son, although she was an only child at her death; and that she was entitled to the portion, although the estate on which the portion was charged was vested in her in remainder after her father's death, as such remainder was not absolutely vested in her, but was liable to be divested in case her father should have a son.—Simpson v. Frew, 4 I. C. R. 428. (R.)—[Reversed: 5 I. C. R. 517; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 222. (C.)]

3. A fund was vested in the trustees of a settlement, in trust to pay the principal in such shares, &c., as the husband and wife, during their joint lives, or the survivor of them, should appoint, among the issue of the marriage; and if no appointment, the principal, and interest due thereon at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, to be divided between the issue, share and share alike; if there should be but one child living at the decease of such survivor, then the principal sum, and the interest then to be due, to go and be paid to that one. If there should be no such issue of the marriage, living at the decease of such survivor, or should there happen to be issue of the marriage then living, and that such issue should happen to die before respectively attaining the age of twenty-one, as to males, unmarried and without issue, or eighteen years or marriage as to females, then the principal and interest due at the decease of the survivor of the children, and the securities taken for the same, should be paid to the survivor of the husband and wife. Held, that in default of appointment, the portions vested in males at twenty-one or marriage, and in females at eighteen or marriage; or if they vested in each child at its birth, they became divested on the death of a male under twenty-one, unmarried and without issue, and of a female under eighteen and unmarried.

That the representatives of children who died under fourteen and unmarried, in their father and mother's lifetime took nothing.

That the representative of a daughter who married; attained eighteen; and died in her father's life, was entitled to a portion.—In re Dennis's Trusts, 6 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

4. By articles of agreement, a sum of stock was vested upon trust for several parties, in different proportions, for their absolute use:

provided that no payment or transfer should be made to any of them until he or she had completed the twenty-fifth year, unless he or she should sooner be settling in life, with the approbation of the trustees, or of the major part of them; and if any beneficiary married, or acted otherwise in opposition to the trustees' wishes, it should be optional with them to deprive such beneficiary of all benefit under the articles; such beneficiary's portion to then go, and be distributed equally amongst the others; provided that if any beneficiary died before his or her share had been transferred to him or her, that share should be distributed equally amongst the survivors; and that the trustees should apply the dividends of the fund for the beneficiaries' maintenance and education, in the proportions to which they severally would be entitled to the principal. Held, that the original portions were vested, though not transferable until the beneficiaries respectively attained twenty-five.

That shares, accrued under the survivorship clause, did not go over on the beneficiaries entitled to them dying under twenty-five; but belonged to their next-of-kin.—Burdon v. B., 16 L. C. R. 415. (R.)

V. SURVIVORSHIP AND ACCRUEE OF PORTIONS.

1. A marriage settlement created a term of years, of which it declared the trusts to be to raise a sum, not exceeding £2000, for the portions of the younger children of the marriage. In default of appointment by the settlor, the sum was to be divided equally amongst such younger children, and to be payable to sons at full age, and to daughters at full age, or days of marriage, whichever should first happen: Proviso, that, if any such younger child died under age and unmarried, that child's share should go to the survivors; "and in case there should be but one younger child, son or daughter, the same should have and be entitled to the sum of £1000, and no more; and that, in that event, the sum of £1000, and no more, should be raised."

There were two younger children, both of whom survived their parents. One died under age. On a bill filed by the other's representative, claiming the entire £2000. Held, that in the events which had happened, £1000 only was raiseable.—Clarke v. Jessop, Dr. Rep., temp. Sugden, 301. (C.)

2. Bequest of personal estate in equal shares, to each and every of my children, whether sons or daughters, "with benefit of survivorship." Held, that the period of survivorship was the death of the testator.—Caulfield v. Giles, 12 L. E. R. 427. (R.)

3. A term of years was by deed vested in trustees, on trust to raise £31,000, and apply and dispose of the same to A., B., C., and D., the younger children of the Earl of C., for their respective maintenance and education, at such times, ages, and in such shares, &c., as the Earl should appoint; and in default of appointment, and so far as same should not extend, in trust, after the death of the Earl, for the four children, equally, for their respective lives; and if any one or more of them died, leaving a child or children living at his or her death, in trust as to the parent's share, for such child or children in equal shares. The deed contained clauses of survivorship and accruee among the younger children, and a proviso, that no one of the children for whom portions were to be provided under the trusts, should, by virtue of the provisions for survivorship and accruee, be entitled to receive more than the sum of £16,000 in the whole, including his or her original share of the £31,000; and no two of the children should, by virtue of same provision of survivorship and accruee, become entitled to more than £21,000, including their original shares of the £31,000, it being agreed, that, if by reason or virtue of such survivorship or devise, any such child or children should, under the provisions therein before contained, be entitled to a greater sum than £16,000 or £21,000 for his, her, or their portion or portions, the residue of the sum before directed to be raised for the younger children was to sink into the inheritance. C. and D. died unmarried, and without issue, in the Earl's life. £8250 was appointed to A., who, after the Earl's death, became the eldest son, and entitled to the estate, and £10,250 to B., who became the younger child. Held, that notwithstanding the appointment, the sum of £21,000 only was raiseable.

The Earl became surety for A. in a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered for £2000. By his will, he appointed £2500 of the £31,000, to A. to be raised and paid immediately after his decease, upon condition that A. should have paid off and discharged the debt of £2000 and interest, and that the creditor should have released the testator's effects from the sum of £2000; and if A. should not have paid, and the creditor should not release the same, the £2500 should be considered as unappointed, and A. should not be entitled to any of the unappointed part of the £31,000. Held, that the appointment of the £2500 was valid, and was not vitiated by the condition annexed to it.—Stuart v. Lord Castlestuart, 8 L. C. R. 408. (R.)

4. By articles of agreement, a sum of stock was vested upon trust for several parties, in different proportions, for their absolute use: provided that no payment or transfer should be made to any of them until he or she had completed the twenty-fifth year, unless he or she should be sooner settling in life, with the approbation of the trustees, or of the major part of them; and, if any beneficiary married, or otherwise acted in opposition to the trustees' wishes, it should be optional with them to deprive such beneficiary of all benefit under the articles: such beneficiary's portion to then go, and be distributed equally amongst the others: provided that if any beneficiary died before his or her share had been transferred to him or her, that share should be distributed equally amongst the survivors; and that the trustees should apply the dividends of the fund for the beneficiaries' maintenance and education, in the proportions to which they severally would be entitled to the principal. Held, that the original portions were vested, though not transferable until the beneficiaries respectively attained twenty-five.

That shares, accrued under the survivorship clause, did not go over on the beneficiaries entitled to them dying under twenty-five; but belonged to their next-of-kin.—Bardon v. B., 16 I. C. R. 415. (R.)

VI. WHEN AND HOW RAISEABLE.

[See also INTEREST IN PROPERTY, III.]

1. Lands were conveyed by marriage settlement for 999 years, upon trust, during so many years of the term as A. should live, to pay the rents to her, or as she should appoint; and, subject to a charge of £10,000, to pay to H. for so many years as he should live after the decease of A., an annuity of £1000; to pay the residue of the rents as A. should by deed or will appoint; the residue of the term after the decease of A. and H., was limited in trust that if there should be younger children of the marriage the trustees should by sale or mortgage of the residue of the term, and by the rents and profits thereof in the meantime, and until such sale, raise £15,000 for the portions of such younger children, the portions to be paid to sons at twenty-one, and to daughters at twenty-one or marriage; and should, out of the rents in the meantime, and until the portions be payable, raise such yearly sums for the maintenance and education of the younger children as A. should deem meet, not exceeding the interest of the respective portions at the rate of £5 per cent. Provided, that if any of the children should die before his portion should become payable, it should be divided among the survivors. A. appointed, and died. A bill having been filed to raise the principal and interest of the £15,000, while H. was alive—Held, that the Court had no power under the settlement to direct a sale of the term in possession during the life of H. [Affirmed, 12 I. E. R. 298. (C.)]

That the Court could not sell so many years of the term as should be unexpired at the death of H., as the security of the prior charges would thereby be impaired.

That interest was payable on the £15,000 from the death of A., and during the life of H.—[Reversed, 12 I. E. R. 298. (C.)]—Lloyd v. Massy, 11 I. E. R. 429. (R.)—[See Lloyd v. Massy, 10 I. C. R. 240; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 119. (C.A.)]

2. A., by deed settled his freehold estate and created a term to secure a charge of £4000 for younger children, payable at twenty-one in the case of males, and at twenty-one or marriage in the case of females. The settlement, reciting that the intended wife of A. had valuable jewellery, declared that, if there were younger children of the marriage, the jewellery should, after her death, be sold, and the produce go to discharge the estate from the charge; but, if no children, or if they all died in the life of their mother, she was to have the jewellery absolutely. On petition during the life of the mother—Held, that the portions were raiseable during her life, and that the children need not wait until the value of the jewellery was ascertained.—Bennett v. Helsham, 4 I. Jur. 335. (C.)

3. A., entitled to estates in Scotland and Ireland, by a marriage contract executed in Scotland, in the Scotch form, settled his estates to himself and the heirs male of his body, to be begotten on the body of his intended wife, and bound himself to execute all dispositions and conveyances in the Scotch and Irish forms, for rendering the destination of the estates more complete. It was provided that A. should have power to impose conditions and limitations on the heirs male, and to vary the course of succession, so far as to prefer one heir male to another; and if the lands should descend to one child of the marriage, and there should be other children whom he should have neglected to provide for, A. bound himself and the heirs of the marriage to pay to each of such younger children £600 as a portion. Another clause provided that, notwithstanding the provision, the settlor might augment, diminish, or make void the provision of £600, it being provided solely with a view to remedy A.'s neglect in not providing for the children other than the heir; and declared that the provision should be a burden upon the heir of the marriage. By a subsequent instrument, not under seal, reciting the provision, and that A. considered it inadequate, and had resolved to add thereto, A. bound himself, his heirs and successors, to pay to the younger children £2000 each; and declared that sum to be inclusive of and in satisfaction of the provision in the marriage contract. He also provided a further annuity for his daughters, in an event which happened, and declared these provisions to be in full satisfaction of all their claims under the marriage contract or otherwise.

Semble—The marriage contract should be construed according to the law of Ireland, as to the Irish estates, and the portions of £600 were a charge on those estates, although by the Scotch law they were not a charge on the Scotch estates.

Held, that the portions of £2000, provided by the second instrument, were in substitution of the portions of £600 provided by the marriage contract, and were not charges on the Irish estates.

Contracts relating to real estate are to be governed by lex loci rei sitæ. Contracts relating to personal estate by lex loci contractus et domicilii.—Dalzell v. D., 5 I. C. R. 463. (R.)—[On Appeal: 6 I. C. R. 483. (C.)]

4. By indenture executed upon his marriage, A. covenanted to convey lands to uses in strict settlement. The indenture provided that, if there should be one or more child or children of the marriage, besides an eldest or only son, such child or children should have £2000, payable as A. should appoint; in default of appointment, to be equally divided among such younger child or children, on their respectively attaining age, or marriage. A. afterwards conveyed the lands to re-lessees, to hold to the uses and upon the trusts declared by the articles. There was issue of the marriage, an eldest son, and several younger children. All the younger children, save one, died without having attained a vested interest in the fund. Held, that the younger child who attained age was entitled to have the entire £2000 raised for her benefit.—In re Martin's Trusts, 6 I. C. R. 211. (C.A.)

1. A wife's lands were conveyed by her settlement to trustees for 999 years, on trust, during so many years of the term as she should live, to pay the rents to her or her appointees, and, subject to a prior charge of £10,000, to pay her husband M., during the residue of the term, for so many years as he should live, after her death, an annuity of £1000, and to pay the residue as she should by deed or will appoint. As to the residue of the term, after the death of her and M., on trust, if there should be younger children of the marriage, that the trustees should, by sale or mortgage of the residue of the lands, and by the rents and profits in the meantime, raise £15,000, for their portions, payable with interest as she should appoint, or in default of appointment, to sons at twenty-one years, and daughters at twenty-one or marriage; and should, out of the rents, in the meantime, and until the portions should be payable, raise for maintenance such sums as she should appoint, not exceeding interest at £5 per cent., on the respective portions; if no appointment, sums not exceeding such interest. The wife appointed the surplus rents after the £10,000 charge, and £1000 annuity, and some legacies, to her eldest son; and died, leaving M., her son, and one daughter surviving her. The daughter married L. On bill, filed by L. and his wife, it was decided that L. and his wife were not entitled to have either principal or interest on the portion raised during the lifetime of M. After the death of M., L. and wife instituted a suit to raise the portions, with interest from the date of the marriage of L. and wife, when the portion vested absolutely. Held, that they were entitled to interest from the period when the portion vested absolutely.—Lloyd v. Massy, 10 I. C. R. 240; 5 I. Jur. N.S. 419. (C.A.)

2. Lands were settled to the use of A. and B., his wife, for their lives, and the life of the survivor of them, and after the death of such survivor, to the use of a trustee, for 800 years, upon trust, if there should be no children of A. and B. living at the death of A. other than X., and an eldest son (and which event happened), to raise £5000 as the portion of X., to be paid to her on attaining twenty-one, or marriage, with interest in the meantime, at the rate of £5 per cent., for her maintenance, education, and advancement; but if there should be any children of A. and B. living at the decease of A., other than an eldest son and X., to raise £10,000 (including the first mentioned sum of £5000), as portions for all the children of A. and B. (except as aforesaid), as A. and B., or the survivor of them, should by deed or will appoint, and in default of such appointment, among all such children equally, at twenty-one or marriage; with interest, from the decease of the survivor of A. and B. in the meantime, and until their portions should become payable, for their maintenance and education. A. died, leaving B. surviving him.

Held, that X. was entitled to have her portion raised by sale of the reversionary term of 800 years, with interest from the time of A.'s death.—In re Aythorpe's Estate, 13 I. C. R. 472. (L.E.C.)

3. The question touching the time at which portions become payable is one of construction. When the appointed time arrives, the portions must be raised and paid, although they can be raised only by a waste of property and sale or mortgage of a reversionary term.

A portion is properly payable by trustees only when the time appointed for raising it has arrived, and the c. q. t. is competent to give a discharge; but a portion is often said to be payable to a child when the event, which gives the child a vested right in it, has happened.

Circumstances under which the interest will not be severed from the principal, but both must be raised and paid at once.—Massy v. Lloyd, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 102. (H.L.)

4. By articles executed in 1784, before the marriage of A., lands were covenanted to be settled on A. for life, remainder to trustees for a term, to raise £3000 for two or more younger children of the marriage, payable at twenty-one or marriage; with power to A. to appoint it as he might think proper among the younger children; remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage successively in tail male, remainder to the daughters as tenants in common in tail. There was issue, a son T., and two daughters, M. and S. On the marriage of M., A. appointed to M. £2000, part of the £3000 which was assigned to the trustees of her settlement. T., on attaining twenty-one, joined A. in suffering a recovery, and the lands were resettled on A. for life; remainder to T. in fee. T. died in 1821, intestate and unmarried, leaving M. and S. his co-heiresses.

On the marriage of S. with R., a settlement was executed, by which A. and S., after reciting their title to the estate, but without noticing the charge of £3000, conveyed S.'s moiety of the lands upon trusts for the benefit of R., S., and their issue. In 1825, A. died without making any further appointment of the charge of £3000; and on the 10th December 1825, S. and R. executed a deed purporting to assign the £1000, the unappointed residue of the £3000 charge, to the trustees of the P. Bank.

All parties conceded that the marriage articles should be construed as if they contained a hotch-pot clause.

Held, that, in consequence of the execution of the settlement of S., her £1000 was not a subsisting charge on her moiety.

That it could not be raised out of M.'s moiety.

That M. was entitled to have £500, part of her appointed share of £2000, raised out of S.'s moiety.

Savage v. Carroll, 1 B. & B., 265, disapproved of: Tennison v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 424. followed. — In re Norcott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 315. (L.E.C.)

1. By settlement executed on the marriage of A. with B., A. granted lands of which he was seized in quasi fee, to trustees, to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of the trustees for 99 years, if B. should so long live, upon trust to pay B., out of the rents, an annual jointure of £400, and as to the surplus rents upon trusts for the issue of the marriage. The settlement provided that if the rents should, during the term, be insufficient to pay B.'s jointure, it should be lawful for the trustees, by the direction in writing of B., to raise the deficiency, by mortgage or demise of the lands for any term of years. There was no issue. B. survived A.; and by will, after reciting that arrears of her jointure were due, bequeathed them to C. B. had not, in her life, given her trustees any directions in writing to raise the arrears by mortgage or demise of the lands. Her executor filed a petition in the L.E. Court, to sell the fee.

Held, that B.'s will did not amount to a direction in writing to her trustees, within the meaning of the proviso in the settlement; that they had no power to create a term to pay the arrears; and that there was no estate in the land which the Court could sell to raise the arrears. — In re St. George's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 447; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (C.A.)

VII. WHEN LANDS ARE LIABLE TO.

2. Lands were settled to the use of the husband J., for life, and a term of 500 years was created to secure a jointure for the wife, and £8000 for the issue of the marriage, in case the wife should die in the lifetime of J., to be divided between them if more than one in such shares as the husband should appoint. Subject thereto the lands were limited to J. in fee. J. devised different parts of the settled lands to his first and second sons in strict settlement, with power of jointuring and charging for younger children's portions; and, after reciting his power under the settlement, in pursuance of it, and of every other power reserved to him, he appointed £1 to his eldest son, and the remainder of the £8000 among his other children. He gave one of his daughters £1000 in addition to the sum appointed to her, and charged it on part of the lands devised to one of his sons; and directed that if all his younger children should die before the portions became payable, the £8000 should sink into the inheritance; and he also directed the residue of his personal estate, after payment of his funeral expenses, debts, and legacies, to be applied pro tanto to discharge the £8000, in exoneration of his real estate. J. died in the lifetime of his wife. Held, that the settled lands were well charged with the £8000. —

3. An ante-nuptial settlement, executed in 1782, recited that H. was seized in fee of the lands of W. (the fact being that he was seized in tail of part, and in fee of the remaining part of those lands); that he was seized of an estate for three lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, in the lands of B.; and possessed of a term for years in the lands of R. By that settlement W. was settled upon H. for life (subject to a term of 5000 years, to provide for younger children £1500 as portions, which might be raised during the life of H., with his consent); remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage successively in tail male. B. and R. were settled upon H. for life, and (subject to making good any deficiency in the £1500 portions), with remainder to the first son of the marriage, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns. That settlement also contained a power (afterwards exercised) for H. to charge upon all the lands £2000, to be raised at any time which he might appoint; and a proviso enabling him to deprive any son, who might misconduct himself, of any estate thereby limited to him. No recovery of W. was suffered to the uses of that settlement. In 1811, E., the eldest son of the marriage, being of age, joined H. in a deed making a tenant to the præcipe in a recovery about to be suffered of W., reciting that he was seized of an estate for life, and E. of an estate in remainder in tail male in W., and their intention to bar all estates tail, remainders, &c., therein, and declaring that the recovery should enure for the purpose of securing any sums which H. and E. might jointly charge upon W., and to such other uses as they might jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to the uses of the settlement of 1782. The deed of 1811 also provided that, in the event of E. dying in the lifetime of H., without issue, W. should stand charged with £2000 for the younger children of H. A recovery was duly suffered to the uses of that deed. Neither H. nor E. ever exercised the powers conferred upon them of jointly charging or appointing W. After 1811, judgments were recovered against E., who died in 1819, in the lifetime of H., without issue. Held, that the £1500 for portions created by the settlement of 1782, was primarily charged upon W., and that the other lands constituted only an auxiliary fund for payment of those portions.

That the younger children of H., in regard to their charge of £2000 under the deed of 1811 upon W., were not, as against the judgment creditors of E., entitled to have, upon the principle of marshalling, the charge of £2000, created by the settlement of 1782, thrown altogether upon R.; but that all the lands should bear that charge pro rata. — [Hargreave, C., dissentiente.]

That as the power for H. to charge £2000 under the settlement of 1782 overrode all the other powers and provisions in it, the £1500 portions should not be deducted from the value of W. in ascertaining the proportion of the £2000 charge of 1782, which those lands were to bear; but that proportion should be calculated upon the full value of W.—In re Jones's Estate, 2 L. C. R. 544. (I.E.C.)

1. When bequests of several legacies are followed by a gift of the residue of the testator's real and personal estates, the legacies are a charge upon the real estate.

B., who was possessed of both real and personal estate, by will, in 1825, after bequeathing an annuity to his wife, bequeathed to her £1000, "in trust, to give such part of said sum as she may consider my estates and assets may justify, to my daughter A., on her marriage, with her consent: the entire or remainder of said sum to go and be considered as part of the residue of my property, as hereinafter bequeathed to my son B." He then bequeathed £5000 to A., and if she should die before marriage, then "this bequest shall be considered as part of the residue of my property, and shall go and merge in same." Then, after some small pecuniary bequests, "As to all the rest, residue and remainder of any property I may die possessed of or entitled to, of what nature soever, whether estates freehold, leases, &c., &c., I hereby bequeath, devise, and grant the same to my son B., with liberty to dispose of the same in any way he may think proper." Held, that the legacies bequeathed to A. were well charged on the real estates, and entitled to priority over a subsequent mortgage by B.—In re Browne, 6 L. C. R. 240; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 322. (I.E.C.)—[Affid.: 6 I. C. R. 390; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 49. (C.A.)]

2. By settlement executed on the marriage of B., in 1811, the S. estate was conveyed to trustees, to the use of A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail, subject to a term, the trusts of which were, that if there should be an eldest or only son, and one or more younger children of the marriage, to raise £2000, for the portion or portions of all and every such younger child or children; if but one younger child, the whole to be paid to such younger child, and if two or more, to be divided as B. should by deed or will appoint, &c.; for default of appointment to be equally divided. Provided that, if any of the younger children should die before his portion became payable, or that any younger son should become an eldest son before he attained age, the portion or portions of such of them so dying or becoming an eldest or only son, should go and be equally divided among the survivors or survivor, or others or other of them.

By the settlement, £2000 was charged on the X. estate (which was not otherwise the subject of that settlement) upon trust, after the decease of B., for the same purposes as were therein before declared, concerning the £2000 charged on the S. estate. There were six children of the marriage, the two eldest of whom were C. and D., and in 1836, C. being of age, the S. estate was disentailed, and afterwards re-settled by a deed, under which C. and D. took life estates: remainder to their issue male. In 1839, on the marriage of D., B. by deed appointed the £2000 charged on the S. estate, and £500 of the £2000 charged on the X. estate, upon trusts in favour of D. and his children, provided that if, under the limitations in the settlements of 1811 and 1836, or either of them, D. should succeed to an estate tail in possession in the S. estate, the appointment should not take effect, and the £2500 should belong to the remaining younger children of B. as he should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. In 1841, the S. estate was re-settled in pursuance of a power of revocation in the deed of 1836, to B. for life, remainder to C. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail.

In 1853 C. died without issue, whereupon D. became entitled to the estates under the last-mentioned deed. Held, that, supposing the appointment of 1839 to have been avoided by D. having become an eldest son, his share in the two sums of £2000, in default of appointment, had not been divested, as he had not become an eldest son before he attained age.

That the X. estate not being subject to the settlement of 1811, the appointment of £500 of the £2000, charged on that estate, was not divested, by D. having as eldest son succeeded to the S. estate.

That D. having, as eldest son, succeeded to an estate for life, under the deed of 1841, and not to an estate in tail, under the deeds of 1811, or 1836, the appointment of 1839 was not defeated.

Semle—The Court would not, on a petition, under the Trustee Relief Act, to draw out the £2000 charged on the X. estate, and in the absence of minors claiming under the appointment of 1839, determine the right to the fund adversely to them.—Ex parte Smyth, 12 L. C. R. 487. (R.)

3. Lands being re-settled, £2500 was charged for younger children by a deed reciting that estates were charged with £1000 for them under a previous settlement, which really charged the lands with £2000. Those children claimed both sums. Held, no case for election between the deeds, but merely a mis-recital; and that if the real intention had been to charge the £2500 in addition to £1000 only, that intention should have been proved by parol evidence.

The trusts of a term were to raise, at twelve years from a mother's death, £2500 for younger children; £1000 of that sum for one of them, and the remainder for the others; the sums to be paid to them respectively, when raised pursuant to the deed. The deed was one in which the mother, tenant for life, joined her eldest son, the remainderman, in opening the estate. That younger child, to whom the £1000 was to have been paid at twelve years from the mother's death, died during her life. Held, that the £1000 was not vested, and could not be raised.

A charge payable at a future day, is in general not raiseable, if the party dies before the day, except when the time of payment is postponed for the convenience of the estate.

Then, it is otherwise. But this exception does not apply to children's portions, which are not generally raiseable for the child's representative, if the child dies before he wants a provision.—Ruby v. Foot and Beamish, Beat. Rep. 581. (C.)

1. By marriage settlement the husband's (A.'s) real estate was limited to him for life; then to trustees for a term of years; subject thereto, to the first and other sons of the marriage in t. m.; remainder to the husband in fee. The trusts of the term were to raise portions for the younger children if "there should be one child or more children of the marriage, besides an eldest or only son." Two daughters were the sole issue. A. settled upon one, on her marriage, and on her husband and children, an annuity more valuable than her share of the portions under his own settlement, and charged it upon the settled estate. On his other daughter's marriage, A. made for her a pecuniary provision declared to be in satisfaction of her portion under the settlement. A. devised his settled estate to his two daughters in the way in which it would have come to them if he had died intestate. Held, that, there not being a son, the portions were not raiseable in the events which had happened.—Walcot v. Bloomfield, 6 I. E. R. 227; 2 Dr. & War. 211; 2 Con. & L. 577. (C.)

VIII. MERGER OF IN LANDS CHARGED.

2. Settlement of real estate on the issue of a marriage in tail male; if one or more child or children of the marriage, besides an eldest or only son, the younger child or children should have £2000, "payable to the said younger child or children at such times," &c., as the husband should by deed or will appoint; for want of such appointment, to be equally divided between such younger child or children, share and share alike, on their respectively attaining age, or marrying. There were five children, three of whom died under age and unmarried. The remaining son and daughter survived their father. The daughter attained age, and married. The father died without exercising the power. Held, that the portions of the children who died did not merge into the estate, but that the daughter surviving was entitled to the whole £2000.—In re Dowling's Trusts, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 318. (R.)—[Affirmed, ibid, 427. (C.A.)]

3. When a term was created by marriage settlement, in trust, to raise by demise or mortgage, &c., by or out of the rents, &c., £1500 as a provision for R., and a like sum as a portion or provision for D., with interest thereon, to be paid at such time or times as J. shall by any deed, or by will, appoint; in default of appointment, said sums to be paid and payable to R. and D., and each of them, respectively, upon the day of the decease of J. Provided, that if R. and D. shall intermarry in the life of J., without his consent in writing for that purpose first obtained, or that R. and D., or either of them, shall die unmarried, then it was the true intent and meaning of the parties thereto, that the fortune of her so marrying or dying unmarried should thenceforward cease, and merge into the inheritance of the lands contained in the term. J. appointed the sum to R. by will. R. was still unmarried. Held, that she was entitled absolutely to the £1500.—In re Irwin, 5 I. Jur. 1. (I.E.C.)

4. A term of years was by deed vested in trustees, on trust, to raise £31,000, and apply and dispose of it to A., B., C., and D., the younger children of the Earl of C., for their respective maintenance and education, at such times, ages, and in such shares, &c., as the Earl should appoint; and in default of appointment, or so far as same should not extend, in trust, after the death of the Earl, for the four children equally, for their respective lives; and if any one or more of the children died, leaving a child or children living at his or her death, in trust, as to that parent's share, for such child or children, in equal shares. The deed contained clauses of survivorship and accruer among the younger children, and a proviso that no one of the children for whom portions were to be provided under the trusts should, by virtue of the provisions for survivorship and accruer, be entitled to receive more than £16,000, including his or her original share of the £31,000; and no two of the children should, by virtue thereof, become entitled to more than £21,000, including their original shares of the £31,000; it being agreed that if, by reason of such survivorship or otherwise, any such child or children should, under those provisions, be entitled to a greater sum than £16,000, or £21,000, for his, her, or their portion or portions, the residue of the sum directed to be raised for the younger children was to sink into the inheritance. C. and D. died, unmarried and without issue, in the Earl's life. £8250 was appointed to A., who, after the Earl's death, became the eldest son, and entitled to the estate, and £10,250 to B., who became the younger child. Held, that notwithstanding the appointment, £21,000 only was raiseable.

The Earl became surety for A., in a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered for £2000. By will, he appointed £2500 of the £31,000 to A., to be raised and paid immediately after his decease; upon condition that A. should have paid off and discharged the debt of £2000, and interest, and that the creditor should have released the testator's effects from the sum of £2000; and in case A. should not have paid, and the creditor should not release the same, the £2500 should be considered as unappointed; and A. should not be entitled to any of the unappointed part of the £31,000. Held, that the appointment of the £2500 was valid, and was not vitiated by the condition annexed.—Stuart v. Lord Castlet Stuart, 8 I. C. R. 408. (R.)

5. By articles executed in 1784, before the marriage of A., lands were covenanted to be settled on A. for life, remainder to trustees for a term, to raise £3000, for two or more younger children of the marriage, payable at twenty-one, or marriage; with power to A.

to appoint this sum as he might think proper among the younger children; remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage successively in tail male; remainder to the daughters, as tenants in common in tail. There was issue a son, T., and two daughters, M. and S. On the marriage of M., A. appointed to M. £2000, part of the £3000, which was assigned to the trustees of her settlement. T., on attaining twenty-one, joined his father, A., in suffering a recovery. The lands were re-settled on A. for life; remainder to T. in fee. T. died in 1821, intestate and unmarried, leaving M. and S. his co-heiresses.

On the marriage of S. with R., a settlement was executed, by which A. and S., after reciting their title to the estate, but without noticing the £3000, conveyed S.'s moiety of the lands upon trusts, for the benefit of R., S., and their issue. In 1825, A. died, without making any further appointment of the £3000; and on the 10th December 1825, S. and R. executed a deed, purporting to assign the £1000, the unappointed residue of the £3000, to the trustees of the P. Bank.

All parties conceded that the marriage articles should be construed as if they contained a hotch-pot clause. Held, that, in consequence of the execution of the settlement of S., her £1000 was not a subsisting charge on her moiety.

That it could not be raised out of M.'s moiety.

That M. was entitled to have £500, part of her appointed share of £2000, raised out of S.'s moiety.—[Savage v. Carroll, 1 B. & B. 265, disapproved of: Tennison v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 424, followed.]—In re Norcott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 315. (L.E.C.)

IX. WHEN A SATISFACTION OF A DEBT OR LEGACY.

1. £1000 was vested by a settlement in a father, in trust for the use of his daughter until she attained the age of twenty-five or day of her marriage with consent; afterwards in trust to permit her to receive the interest for life; after her death, in trust for her issue as she should appoint. On the daughter's marriage, the father, without noticing the former settlement, settled by deed several sums, amounting to £1933, in trust for the daughter for life to her separate use; after her death, in trust for the children of the marriage as the husband should appoint; in default of appointment, equally; in default of issue, in trust for the husband. Held, that the sum secured by the latter was a satisfaction of the debt due under the former settlement.

In general, a father will be presumed to have paid the debt he owes to a daughter, when in his life he gives her on her marriage a greater sum than he owes her. It is not necessary that there should be an express stipulation to that effect, or that the husband should know of the debt.—[Drew v. Bidgood, 2 Sim. & Stu., disapproved of.]—Hayes v. Garvey, 8 I. E. R. 90; 2 Jon. & L. 268. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement of L., a fund was vested upon trust, after the decease of L., and his intended wife, for their children as L. should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. There was a hotch-pot clause, but no advancement clause.

The fund produced £4700, and was, with £300 belonging to L., invested on mortgage. There were five children. In 1844, on the marriage of A., one of them (L.) settled £1000 of his own upon A., her husband, and issue. In 1845, L., by will, appointed and bequeathed the £5000 invested upon mortgage, as to £1000, to J., another of his daughters, and as to the residue among his remaining children excepting A. He also bequeathed £1200 to the trustees of A.'s settlement, for her benefit. In 1848, L., on the marriage of J., gave £1000 of his own, and secured £1200 upon trusts for J., her husband, and issue. By a subsequent codicil L. revoked the appointments and bequests made to J., by his will, "in consequence of what he had paid and secured on her marriage." Held, that the sum appointed to J., and revoked by the codicil, should go as in default of appointment.

That A. and J. were not excluded from sharing in it.

That L. could not be taken to be a purchaser of the shares of A. and J., in the unappointed part of the settled fund.—[Folkes v. Western, 9 Ves. 456, approved of.]—Noblett v. Litchfield, 7 I. C. R. 575; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 158. (C.)

X. DOUBLE PORTIONS.

3. By settlement in 1800, on his first marriage, A. was seized of an estate for life in lands, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, with power to charge the lands with £2000 for such purposes as he should think fit, and with £1000 for his child, or children by any after-taken wife. He also became entitled by subsequent events to two sums of £500 and £1000, charged on the lands by the same deed. There was no issue of the first marriage. By a settlement, in 1809, on his second marriage, he charged the lands with £2000 and £1000 under the powers, and assigned the £2000, £500, and £1000, in trust, if there should be two or more younger children or daughters, to be divided amongst them, after the death of their father and mother, as he should by deed or will appoint, and in default of appointment equally; and if there should be no issue of the marriage, or issue one only son, or there should be issue one or more daughter or daughters, or one or more younger children who should die before the payment of the portions, then, as to the £2000, £1000, and £500, in trust for A., his executors, &c. There were issue, two sons and a daughter (B., C., and D.). B. joined A. in suffering a recovery of the estate, and by deed of 1834 it was conveyed subject to a term to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use of B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail, remainder to C. the second son for life, remainder to the first and other sons of C. in tail, remainder over. The trusts of the term were to raise by sale or mortgage £12,500 to be disposed of as A. and B., or the survivor, should appoint; which was raised. A. appointed £250 of the sums of £500, £1000 and £2000 to D., and the residue to C. Afterwards B. died without issue, whereupon C. became entitled, subject to the charge of £12,500 to a life estate in part of the lands, the remainder having been sold for payment of incumbrances. Held, that the appointment out of the sums of the £500, £1000 and £2000 did not become void by C. becoming an elder son entitled to the lands under the deed of 1834.—[Spencer v. S., 8 Sim. 87, and Peacocke v. Pares, 2 Keen. 689, observed on.]—Tennison v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 424. (R.)—[Followed: In re Norcott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 315. (L.E.C.)]

1. J., in 1810, by marriage settlement, covenanted with the trustees that all the property of which he should die seized or possessed should be charged with £1300 for the issue of the marriage. There was but one child, E. On the marriage of E., in 1847, J. conveyed freehold property to trustees, for E.'s benefit, and that of the children of her marriage; and covenanted to make up the amount of the produce of that property to £300 per annum. J., in 1852, devised real estates to the separate use of E. for life, remainder for her children; and declared that devise to be in satisfaction of the covenant of 1847. In 1852, J. assigned railway shares upon trust for E. for life, for her separate use, if she survived him, remainder for her children. By codicil, in Jan. 1853, J. bequeathed chattels personal to E., for her separate use, and bequeathed to trustees £1050 bank stock, upon trust for G., the husband of E., for life, remainder to E. for life, remainder for her children, as therein mentioned. Both the will and codicil disposed of all J.'s estate. Held, that E., and her husband were entitled to the £1300, secured by the covenant in the deed of 1810 as well as to the benefit conferred by the settlement of 1847, the will and codicils, and the deed of 1852.—Garner v. Holmes, 7 I. C. R. 412; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 229. (C.)—[Rev'd.: 8 I. C. R. 469. (C.A.)]

XI. SATISFACTION OF PORTIONS.

2. Sums of money invested in stock in the names of trustees under a marriage settlement were, at the desire of A., paid to him by the trustees, on A.'s representation that he had provided for some of his children upon their marriage, and would provide for those remaining unprovided for. A. had provided for some of his daughters who had been married, and did provide for daughters subsequently married. Held, as to the daughters married subsequently to that representation, that the funds given to them by their respective settlements were intended to be in satisfaction of their rights under their father's settlement.

That, to create a case of satisfaction, some expression of intention must appear; and that the rule laid down in Wapole v. Conway, Barnard, 156, is to be followed.—Warner v. Latouche, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 34. (C.)

3. A father, V., who had government stock standing in his own name, in 1838 transferred all except a small portion of it into the joint names of himself and his son A.; and in 1856 deposited moneys in a bank in their joint names. Small purchases of stock were at intervals made in their names up to 1851, and the joint deposits were made at intervals up to V.'s death in 1862. These investments constituted the bulk of V.'s property.

No definite provision for A. had been made by V., whose other seven children lived away, and were provided for. A. was married, but lived chiefly with V., whom he assisted in his business, and who during his life received all the dividends on the stock, and the interest on the deposit receipts; and also drew small portions of the principal money deposited.

By the practice of the bank, new deposit receipts were issued on every occasion of drawing the interest. On the first occasion of the joint lodgment, the manager of the bank explained to V. that the effect would be to enable A. to draw the money after V.'s death. V. then, and on a subsequent occasion, intimated his intention that A. should do so without expense. There was evidence that V., eighteen months before his death, stated to a third person that he did not mean all his property to go to A. after his death; and a short time before his death refused to allow A. to meddle with the stock certificates and deposit receipts. Evidence of testamentary intention in favour of the other children was also given. Held (reversing the Lord Chancellor's decree), that there was an advancement for A. to the extent of the joint investments and deposits.

Semble—The re-issue of the bank, according to its practice, of new deposit receipts did not amount to a new investment.—Fox v. F., 15 I. C. R. 89. (C.A.)

XII. WHEN SUBJECT TO DEBTS.

XIII. PRIORITY OVER MORTGAGES, &c.

4. A father (tenant for life, with power to charge £500 for younger children) and son, tenant in tail, re-settled the estate, to the use that the son should receive a rentcharge of £100 for their lives and that of the survivor, with powers of distress and entry for non-payment; then to the use of the father for life, with a power to charge an additional £1000 for younger children; then to the son in tail. Held, that, although, if it was the intent to give the annuity priority over the £1000, equity would not allow a legal merger to destroy it; yet, on the true construction, it was not intended that it should exist after the father's death, though granted for the son's life; and therefore that the general rule, giving priority in family settlements to charges for younger children, should prevail.—Mills v. M., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

5. When bequests of several legacies are followed by a gift of the residue of testator's real and personal estates, the legacies are a charge upon the real estate. B., possessed of both real and personal estate, by will, in 1825, after bequeathing an annuity to his wife, bequeathed to her £1000, "in trust to give such part of said sum as she may consider my estate and assets may justify, to my daughter A., on her marriage, with her consent; the entire or remainder of said sum to go and be considered as part of the residue of my property, as hereinafter bequeathed to my son B." He then bequeathed £5000 to A., and in case she should die before marriage, then "this bequest shall be considered as part of the residue of my property, and shall go and merge in the same." Then, after some small pecuniary bequests, "as to all the rest, residue, and remainder of any property I may die possessed of, or entitled to, of what nature soever, whether estates freehold, leases, &c., I hereby bequeath, devise, and grant the same to my son B., with liberty to dispose of it in any way he may think proper." Held (affirming the ruling of the Commissioners of the I. E. Court, 6 I. C. R. 240; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 322), that the legacies bequeathed to A., were well charged on the real estates, and entitled to priority over a subsequent mortgage by B.—In re Browne, 6 I. C. R. 390; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 49. 4. When P. attained age, the family estates were settled. The settlement empowered every tenant for life, when in possession, to charge as portions for all younger children any sum not exceeding £4000. In 1798 P. became tenant for life. In 1815, in the Isle of Man, P. married A., by whom he had two children, the pths. In 1828, P., being indebted on bond, filed a bill to restrain his creditors from proceeding at law. He alleged usury, and offered to pay whatever sum should, when accounts were taken, be found due on the bonds. In 1832, it was referred to the Master to take the necessary accounts. In 1833, in this and several other causes wherein P. was a party, there was entered into a consent that the Master should find £4207 due up to 11th of December 1833. This consent was embodied in the report. In 1834, it was decreed that £4207 was due on foot of the securities; that it was well charged on the lands; and that the receiver in the other causes should be extended to this. In 1836, P. executed this power by appointing the £4000 in equal shares between the ptfs. On a bill filed during P.'s life to raise this charge—Held, that the consent was, on P.'s part, a contract which, when acted upon and embodied in the decree, deprived him of the right to execute the power so as to affect the rights of the creditors under the decree which had attached on his life estate.

That the power was not duly exercised, since no part of the £4000 was reserved for any children who might be born to P. after the date of the appointment.—Piers v. Tuitt, 1 Dr. & Wal. 279. (C.)

1. Three policies of insurance on the settlor's life were assigned by a voluntary deed on trust for A., B., and his other children, in such shares, &c., as he should appoint. He, on A.'s marriage, appointed to her £2000 out of the sums secured by the policies. He made a similar appointment on B.'s marriage. By will he appointed £2000 to each of the other children. Two of the policies having dropped before his death—Held, that the sums given to A. and B. should be paid in full, according to the priorities of the appointments, and the entire loss fall on the other objects.—Borough v. Close, 11 I. E. R. 891. (C.)

I. 2. What amounts to an Execution: Validity of Appointment.

2. A father was tenant for life of estates, with remainder amongst his children, in such shares, &c., as he should appoint; and was absolute owner of other property.

Having two daughters, one of whom was then very young, he, on the marriage of the elder, limited all his estates in trust to secure himself an annuity until scheduled debts were paid; then to divide the rents equally between himself and that daughter's husband, during his (the father's) life; remainder for a term to secure £2000 for the younger daughter; remainder, subject to a jointure for his widow, to his eldest daughter and her husband, and their issue, in strict settlement. Held, a good execution, the benefit which the donee took to himself not being a fraud on the power, since he settled the additional property; and the limitations to the daughter's issue being good, because made with the consent of the object of the power.—Conolly v. M'Dermott, Beat. Rep. 601. (C.)

3. V., having a power to appoint by deed or will, executed a will; then a deed; then a codicil. The will appointed four denominations of land to V.'s four sons. It gave one denomination to each son and his heirs, "to go to them immediately after the death of his wife; and in case of the death of any or either of his said younger sons, before he or they should be respectively entitled thereto, then the part or share of him or them, so dying, to go to and be divided amongst the survivors equally, share and share alike." The deed partly displaced that appointment; and appointed to V.'s third son and his heirs the denomination devised to V.'s fourth son, whom the deed left without provision. The codicil appointed to that son and his heirs another denomination "instead of" that devised to him. Held, that the words, "and in case of the death of any or either of his said younger sons," &c., referred to the death of V.'s wife.

That though the testamentary appointment would have been subject to the clause of survivorship, the appointment by the codicil was absolute to the fourth son and his heirs.—Comrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg. v. Cotter, 2 I. E. R. 196; 2 Dr. & Wal. 615. (C.)—[Affd., 1 Dr. & War. 498. (C.); the Court holding, however, that the date of vesting was the death of the testator, not that of the tenant for life.]

4. A party having a life estate in settled lands, with an unlimited power of jointuring, and having an absolute interest in other lands, charged all the lands with a jointure, the first payment of which was to be made on the day of his death.

Semble—A bad execution of the power, but the Court will so arrange the contribution between the two estates, as to give to the jointress the benefit of it.—Purcell v. P., 4 I. E. R. 558; 2 Dr. & War. 217; 1 Con. & L. 871. (C.)

5. Tenant for life, with a power to jointure, marries; but does not exercise the power. His wife was seized of real estate for life, which, on the marriage, was settled to the use of the husband for the joint lives of himself and his wife, remainder to the wife for life. The husband became indebted; and agreed with his wife and creditor to exercise the power in her favour, and that she should grant the creditor an annuity for her life, equal in amount to the jointure, to be charged upon her estate, and to become payable upon the death of the husband. The agreement was carried into execution. The husband died. Held, that the execution of the power was not a fraud upon the remainderman.

In the execution of a power of jointuring, given for the benefit of the wife, it shall not be so executed as to be the means, colourably, of conveying an interest in the jointure itself, to the creditor of the husband. If the intention of the parties really is, that the jointure should go to some third person, such intention cannot be effected by an execution of the power; for such execution of the power is not a grant of a jointure at all.

A jointure power is one by which the husband may take a benefit; not a benefit by perverting that, which is the subject matter of the power, to a purpose which the donor of the power did not intend, but by applying it to its proper use, in consideration of his getting something, which he is at liberty to get for his own benefit. It is very different from a power to appoint to children.—Baldwin v. Roche, 5 I. E. R. 110. (E.E.)

1. A., having a power of appointing money among his younger children, by will, reciting the power, bequeathed as follows:—"I leave and bequeath unto my said daughter Harriet, a further sum of £200, to have me properly buried, and to pay what small debts I may owe at my decease." Held, a bad exercise of the power, and that the £200 should go as if unappointed.—Hay v. Watkins, 2 Con. & L. 157; 3 Dr. & War. 339; 5 I. E. R. 273. (C.)

2. Semble—A power to appoint in such "manner, shares, and proportions, as the donee should think proper," authorises him to appoint the fee. The objects of the power take the fee by implication in default of appointment.—Crozier v. C., 5 I. E. R. 415; 3 Dr. & War. 373. (C.)

3. By settlement upon the marriage of J., fee-simple lands were conveyed to J. for life, and, after his decease, to such of his children as he should by deed or will appoint, and to their heirs and assigns; in default of appointment, to such children equally. J., having several children, devised these lands to his wife, for life, upon condition that she should support, maintain, and educate the children; after her decease to J.'s son, John. Held, that the gift to the wife was void, but the trusts in favour of the children valid; and that the gift to the son was good, the execution of the power being void only for the excess, and not in toto.

A power to appoint an estate amongst a class, will be executed in equity by giving the whole of the estate to one of the class, and a part of the produce thereof, or money charged thereupon, to the other.

In considering whether a will be a valid execution of a power, the intention of the testator is always to be considered and effectuated as far as possible.

Semble—That the remainders after an estate, which is void because an excessive execution of a power, are not void; but are accelerated by the extinction of the intermediate void estate.—Crozier v. C., 5 I. E. R. 540; 3 Dr. & War. 373; 2 Con. & L. 294. (C.)

4. In the case of real estate, when there is power to give a fee, the donor can give a less estate, at least, when the words "shares and proportions" are used. A., by will, having charged £6000 on his estates, and directed same to be paid to and among such of his younger children, in such shares and proportions as his wife should appoint, and the wife having by will directed the inheritor as follows:—"Three of the £6000 I wish to have given to the two elder girls." Held, that this was a good appointment of £3000, and that the appointees took as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants.—Alloway v. A., 2 Con. & L. 509. (C.)

5. The doctrine of cy-pres applies to the construction of a will made in exercise of a power.—Stackpole v. S., 2 Con. & L. 506; 6 I. E. R. 18. (C.)

6. By marriage settlement, landed property of the wife was settled upon her and her husband for their lives and the life of the survivor, and after the death of the survivor upon the issue, if no issue, to such uses as the wife should by will appoint. There being no issue, the wife executed an instrument (in form a deed-poll) by which she appointed that if there should be no issue, the property should, at her death, go to her husband absolutely. The instrument was stamped and attested as a deed-poll, and a memorial of it was registered. Held, that it was not testamentary in its character, and, therefore, not a valid execution of the power.—Marjoribanks v. Hoenden, 6 I. E. R. 238; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 11. (C.)

7. Lands were settled to the use of the husband R. for life, and a term of 500 years was created to secure a jointure for the wife, and £8000 for the issue of the marriage, in case the wife should die in the lifetime of R., to be divided between them if more than one, in such shares as the husband should appoint; subject thereto the lands were limited to R. in fee. R. devised different parts of the settled lands to his first and second sons in strict settlement, with power of jointuring and charging for younger children's portions; and after reciting his power under the settlement, in pursuance of it, and of every other power reserved to him, gave and appointed £1 to his eldest son, and the remainder of the £8000 among his other children. He gave one of his daughters £1000 in addition to the sum appointed to her, and charged it on part of the lands devised to one of his sons; and directed that if all his younger children should die before the portions became payable, the £8000 should sink into the inheritance. He also directed the residue of his personal estate, after payment of his funeral expenses, debts, and legacies, to be applied pro tanto to discharge the £8000 in exoneration of his real estate. R. died in the lifetime of his wife. Held, that the settled lands were well charged with the £8000.—Mandeville v. Roe, 7 I. E. R. 253; 1 Jon & L. 371. (C.)

8. A. having power to give a fund to all and every her child or children, and to the exclusion of any one or more of them, in such shares and at such times as she should appoint, by will, after reciting, that her daughter had gone into a convent, bequeathed £1000, part of the fund, if her daughter should change her mind and return to her family and friends, in trust to pay the interest to her for life, remainder to her children, if any; and in case of her either not leaving the convent or not leaving issue, the £1000 to go to A.'s other children. The daughter continued in the convent. Held, that this was a gift on a contingency authorised by the power, and that the daughter was not entitled to the interest or any part of it as unappointed, but that it went with the principal, which should be invested, with liberty to the legatees in remainder to apply for it on her death.

By a will, made under a power, personal property was given to such children as A. should have living at her death, in default of such issue, over. Other personal property was bequeathed to M., wife of C., for her separate use; and if she died without issue by her present husband, or by any other husband she might thereafter take, to other persons. Held, that M. took the money absolutely, for her separate use.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

1. A., having a power of appointing among his children, appointed a large portion of the property to one son, B., who by deed shortly after mortgaged it. Both deeds were prepared by the mortgagee's solicitor, but were attested by the family solicitor of A. and B. The mortgage and receipt endorsed treated the money as paid to B.; but A., who had a legal estate, was a party to the mortgage, and the mortgagee wrote a letter of the same date to A., promising not to call in the money for three years. A. and B. joined in a collateral bond. The draft mortgage furnished to the family solicitor differed in date from that executed. An underhand agreement was alleged, but not proved, to have been made by the mortgagee's solicitor, against whom the bill was dismissed by consent. There was no proof that A. received the money, except a transfer to his credit at a banker's, a considerable time after. He became a bankrupt. In a suit to impeach the transaction as a fraud on the power, and unfair—Held, that although the transaction was suspicious, it must be supported in favour of the mortgagee.—Hamilton v. Kirwan, 8 I. E. R. 278; 2 Jon. & L. 393. (C.)

2. Though a contract, by a tenant for life with a leasing power, to lease, cannot be enforced as an execution of the power, it may be partially enforced by decreeing a lease for the life of the tenant for life, if the contract was bona fide, and more especially if there has been an outlay on the faith of it.—Dyas v. Cruise, 8 I. E. R. 407; 2 Jon. & L. 461. (C.)—[See s. c., 9 I. E. R. 256. (R.)]

3. The Lagan Nav. Act created a joint-stock company, and enacted that it should be lawful for every subscriber and person advancing money under the Act, and through whose estate the navigation passed, to charge his real estate for the use of his younger children, with the payment of such sums or other interest in the joint stock as he should assign or bequeath to his heir, it being deemed fit that the proprietors of estates through which the navigation passed should have an interest in it. A., through whose estate the navigation passed, tenant for life under a deed of 1761, with powers of jointuring and leasing, remainder in tail to his eldest son, B., made advances, and took shares before 1791. In that year A. and B. suffered recoveries, and limited the estates anew, subject to a joint power of appointment, under which, in 1792, they appointed the estates, subject to all powers vested in A., to X., in order that he might join in a re-settlement. By a re-settlement in 1792, reciting A.'s powers under the deed of 1761, and an agreement to re-settle the estate, subject to the powers thereafter mentioned, they were conveyed to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, subject to a term and jointure under the deed of 1761; but with no saving of any other powers, and giving a new power to jointure, and new and different leasing powers to A., and other usual powers to him and B. A. made further advances; by will devised his shares in the navigation to B.; and charged their amount on the estate for his younger son. Held, that the power to charge as given by the Act would not be destroyed by the recovery alone, unless the parties intended it.

That the re-settlement in 1792 amounted to a contract not to exercise the power as to past advances, and the power to charge could be exercised by A. only as to subsequent advances.

That the direction to give the shares to his heir was complied with, and the power well exercised by giving them to B., though he was only tenant for life in remainder.

The younger son, in whose favour the charge was made, being also A.'s executor, got possession of debentures representing A.'s shares, and, having lost them, joined in application for new shares, which were granted on the face of them in lieu of the old ones; and delivered them over to B., the tenant for life. Held, that there being no fraud, this transaction did not affect his right to the charge under A.'s will.—Stewart v. Marquis of Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 621; 2 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

4. A., having a power to appoint an estate to the use of all and every his child and children for any estates or interests, and in any shares, and subject to any charges and payments to one or more of them, devised it in trust to apply the rents, until the eldest son attained age, to the maintenance and education of all the children, and thereout to pay the interest of his debts and so much of the principal as the surplus would reach. He charged the estate with £3000 for the younger children, and if the eldest son should, by business or marriage, or otherwise, be enabled to pay off the £3000, that the trustees should convey the lands to him; if the eldest son should not pay it, to the second or third sons on the same conditions; and if none of the sons should take or accept the estate, that the trustees should sell the estate, pay off the father's debts, and divide the surplus among all the children. Held, that the will was a good equitable execution of the power, the portion of it which exceeded the power being separable, and the £3000 being a charge and

1. A., entitled to one-sixth of leasehold lands under the will of T.; and having a power of appointment over another sixth, under the will of C., both wills being nearly of the same date, devised all "his property" in the lands bequeathed "by the will of C.;" speaking of it as property of which he was possessed, and giving it for purposes in common with other property which he owned absolutely. Held, merely a falsa demonstratio, and to apply only to the property he was entitled to under T.'s will.—Lendrick v. Russell, 10 L. E. R. 269. (C.)

2. £8000 was bequeathed in trust for E. for her separate use for life, and at the decease of E. that two-thirds of the sum should remain for the use of the child and children of E.; the remaining third thereof she should be at liberty to dispose of by her will; and failing such disposition, that the said remaining third should go to the use of the child or children of E. in equal proportions. By a settlement, executed upon E.'s marriage, she, according to her right and interest therein, and in consideration of the marriage, assigned to trustees the £8000 in trust, after the decease of the survivor of E. and her husband, if there should be issue of the marriage one or more children, to pay it over among such issue as they should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, to the issue, in equal shares. E. covenanted for further assurance. There were two children. E., by will, in virtue of the power given her by the will of her father, and of all other powers enabling her in that behalf, devised and bequeathed one-third of £8000, in trust, to pay two legacies to strangers; and as to the residue of said one-third, in trust, for the use of one of the children, whom she also appointed residuary legatee. Held, that the will of E. was an ineffectual appointment of the one-third, so far as it was inconsistent with the trusts of the settlement, and therefore the appointment of the two legacies to strangers was void; but that the appointment of the residue to the child of E. was valid.

The donee of a power, although to be executed by will only, may bind himself not to execute it, or not to execute it except under restrictions.—In re Chambers, 11 L. E. R. 518. (R.)

3. Two sums were charged on real estate to be divided among the younger children of A., one sum in such parts and proportions, &c., the other in such shares and manner as he should appoint. By will he recited the powers, and directed his executors to raise the two sums and apply them together with the rest of his personal estate in discharge of legacies bequeathed to his younger children.

entitled to the interest of a legacy of £3000 during her life, with a power to appoint the principal amongst her children (which power did not authorise an exclusive appointment), having three sons and a daughter, by deed in 1834 appointed that sum equally amongst her two younger sons and her daughter, and made a provision aliunde for her eldest son. The daughter married. The eldest son died an infant.

The petition stated that A., having been advised that the appointment in 1834 was not a valid execution of the power, by deed in 1850 appointed £1900 to one of the surviving sons, £1000 to the other, and £50 to the daughter, and left £50 unappointed. The petition by the two surviving sons prayed that the appointment of 1834 should be declared invalid, and that the appointment of 1850 should be declared valid. Counsel appeared at the hearing for the daughter, and supported the prayer of the petition. Her husband resisted the petition; and in his affidavit stated that his wife was, at the instigation of A., living separate from him, and that A. had executed the latter appointment in order to defeat the former, on faith of which he had married the daughter. The affidavit also alleged that A. was in collusion with her sons for the purpose of obtaining the fund, or a large portion of it, to pay her own debts. There was not any evidence given on either side. The Court refused to make the declaration prayed for, and dismissed the petition, without prejudice, and without costs.

The jurisdiction created by the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, s. 11, is to be exercised with the greatest possible caution. All facts material to the formation of a correct decision upon each case should be contained within the four corners of the petition.—In re O'Reilly, 11 L. E. R. 497. (C.)—[See s. c., 1 L. E. R. 208. (C.)]

5. A. devised an estate pur autre vie in B. and G., and a term for years in S., upon trust for his son for life, remainder over; and also empowered that son X. "to make a settlement for the use of any wife he might marry, and to incur the properties for that use, and to the use of any issue lawfully begotten." The donee of the power exercised it on his marriage in 1805 in favour of his wife, and reserved a power to charge a jointure for any future wife. The first wife having died, he, on his second marriage in 1815, executed a settlement reciting his title to the premises under the will, but without allusion in that recital to the power contained in the will, and also reciting the settlement of 1805, and the reservation therein of a power to grant a jointure to a future wife, and then granting to trustees for the second wife a jointure of £100 per annum, "chargeable upon B. and S.; and chargeable, if they should be insufficient for payment thereof, upon all and every other property real or personal of which he was then or should thereafter be possessed of, or which he should die possessed of, in lieu of dower," &c. Held, that the power in the will might be exercised in favour of the second wife), notwithstanding the former exercise of it in favour of the first wife.

That the settlement of 1815 was a valid execution of the power in favour of the second wife, although that settlement contained no reference to that power, and only alluded to the reservation in the settlement of 1805.

That G., although not specified by name in the settlement of 1815, was charged thereby with the jointure in favour of the second wife.

That it was within the jurisdiction of this Court to appoint a receiver over the lands for the purpose of collecting the arrears of that jointure.—Maulby v. M., 2 I. C. R. 32; 4 I. Jur. 333. (C.)

1. C. had a power to charge X. with £1000; and, after limitations, the reversion was limited to him in fee. C., by will, after referring to the power, proceeded:—"I charge the said lands, and direct my executors do raise out of the lands, and which sum of £1000 I give and direct that the same may be paid to my daughter E." C. devised the reversion of X. to F., and gave the residue of his real and personal property to E. E. died in C.'s lifetime. Held, that the power was well executed, and that the charge must be raised for the benefit of C.'s next-of-kin.—Fosberry v. Smith, 5 I. C. R. 321. (C.)

2. By settlement of 1810, power was given to A., the intended husband, to appoint to all and every, or any one or more of the children, grandchildren, or other issue of the marriage, in such manner and form, and if more than one, in such parts, shares, and proportions, and for such estate and estates, time or times, and for such interests, and with such limitations over, or substitutions or charges in favour of any one or more of the children, grandchildren, and issue respectively, and either by way of legacy, portion, present interest, remainder or otherwise, as he should by deed or will direct; it being the true intent of the parties that A. might either divide the premises in such portions as he should think fit amongst his children, or appoint the entire to one or more child or children, and charge the premises by way of pecuniary provision for the other children of the marriage. Power was also given to A. to charge £200 for his own benefit, and a jointure and portions for a second wife, and the children of a second marriage.

By settlement in 1844, by A. and B., his eldest son, on B.'s marriage—reciting the power in the settlement of 1810, and the powers to A. to charge, and that A. had agreed to release the latter powers, and that the lands in which A. had a life estate were subject to various debts, charges and incumbrances stated in a schedule, and that A. had made no appointment of the lands.—A. appointed the lands after his own death, but subject to the debts, charges and incumbrances thereinbefore mentioned, and then affecting the lands, and released his power of charging the lands with a jointure and portions. A present annuity of £200 a-year, and a jointure of £300 for his intended wife, were provided and secured by a term of 100 years. A term of 200 years pursue to the term of 100 years was created, to raise £4000 portions for the younger children of A. The schedule to the deed comprised the £4000 portions, and £530, a bond debt of both father and son.

Semble—The power would have authorised an exclusive appointment; but—

Held, that the deed of 1844 operated as an appointment of the estate, subject to a charge of £4000, which took priority of the jointure to B.'s wife.

That a charge of the bond debt was created by the recital, and by the appointment subject to it, and also had priority over the jointure.

That, independently of the power, the £4000 was a charge in priority to the jointure, under the deed of 1844.—In re Nash, 5 I. C. R. 384. (P.C.)

3. A., by marriage settlement in Nov. 1823, conveyed lands to trustees for a term, upon trust to raise £20,000, of the late currency, to be paid to and divided amongst the children of the marriage, in such shares, manner, and form, at such ages, days, and times, and subject to such restrictions, as A. should by deed or will appoint. There were eight children of the marriage, some of whom were born after 1834.

On the 7th of Sept. (April in the judgment) 1843, A., by will, after referring to his power, appointed the interest of the £20,000 to his wife until his children severally attained age, to be applied to their maintenance, in such proportions as she should judge right, provided that his eldest son, S., should, on attaining the age of twenty-three, be paid an annual sum of £45, and each of the remaining children, on attaining such age, the annual sum of £35 out of the interest of £20,000; and that his children, on respectively attaining the age of twenty-three years, or marrying under that age, with consent, should be paid the following sums out of the charge, viz.: S. £600, and to each of the other children £2540; and if any of them died under the age of thirty-three years, or married without consent, that the share of the child so dying or marrying should, together with the residue of the sum, be distributed equally amongst the younger children who should attain the age of thirty-three years, or marry with consent, subject to the payment of the annual sums before mentioned, which he intended to be paid to each of them until he or she received their portion of the charge. Held, a valid appointment of the shares in which the children were to take.—Grogan v. Dopping, 6 I. C. R. 265; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 171. (C.)

4. A fund was vested in the trustees of a settlement, in trust to pay the principal in such shares, &c., as the husband and wife, during their joint lives, or the survivor of them, should appoint, among their issue; and if no such appointment, the principal and interest due thereon at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, to be divided between the issue, share and share alike; and if but one child living at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, the principal and the interest then due to go and be paid to that one. But if no such issue living at the decease of the survivor of the husband and wife, or should there happen to be issue then living, and that such issue should happen to die before respectively attaining age, as to the males unmarried and without issue, or eighteen years, or marriage as to the females, then the principal and interest due at the decease of the survivor of the children, and the securities taken for the same, should be paid to the survivor of the husband and wife.

Held, that, in default of appointment, the portions vested in males at twenty-one or marriage, and in females at eighteen or marriage; or if they vested in each child at its birth, they devolved on the death of a male under twenty-one unmarried and without issue, and of a female under eighteen and unmarried.

That the representative of children who died under fourteen and unmarried in their father's and mother's lifetime, took nothing.

That the representative of a daughter who married, attained eighteen, and died in her father's lifetime, was entitled to a portion.

A., having a power of appointing among his children a fund, and having other property, by will, after making bequests, directed that if his property exceeded £4000, the excess should be divided between his remaining children; and should either of them be dead, leaving a family, then his or her portion was to be given to her children. Held, that the will was not an execution of the power.—In re Dennis' Trusts, 6 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

1. A., tenant for life of estates, with a power to appoint them to his issue male, and to charge a sum for the benefit of his younger children, on the marriage of his third son, executed a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered, for a sum of money as a provision for him. On the marriage of a daughter he also made a provision for her, by way of an annuity charged on one of the settled estates. He afterwards, by will, devised certain of the estates to his eldest son, subject to all his debts and incumbrances of every description, and subject to charges made by his will in favour of his other children. He then charged other sums in favour of others of his children, and devised an estate to his fifth son, freed and exonerated from all his debts, charges, and legacies; his will being, that if any creditor should recover any demand from the lands so devised to his fifth son, it should be recouped by other estates devised to his eldest son. He stated that he had avoided mentioning his married children, as he had already provided for them, by bond or otherwise, at their respective marriages, fully and adequately to the provisions made thereby for his other children. A. did not appear to have left other property but that which was the subject of his power. Held, that the charge of the judgment debt to the third son by the will operated as an execution of the power to charge for younger children.

That an instrument should operate as an execution of a power, it is not necessary that the donee should intend to execute the power, or that he should have it in contemplation. It is sufficient if the act which he intends to do, or the benefit which he intends to confer, cannot be done or conferred otherwise than by an execution of the power.—In re Morgan, 7 I. C. R. 18. (P.C.)—[See next case.]

2. A., tenant for life of estates, with a power to charge them with £7000, for the benefit of his younger children, executed on the marriage of P., his third son, a bond and warrant of attorney, on which judgment was entered, to secure £1400 as a provision for him. He devised his estates to his eldest son, subject to his debts and incumbrances of every kind; bequeathed a legacy of £2000 to his daughter, M., and a legacy of £1000 to his son H., charging these legacies on the said estates in exercise of the power. A. concluded by stating that he had avoided making mention, in his will, of his married children, as he had already, by bond or otherwise, made provision for them at their respective marriages, adequate to the provision made by his will for his other children.

It having been decided (7 I. C. R. 18, P.C.) that the charge of the judgment debt to P., by the will, operated as an execution of the power to charge for younger children—Held (overruling a decision of the I. E. Court), that the charge of £1400 had a priority over the legacies bequeathed to M. and H.—In re Morgan, 8 I. C. R. 266. (C.A.)

3. A husband, tenant for life of his estate, with a power to charge a jointure for a second wife, by articles executed on his first marriage, covenanted that if there should be a child or children of that marriage he would assign the wife's fortune, as also his own property in lands and money, among such child or children, in such manner as he (the husband) by deed or will should appoint. But, if the wife should survive the husband, that an annuity should be paid to her out of his estate, which was stated in the articles to be the absolute property of the husband. It was agreed that if the wife's fortune should not be paid, the articles should be void.

Quære—Whether the articles amounted to a contract by the husband which precluded him from charging a jointure for a second wife?—Barron v. Constable, 7 I. C. R. 467; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 312. (R.)

4. A., having a general power of appointment over a fund which was settled on her husband for life, by will bequeathed legacies thereout, and the remainder of the fund, share and share alike, to her sisters; and as to "any other" residue of moneys or property not specified or disposed of, she directed it to be given share and share alike, to her then surviving sisters, who might be living when her will and the bequests therein might become available. One of the sisters died in A.'s lifetime, who died before her husband, Held, that the lapsed share of a deceased sister passed under the general residuary clause to the surviving sisters. That those sisters only who survived the husband took under the general residuary clause.—Hickson v. Wolfe, 9 I. C. R. 144. (C.A.)—[Affirming the Rolls decision, 7 I. C. R. 452.]

1. A., having a power to appoint by deed or will the lands of D. (held with other lands for lives renewable for ever, and subject to a proportional rent of £19) to the use of such child or children of his marriage in such shares, &c., or the whole to one of such children, for such estates, and with such conditions, &c., and limitations over for the benefit of some or one of such children, and subject to such charges for the other or others of such children as he should appoint, purchased the reversion of the lands of D.; and by a settlement on the marriage of B., his eldest son, reciting that he was seized in fee of D. and that it had been agreed that an annuity to be thereby granted and charged on D. should be assigned upon the trusts of the settlement, granted an annuity of £100, charged on D. for 100 years, upon trust, after the decease of the survivor of A. and his wife, to pay the same to B. for life, and after his decease to C. (B.'s intended wife), so long as there should be issue of the marriage, and she should remain a widow; and after the decease of the survivor, or if C. should survive B., and there should have been no issue, or she should marry again, in trust for the executors, &c., of A. By will, A., reciting his power, devised all his right to D. to his three sons, in trust, by sale, &c., to raise a sum for his younger children. Held, that the settlement was an execution of the power, and that the annuity was charged on the entire interest in the lands of D., and not on the reversion only.

That the settlement operated as an appointment to B., and a settlement by him on C., and that she, though not an object of the power, was therefore entitled to the annuity after B.'s death.—Irwin v. I., 10 I. C. R. 29. (R.)

2. Tenant for life had power to charge a jointure not exceeding the proportion of £100 yearly for every £1000 bona fide received with his wife. Her life estate in a leasehold interest, producing £206 yearly, was by the marriage settlement conveyed in trust for the husband for life; after his decease to his wife, for whom he charged a jointure of £200 a year. Held, a good execution of the power.—Brereton v. Barry, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 117. (C.A.)

3. A., having a power to appoint real estate and £4000 to all or any, or one or more of the children, or more remote issue of his marriage, made his will before any child was born, but while the wife was enccinte, bequeathing all his property on trust, in the event of his leaving one child, that he or she should inherit all his landed and personal property; but if he left a son and daughter, he devised and bequeathed all his landed and personal property to his son, save and except £4000 to his daughter.

A. died, having no real estate except what was the subject of the power, but considerable personal estate, and leaving two sons and two daughters. Held, that the will did not operate as an execution of the power over the real estate, as the devise was either void for uncertainty, or conditional on events which had not happened.

That the will did not operate as an execution of the power over the £4000, the Statute of Wills (1 Vic., c. 26, s. 27) applying to general powers, and not to special powers in favour of particular objects.—Russell v. R., 12 I. C. R. 377. (R.)

4. By settlement executed on the marriage of B. in 1811, the S. estate was conveyed to trustees to the use of A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail, subject to a term, the trusts of which were, that if there should be an eldest or only son, and one or more younger children of the marriage, to raise £2000 for the portion or portions of all or every such younger child or children; if but one younger child, the whole to be paid to such only younger child; and, if two or more, to be divided as B., by deed or will should appoint, &c., and for default of appointment, to be equally divided. Provided that if any of the younger children should die before his portion became payable, or that any younger son should become an eldest son before he attained age, the portion or portions of such of them so dying, or becoming an eldest or only son, should go and be equally divided amongst the survivors or survivor, or others or other of them.

By the same settlement, £2000 was charged on the X. estate (which was not otherwise the subject of that settlement), upon trust, after the decease of B., for the same purposes as were thereinbefore declared concerning the £2000 charged on the S. estate. There were six children of the marriage, the two eldest of whom were C. and D. In 1836, C. being of age, the said estate was disentailed, and re-settled by a deed, under which C. and D. took life estates, with remainder to their male issue. In 1839, on the marriage of D., B. by deed appointed the £2000 charged on the S. estate, and £500 of the £2000 charged on the X. estate, upon trusts, in favour of D. and his children, provided that, if under the limitations contained in the settlements of 1811 and 1836, or either of them, D. should succeed to an estate tail in possession in the S. estate, that appointment should not take effect; and the £2500 should belong to the remaining younger children of B. as he should appoint; and in default of appointment, equally. In 1841 the S. estate was re-settled in pursuance of a power of revocation in the deed of 1836, to B. for life; remainder to C. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to D. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail.

In 1853, C. died without issue. D. became entitled to the estates under the last mentioned deed.

Held, that supposing the appointment of 1839 to have been avoided by D. having become an eldest son, his share in the two sums of £2000 in default of appointment had not been divested, as he had not become an eldest son before he attained the age of twenty-one.

That the X. estate not being subject to the settlement of 1811, the appointment of £500 of the £2000 charged on that estate, was not divested, by D. having as eldest son, succeeded to the S. estate.

That D. having, as an eldest son, succeeded to an estate for life under the deed of 1841, and not to an estate tail under the deeds of 1811 or 1836, the appointment of 1839 was not defeated.

Semble—The Court would not, on a petition under the Trustee Relief Act to draw out the £2000 charged on the X. estate, and in the absence of minors claiming under the appointment of 1839, determine the right to the fund adversely to them. — Ex parte Smyth, 12 I. C. R. 487. (R.)

1. A., having power to appoint to his children in remainder, after his brother's death, by will, left all the property of every kind he died possessed of, or was entitled to by reversion or otherwise, to his wife, giving her the power of dividing his property among his children, as she might think proper; and by a codicil, reciting that he had, on the marriage of his eldest son, executed a deed conveying his interest in other lands, over which he had a power of appointment, he desired the trustees of his will to hand over to his eldest son the reversionary property of every kind to which he was entitled after the death of his brother; the son binding himself to pay the £3000 to his younger brother and sisters. He appointed the eldest son joint executor with his wife. A. had no other property on which the codicil could operate, which would be sufficient to pay the £3000. Held, that the codicil was a good execution of the power. Jones v. J., 13 I. C. R. 409. (R.)

2. By settlement, executed on the marriage of A. with B., A. granted lands, of which he was seized in quasi fee, to trustees to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of the trustees for 99 years, if B. should so long live, upon trust to pay to B., out of the rents, an annual jointure of £400, and as to the surplus rents upon trusts for the issue. The settlement provided that, if the rents should, during the 99 years, be insufficient to pay B.'s jointure of £400, it should be lawful for the trustees, by B.'s written direction, to raise the deficiency by mortgage or demise of the lands for any term of years. There was no issue. B. survived A.: and by will, after reciting that there were due to her arrears of jointure, bequeathed them to C. B. had not in her life given to her trustees any written directions to raise the arrears by mortgage or demise. Her executor filed in the L. E. Court a petition to sell the fee. Held, that B.'s will did not amount to a direction in writing to her trustees, within the meaning of the proviso; that they had no power to create a term for the payment of the arrears; and that there was no estate in the land which the Court could sell to raise them.—In re St. George's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 447; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (C.A.)

I. 3. Compliance with Conditions.

3. When an appointment has a condition annexed, if there appears to be a clear intention to benefit the appointee, the Court will hold the appointment good, discharged of the condition.—Hay v. Watkins, 2 Con. & L. 157; 3 Dr. & War. 339; 5 I. E. R. 273. (C.)

4. The execution of a power to appoint a jointure and portions for children by deed, supported in equity though executed by will. By marriage articles a provision was made for the intended wife and the children of the marriage; and a power given to the husband to appoint a jointure for any wife or wives he might marry, and in like manner to appoint portions for younger children. Held, that the power to appoint a jointure and portions was confined to the children of a second or subsequent marriage.—Mills v. M., 8 I. E. R. 192. (C.)—[See s. c., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)]

5. Under a power, reserved in a mortgage, to make leases for any term, provided the rents as set forth in a schedule were not thereby diminished, the mortgagor granted a lease for 300 years, and soon afterwards granted a second lease of the premises comprised in the former lease, together with other portions of the mortgaged property, and reserved a rent in pursuance of the powers contained in the deed of mortgage. Held (reversing the decision of the Court below), that the second lease, being strictly within the terms of the power, was valid, although concurrent.

Held (overruling the decision of the M. R.), that the mode of appointment given under the power as originally created, being by will, the marriage settlement was ineffectual as an appointment; and that the appointment by the will of the donee of the power was valid, being uncontrolled by the provisions of the settlement.—In re Wrixon's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 73. (P.C.)

6. When the appeal is from the whole decree or order, the ptr.'s counsel begins.

A tenant for life had a power of charging a jointure, not exceeding £100 a-year, for every £1000 which he should actually and bona fide receive with his wife. By his marriage settlement a life estate of an intended wife in a chattel interest, which produced £206 a-year, was conveyed in trust for the husband for life, and after his decease for his wife. The husband charged a jointure of £200 a-year. Held, that the power was not well executed, the condition not having been complied with.

Semble—A fortune, consisting of fee-simple land, or stock, or of a well-secured mortgage, would authorise the execution of such a power.—Brereton v. Barry, 10 I. C. R. 376. (R.)

I. 4. By Married Women.

1. By marriage settlement, properties belonging to A., the intended wife, were settled on the husband and wife for their lives, and for the survivor's life; then to the use of their issue; in default of issue, to the use of that person to whom A. should appoint by will. There was not any issue. By an instrument in the form of a deed-poll, reciting the antecedent deeds, A. appointed that, if she died without issue, all the properties should, after her death, go to her husband absolutely. This instrument was stamped and attested as a deed. A memorial of it was lodged in the Registry Office. Held, that the instrument was a deed in substance and in form, and was therefore an invalid execution of the power. —Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 6 I. E. R. 238; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 11. (C.)

I. 5. Exclusive and Illusory Appointments.

[See APPOINTMENTS, ILLUSORY, OR EXCLUSIVE.]

2. M. bequeathed £4000 upon trust for his wife for life, and, after her decease, amongst such of his children as should then be living, or the issue of such of them as might be then dead, in such proportions as his wife should appoint; in default of appointment, amongst such of his children, except F. and B. (who should not be entitled to any share thereof), as should be then living, and amongst the issue of such of them as should be then dead. Held, that an appointment excluding any of the children could not be made under the above power.

Held further, that F. was an object of the power. —Woodlock v. Mahony, 6 I. C. R. 236; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (C.)

I. 6. When the Instrument operates as an Appointment, or as a Conveyance of the Party's Interest.

3. A. was tenant for life, remainder to his children as he should appoint, remainder in default of appointment amongst them equally. A. joined his eldest son in fines and a recovery, and afterwards, by an innocent conveyance which the son signed, conveyed to a purchaser, the entire purchase money being paid to A. Held, that as the transaction, if formal, would have been in fraud of the power, it could not be aided so as to give it operation, first, as an appointment, and then as a conveyance to a purchaser; but that whatever interest the son had at the time passed by the deed.

Semble—That as the parties intended to convey wholly independently of the power, the deed could not be construed as an appointment to the son and a conveyance by him to the purchaser. —Thompson v. Simpson, 8 I. E. R. 55; 2 Jon. & L. 110. (C.)—[See the decree in this case, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)]

I. 7. When Void in Equity, et c. contra.

4. A., having a power to appoint a sum amongst his younger children, by will, reciting the power, bequeathed as follows:—"I leave and bequeath unto my said daughter, Harriet, a further sum of £200, to have me properly buried, and to pay what small debts I may owe at my decease." Held, a bad exercise of the power, and that the £200 should go as if it had been unappointed.

When a condition is annexed to an appointment, if there appears a clear intention to benefit the appointee, the Court will hold the appointment good, discharged of the condition. —Hay v. Watkins, 5 I. E. R. 273; 3 Dr. & War. 339; 2 Con. & L. 157. (C.)

5. If a power of appointment among children is exercised improperly, as for the benefit of the donee, this Court will interfere and restrain such acts. —Keily v. K., 2 Con. & L. 342; 4 Dr. & War. 38; 5 I. E. R. 435. (C.)

6. When a power is vested in a father, who, when exercising it, makes a stipulation for his own benefit, that disposition is a fraud upon the power. The fraud consists, not in the selection by the father of one child in preference to another, but in the arrangement which makes the appointment, though in form to a child, in effect an appointment to the father himself. To render such an appointment fraudulent, it need not be wholly for the father's benefit. If it is partly for his benefit, that is enough. —Jackson v. J., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 91. (C.)

7. The execution of a power to appoint a jointure and portions for children by deed, supported in Equity, though executed by will.

By marriage articles a provision was made for the intended wife and the children of the marriage, and a power was given to the husband to appoint a jointure for any wife or wives he might marry, and in like manner to appoint portions for younger children. Held, that the power to appoint a jointure and portions was confined to the children of a second or subsequent marriage. —Mills v. M., 8 I. E. R. 192. (C.)—[See s. c., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)]

8. An appointment to persons who are, and to others who are not, objects of the power, is invalid as to the latter. —In re Chambers, 11 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

9. By settlement, executed in 1800, on his first marriage, A. was seized of an estate for life in lands, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, with power to charge the lands with £2000 for such purposes as he should think fit, and with £1000 for his child or children by any after-taken wife. He also became entitled by subsequent events to two sums of £500 and £1000, charged on the lands by the same deed. There was no issue of the first marriage. By a settlement, executed in 1809, on his second marriage, he charged the lands with £2000 and £1000 under the powers, and assigned the sums of £2000, £500 and £1000, in trust, if there should be two or more younger children or daughters, to be divided amongst them, after the death of their father and mother, as he should by deed or will appoint, in default of appointment equally; and if there should be no issue of the marriage, or issue one only son, or there should be issue one or more daughter or daughters, or one or more younger children who should die before the time of payment of the portions, then as to the £2000, £1000, and £500, in trust for A., his executors, &c. There was issue, two sons and a daughter (B., C., and D.). The eldest son, B., joined A. in suffering a recovery of the estate. By deed of 1834 it was conveyed subject to a term, to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use of B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail, remainder to C. the second son for life, remainder to the first and other sons of C. in tail, remainder over. The trusts of the term were to raise by sale or mortgage £12,500 to be disposed of as A. and B. or the survivor should appoint, which was raised. A. appointed £250 of the sums of £500, £1000, and £2000 to D., and the residue to C. Afterwards B. died without issue, whereupon C. became entitled subject to the charge of £12,500 to a life estate in part of the lands, the remainder having been sold for payment of incumbrances. Held, that the appointment out of the sums of the £500, £1000, and £2000, did not become void by C. becoming an elder son entitled to the lands under the deed of 1834.

Spencer v. S., (8 Sim. 87) and Peacocke v. Pares (2 Keen, 689) observed on.—Tennison v. Moore, 13 I. E. R. 424. (R.)

1. A., seized of P. and other lands, by will directed all his debts, &c., to be paid; and devised all his real and freehold estates, save a part devised to his wife, upon trust that she and her assigns should after his death receive a rentcharge, with power of distress; and that three of his daughters should receive rentcharges, with like remedy by distress and entry as provided respecting his wife's rentcharge. A. then bequeathed pecuniary legacies to his children, and left all the residue of all his real, freehold, and personal estates, subject to his debts, and the aforesaid legacies and annuities, to the trustees.

By marriage settlement of one of the daughters, one of the rentcharges and part of a legacy were vested in the children of the marriage (some of whom were minors), subject to an exclusive power of appointment in the parents. The minors were depts. in a suit to carry the trusts of the will into execution, in which the Master found, upon the consent of the counsel and trustee of the minors, that the legacies and rentcharges were in equal priority, and that the finding was in the nature of a compromise, and beneficial to the minors. The report was confirmed by a final decree, and the lands of P., among others, were decreed to be sold to pay the several sums reported, in the first instance subject to the rentcharges to the daughters, and if sufficient was not produced to pay the debts and legacies, then discharged of the said rentcharges; and if the sum arising from such sale should be insufficient to pay the debts, legacies, and value of the rentcharges, and costs, the legatees and devisees of the rentcharges should abate rateably. The lands of P. were sold discharged of the rentcharges. Held, allowing exceptions to the Master's report of good title, that the report and decree, being founded on a consent which the Court had no jurisdiction to take, were erroneous, and that the title under it was bad.

Pending an appeal from the above decision, which was affirmed, a deed was executed by the father of the minors, appointing the rentcharge to a son (who was adult when the consent was entered into, and was a party to it), and the legacy to him and two of the minors, who had since come of age. The Lord Chancellor having, on the statement that the ptf. could then show a good title, referred it back to the Master to review his report, who found that a good title could be made by reason of said deed.

Semble—That the appointment having been made on an emergency, and not bona fide for the end designed by the donor of the power, was void.

Held, that the title was too doubtful to be forced on a purchaser, and the exceptions to the Master's further report of good title were also allowed.—Weir v. Chamley, 1 I. C. R. 295. (R.)—[See s. c., 2 I. C. R. 566. (R.)]

2. By settlement, made on the marriage of K. with R., the lands of C., held by lease for lives renewable for ever, were limited to K. for life, remainder to the sons of the marriage successively in quasi tail; in default of sons, to the daughters as tenants in common, with the usual power to K. to make leases in possession for any term not exceeding three lives or 31 years. There were issue two daughters. R. died, and K. married M., by whom he had several children. K., a few days before his death, "being," as the petition stated, "in a very weak state of health, and knowing that he had but a short time to live, and with a view of making a provision for M. and her children, and in order to enable them to support themselves by their industry after his death," executed this agreement:—"I agree to give a lease of the lands of C. now in my possession to Messrs. J. and P. B., of S., in the county of D., for the term of 31 years or three lives, for the sum of £1. 10s. per Irish acre; said lease to be for the benefit of my wife M. K., and her children; and the lives to be J., N., and R. K., my three sons—T. K. Witness present, J. K.—J. M." This agreement did not appear to have been delivered to the trustees during the life of K., and was not set up by them, or M. and her children, until some months after his death; but the rent reserved by it did not appear to be under the value of the lands. Held, that M. and her children were entitled to have a lease executed by the daughters of K., pursuant to the terms of the agreement.—King v. Roney, 5 I. C. R. 64. (C.)

3. A., having power to appoint, by deed or will, the lands of D. (held, with others, for lives renewable for ever, and subject to a proportional rent of £19) to the use of such child or children of his marriage, in such shares, &c., or the whole to one of such children, for such estates and with such conditions, &c., and limitations over, for the benefit of some or one of such children, and subject to such charges for the other or others of such children as he should appoint, purchased the reversion of D.; and afterwards, by settlement on the marriage of B., his eldest son, reciting that he was seized in fee of D., and an agreement that an annuity, to be hereby granted and charged on D., should be assigned upon the trusts of the settlement, granted an annuity of £100 to be charged on D., for 100 years, upon trust, after the decease of the survivor of A. and his wife, to pay the same to B. for life, and after his decease to C. (B.'s intended wife), so long as there should be issue, and she should remain a widow; and after the decease of the survivor, or if C. should predecease B., and there should have been no issue, or she should marry again, in trust for the executors, &c., of A. By will, A., reciting his power, devised all his right to D. to his three sons, in trust, by sale, &c., to raise a sum for his younger children. Held, that the settlement was an execution of the power, and that the annuity was charged on the entire interest in D., and not on the reversion only.

That the settlement operated as an appointment to B., and a settlement by him on C., and that she was, therefore, though not an object of the power, entitled to the annuity after B.'s death.—Irwin v. I., 10 I. C. R. 29. (R.)

1. By marriage settlement, lands were limited (amongst other uses) to the use of trustees for 500 years; and, subject to the term, to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use that A.'s intended wife should receive a jointure; and, subject to these limitations, to the use of the first son of the marriage in tail male; remainder over. The trusts of the term of 500 years were, first, to secure the payment of the jointure; and upon further trust, after the decease of A., or in his lifetime, with his consent in writing, to raise £10,000, late Irish currency, as portions for younger children, to be divided between them as A. should appoint. There were issue, an eldest son and two younger children. A., by two deeds-poll, appointed the whole of the £10,000, late Irish currency, to his two younger children, and directed that it should be raised, with interest, immediately.

Before the registration of the deeds-poll, A. had, in conjunction with his eldest son, executed a mortgage of the lands in fee, and had confessed judgments to a large amount, prior to the mortgage, some of which A. charged by mortgage on his life estate. The aggregate amount of the judgments and the mortgage in fee exceeded the value of A.'s life estate. One of A.'s younger children presented a petition for the sale of A.'s life estate of her appointed share of the £10,000, late currency; but the petition was dismissed, at the instance of the creditors on A.'s life estate. A petition was then presented, by the same younger child, to raise her portion, by a sale of the reversion expectant on the determination of A.'s life estate; but, on cause shown against the conditional order for payment by the remainderman, and various mortgagees and judgment creditors—Held, that the petition must be dismissed, with costs; that the power given to A., to raise the £10,000 in his lifetime, was a power appendant to his life estate, and was suspended by his acts; that it was inequitable for him to exercise it, as the effect would be to throw exclusively on the estate of the remainderman the payment of the interest which accrued during A.'s lifetime, and for the payment of which his life estate was the primary fund.

That this equity does not apply to judgment creditors; for, as they do not acquire any security by contract, there is nothing inequitable in diminishing their security by a power of charging. When cause, shown by different parties, who represent but one estate, is allowed, and costs are awarded, they are to be paid to the person first showing cause.—In re Green's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 325; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 348. (L.E.C.)

I. 8. Execution as to Part of a Fund: when Power may be executed.

2. V., by will, having charged £6000 on his estates, and directed it to be paid among such of his younger children, and in such shares as his wife should appoint; and she having, by will, directed the inheritor as follows:—"Three of the £6000 I wish to have given to the two elder girls." Held, a good appointment of £3000; and that the appointees took as tenants in common, not as joint tenants.—Alloway v. A., 4 Dr. & War. 380; 2 Con. & L. 509. (C.)

3. When a settlement gives the wife surviving the husband a power to appoint by will, in default of direction, limitation, or appointment by the husband, the legal effect of such provision is to give the wife a power to appoint, in respect of any portion unappointed by the husband, or not completely or validly appointed by him.

A father, having a power of appointment among all his children, by will, purporting to make an appointment of the whole fund, excluded one child, and appointed a portion of the fund to grandchildren, who were not objects of the power—Held, that the appointment was valid, so far as it related to the portion of the fund appointed to the children.

But having given other legacies by the will to the children in whose favour he had appointed—Held, that they were bound to elect in favour of the grandchildren.

Quere—Whether the Court has jurisdiction to decide a question, on a petition under the Trustee Relief Act?

Semble—The Court has not jurisdiction under the Trustee Relief Act to order service of the notice of the petition on parties residing out of the jurisdiction.

The prayer of a petition, and notice thereof, under the Trustee Relief Act, should specify the exact order sought for, and the precise portions of the fund which are to be transferred to the several parties entitled.—Ex parte Bernard, 6 I. C. R. 133; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

I. 9. Excessive Execution of a Power.

1. Lands were settled to the use of A. for life; remainder in fee to such one or more of his children as he should by deed or will appoint to; in default of appointment to the children equally.

A. devised the lands to his wife for life, upon condition that she thereout maintained and educated his children in such manner as his executors should think proper; and that, after defraying all necessary expenses, whatever sum remained in her hands at the end of the year should be accumulated as a fund to pay the legacies thereafter given by him. He bequeathed to each of his younger children £500; and devised the lands to his eldest son in tail, with a direction that, if at his wife's death, a fund sufficient to pay the legacies had not been accumulated, those lands, and others not subject to the power, should stand charged with the deficiency. Held, that the devise to the eldest son was not invalidated by the previous devise to the wife, which was, nevertheless, void for excess of the power.

That, during the wife's life, the amount of rents, not required to maintain the younger children and pay the legacies, went as in default of appointment.

That the direction to maintain the younger children, and the bequests to them, were pro tanto a good execution of the power.—Crozier v. C., 5 I. E. R. 540; 3 Dr. & War. 373; 2 Con. & L. 294. (C.)

2. Under a power of appointment to children, an appointment to a child's husband is void.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 7 I. E. R., 302. (E.E.)

3. By a marriage settlement V. conveyed premises to trustees to uses, with such remainders over as V. should by deed, &c., appoint.

V., by deed purporting to be in exercise of the power of appointment, appointed certain of the premises to his eldest son; that deed contained this declaration:—"that the appointee and J." (to whom the premises were appointed in certain events) "respectively shall have full power of making leases, &c." The premises came to J., who exercised that leasing power in favour of the petitioner, who afterwards agreed to sell his interest under the lease to the respondent, upon whose behalf it was objected to the abstract of title—that the deed of appointment was void for excess of the power in the marriage settlement; that the lease to the petitioner was therefore void; and that he could not make title. He filed this petition to enforce specific performance of the respondent's agreement to purchase the interest in the lease. Held, that the deed of appointment was in excess of the power, and that the petition should be dismissed with costs.—Anderson v. Heron, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 254. (C.)

4. E., wife of T., being seized of fee-simple lands, E. and T. conveyed them, by fine and deed leading its uses, to a trustee and his heirs, to the use of E. and T., and the survivor, for life; remainder to enable E., by will, to devise them to and among the issue of E. and T., in such shares as she should appoint; "it being however expressly declared that E. is to have power thereby only to devise such shares and proportions in strict settlement upon such child or children, and their lawful issue, whether male or female; but that if such child should die without having such lawful issue who should attain age, or be married, then the lands should be devised to and among the surviving children and their issue who should attain age, in such proportions as E. should by will appoint; in default of appointment, to the children and such of their lawful issue as should attain age or be married, share and share alike. The deed contained a further provision, that if E. made no will, T. might by will "give, devise, and bequeath the said town and lands to and among their issue in the manner aforesaid, in such shares and proportions as he should thereby direct, limit, and appoint;" in default of appointment, to go equally among the said children and their lawful issue, for ever. Held, that T. could not appoint greater estates than life estates to his children.

That T. had power to appoint life estates to his children in esse at the date of the deed, with remainders to their children, in strict settlement.—Bell v. B., 13 I. C. R. 517. (C.A.)

I. 10. Defective Execution: when supplied.

5. Whether, in case of a lease made by tenant for life, having leasing power, the lessee at best rent, without fine, is so far a purchaser as to be entitled in equity to relief, as against the remainderman, from a defect in the execution of the power under which the lease was intended to have been made? Quære.

Semble—It is questionable whether the rule laid down in text-books, that equity will aid a defective execution of a power only in behalf of purchasers for valuable consideration, or a child, is a sound one.—Donnell v. Church, 4 I. E. R. 630. (R.)

6. A. was tenant for life; remainder to his children as he should appoint; remainder, in default of appointment, amongst them equally. A. joined his eldest son in suffering a recovery; and, afterwards, by an innocent conveyance, which that son signed, conveyed to a purchaser. The whole price was paid to A. Held, that the transaction, since it would have been, if formal, in fraud of the power, could not be aided so as to give it operation, first, as an appointment, and then as a conveyance to a purchaser; but the son's interest, whatever it was, which he had at the deed's date, passed thereby.—Thompson v. Simpson, 8 I. E. R. 55;

1. Lands devised to three sons in such shares, &c., as A. should appoint, in default of appointment as tenants in common, were settled by A.'s direction, the share of each son on himself for life, with remainder, if he should marry with the consent of A., but not otherwise, to secure a jointure, subject to his appointment, to such woman or women as he should so marry; with a power to him, if he should marry with such consent, but not otherwise, to charge £500 for his younger children; remainders in strict settlement. One son married, first with consent, and, after A.'s death, without consent. Held, that the consent to the first marriage did not dispense with the necessity of a consent to the second: but, on the apparent intention that the condition of obtaining A.'s consent having become impossible by his death, that the powers did not cease, but might be exercised in favour of the wife and children of the second marriage.

A person having power to charge £500 and appoint it among his younger children, by articles on his first marriage, charged it for the benefit of the younger children of that marriage. He married again. There were younger children of both marriages. By his will he appointed nominal shares to the children of the first, and the entire substantially to those of the second marriage. Held, that the power included all younger children, and the articles therefore became invalid as an appointment after the second marriage, and that the power might be re-exercised: but, that the articles were a contract to exercise it substantially for the children of the first marriage, and controlled the power; and that the testamentary appointment was therefore also invalid, and the fund should be divided equally among the younger children of the first marriage, and the younger children of the second marriage, as a class.—Greene v. G., 8 I. E. R. 473; 2 Jon. & L. 529. (C.)

I. 11. Non-execution.

2. £8000 were bequeathed in trust for E. for her separate use for life, and at the decease of E. that two-thirds of the sum should be and remain for the use of the child and children of the said E., and the remaining third thereof she should be at liberty to dispose of by her will; and failing such disposition, that the remaining third should go to the use of the said child or children in equal proportions. By settlement, executed upon E.'s marriage, she, according to her right and interest therein, and in consideration of the marriage, assigned the £8000 in trust, after the decease of the survivor of E. and her husband, in case there should be issue of the marriage one or more children, to pay it over among such issue as they should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, to the issue in equal shares; E. covenanted for further assurance. There were two children. E. by will, in virtue of the power given her by the will of her father, and of all other powers enabling her in that behalf, devised and bequeathed one-third of £8000 in trust to pay two legacies to strangers; and as to the residue of said one-third, in trust for the use of one of the children, whom she also appointed residuary legatee. Held, that the will of E. was an ineffectual appointment of the one-third, so far as it was inconsistent with the trusts of the settlement, and therefore the appointment of the two legacies to strangers was void; but that the appointment of the residue to the child of E. was valid.

The donee of a power, although to be executed by will only, may bind himself not to execute it, or not to execute it except under certain restrictions.—In re Chambers, 11 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

II. WHEN POWERS SURVIVE.

3. Lands devised to three sons in such shares, &c., as A. should appoint, and in default of appointment as tenants in common, were settled by A.'s direction, the share of each son on himself for life, with remainder, if he should marry with the consent of A., but not otherwise, to secure a jointure, subject to his appointment, to such woman or women as he should so marry, with a power to him, if he should marry with such consent, but not otherwise, to charge £500 for his younger children; remainders in strict settlement. One son married, first with consent, and after A.'s death, without consent. Held, that the consent to the first marriage did not dispense with the necessity of a consent to the second; but on the apparent intention that the condition of obtaining A.'s consent having become impossible by his death, that the powers did not cease, but might be exercised in favour of the wife and children of the second marriage.

A person having a power to charge £500 and appoint it among his younger children, by articles on his first marriage, charged it for the benefit of the younger children of that marriage. He married again. There were younger children of both marriages. By will he appointed nominal shares to the children of the first, and the entire substantially to those of the second marriage. Held, that the power included all younger children, and the articles therefore became invalid as an appointment after the second marriage, and that the power might be re-exercised: but, that the articles were a contract to exercise it substantially for the children of the first marriage, and controlled the power; and that the testamentary appointment was therefore also invalid, and the fund should be divided equally among the younger children of the first marriage, and the younger children of the second marriage, as a class.

Costs of raising a family charge under a power, but not of the suit to raise it, given out of the estate.—Greene v. G., 8 I. E. R. 473; 2 Jon. & L. 529. (C.)

III. WHEN THEY TEND TO PERPETUITY.

IV. LEASING POWERS.

4. A., seized of an undivided moiety of W., on his marriage in 1775, conveyed it to the use of his first and other sons, reserving to himself a power to lease for three lives. Having afterwards purchased the other undivided moiety, A., in 1785, leased the whole of W. to B. for lives renewable for ever. In 1797, on the marriage of A.'s eldest son, G., A. conveyed W. to his own use for life; remainder to G.'s use for life; remainder to the use of such of G.'s sons as G. should appoint to. In his covenant against incumbrances A. excepted leases bona fide made by him. G. appointed W. to his eldest son, C., and died in A.'s lifetime. C. survived G. On A.'s death, C. filed a bill to set aside the lease of that moiety of W. comprised in the settlement of 1775, as contrary to the leasing power. Held, that W. claiming under the settlement of 1795, was bound by the lease of 1785, and could not set it aside. — Steele v. Mitchell, 3 I. E. R. 1; 2 Dr. & Wal. 568. (C.)

1. On P.'s marriage, lands, held on a lease for lives renewable for ever, were settled. The settlement gave P. an estate for life, and contained this leasing power: "It shall be lawful for P., and all and every other person or persons to whom any use is hereby limited, when in actual possession of the said lands, &c., to demise the said lands for any number of lives or years, consistent with their respective interests therein, to commence in possession, and not in reversion, remainder, or expectancy," reserving the best rents, without taking any money by way of fine, &c.

P. demised to A., at a farm-rent, for three named lives, with a covenant, that, on failure of any of the three lives, the lessor, his heirs, and assigns, would, on the payment of £5 as a fine upon each life that should happen to die, add to the term of the lease the life of another person, nominated by the lessee, from time to time successively for ever. The Court of Ch. in Ir. decreed specific performance of the covenant for renewal. Held, that this lease was not warranted by the power; and that that decree should be reversed, and the bill dismissed with costs.

The appellant had, under the decree, actually paid the costs. The H. of L. declined to order that he should be repaid them, and left him to apply to the Court below on the judgment now pronounced. — Clark v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126. — [See the application for costs in the Court below: Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)]

2. Under a power to lease at the best rent, the very highest rent that can be obtained is not required. The true criterion is, whether the rent has been fairly obtained without any private advantage to the donee of the power. Therefore an agreement, which the Court treated as subject to the same rule, was enforced, though the rent obtained was below the offers made by less solvent tenants, and below the average at which the lands were valued, when the agreement was fairly made, and was a prudent one. — [Hartnett v. Yielding (2 Sch. & Lef. 549) commented on.]

life, with a leasing power, cannot be enforced as an execution of the power, it may be partially enforced by decreeing a lease for the life of the tenant for life, if the contract was bona fide, and more especially if there has been an outlay on the faith of it. — Dyas v. Cruise, 8 I. E. R. 407; 2 Jon. & L. 460. (C.)

3. D., tenant for life, purporting to exercise a leasing power, made a lease in 1767, covenanting for quiet enjoyment against the acts of all claiming through him. In 1791 and 1792, D. and his son, tenant in tail in remainder, joined in suffering recoveries, and re-settled the estates subject to then existing leases, D.'s son having secured to him an annuity of £2000 and £30,000 for his debts. D. died in 1799, and the estates were re-settled by his son and the then remainderman. In 1848 the lease was impeached as an excess of the power. Held, that, on the doctrine of Taylor v. Stibbert (2 Ves. jun. 437), and Stoughton v. Crosbie (5 I. E. R. 451), the lease was then valid, whether originally void or not.

The doctrine of these cases does not clash with the principle of Garrard v. Lauderdale (2 R. & Myl., 451), and similar cases, preventing a stranger from taking advantage of a creditor's deed, or the like, to which he is not a party. The two classes of authorities distinguished.

The owners of the estate being obliged, under the circumstances, to raise the objections to the lease in equity—Semble, the mere lapse of time and acquiescence from 1767 to 1848 would bar them from relief.

A lease impeached for alleged fraud and undervalue—Held, under the circumstances valid. Concealment and misrepresentation, relied on in such a case, must be proved fraudulent, and the contract shown to be based upon it, and the very fraud alleged in the bill proved.

A settlement authorised D., for the encouraging of building in B., to demise houses, lands, and tenements in B., upon building or repairing leases, for one, two, or more lives, or to continue during 99 years, to be computed from the day of the date of such lease, or for any term of years not exceeding 99 years, to take effect either in possession or reversion, or to make f. f. grants, so as in all such grants, demises, and leases, there be reserved to continue payable during the continuance of them the best rent to be got without fine, and so as in every such lease or grant there be a clause or condition of re-entry for non-payment of the rent thereupon reserved, and authorised leases under other restrictions of the other premises comprised in it, beside the houses and buildings at B. D. made a lease in 1767 of land and quays in B., with liberty to receive quayage usually payable, and the free use of a canal, habendum for three lives and the life of the survivor, and after his death for 99 years from the date of the lease, yielding £8 until 1791, when a subsisting lease of some of the quays would fall in, and £50 for the residue of the term demised; with covenants for building and improving, and a clause of re-entry upon non-payment of the rent for three months, or breach of the covenants.

Semble—This was a good building and repairing lease, though including quayage and the use of the canal, which alone would not be subjects of such a lease.

That the term for lives and years concurrent was within the power; that the rent was well reserved, though the higher sum was not payable for the entire term; and that the clause of re-entry was sufficient, though neither immediate on non-payment, nor in the usual form.

A settlement authorised a tenant for life to make leases and accept fines, to be applied in raising a sum to pay incumbrances, provided that the full amount of the fine should be stated in each lease, and should be all paid to trustees named, or their order. It was agreed that the receipt of the trustees, either in the lease or separately, should be a full discharge to the tenant paying such fine, and no person obtaining such receipt should be answerable, nor his lease liable to impeachment for the misapplication of the fine, or a breach of trust or excess by the trustees. Held, no objection to a lease containing a receipt from the trustees for the fine, that the fine was paid in bills or notes, or that it was paid into the hands of a third person, agent for the tenant for life, but who acted for the trustees.

A lease, made under a power requiring the rent to be reserved payable during the continuance of the lease, bore date in June 1827, and reserved the first half-year's rent on the 1st of May then next. Held, that the lease was not thereby avoided, though no rent appeared payable from June to Nov. 1827, especially since the objection was not mentioned in the bill; for, if it had been mentioned, debt. might have made a case to explain it, or to be relieved against it.

A power required that in leases of premises then in lease the rent reserved should not be less than the rent then payable out of the same premises. A lease of 1767 had demised quays and other premises, with liberty to receive quayage not exceeding two pence per ton. A lease of 1827, made under the power, demised the quays and premises described as in the lease of 1767, together with the wharfage and quayage of all ships and vessels resorting to the quays and docks (without any limitation of the rate per ton), at a rent of the same amount as was reserved in 1767; to which it was objected that the same rent was not reserved, as the renewal included additional premises. Held, not a valid objection, as the rent was not reserved out of the quayage, and by the removal of the restriction the lessor passed nothing new.

By a subsequent lease of 1831, reciting that the unlimited quayage was included by mistake in that of 1827, the premises as originally leased were demised at the same rent and fine as in the lease of 1827, and the unlimited quayage at a small additional fine and rent. Held, that the lessee could rely on the lease of 1831, which would have been valid if made in 1827 when the principal sum was paid, though perhaps impeachable if originating in 1831.

The nature of a right of quayage or wharfage considered.—Marquis of Donegal v. Grey, 18 I. E. R. 12. (C.)

1. By settlement, made on the marriage of K. with R., the lands of C., held by lease for lives renewable for ever, were limited to K. for life, with remainder to the sons of the marriage successively in quasi tail; and in default of sons, to the daughters as tenants in common, with the usual power to K. to make leases in possession for any term not exceeding three lives, or thirty-one years. There were issue of the marriage two daughters. R. died, and K. married M., by whom he had several children. K., a few days before his death, "being," as the petition stated, "in a very weak state of health, and knowing that he had but a short time to live, and with a view of making a provision for the said M. and her children, and in order to enable them to support themselves by their industry after his death," executed an agreement in the following terms:—"I agree to give a lease of the lands of C., now in my possession, to Messrs. J. and P. B., of S., in the county of D., for the term of thirty-one years, or three lives, for the sum of £1. 10s. per Irish acre; said lease to be for the benefit of my wife, M. K., and her children; and the lives to be J. N., and R. K., my three sons—T. K. Witness present, J. K.—J. M." This agreement did not appear to have been delivered to the trustees during the life of K., and was not set up by them, or M., and her children, until some months after his death; but the rent reserved by it did not appear to be under the value of the lands. Held, that M. and her children were entitled to have a lease executed by the daughters of K., pursuant to the terms of the agreement.—King v. Roney, 5 I. C. R. 64. (C.)

2. The Court has not power, under the Settled Estates Act (19 & 20 Vic., c. 120), to grant a power to lease in reversion.

The Court's order, granting leasing powers under that Act, does not dispense with the necessity of the party, who takes a lease, investigating the title.—Ex parte Henchy, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (R.)

3. Lands were vested in three trustees, upon trusts, in strict settlement, with a leasing power to be exercised by two out of the three trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life. A lease was executed in 1808 by one of the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life. D., the first tenant in tail, attained age, and, in 1819, the property was resettled. In 1831 the tenant for life died, and D. received the rent reserved by the lease of 1808 up to 1843, when he purchased the lessee's interest, and took possession of the lands comprised in the lease, but did not take a conveyance. On an ejectment brought by a judgment creditor of the lessee, judgment for the ptf. was given for one-third. Held, that D. was entitled to a perpetual injunction against the judgment creditor, relying on the legal estate in the one-third derived by him from the trustee.—Denny v. Busted, 7 I. C. R. 201; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 377. (C.)—[Affd., 8 I. C. R. 49. (C.A.)]

1. A., tenant for life, with a leasing power, remainder to B. in tail, executed a disentailing deed, whereby they conveyed the estate to the use of A., for life, remainder to the use of B., in fee. Held, that A.'s leasing power was not extinguished.

A remainderman is not bound by a contract for a lease with the tenant for life, unless it be binding within the provisions of the Statute of Frauds, and within the power of the tenant for life. He is not affected by part performance for the tenant for life.

A written proposal was sent to a tenant for life, for a lease for three lives or thirty-one years, at a rent. He replied that he had not power to execute such a lease; but "If you choose to take the lease in the usual way, I will allow you £20 to get up a cottage, and a lease for your own life." Held, that as the answer was not a simple acceptance, but introduced new terms, the proposal and answer were not a sufficient agreement within the Statute of Frauds.—O'Fay v. Burke, 8 I. C. R. 225. (R.)—[Affirmed, ibid., 511. (C.A.)]

2. B. recovered a verdict for £500 against C., as tenant for life, who had power to make leases for three lives or thirty-one years, at the best rent and without fine. C., in consideration of B.'s releasing him from the amount of the verdict, made such a lease to him at a reduced rent. The leasing power was contained in a settlement which empowered C. to raise £500 out of the lands. Held, that this power authorised the acceptance of a fine upon the making of a lease.—Scanlan v. M'Carthy, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 145. (C.)

V. WHAT ARE CONSTRUED USUAL POWERS.

VI. POWER TO APPOINT TO CHILDREN.

3. A marriage settlement conveyed freeholds upon trust to permit and suffer them to be enjoyed for ever by the issue male of the marriage, in such shares and proportions as the father should appoint.

The father, by indenture, reciting the settlement, in consideration of his eldest son waiving and relinquishing all claim and demand whatsoever, or right as one of the issue male of the marriage, under the power of appointment, and which he did thereby waive and relinquish, and for ever quit claim, and discharge the father thereof, conveyed other lands to a trustee for the son and his issue. Held, that the father was entitled to that share of the settled property, to which the eldest son was entitled in default of appointment.—Barron v. B., 2 Jon. 798. (E.E.)

4. When a power is given to appoint a fund among the children as the parent shall direct, and one child is advanced by the parent out of his own funds a portion equivalent to the share which such child would have taken in the settled fund, if no appointment had been made, the effect of it is to increase the shares of the other children, and not to make the advanced child's share part of the parent's assets.—Brownlow v. The Earl of Meath, 2 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

5. By marriage settlement lands were conveyed to A. (the intended husband), his heirs, and assigns; and if A. died, leaving one son or more sons on the body, &c., the elder of such sons, and the heirs male of his body, to be always preferred before the younger; with power to A. "to make such reasonable provision as he should think fit for such younger child or children;" and if A. died leaving no son, but leaving one or more daughters, then to her or them (on attaining age respectively), their heirs and assigns, share and share alike. A., having four sons and four daughters; by will, charged the lands with £1500 to be divided amongst the younger children as therein directed. The first taker disputed A.'s right to charge in favour of daughters, one of whom thereupon filed a bill to raise her share of the £1500. Held, that the power was well exercised; and that, since the intent of the settlement evidently was to provide for all the children, the Court would effectuate it, and support the appointment, by transposing the clause creating the power, and that containing the limitation to the daughters in the event of there not being a son; by which transposition the words "such younger children" would include both sons and daughters.—Fenton v. F., 1 Dr. & Wal. 66. (C.)

6. A., having a power to appoint a sum amongst his children, by will gave a share of it to his daughter "to have him properly buried, and to pay what small debts he might owe at his death." Held, a bad appointment.—Hay v. Watkins, 5 I. E. R. 273; 3 Dr. & War. 339; 2 Con. & L. 157. (C.)

7. By marriage settlement lands were settled upon the husband for life; remainder to the use of all and every or such one or more of the children of the marriage, for such estate, not exceeding an estate in tail male, as the husband should appoint; in default of appointment, to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail male.

By deed poll the father, A., appointed the settled lands in tail male to his eldest son, B., who had just attained age. Four days later, A. and B. demised part of these lands for lives renewable for ever. The consideration for the lease was £1600, which the lease stated to be applied in paying debts affecting A.'s estate, and renewal fines then due.

In 1807, B., in consideration of the several debts paid for him by A., and of the trust and confidence reposed in him by A., conveyed the settled lands, and all his interest therein, to A., his heirs and assigns.

B. died intestate and without issue. A. survived, and devised the lands, charged with legacies, to the use of his two surviving sons in equal shares, as tenants in common. Fourteen years after A.'s death, the third son filed this bill to carry into execution the trusts of that will.

The House of Lords, reversing the decree of the Court below, declared, that, before any adjudication could be had on A.'s title to dispose of the lands, an enquiry should be instituted into the validity of the appointment.

The Master enquired, and reported that, at the time of the execution of the appointment and lease, there appeared upon record as against A., judgments to the amount of £2400; that they were all satisfied on the same day, being a day after the execution of the lease; but that he could not state how the consideration money for the lease had been applied, no evidence of the manner of its application having been laid before him, save so far as the statements in the deed of appointment, and in the conveyance of 1837 relative thereto, and the facts relating to the judgments, might be deemed evidence thereof. The report then found that the deed of appointment was valid.

The cause coming on to be heard upon this report. Held, that the deed of appointment and the conveyance of 1807 were fraudulent and void, as constituting a dealing by a father for the benefit of himself, and not of the appointee, his son; and that they ought to be set aside.

When a power is vested in a father, and he, in exercising it, makes a stipulation for his own benefit, this Court considers such a disposition as a fraud upon the power. The fraud consists, not in the selection by the father of one child in preference to another, but in the arrangement which makes the appointment, though in form to the child, in effect an appointment to the father himself.

To render such an appointment fraudulent, it need not be wholly for the father's benefit: that it is partly so, suffices.

Semle—That the father's will could not be supported as an execution of the power reserved by the marriage settlement.

If the appointment failed—Quære, as to the operation of the conveyance of 1807? How far was the power affected by the union of both estates in the father?—Jackson v. J., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden 91. (C.)

1. Lands, devised to three sons in such shares, &c., as A. should appoint; in default of appointment, as tenants in common, were settled by A.'s direction thus:—each son's share on himself for life, remainder (if he married with A.'s consent, but not otherwise) to secure a jointure, subject to A.'s appointment, to such woman or women as the son should so marry; with a power to the son (if he married with such consent, but not otherwise) to charge £500 for his younger children; remainders in strict settlement. One son married twice; on the first occasion, with A.'s consent; on the second, after A.'s death. Held, that consent to the first marriage did not dispense with the necessity of consent to the second; but that, on the apparent intention (A.'s death having rendered the condition impossible of fulfilment), the powers had not ceased, and might be exercised in favour of the second wife and the children of the second marriage.

A., having power to charge £500, and appoint it among his younger children, by articles on his first marriage, charged it for the benefit of the younger children of that marriage. He married again. There were younger children of both marriages. By will, A. appointed nominal shares to the children of the first marriage; and the bulk to those of the second. Held, that the power included all younger children; that after the second marriage, the articles became invalid as an appointment; and that the power might be re-exercised; but that the power was controlled by the articles, which amounted to a contract to exercise it substantially in favour of the children of the first marriage; that the testamentary appointment was invalid; and that the fund should be divided equally among the younger children of the first marriage and those of the second, as a class.—Greene v. G., 8 I. E. R. 473; 2 Jon. & L. 529. (C.)

2. When a power of appointing amongst his children is vested in a father; and he, in exercising it, makes a stipulation for his own benefit, this Court considers that disposition a fraud upon the power. The fraud consists, not in the father's selection of one child in preference to another, but in the arrangement being, though in form to the child, in effect an appointment to the father himself.

To render such an appointment fraudulent it need not be wholly for the father's benefit, that it is partly so suffices.—Jackson v. J., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 91. (C.)

8. Estates were settled, after the death of the husband and wife, to trustees for a term, and, subject thereto, to the husband in fee. The trusts of the term were, if the wife died in the life of the husband leaving children living at her death, to raise £8000 for the portions of such children, to be divided between them in such shares as the husband should by deed or will appoint. The husband died, leaving the wife and several children him surviving; and by will devised part of the settled lands to his eldest son, in strict settlement, with powers of jointuring and charging portions for his younger children; other part of the settled lands to his second son in like manner; and, after reciting that he had, by his settlement, a power of appointing £8000 amongst his children, he, in pursuance of said power, and of every other power to him reserved, gave and appointed the £8000 amongst his children, in certain proportions, and charged it upon the lands. Held, that although the contingency upon which the power was given, and to provide for which the particular fund, the £8000, was created, never happened, the gift to the children by the will was good, and took effect out of the estate of the husband.—Mandeville v. Roe, 1 Jon. & L. 371; 7 I. E. R. 253. (C.)

4. A. was tenant for life, remainder to his children as he should appoint, remainder in default of appointment among them equally. A. joined with his eldest son in fines and a recovery, and afterwards, by an innocent conveyance which the son signed, conveyed to a purchaser, the entire purchase money being paid to the father. Held, that as the transaction, if formal, would have been in fraud of the power, it could not be aided so as to give it operation, first, as an appointment, and then as a conveyance to a purchaser; but that whatever interest the son had at the time passed by the deed.

Semble—That as the parties intended to convey wholly independently of the power, the deed could not be construed as an appointment to the son and a conveyance by him to the purchaser.—Thompson v. Simpson, 8 I. E. R. 55; 2 Jon. & L. 110. (C.)—[See the decree, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)]

1. V., having a power to give a fund to all and every her child or children, and to exclude any one or more of them, in such shares and at such times she should by will appoint; after reciting by will that her daughter C. had entered a convent; bequeathed £1000, part of the fund, if C. should change her mind and return to her family and friends, in trust to pay the interest to C. for life; remainder to C.'s children, if any; and, if C. did not leave the convent, or, having done so, left no issue, that £1000 was to go to V.'s other children. C. continued in the convent. Held, that this was a gift on a contingency authorised by the power, and that C. was not entitled to the interest or any of it, as if the £1000 had remained unappointed; but that the interest went with the principal, which should be invested with liberty to the legatees in remainder to apply for it on C.'s death.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 164; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

2. Strong suspicion that a father's appointment to his son was for the father's benefit, and was a fraud upon the power, does not suffice to avoid the transaction.—Hamilton v. Kinnear, 8 I. E. R. 278; 2 Jon. & L. 393. (C.)

3. A father having a power to appoint an estate to the use of all and every his child and children for any estates or interests, and in any shares, and subject to any charges and payments to one or more of them, devised the estate in trust to apply the rents, until the eldest son attained age, to the maintenance and education of all the children, and thereout to pay the interest of his debts and so much of the principal as the surplus would reach. He charged the estate with £3000 for the younger children, and if the eldest son should, by business, or marriage, or otherwise, be enabled to pay off the £3000, directed that the trustees should convey the lands to him, and if the eldest son should not pay it, to the second or third sons on the same conditions; and if none of the sons should take or accept the estate, that the trustees should sell the estate and pay off the father's debts, and divide the surplus among all the children. Held, that the will was a good equitable execution of the power, the portion of it which exceeded the power being separable, and the £3000 being a charge, and not a personal condition.—Richardson v. Simpson, 9 I. E. R. 367; 3 Jon. & L. 540. (C.)

4. Three policies of insurance on the settlor's life were assigned by a voluntary deed on trust for A., and his other children, in such shares, &c., as he should appoint. He, on A.'s marriage, appointed to her £2000 out of the sums secured by the policies. He made a similar appointment on B.'s marriage. By will he appointed £2000 to each of the other children. Two of the policies having dropped before his death—Held, that the sums given to A. and B. should be paid in full, according to the priorities of the appointments, and the entire loss fall on the other objects.—Borough v. Close, 11 I. E. R. 391. (C.)

5. £8000 were bequeathed in trust for E., for her separate use for life; and at the decease of E. that two-thirds of the sum should be and remain for the use of the child and children of the said E., and the remaining third thereof she should be at liberty to dispose of by her will; and failing such disposition, that the remaining third should go to the use of the said child or children in equal proportions. By settlement, executed upon E.'s marriage, she, according to her right and interest therein, and in consideration of the marriage, assigned the £8000 in trust, after the decease of the survivor of E. and her husband, if there should be issue one or more children, to pay it among such issue as they should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, to the issue in equal shares. E. covenanted for further assurance. There were two children. E., in virtue of the power given her by the will of her father, and of all other powers enabling her in that behalf, devised and bequeathed one-third of £8000 in trust to pay two legacies to strangers; and as to the residue of said one-third, in trust for the use of one of the children, whom she appointed residuary legatee. Held, that the will of E. was an ineffectual appointment of the one-third so far as it was inconsistent with the trusts of the settlement, and therefore the appointment of the two legacies to strangers was void; but that the appointment of the residue to the child of E. was valid.

The donee of a power, although to be executed by will only, may bind himself not to execute it, or not to execute it except under restrictions.—In re Chambers, 11 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

6. Two sums were charged on real estate, to be divided among the younger children of A.; one sum in such proportions, &c., the other in such shares, &c., manner and form, as he should appoint. A.'s will recited the powers, and directed his executors to raise the two sums, and apply them, together with the rest of his personal estate, in discharging legacies bequeathed to his younger children.

Semble—A good execution of the powers.—Van Reitzenstein v. Magan, 12 I. E. R. 415. (R.)

1. A power of appointment under a will enabled R. to "charge and incumber the lands, &c., for his younger children, lawfully begotten, with a sum not exceeding £2000." R. was tenant for life, and in embarrassed circumstances, and his creditors were in possession of the rents. In pursuance of the power, R. charged £2000 for his two daughters, share and share alike, with interest from the date of the deed until payment. Bill filed after the death of R., by the survivor of the daughters, to raise her share and that of her sister to whom she was personal representative. Held, that R. being dead, and it appearing that there was no other issue, the power was legally exercised, and the ptf. entitled to a decree, with arrears of interest for six years before the filing of the bill.—Hinds v. H., 2 I. Jur. 105. (C.)

2. By marriage settlement of 1809, lands were limited to M. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, and a portion was provided for younger children, subject to appointment. In 1834, M., and G. his eldest son, joined in a recovery of part of the lands, which were then charged with a large sum; and limited them to M. for life, remainder to G. for life, and to his first and other sons in tail, remainder to S., the second son. In 1837 M. appointed part of the sum provided for younger children, by the deed of 1809, to his daughter L., and the remainder to S. In 1843 G. died, and S. thereby became entitled to the estate under the deed of 1834. Held, that he did not thereby lose his right to the portion provided by the settlement of 1809, and appointed by the deed of 1837.—Tennison v. Moore, 2 I. Jur. 195. (C.)—[Affg. s. c., 13 I. E. R. 424. (R.)—Followed: In re Norcott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 315. (L.E.C.)]

3. A deed of appointment is not invalid because executed for the purpose of making title; but is invalid if a pecuniary benefit results directly from its execution to the donee of the power.—Weir v. Chamley, 4 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

4. £8000 were charged on K. by a marriage settlement, as portions for children, to be divided between them in such proportions, and to vest in and be paid to such children respectively, at and upon such age, days, or times, and to be subject to such charges, provisions, and limitations (such charges or limitations being for the benefit of some or one of them), and in such manner as W., the younger, by any deed or deeds, instrument or instruments in writing, or by his last will, should direct or appoint; in default of appointment to be equally divided among such children, share and share alike, the shares of sons to be paid at twenty-one, and the shares of daughters at twenty-one or marriage. W., by will, bequeathed £2000 to his wife, and the interest of the remainder of the money of which he might die possessed, for her own use and for the maintenance and education of his two daughters; and charged K., as he was entitled to do by his marriage settlement, with

5. A power to appoint to and amongst children, in such shares and proportions, or to appoint a sum "to be divided to and amongst children in such shares," &c., as the donee of the power shall appoint, does not authorise the exclusion of any of the children.

The statute as to illusory appointments (1 W. 4, c. 46) validated in Equity an appointment of a nominal or illusory share, which was legally valid; but did not validate in Equity an appointment which, because some of the objects of the power were excluded, was invalid, both at Law and in Equity.

When a power of appointment does not warrant the exclusion of any of its objects, an appointment to some of them, and if they die under age, and without issue, to the others, is invalid.

A fund was, by a marriage settlement, directed to be divided among children, as the husband or wife, or the survivor of them, should, by any deed or writing, or by his or her will appoint. The wife made an appointment by will, which the husband wrote and proved. Held, that the will was inoperative, either as a joint appointment, or an appointment by the survivor.—Minchin v. M., 3 I. C. R. 167. (R.)

6. A father, having a power of appointment over property, consisting of money and land, in favour of his two children, A. and B., by deed-poll, reciting that £1000 had been paid to A., as a marriage portion, out of the trust fund, and that it was intended as her share of the trust fund, and a satisfaction of her claim thereon, appointed and declared that the £1000 should be the full share of A.; and appointed the remainder of the property to B. By a deed, executed five days afterwards, reciting a mortgage by the father, of property not the subject of the power, to secure a portion of the trust fund lent to him; and that the father was indebted in another sum of £200, and that he had agreed to convey his equity of redemption, in consideration of B., the son, securing an annuity to his mother, and charging the equity of redemption with the debt of £200; the father conveyed the equity of redemption to B., and B. charged it, and the trust property which had been appointed to him, with an annuity for his mother, and with the debt of £200. Held, in the absence of evidence of the value of the equity of redemption, that the appointment could not be impeached by A., as against a purchaser without notice from B.—Mills v. Spear, 3 I. C. R. 304. (C.)

1. A marriage settlement recited an intention to secure a jointure for the wife. The property (which was the husband's) was vested in trustees to secure it, subject thereto, upon such uses, and for such persons as the husband should appoint by deed or will; in default thereof, for the children of the marriage, share and share alike. Held, that the power was a general one, and not restricted to children of the marriage, by the subsequent limitation in their favour.

The settlor, by will, referred to the settlement; confirmed the jointure; and bequeathed the lands nominatim, and all his other property to trustees for the benefit (in the events that happened) of his only daughter (who afterwards died under age, &c.), with remainders over; but did not refer to the power. Held, that the power was well executed by the will in favour of the first remainderman.—Lanauze v. Malone, 3 I. C. R. 354. (C.)

2. Very informal documents held, in favour of a child, to amount to the exercise of a power of appointment.—Blake v. French, 5 I. C. R. 246; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 60. (C.)

3. By indenture executed upon his marriage, A. covenanted to convey lands to uses in strict settlement. The indenture provided that, if there should be one or more child or children of the marriage, besides an eldest or only son, such child or children should have the sum of £2000, to be payable as A. should appoint; in default of appointment, to be equally divided among such younger child or children, on their respectively attaining age, or marrying. A. afterwards conveyed the lands to re-lessees, to hold to the uses and upon the trusts declared by the articles. There was issue an eldest son and several younger children. All the younger children, save one, died, without having attained a vested interest in the fund. Held, that the younger child, who attained twenty-one, was entitled to have the entire sum of £2000 raised for her benefit.—In re Martin's Trusts, 6 I. C. R. 211. (C.A.)

4. M. bequeathed £4000, upon trust for his wife, for life; after her decease, amongst such of his children as should be then living, or the issue of such of them as might be then dead, in such shares and proportions as his wife should appoint; in default of appointment, amongst such of his children, except F. and B. (who should not be entitled to any share thereof), as should be then living, and amongst the issue of such of them as should be then dead. Held, that an appointment excluding any of the children could not be made under the above power.

That F. was an object of the power.—Woodlock v. Mahony, 6 I. C. R. 236; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (C.)

5. A., by marriage settlement, in Nov. 1823, conveyed lands to trustees for a term, upon trust, to raise £20,000, of the late currency, to be paid to and divided amongst the children of the marriage, in such shares, manner, and form, at such ages, days, and times, and subject to such restrictions, as A. should by deed or will appoint. There were eight children, some of whom were born after 1834. On the 7th of Sept. (April in the judgment) 1848, A., by will, after referring to his power, appointed that the interest of the £20,000 should be paid to his wife, until his children severally attained age, to be applied to their maintenance in such proportions as she should judge right; provided that his eldest son, S., should, on his attaining the age of twenty-three, be paid an annual sum of £45; and each of the remaining children, on attaining such age, the annual sum of £30, out of the interest of the said £20,000; and that his children, on respectively attaining the age of twenty-three years, or marrying under that age, with consent, should be paid the following sums out of the said charge—viz., S., £600, and to each of the other children £2540; and if any of them died under the age of thirty-three years, or married without consent, that the share of the child so dying or marrying, should, together with the residue of the sum, be distributed equally amongst the younger children, who should attain the age of thirty-three years, or marry with consent, subject to the payment of the annual sums before mentioned, which he intended to be paid to each of them until he or they received their portion of the charge. Held, a valid appointment of the shares in which the children were to take.—Grogan v. Dopping, 6 I. C. R. 265; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 171. (C.)

6. A testator, having a power of appointment among his children, over a fund, and also having other property, by will, after making bequests, directed that if his property exceeded £4000, the excess should be divided between his remaining children; and should either of them be dead, leaving a family, then his or her portion was to be given to her children. Held, that the will was not an execution of the power.—In re Dennis's Trusts, 6 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

7. By the marriage settlement of L. a fund was vested, upon trust, after the decease of L. and his intended wife, for their children, as L. should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. There was a hotch-pot clause, but no advancement clause in the settlement.

The fund produced £4700, and was, with £300 belonging to L., invested on mortgage. There were five children. In 1844, on the marriage of A., one of these children, L. settled £1000 of his own upon A., her husband, and issue. In 1845, L. made his will, and thereby appointed and bequeathed the £5000, invested upon mortgage, as to £1000 to J., another of his daughters, and as to the residue among his remaining children, except A. By the will he also bequeathed £1200 to the trustees of A.'s settlement, for her benefit. In 1848, L., on the marriage of J., gave £1000 of his own, and secured £1200, upon trusts, for J., her husband, and issue. By a subsequent codicil, L. revoked the appointments and bequests made to J. by his will, in consequence of what he had paid and secured on her marriage. Held, that the sum appointed to J., and revoked by the codicil, was to go as in default of appointment.

That A. and J. were not excluded from sharing in the said sum.

That L. could not be taken to be a purchaser of the shares of A. and J. in the unappointed part of the settled fund.—[Folkes v. Western (9 Ves. 456) approved of.]—Noblett v. Litchfield, 7 I. C. R. 575; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 158. (C.)

1. R., having power to appoint settled lands among his children, by will, in 1794, which was not decided to be a due execution of his power, devised the settled and unsettled lands to his eldest son, and provided for his daughters charges of £500 each. H., one of the daughters, married in 1806, having then lately attained age. No evidence of her having been aware of the will of R., before her marriage, was given, but a receipt in 1807 for a half-year's interest, signed by her husband, and a copy of the will, in his handwriting, were produced. Held, on a bill filed in 1833, that the Court might infer that, at the time of her marriage, H. knew of the will and acquiesced in its provisions.—Hall v. Raymond, 8 I. C. R. 83; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 80. (C.)

2. By marriage articles, it was agreed that the interest of the amount of a policy of assurance, effected on the husband's life, should be applied, first, in payment of an annuity to the wife, and that the remainder of the interest should be paid among the issue of the marriage, in such shares as the husband and wife, or the survivor of them, should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, share and share alike; and that the principal, after the death of the wife, should remain to the use of their issue, in such manner, and in such shares and proportions amongst them as the husband and wife, or the survivor of them, should by deed or will appoint; for want of such appointment, share and share alike. The articles contained a covenant to execute all acts necessary to carry them into execution. The husband survived the wife; but by a codicil to his will in 1854, and in her life, he willed and devised that whatever property he should die possessed of, or be entitled to, either freehold or otherwise, after the payment of his just debts and funeral expenses, should be equally divided amongst his sons and daughters which he then had, or might have, by his said marriage; and that, on the death of either of his sons or daughters by that marriage, before they attained age, the share or shares of him or her should be equally divided amongst the survivors; and he declared it to be his will and desire that, in the event of his being entitled to any property not named in his will, which contained an exclusive, and therefore invalid appointment of the principal of the policy, his wife should be his residuary legatee. Held, that the will and codicil did not amount to a valid execution of the power.

That if a settlement had been executed, it should have contained a clause that, in the event of any of the children dying under age and unmarried, the share of the child so dying should go to the survivors.—Cronin v. Roche, 8 I. C. R. 108. (R.)

3. By settlement, executed on the marriage of B. in 1811, the S. estate was conveyed to trustees to the use of A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail; subject to a term, the trusts of which were, that in case there should be an eldest or only son, and one or more younger children of the marriage, to raise £2000 for the portion or portions of all and every such younger child or children; the whole to be paid to such child, and, if two or more, to be divided as B. should by deed or will appoint, &c.; for default of appointment, to be equally divided. Provided that, if any of the said younger children died before his portion became payable, or that any younger son should become an eldest son before he attained age, the portion or portions of such of them so dying, or becoming an eldest or only son, should go to and be equally divided among the survivors or survivor, or others or other of them.

By the same settlement £2000 were charged on the X. estate (which was not otherwise the subject of that settlement), upon trust, after the decease of B., for the same purposes as were thereinbefore declared concerning the £2000 charged on the S. estate. There were six children, the two eldest of whom were C. and D. In 1836, C. being of age, the S. estate was disentailed, and resettled by a deed under which C. and D. took life estates; remainder to their issue male. In 1839, on the marriage of D., B. by deed appointed the £2000 charged on the S. estate, and £500 of the £2000 charge on the X. estate, upon trusts in favour of D. and his children, provided that if, under the limitations contained in the settlements of 1811 and 1836, or either of them, D. should succeed to an estate tail in possession in the S. estate, the appointment should not take effect, and the £2500 should belong to the remaining younger children of B., as he should appoint; in default of appointment, equally. In 1841, the S. estate was resettled, in pursuance of a power of revocation in the deed of 1836, to B., for life, remainder to C. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail; remainder to D. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail.

In 1853, C. died without issue, whereupon D. became entitled to the estates under the last mentioned deed. Held, that supposing the appointment of 1839 to have been avoided by D. having become an eldest son, his share in the two sums of £2000, in default of appointment, had not been divested, as he had not become an eldest son before he attained age.

That the X. estate, not being subject to the settlement of 1811, the appointment of £500 of the £2000 charged on that estate was not defeated by D. having as eldest son succeeded to the S. estate.

That D. having as eldest son succeeded to an estate for life, under the deed of 1841, and not to an estate tail under the deeds of 1811 and 1836, the appointment of 1839 was not defeated.

Semble—The Court would not, on a petition under the Trustee Relief Act to draw out the £2000 charged on the X. estate, and in the absence of minors claiming under the appointment of 1839, determine the right to the fund adversely to them. — Ex parte Smyth, 12 L. C. R. 487. (R.)

1. A. bequeathed all his estate, on trust to pay the rents and dividends to his wife for life; and directed that, after her death, his real and personal estate, and all moneys which might have been got in, or might be still due, should go to and be paid in such manner as he should by a codicil or codicils appoint; in default of such appointment, to his wife, as his residuary devisee and legatee; her heirs, executors, &c. By a codicil he left an annuity of £600 to W. for life; and directed that if W. married, and had children, the £600 per annum should go to them in whatsoever manner W. might think proper; but, should he not leave any issue, the £600 per annum should go to E. and his family, to be so divided as E. might think proper. Held, that W. had power to dispose of it among his children as a perpetual annuity, and that there was a trust for them in default of appointment. — Warren v. Wright, 12 L. C. R. 401. (R.)

2. In 1772, L., upon his marriage, settled renewable freeholds to the use of himself for life, remainder upon trust for the eldest son of the marriage, till he should attain twenty-one; on his attaining twenty-one, upon trust to convey to him absolutely. There was a power in the deed for the settlor to revoke the limitation to the eldest son; and to relimit to the sons of the marriage in such priority as he should think fit. P., the eldest son, attained his age before 1802. In 1801, by deed reciting the settlement. L. and P. conveyed the lands comprised in that settlement to trustees, and their heirs, to the use of L., for life, remainder, as to part, to the use of such younger son or sons of L. as he should by deed or will appoint. Held, that L. could not, under this power, appoint to his younger sons any estates greater than for life. — Lamphier v. Draper, 14 L. C. R. 33. (C.)

3. By marriage settlement lands were limited (amongst other uses) to the trustees for 500 years; and, subject to the term, to the use of A. for life, remainder to the use that A.'s intended wife should receive a jointure; subject to those limitations, to the use of the first son of the marriage in tail male; remainders over. The trusts of the term were, first, to secure the payment of the jointure; and upon trust, after the decease of A., or in his life, with his consent in writing, to raise

£10,000, late Irish currency, as portions for younger children, to be divided between them as A. should appoint. There were issue, an eldest son and two younger children. A., by two deeds poll, appointed the whole of the £10,000, to his two younger children, in certain proportions, and directed that it should be raised, with interest, immediately.

Before the registration of the deeds poll, A. had, in conjunction with his eldest son, executed a mortgage of the lands in fee, and had also confessed judgments to a large amount prior to the mortgage, some of which A. also charged by mortgage on his life estate. The aggregate amount of the judgments and the mortgage in fee exceeded the value of A.'s life estate. One of A.'s younger children presented a petition for the sale of A.'s life estate of her appointed share of the £10,000; but the petition was dismissed at the instance of the creditors on A.'s life estate. A petition was then presented by the same younger child to raise her portion by a sale of the reversion expectant on the determination of A.'s life estate; but on cause shown against the conditional order for payment by the remainderman, and various mortgagees and judgment creditors—Held, that the petition must be dismissed with costs; that the power given to A. to raise the £10,000 in his life, was a power appendant to his life estate, and was suspended by his acts; that it was inequitable for him to exercise it, as the effect would be to throw exclusively on the estate of the remainderman the payment of the interest which accrued during A.'s life, and for the payment of which his life estate was the primary fund.

That this equity does not apply to judgment creditors; for, as they do not acquire any security by contract, there is nothing inequitable in diminishing their security by a power of charging. When cause, shown by different parties who represent but one estate, is allowed, the costs awarded, are to be paid to the person first showing cause. — In re Greene's Estate, 14 L. C. R. 325; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 348. (L.E.C.)

4. Appointees were parties to indentures of appointment made under a power to appoint to children, with a limitation to those children, equally, in default of appointment. One appointee accepted and took the appointed sum as and for, and in lieu and discharge of her share or portion. The other appointee accepted the appointed sum as and for her share and proportion of the property, the subject of the power, and in lieu, bar, and full satisfaction of all claim which she might have as one of the children, or otherwise. Held, that each appointee was precluded thereby from receiving any share in default of appointment. — Chune v. Apjohn, 17 L. C. R. 26. (R.)

VII. POWERS OF SALE.

1. In general.
2. Implied.

VII. 1. Powers of Sale generally.

1. A., being tenant for life of lands, remainder to his daughter, B., in fee, articles were entered into on the marriage of B., a minor, with C., an adult, to settle her remainder. It was provided that the trustees should be empowered to sell, with the consent of B. and C., "the said lands of the said B.," the produce to be laid out in lands to be settled to the uses thereupon declared. In the settlement carrying those articles into execution A. joined. The lands were limited to A. for life, remainder to the uses declared by the articles. The trustees were empowered to sell, with the consent of B. and C., "the said B.'s estate and interest in the said lands." Held, that this power authorised a sale of the reversion in A.'s lifetime.—Blackwood v. Burrows, 4 Dr. & War. 441; 2 Con. & L. 459. (C.)

2. The trustees of a marriage settlement were empowered to raise, upon the request of the tenant for life, such sum of money as might be necessary to purchase a mansion-house, with a demesne attached, as a residence for him; and it was declared that the mansion-house or lands, when purchased, should be conveyed to the trustees, upon and for the same trusts, &c., and with, under, and subject to the same powers, &c., as were in and by "these presents declared and contained, of and concerning the said hereditaments and premises herein before granted." The settlement contained a power to the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, to sell by public auction or private contract, or to exchange the settled lands for such price in money, or equivalent in other lands, as to them should seem reasonable; or to re-sell the lands which might be so purchased, and to give discharges for the purchase-money; and, in order to effectuate such sales, to revoke the uses and trusts of the settlement, and to appoint to any uses and trusts which should be thought necessary or expedient for effectuating such sale or exchange. The trustees were authorised to invest the purchase-money in lands, which were to be settled to the same uses, and upon and for the same trusts, &c., and subject to such and the same powers, &c., as were declared as to the settled lands. In 1857, the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, purchased for £1200 a mansion-house, which was conveyed to them subject to such and the same trusts, &c., and subject to the same powers, &c., of and concerning the lands of L. In 1858, the trustees, at the request of the tenant for life, sold the mansion-house by auction to the respondent. Held, in a suit for specific performance of the contract for sale, that the trustees could make a good title to the mansion-house; and that the purchasers were bound to accept it.

Deeds are to be read in their grammatical and ordinary sense; and the Court should not transpose the words of a clause, unless it is absurd, or repugnant to or inconsistent with the rest of the deed.—Clements v. Henry, 10 I. C. R. 79. (R.)

3. V. devised all his estate to his brother, "by discharging all his bequests and just debts, at the direction of his executors;" if not, the estate was to be sold by auction, at the discretion of his executors, whom he wished to discharge his just debts. Held, that the executors took no interest in V.'s real estate, but had merely a power to sell.

There is not any Irish statute corresponding with the 21 Hen. 8, c. 4, (Eng.). Therefore, if two executors have a power to sell real estates, and one of them renounces, the power cannot be exercised by the other.

Quere—Whether a power to sell real estate is sufficient to entitle a party to sue for a specific performance of an agreement for a partition of it?—Thompson v. Todd, 15 I. C. R. 337. (R.)

4. A will directed that no part of the testator's property, except the interest in a house, should be sold or disposed of for ten years only, if thought advisable by the executors; and bequeathed his property to testator's son, a minor. The executor sold the interest in the house to the respondent, who had notice of some restriction on the executor's power to sell. There were not any debts. In a suit to impeach the sale—Held, that the respondent was bound to prove that the sale, being a breach of trust, was at the full value.—McMullen v. O'Reilly, 15 I. C. R. 251. (R.)

VII. 2. Implied Powers of Sale.

VIII. POWERS OF REVOCATION.

5. A. being seized for life of estates X. and Y., remainder to his son B. in tail, they joined in suffering a recovery, and conveyed the estates to trustees; as to estate X., in fee, on trust to sell and pay debts; and as to estate Y., on trust to secure an annuity to B.; and subject thereto to the use of A. for life, remainder to secure a jointure, remainder for a term to secure portions, remainder to the use of B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. The deed contained a proviso that A. should have power to make leases of the premises or any part thereof, and that A. and B. should have power to revoke all or any of the use or uses, estate or estates therein limited, of or concerning the lands or premises, or any part thereof, except the jointure and term. No creditors were parties to the deed. Held, that the power of revocation was, by construction, confined to estate Y.

That, the creditors not being parties, A. and B. could revoke the uses of estate X. without the aid of any power of revocation.

Semble—The communication of the existence of such a trust to the creditors, if acted on, would prevent its revocation by the debtors. Browne v. Cavendish, 7 I. E. R. 369; 1 Jon. & L. 606. (C.)

6. In 1829 estates were settled, subject to previous charges, with a joint power of revocation and new appointment, to A. and B. In 1833

A. and B. exercised the power, and appointed the estates for a term, in trust to raise £20,000, and subject thereto as A. should by deed appoint; in default of appointment, to A. for life, with remainder to A. in fee; provided, that if the £20,000, secured by the term, should not be raised within twelve months, or A. should die before it was raised, the provisions of the deed should cease and be void; and a fine, which was levied in pursuance of it, should enure to confirm rentcharges to B., and the "several other estates and interests" subsisting before the execution of the deed. The £20,000 was never raised. Held that, along with the previous uses, the power of revocation and new appointment to A. and B. was restored.—Lord Langford v. Little, 8 I. E. R. 546; 2 Jon. & L. 613. (C.)

1. W., having made a settlement with a general power of revocation, made a will by which, after reciting that he had been induced to execute the settlement contrary to his intentions, and that it was fraudulently and wickedly obtained from him, he directed the trustees and executors of the will to use their best exertions and take all steps necessary to have the deed set aside and cancelled; and then disposed of the property included in the deed. Held, a good revocation under the power.

In a suit between claimants under a will and an inconsistent deed executed by the testator, the costs are not to be paid out of the assets, on the ground that the difficulty was created by the testator, but are subject to the ordinary rule in adverse suits.

Costs given against a trustee under a trust deed which was held revoked, where he had also a beneficial interest and insisted on its validity.—Irwin v. Rogers, 12 I. E. R. 159. (C.)

2. By ante-nuptial articles, husband and wife covenanted that £2000 should be assigned to A. and B., in trust, for the younger children of the marriage, as the husband and wife should jointly, or as the survivor should by deed appoint; in default of appointment, in trust for all the younger children, sons at twenty-one, and daughters at twenty-one or marriage; if no child should attain a vested interest, in trust, for the survivor of the husband and wife; and that the settlement to be made in pursuance of the articles should contain a power to the husband and wife to revoke all or any of the trusts, powers, &c., in such settlement contained, of all or any part of the trust fund; and by the same or any other deed or deeds to declare other trusts of the trust premises, the trusts of which should be so revoked. No settlement was executed. The husband and wife, by deed, reciting the power of revocation in the articles, revoked the trusts as to the £2000, and declared that it should be held in trust, to be forthwith assigned to C. and D., whose receipt should be a good discharge. Held, that the trusts of the marriage articles were revoked, and that the £2000 became the property of the wife.

A. had power to charge real estates with any sum not exceeding £20,000, for portions for his younger children; that, or such less sum as should be charged, to be vested in, and to be paid to, or shared between and amongst, all and any such children or child, or any one or more of them, exclusively of the others or other of them, at such age or time, or respective ages or times, or, if more than one, in such proportions, and upon such terms and conditions, and in such manner as he should think proper, and should by deed or will appoint. A., by will, reciting the power, charged £20,000 on the estate, and bequeathed it, share and share alike, to his four younger children. Held, that the shares of the younger children became vested on the death of A., and bore interest from that time.

A. directed that the rents, issues, and profits of property should be invested in the funds and kept there until his second son should attain age; when the sums so invested should be divided between his younger children. Held, that the shares in the accumulated fund vested at A.'s death.

Semble—In a special case under the Court of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, parties having conflicting rights should not be made co-petitioners.—In re Charleville, 13 I. C. R. 6. (R.)

IX. LIMITATIONS IN DEFAULT OF APPOINTMENT.

3. A., having by will charged £6000 on his real estate, and directed it to be paid among such of his younger children, in such proportions as his wife should appoint; and the wife having by her will directed "three of the £6000, I wish to have given to the two elder girls." Held, a good appointment of the £3000, and that the appointees took as tenants in common and not as joint-tenants.

As to the remaining £3000—Held, that it was to be divided amongst all the objects of the power equally, including those to whom an appointment of the other £3000 had been made; and that they were not bound to bring their shares into hotch-pot, there being no express clause, in the instrument creating the power, so requiring. That direction should be always inserted to prevent such accumulation.

There is nothing better established than that any portion of a fund, the subject of a power, which is not appointed effectually, goes as it would have done in default of any appointment.—Alloway v. A., 4 Dr. & War. 380; 2 Con. & L. 517. (C.)

X. POWER OF ATTORNEY.

4. A power of attorney, in the proper form, was executed at Brussels, where there was no officer of the Court authorised to take affidavits. It was attested by two witnesses, by one of whom an affidavit verifying the execution of it was sworn before the Secretary of the British Legation at Brussels. The affidavit, when produced, appeared to be under the seal of the Legation. The signature of the party executing the power was verified by the affidavit verifying the signature of the Sec. of Legation; but an attorney stated in open

Court, that he knew the handwriting of the Sec. of Legation, and that the signature affixed to the verifying affidavit was his. The Court, deeming it sufficiently verified, acted upon it.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 689. (E.E.)

1. The Messrs. M. got a general power of attorney from the administrator, authorising them to act for him. They stood in his place, and, therefore, were answerable for any misapplication of the assets. No doubt, any man who gets assets into his hands may commit a devastavit by a wrongful appropriation of them to his own purposes, but I am not speaking of a wrongful act in that sense; but of a misapplication of them without any dishonest intention; and I say, that the Messrs. M., situated as they were, could not make themselves parties to any devastavit for which they would not be personally responsible.—Langford v. Mahony, 5 I. E. R. 580. (C.)

2. A power of attorney to receive rents, accompanied by an agreement that it should be irrevocable until the principal and interest of a loan, and the premiums on a policy of assurance effected to secure it, should be paid by instalments as specified in the agreement, is irrevocable, and amounts to an equitable mortgage. The mortgagee is entitled to priority over a subsequent creditor by judgment affecting the legal estate, in possession by a receiver.

Whitworth v. Gaugain (8 Hare 421) approved of.—Abbott v. Stratton, 9 I. E. R. 233; 8 Jon. & L. 603. (C.)

3. A., entitled to a life estate in lands, with remainder to his wife, B., for life; and C., entitled to an annuity, and D. having a judgment against A., and a policy of insurance, A., B., C., and D., in consideration of £350 advanced to A., conveyed to E. the lands, annuity, and policy of insurance, respectively, subject to redemption. It was provided that A. should become tenant to E. of these lands, at a yearly rent, in case of non-payment of the interest and premiums on the policy; and A., B., and C. appointed F. irrevocably their attorney, to receive the rents of the mortgaged premises and the annuity, to pay (after receiver's fees and outgoings) the interest and premiums on the policy; and for the purpose, out of the annuity, of investing a sum to form a fund to pay the principal, and to pay the balance of the annuity to C., and of the rents to A. The sums secured by the judgment and policy of assurance when they should be paid, after deducting the £350 and interest, were to be applied by E., to pay D. any demand due to her by A., and the balance to A. It was provided that F. should not act as receiver until the interest or premium on the policy should be in arrear. F. entered into receipt of the rents (as he alleged) under a subsequent power of attorney from A., and of the annuity, no portion of which he invested to form the fund to pay the annuity. He applied the rents for the purposes of A., and in paying the interest of a mortgage, due to himself (F.), by the directions of A., and the annuity in payment of the interest on the £350 with the consent of C., who had, before such consent, taken the benefit of the Insolvent Act. Held, that F., as agent of C., as to the annuity, was liable to account with her assignee. That A. could not revoke the power of attorney in the mortgage deed. That F. was agent or trustee as to the lands, and therefore was not bound to account to her assignee for bygone rents.

Semble—B., being only a surety, her life estate is not liable, after the death of A., to repay the sums paid out of the annuity of C., for interest and premiums on the policy.

Quere—Whether F. should have credit for payments out of the annuity, contrary to the directions of the mortgage deed, made with the consent of C., after her discharge as an insolvent?—M'Dowell v. Reede, 14 I. C. R. 190 (R.)

[Held, that F. was not bound to pay the assignees the sums received by him after the insolvency.—M'Dowell v. Reede, 16 I. C. R. 480. (R.)]

XI. MERGER, EXTINGUISHMENT, AND SUSPENSION OF POWERS.

4. The Lagan Navigation Act created a joint-stock company, and enacted that it should be lawful for every subscriber and person advancing money under the Act, and through whose estate the navigation passed, to charge his real estate, for the use of his younger children, with the payment of such sums or other interest in the joint-stock as he should assign or bequeath to his heir, it being deemed fit that the proprietors of estates through which the navigation passed should have an interest in it. A., through whose estate the navigation passed, being tenant for life under a deed of 1761, with powers of jointuring and leasing, with remainder in tail to his eldest son, B., made advances, and took shares prior to 1791. In that year A. and B. suffered recoveries, and limited the estates anew, subject to a joint power of appointment, under which, in 1792, they appointed the estates, subject to all powers vested in A., to X., in order that he might join in a re-settlement. By a re-settlement in 1792, reciting A.'s powers under the deed of 1761, and an agreement to re-settle the estate, subject to the powers thereafter mentioned, they were conveyed to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, subject to a term and jointure under the deed of 1761, but with no saving of any other powers; and giving a new power to jointure, and new and different leasing powers to A., and other usual powers to him and B. A. made further advances, and by his will devised his shares in the navigation to B., and charged their amount on the estate for his younger son. Held, that the power to charge, as given by the Act, would not be destroyed by the recovery alone, unless the parties intended it.

That the re-settlement in 1792 amounted to a contract not to exercise the power as to past advances, and the power to charge could be exercised by A. only as to subsequent advances.

That the direction to give the shares to his heir was complied with, and the power well exercised by giving them to B., though he was only tenant for life in remainder.

The younger son, in whose favour the charge was made, being also A.'s executor, got possession of debentures representing A.'s shares, and having lost them, joined in an application for new shares, which were granted, on the face of them, in lieu of the old ones, and delivered them over to B., the tenant for life. Held, that there being no fraud, this transaction did not affect his right to the charge under A.'s will.—Stewart v. Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 621; 2 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

1. The donee of a power, though to be executed by will only, may bind himself not to execute it at all, or not to execute it except under certain restrictions.—In re Chambers, 11 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

2. A sum was bequeathed to trustees for the use of E. for life; at her decease two-thirds of this sum to go to the use of any child or children of E., who was given the power of disposing of the remaining third part by will; and that in default of such disposition, this third part should go in equal shares between her children. By settlement upon her marriage E. purported, for the considerations therein, to assign the entire sum in trust for herself and husband, for life; after their decease to pay it over to their issue in such proportions as she or her husband should by deed or will appoint; in default of appointment, in equal shares, with covenant for further assurance. There was issue. E., by will, by virtue of the power given her by the will of the testator, devised one-third of the original sum, in trust to pay a portion in legacies to strangers; and, as to the residue, for the use of one of her children. Held, that the appointment by her marriage settlement was no extinguishment of her power.—Stuart v. Kennedy, 3 I. Jur. 305. (C.)

XII. GENERAL CONSTRUCTION OF POWERS.

3. The donee of a testamentary power to charge a sum on B.'s estate "as and for a provision" for the donee's "lawful issue" exercised the power by a deed which merely charged the estate with the specified sum "as a provision for my lawful issue." He had one child born before the testator's death; others born before the deed's date; others born afterwards. Held, that all the children were entitled to shares, which vested seriatim on their successively attaining 21: the share of each being proportioned to the number of children in esse when it vested and then unprovided for: the dates at which the children respectively attained 21 being deemed new successive periods of distribution, though this decision produced considerable inequality in the shares, and would wholly disappoint any child born after all the others had attained 21. The grandchildren were considered as having been provided for by their parents' shares.—Norman v. N., Beat. Rep. 430. (C.)

4. B., on his second marriage, settled, by deed, lands on trust for himself for life: then to secure a jointure, subject thereto to the use of B.'s first and every other son by his second wife. The settlement empowered B., if he had more than one son, to prefer such son by deed or will to the whole or part of the lands, subject to the jointure, and subject to such other sums, not exceeding £4000, as B. might think fit to charge. B. charged the lands with £4000 in favour of the children of his former marriage; and afterwards devised estate whereof he was seized to the deft., the only surviving son of his second marriage, reciting the above power, and its exercise, and declaring that "inasmuch as he had by the deed of the 3rd Sept. 1819, fully provided for the sons of his first marriage," B. "left the residue of his real and personal estate to his son by his second marriage." One of the children of the first marriage having assigned his share, his assignee filed a bill. Held, that the power could be exercised only in favour of the children of the second marriage.

That the power was not an absolute one, but depended on the event of there being more sons than one of the second marriage, and any one of such sons being preferred to the settled lands according to the terms of the primary power.—Cooke v. Briscoe, 1 Dr. & Wal. 596. (C.)

5. When a tenant for life had a general power of jointuring, without limit as to amount, and appointed by will a jointure of £300 per annum, payable half-yearly, and directed that the first payment should be made on the day of his death—Held, a good exercise of the power.

Quære—Whether it would have been so held, had not the jointress outlived the first gale-day?—Purcell v. P., 1 Con. & L. 371; 2 Dr. & War. 217. (C.)

6. A., being tenant for life of lands, remainder to B., his daughter, in fee, articles were entered into on the marriage of B., a minor, with C., an adult. To settle her reversion, it was provided, that the trustees should have a power, with the consent of B. and C., to sell "the said lands of the said B.," the produce to be laid out in lands to be settled to the uses thereupon declared. In the settlement carrying those articles into execution, A., the tenant for life, joined; and the lands were limited to A. for life, remainder to the uses declared by the articles, and a power was given to the trustees to sell, with the consent of B. and C., the "said B.'s estate and interest in the said lands." Held, that this power authorised a sale of the reversion in A.'s lifetime.—Blackwood v. Burrows, 2 Con. & L. 459; 4 I. E. R. 609. (C.)

7. A settlement contained a power to appoint new trustees if any of those first appointed became incapable or unfit to act. Held, that the bankruptcy of a trustee rendered him "unfit to act" within the meaning of the power.

The power directed the trust property to be vested in the new trustees jointly with the surviving or continuing trustee. The surviving trustee was a bankrupt. Held, that, nevertheless, a valid appointment and transfer of the estate to the new trustee might be made under the power.—In re Roche, 2 Dr. & War. 287; 1 Con. & L. 306. (C.)

1. In equity, a power to appoint an estate amongst a class will be executed by giving the whole of the estate to one of the class, and a part of the produce thereof, or money charged thereon, to the others.

In considering whether a will is a valid execution of a power, the testator's intention must always be considered, and effectuated as far as possible.

Semble—That the remainders after an estate, which is void because it is an excessive execution of a power, are not void; but are accelerated by the extinction of the intermediate void estate.—Crozier v. C., 5 I. E. R. 540; 3 Dr. & War. 373; 2 Con. & L. 294. (C.)

2. The authorities as to a power being merely a power of selection, do not apply to cases where the property to be appointed is personality.—Alloway v. A., 2 Con. & L. 509. (C.)

3. A power to appoint money (to be paid to the donor's younger children), in such shares and proportions as the donee should by will or deed appoint, authorises the donee to give portions of this sum to two or more of the objects of the power, as joint tenants thereof.

Such power would authorise the donee to create contingent remainders in the subject of the power, provided such were given to and amongst the objects of it.—Alloway v. A., 2 Con. & L. 518. (C.)

4. A., having a power to give a fund to all and every her child or children, and to the exclusion of any one or more of them, in such shares and at such times as she should appoint, by will, after reciting that her daughter had gone into a convent, bequeathed £1000, part of the fund, if her daughter should change her mind and return to her family and friends, in trust to pay her the interest for life, remainder to her children, if any; but in case of her either not leaving the convent or not leaving issue, then the £1000 to go to the testatrix's other children. The daughter continued in the convent. Held, that this was a gift on a contingency authorised by the power, and that the daughter was not entitled to the interest, or any part of it, as being unappointed, but that it went with the principal which should be invested, with liberty to the legatees in remainder to apply for it on her death.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 8 I. E. R. 178; 2 Jon. & L. 141. (C.)

5. The execution of a power to appoint a jointure and portions for children by deed, was supported in equity, though executed by will.

Marriage articles provided for the intended wife and children, and empowered the husband to appoint a jointure for any wife or wives whom he might marry, and in like manner to appoint portions for younger children.

Held, that that power was confined to a jointure for a second or subsequent wife, and portions for the children of a second or subsequent marriage.—Mills v. M., 8 I. E. R. 192. (C.)—[See s. c., 9 I. E. R. 299; 3 Jon. & L. 242].

6. Bequest of the use of plate, with power to dispose of such portion thereof as the legatee might think proper, preceded by an absolute gift of other chattels to the same person—Held, to give a life interest only in the plate, with a power of disposition over part of it.—Espinasse v. Luffingham, 9 I. E. R. 129; 3 Jon. & L. 186. (C.)

7. A power was given by will, to successive tenants for life, to limit a rentcharge "for any woman or women whom they may respectively marry," by way of jointure and in bar of dower, "to be in proportion to the marriage portion they shall respectively receive with their respective wife or wives; i. e., £100 jointure for every £1000 they shall so actually receive as a marriage portion with their respective wife or wives, if they shall so think fit," not to exceed £500; "such grant, limitation, or appointment" to be made either before or after marriage. Held, that the wife of a tenant for life, who afterwards came into possession, but who had been married previous to the will, was not an object of the power, there being no grounds from the rest of the will for giving a past meaning to the words of futurity. Semble—That money of the wife, settled to her separate use, with remainders to the husband and children of the marriage, was not "received" by the husband within the meaning of the power.—Dillon v. D., 11 I. E. R. 423. (C.)

8. The last previous lease of premises included in a renewal is not the only evidence receivable of what are usual clauses within the meaning of a power requiring the usual clauses to be inserted in renewals. The Court refused to set aside a renewal impeached for varying from the previous lease, when the objection was not made by the bill so as to lead the deft. to explain it.—Marquis of Donegal v. Greg, 13 I. E. R. 12. (C.)

9. A., having by will, in 1837, bequeathed legacies, proceeded as follows:—"To my son, I give, devise, and bequeath all my lands and tenements, rights and credits, subject to the legacies aforesaid and my debts; the remainder of my property to be disposed of by him to and amongst his children, in such shares and proportions as he shall think proper." The words in italics were inserted by interlineation. By the last clause in the will the interlineations, as well as the original text, were declared to be in the handwriting of the testator. In 1839 he added a codicil, by which he merely made a declaration with reference to one of the legacies. In 1845 the son died, in the life of A., and without having made any appointment amongst his children. A. having died—Held, that the will gave the son a power, coupled with a trust; and that accordingly his children were entitled as well to the real as to the personal estate of A. in equal shares.

Semle—The general personal estate of A. would have passed under the words "rights and credits" alone, even if the interlineations had not been made.

The effect of interlineations in a will considered.—Hutchinson v. H., 13 I. E. R. 332. (C.)

1. A., by will makes D., his eldest son, tenant for life of his real estates, with a power of jointuring if he marries with the consent of the executors and guardian appointed by the will; appoints A., B. and C. executors; and nominates C. guardian. A. and B. renounce; C. alone takes probate. D., while a minor, without any consent, married, without banns or license, E., who was under age. Some days after, he obtains C.'s consent to his marriage, and a marriage ceremony is regularly solemnized between D. and E. D. executes a post-nuptial settlement, in which, for value, he appoints a jointure to E. Held, that the consent of C. alone to the marriage gave rise to the power; and, that C.'s consent to a subsequent valid marriage was sufficient, although a marriage voidable under the 9 G. 2, c. 11, and 23 G. 2, c. 10 (fr.), had been previously celebrated between D. and E.—Dobbyn v. Adams 1 I. Jur. N. S. 400; 6 I. C. R. 170. (R.)—[On appeal—Held, that the power could not be exercised in favour of S.—7 I. C. R. 193; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 143. (C.)—[See Adams v. A., 8 I. C. R. 41. (C.)]

2. A settlement limited a fund in trust, after the death of the survivor of the husband and wife, for the benefit of the child or children, or other issue of the marriage then in being, as the husband and wife should jointly appoint by deed; and, in default of such appointment, as the survivor should by deed or will appoint; in default of any appointment, to pay the fund to such of the children of the marriage as should be living at the decease of their surviving parent, at the age of twenty-one, or marriage. Held, that those children only, who survived both parents, were objects of the power.—Cooney v. Holland, 7 I. C. R. 201. (R.)

may revive the suit by a mere bill of revivor.—Pakenham v. Casey, 8 I. E. R. 524. (E.E.)

1. If there be an irregularity in the reviving of a judgment, relief must be sought in the Court of Law, and not as a defence in a suit in Equity to raise the judgment.

A revivor against the heir and terre-tenants of one estate of the conuzor has no operation to keep the judgment alive against another estate of his originally bound by it.—Franks v. Mason, 9 I. E. R. 358. (C.)

2. When a sole petitioner dies after the petition has been filed, and notice thereof has been served, leave will be granted to file a petition in the nature of a petition of revivor referring to the original petition, and to be annexed thereto.—Long v. L., 6 I. Jur. 194. (R.)

3. A cause petition having abated by the death of a sole petitioner, after an order had been made for substitution of service thereof, an order was made giving the executor of the deceased petitioner liberty to file a petition of revivor, and to substitute service of notice thereof in the same manner as had been directed by the previous order for the substitution of service of the original petition.—Synge v. S., 7 I. Jur. 101. (R.)

4. A cause petition was filed by a minor, by her next friend. The minor married and made a settlement. The Court gave liberty to file a petition of revivor and supplement, to bring before the Court the husband of the minor, and the trustee of the settlement.—Bouves v. Watson, 7 I. Jur. 138. (R.)

5. In an administration suit the final decree ascertained the rights of the parties entitled to the assets, in five shares, subject to certain payments made to them; and directed the petitioner's costs to be paid by the respondents, the two executors; and that the respondents' costs should be paid in certain proportions out of the several shares. The assets had been paid into Court, except a small sum which the decree ordered one respondent to pay. After final decree, and before his costs were taxed, the sole petitioner died. Held, that the suit might be revived against both respondents.—Fortune v. Walsh, 16 I. C. R. 482. (R.)

6. A suit to revive a final decree to pay money cannot be sustained if not commenced within twenty years from the day on which the decree was made; no payment or acknowledgment having been made in the meantime.—Dunne v. Doyle, 10 I. C. R. 502; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.)

I. 2. b. Revivor for Costs.

7. Semble—A suit may be revived for untaxed costs when it has abated by the death of the party entitled to receive them, or of the party bound to pay, before taxation.—Barry Stawell, 3 I. E. R. 18; Flan. & K. 1. (R.)—[Affd.: 3 I. E. R. 146. (C.)]

8. Decree against debts, with costs to be paid by them. One debt., who was liable to part of the costs solely, and to part jointly with other debts., died, the decree having been then fully performed in all respects except as to the payment of the costs, which were untaxed. A bill of revivor having been filed against the personal representative of the deceased debt. for payment of the costs.—Held, upon plea, that the suit could not be revived for the untaxed costs alone.—Bowyer v. Beamish, 7 I. E. R. 7. (R.)—[Affirmed: 8 I. E. R. 63; 2 Jon. & L. 228. (C.)]

9. A bill was filed to set aside a f. f. grant, and a subsequent sale to the grantee of the reserved rent. The decree declared the grant void as against ptf., but that he was not entitled to impeach the sale of the rent. It was decreed that W. and other debts., and all proper parties, should join in conveying the lands to ptf., and that he and all proper parties should join in proper clauses and covenants therein, or by a separate deed, as the Master should approve, to secure the rent; and that W. and other debts. should pay ptf. the costs of setting aside the grant. Further directions were reserved. W. died. Ptf. filed a bill of revivor and supplement against his personal representative, who demurred. Held, that the Court would not assume that nothing remained to be done by debt. under the decree, since the final decree might direct an account of the rents, or that debt. should join in the conveyance; and, therefore, the case came within the exception to the rule against revivor for untaxed costs.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

10. A motion was refused, with costs, to three ptf.s. Before the costs were taxed, two of the ptf.s. became bankrupt. The costs were taxed, and a subpoena issued in the name of the three ptf.s. Held, that the solicitor, and not the bankrupts, was beneficially entitled to the costs, which therefore did not pass to the assignees; and that the subpoena was regular without a bill of revivor, or a supplemental bill, being filed.—Driscoll v. Blake, 2 I. C. R. 139. (R.)

I. 2. c. How and when Suits are Revived.

1. Under the Old Practice.

11. A suit, in which there has been a decree to account, may be revived at any time within twenty years after the last step taken in the original cause, if there has not been such a variation of rights as to work an injury.

A settlement, pendente lite, though after a decree to account, and an abatement of the suit, will not prevent the revivor.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

12. An insolvent's provisional assignee, having been made debt. in a suit, died. Held, that the new provisional assignee might be made debt. by bill of revivor merely.—M'Collum v. Crawford, 6 I. E. R. 217. (E.E.)

1. When an insolvent's provisional assignee, being deft. in a suit, dies, the new provisional assignee may be made a deft. by bill of revivor merely.—O'Brien v. Mahon, 7 I. E. R. 601; 2 Jon. & L. 201. (C.)

2. In suit by Dean and Chapter, upon abatement by death of Dean, the suit may be revived by his successor by mere bill of revivor.—Pakenham v. Casey, 8 I. E. R. 524. (E.E.)

3. When a deft. dies after injunction obtained against him, upon revival of the suit against his personal representative, the injunction stands continued without further order.—Kennedy v. Lloyd, 8 I. E. R. 581. (R.)

4. A cause abated by the ptf.'s death in 1829. A bill of revivor was filed in 1836, and an order to revive made in 1841. Held, that it could not be objected that the cause was not effectually continued.

Semble—There is no rule requiring a bill of revivor for any purpose to be filed within six years of the abatement.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

5. When a suit abated by the death of the ptf., a minor suing by his next friend, the order to revive, or that the bill be dismissed, will be made without costs.—Ross v. R., 2 I. Jur. 251. (R.)

2. Under the Court of Chancery Regulation (Ir.) Act 1850.

6. A cause may be revived by suggestion under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act, although the cause is out of Court, because no proceeding in it has been taken for more than a year.—M'Conkey v. Gwynn, 2 I. C. R. 142. (R.)

7. No order to revive is necessary after service of notice of a suggestion under the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, if the parties served are not under disability.—Wildridge v. M'Kane, 2 I. C. R. 333. (R.)

8. Practice on reviving a cause petition matter abated by the death of a sole petitioner.—Nason v. Peard, 2 I. C. R. 553; 5 I. Jur. 347. (R.)

9. When a sole plaintiff dies, and his administrator seeks to revive the suit, he should file a cause petition, praying such revivor, and set down the case for hearing; as the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, and the 28th G. O. of July 1851, are inapplicable to such a case.—Parcell v. Gibbings, 2 I. C. R. 480. (C.)

10. When a suit by bill has abated by the death of one of the co-ptfs., whose interest is transmitted to another party, it cannot be revived by filing a suggestion under the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act. An order of the Court must be obtained to file a petition of revivor and supplemental petition.—Gurly v. G., 6 I. Jur. 218. (R.)

11. When a petition matter under the Mortgage Act has abated, it cannot be revived by motion, without a petition.—Burke v. Mahony, 5 I. C. R. 345. (R.)

12. When a person, not a party to the cause, who had proved a demand in the office, obtains an order for re-hearing the decree, that order may be revived on petition. Form of order for such revival.—Guinness v. Darley, 6 I. C. R. 21; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 401. (C.A.)

13. A commission issued against a bankrupt, in 1833, upon which no proceedings had been since taken. The application to revive those proceedings should be made to the Court of Bankruptcy and Insolvency. The power of the Lord Chancellor to renew the commission was taken away by the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 60.—In re Dickie, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 183. (B.)

14. Practice in reviving by suggestion against a minor deft. — French v. Ff., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 336. (R.)

15. A petition of supplement and revivor, when the original suit has been referred under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, may be referred under that sec.—De Bury v. Cooke, 7 I. C. R. 273. (C.)

16. A suit to revive a final decree for payment of money cannot be sustained if not commenced within twenty years from the day on which the decree was made; no intervening payment or acknowledgment having been made.

A decree in an administration suit instituted against husband and wife, executor and executrix, directed payment by them of money. The husband having died, the wife surviving is personally liable for the amount.—Dunne v. Doyle, 10 I. C. R. 502; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.)

17. A case showed a pressing necessity for immediately raising a personal representative to revive in Ch. an abated suit, pending for hearing in the Chancellor's list. The Court limited the time for extracting administration to less than fourteen days.—Phillips v. Hassard, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 126. (P.)

18. In an administration suit the final decree ascertained the rights of the parties entitled to the assets, in five shares, subject to certain payments made to them; and directed the ptf.'s costs to be paid by the respondents, the two executors, and that the respondents' costs should be paid, in certain proportions, out of the several shares. The assets had been paid into Court, except a small sum which the decree ordered one respondent to pay. After final decree, and before his costs were taxed, the sole petitioner died. Held, that the suit might be revived against both respondents.—Fortune v. Walsh, 16 I. C. R. 482. (R.)

III. 1. G. Orders respecting: Answer, generally.

[As to the New Practice—See G. O. (1867), 56-78.]

2. The answer of a sole defendant, filed within two days after a decree pro confesso had been obtained, was allowed to stand, and that decree set aside upon terms, though the affidavit to ground the application did not particularly show any grounds of defence upon the merits.—Daly v. Duggan, 1 I. E. R. 315. (R.)

3. Bill to carry a decree into execution. A. was made a notice party. At the hearing, liberty was given to amend by adding parties. A. was made an answering party. Upon motion to take a demurrer by A. off the file—Held, that he was entitled to demur.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 13 I. E. R. 365; 2 I. Jur. 107. (R.)

dence, and required to be on affidavit.—See PRACTICE, AFFIDAVIT.]

III. 2. Form of Answer.

1. Quære—Whether it is necessary in the answer to rely on the Statute of Limitations, in order to entitle the party to set it up in the office?—Drought v. Jones, 2 I. E. R. 303. (C.)—[See also Carey v. Doyne, 5 I. C. R. 104. (R.); Baldwin v. B., 3 I. Jur. 53. (C.)]

2. Conversations which go to the gist of the action should be put in issue.—Donohoe v. Conrady, 8 I. E. R. 679; 2 Jon. & L. 688. (C.)

3. Husband and wife entered a joint appearance. He alone answered. Held, that the answer was a nullity, and that the plaintiff might proceed as for want of an answer.—Thompson v. Lockwood, 8 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

[As to form under the Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act, see Gen. Orders of 1857, 4.]

III. 3. Signature of.

III. 4. Jurat and Swearing of.

Under the Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act 1850—see Bennett v. Cooper, 3 I. Jur. 3. (C.); Ex parte Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 21. (C.); Montgomery v. Eyre, 1 I. C. R. 120; Byrne v. Coleman, 7 I. Jur. 63; Porter v. Archbold, 2 I. C. R. 572.

III. 5. Schedules to Answer.

4. Bill against an agent for an account. Two schedules of great length, containing copies of agreements, leases, and accounts, &c., relating to the estate, were annexed to the answer. Upon motion to take the answer off the file for prolixity, or that the schedules might be expunged, an order was made to expunge part of one schedule and the entire of the other.—Preston v. Lovelock, 3 I. Jur. 278. (R.)

III. 6. Time for Answering: Filing of Answer.

5. If a bill be amended, and notice given that the plaintiff does not require an answer to the amendments, the defendant, if he desires to answer them, must do so within the time allowed for answering when an answer is required. In such a case the plaintiff acts irregularly in filing a replication before he has returned to the defendant his copy of the bill amended. An answer filed after such a replication is regular.

If the defendant is entitled to answer amendments made after his former answer, he may answer fully the case made by the original bill.—Cathcart v. Hewson, H. & J. 540. (E.E.)

6. A sole deft.'s answer, filed within two days after a decree pro confesso had been obtained, was allowed to stand; and that decree set aside upon terms, though the affidavit to ground the application did not particularise any grounds of defence upon the merits.—Daly v. Duggan, 1 I. E. R. 315. (R.)

7. The Court will not, without an affidavit of merits, permit a defendant to file an answer, after an order to take the bill pro confesso against him.—Delany v. Dowlan, Flan. & K. 182. (R.)

8. It is not the deft.'s right to file his answer after a decree on sequestration against him, on paying the costs thereof.—M'Cartney v. O'Neill, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

9. The only cause against a conditional order for a receiver on process is an answer on the file.—M'Cartney v. O'Neill, 5 I. E. R. 494. (E.E.)

10. Notwithstanding the 34th G. O. of March 1843, leave given to defendant to file his answer after an order to take the bill as confessed against him, although more than three years had elapsed after the order to take the bill as confessed was pronounced, and the cause was in the Lord Chancellor's term list of causes for hearing; the plaintiff having been himself guilty of delay, there being a full affidavit of merits, and the deft. being put under terms, so as not to postpone the hearing of the cause.—Cruise v. Shell, 6 I. E. R. 132. (R.)

11. When a defendant filed his answer to a bill after the cause had been set down for hearing as pro confesso, the answer was received; the defendant paying the costs of setting down the cause, and of the hearing.—Woodhouse v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 512. (E.E.)

12. Until the defendant in the original cause has answered, he is not entitled to call on the plaintiff to answer the cross bill. Before the defendant in the original cause has answered, he cannot stay the proceedings in that cause till the defendant in the cross cause (the plaintiff in the original), though out of the jurisdiction, shall answer the cross bill. But after answering the original bill, the plaintiff in the cross cause can stay publication in the original cause till the cross bill be answered.—Raikes v. Cherry, 9 I. E. R. 140. (R.)

13. Appearance on the 26th April; order on the 8th May, staying proceedings until security for costs should be given. Security given on the 4th December; cause set down pro confesso on the 24th Jan., the 23rd being Sunday. Held, irregularly, the defendant having the whole of the 24th to answer.—White v. W., 12 I. E. R. 425. (R.)

Under the Court of Ch. Ir. Reg. Act 1850.

[See Gen. O. of Nov. 1852, No. 2; June 18 1856, No. 2; Gen. Or. May 1857, Nos. 5, 6, & 7.]

14. When the time for filing affidavits in answer to a cause petition has expired, the M. R. will not make a consent, between the parties to allow them to be filed, a rule of Court.—Gibnore v. Clarke, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 53. (R.); Graham v. McDermot, 6 I. Jur. 381; Millett v. Mansergh, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 147; Cassan v. Carr, 2 I. C. R. 377; Carey v. Browne, 6 I. Jur. 349; s. c., 4 I. C. R. 210.

1. Applications for liberty to file answering affidavits in a cause petition matter transferred to his Honor's list, in which no affidavit has been filed, should be made at the Rolls.—Barton v. Major, 8 I. C. R. 25. (R.)

2. When an order, giving further time to file additional affidavits, was made upon consent—Held, that this did not extend the time for setting down the petition, but that the two terms ran from the filing of the answering affidavits.—Wynne v. Knox & Swan, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 341. (R.)

III. 7. Ordered to be put in within a given Time.

III. 8. Commission to Take.

III. 9. Time given to Answer.

3. A rule, for time to answer, entered as of course on an infant's behalf is irregular.—Smithwick v. S., H. & Jon. 599. (E.E.)

4. When the plaintiff amends his bill under the 52nd G. O., and gives notice to the defendant, the latter should send his copy to be amended in two days. The plaintiff should return it amended in two days after, requiring, if necessary, an answer; and the month will run from the date of the return of the bill and notice, and exclusive of it. If the defendant neglect to send his copy for amendment in two days after requisition, and the plaintiff return it in two days after he gets it, the month will commence to run on, and from the sixth day after the defendant was served with notice to furnish his copy.—Greer v. G., 7 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

5. When a defendant filed his answer to a bill after the cause had been set down for hearing as pro confesso, the answer was ordered to stand, the defendant paying the costs of setting down the cause, and of the hearing.—Woodhouse v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 512. (E.E.)

6. A judgment creditor, out of the jurisdiction, having been served with notice, discovered for the first time after replication filed, that it was necessary for his interest to answer. The Court permitted him to do so on terms.—Lyster v. Blake, 8 I. E. R. 579. (R.)

7. The Court will not, as a matter of course, grant liberty to a respondent to file affidavits in answer to a cause petition, after the time limited for so doing by the 2nd G. O. 1852 is passed; but upon an affidavit of merits such liberty will be granted pursuant to the 3rd G. O. 1852.—Irvine v. Balfe, 5 I. Jur. 273. (R.)

8. In analogy to the old practice respecting decrees pro confesso, leave will, on a proper affidavit of merits, and on proper terms as to costs, &c., be given to a respondent who has not filed any answering affidavit, to file one after the proper time for answering has elapsed.—Tuthill v. Latouche, 5 I. C. R. 53; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (C.)

III. 10. Effect of Answer: and of its Want.

9. An order for time to answer stops all process. Pending such time plaintiff cannot have a conditional order for a receiver previously obtained.—Connell v. Godwin, H. & Jon. 114. (E.E.)

10. To enforce a defendant's equity, by impeaching securities, a cross bill is necessary under the English practice.

Semble—In Ireland it may be done by answer.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 660.—[See 1 I. E. R. 289; 1 Dr. & Wal. 722. (C.)]

11. A party, having been supposed to be the personal representative of a deceased defendant, was served with subpoena to revive and answer. He did not discover the character in which he was made a party until after the time to plead had expired. The Court permitted him to plead, notwithstanding the 64th G. O., as an answer would not prevent the suit being revived against him.—Lewin v. L., 9 I. E. R. 638. (R.)

III. 11. Further Answer.

12. Liberty given on motion, after hearing and re-hearing, to amend the bill's prayer, by praying the benefit of proceedings stated in it; a satisfactory reason being given why leave was not asked at the hearing, the defendant being allowed to answer anew.—Blake v. Foster, Beat. Rep. 464. (C.)

13. If a bill be amended and notice given that the plaintiff does not require an answer to the amendments, the defendant, if he desires to answer them, must do so within the time allowed for answering when an answer is required. If the defendant is entitled to answer amendments made after his former answer, he may answer fully the case made by the original bill.—Cathcart v. Hewson, H. & J. 540. (E.E.)

III. 12. Supplemental Answer.

14. A defendant in a foreclosure suit, who had filed an answer and disclaimer, in ignorance of her rights to the equity of redemption, applied, after a decree to account, for liberty to withdraw the disclaimer, and amend the answer, or to file a supplemental answer, stating her claims to the equity of redemption. The Court refused the order, without prejudice to any application which the defendant might make, after satisfaction of the plaintiff's demand under the decree.

Semble—The effect of an answer or disclaimer upon the record may, with the leave of the Court, be got rid of.—Glenny v. Murdock, Flan. & K. 277; 3 I. E. R. 443. (R.)

1. To support an application for liberty to file a supplemental answer putting in issue documents in support of the case made by the former answer, the defendant must satisfy the Court that it was not for want of reasonable diligence on his part, that the documents were not put in issue by the former answer.—Young v. O'Reilly, 5 I. E. R. 521. (E.E.)

2. After witnesses had been examined, but before publication, the Court permitted the defendant to file a supplemental answer to put in issue a material document found since the former answer was sworn; it appearing that there was not a want of due diligence to put it in issue by the former answer.—O'Keefe v. Allen, 5 I. E. R. 523. (E.E.)

3. In a suit by a judgment creditor to administer assets, leave to file a supplemental answer was refused, the application having been made after a consent to admit documents had been made a rule of Court, and the rule for publication entered.—Beavan v. Massey, 2 I. Jur. 3. (R.)

4. A defendant was permitted to file a supplemental answer, putting in issue a settlement by which an estate tail was created, and denying that any fine had been levied or recovery suffered, the existence of the settlement having come to the defendant's knowledge since the filing of the original answers.

Notice of motion for liberty to file a supplemental answer should state in precise terms the matters required to be put in issue.—Martin v. O'Flaherty, 2 I. Jur. 11. (R.)

5. A defendant, claiming as heir-at-law, by answer admitted agreements stated in the bill. The cause having gone into the office the Master found that the agreements gave to the testator chattel interests in the lands, and that they formed part of his personal estate. After the report was confirmed, the original agreements having been discovered, it was ascertained that they gave to the testator freehold interests in the lands, descendible to the defendant as heir-at-law. Upon motion to have the report sent back to the Master to be reviewed, and for liberty to file a supplemental answer—Held, that the defendant should be at liberty to file a charge, stating the agreements correctly.—Carbery v. Cox, 2 I. Jur. 25. (C.)

6. Leave given to a mortgagee defendant to file a supplemental answer to a cause petition, varying in some measure the statement of his title to the mortgage as put forward in his original answer, and putting in issue a deed under which he claimed, but which he had forgotten to mention in his original answer.

Semble—Mere inconsistency between the proposed matter of defence and the original defence is not sufficient ground for refusing leave to a defendant to file a supplemental answer.—Glascok v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50; 3 I. Jur. 115. (C.)—[Followed: Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)]

III. 13. Separate Answer.

7. When husband and wife are sued jointly, a separate answer by the husband, filed without an order for that purpose, is irregular. Ptf. moved to set aside such an answer, and for process against the husband and wife. The husband stated a case, showing that an order to answer separately would have been granted, if applied for. Held, that the husband's separate answer should not be set aside; but that the wife should answer separately, or else process should issue against her.—Rooney v. Fox, 1 Jones' Rep. 437. (E.E.)

8. Three testamentary trustees were made defendants to a bill; and, although in the same interest, answered separately. The Lord Chancellor said that circumstances might justify the defendants in putting in separate answers; and directed the Master, in taxing the costs, to allow to the trustees the costs as of one answer only, unless he should find that any one had properly put in a separate answer, and then to allow his reasonable costs accordingly.—Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158. (C.)

9. When a married woman lives apart from her husband, who resides out of the jurisdiction, and has not any interest in the subject of the suit, the Court will, on ptf.'s motion, and the wife's assent, allow her to file a separate answer.—O'Brien v. Bernard, 7 I. E. R. 180. (R.)

10. Husband and wife entered a joint appearance. Husband only answered. Held, that the answer was a nullity, and that ptf. might proceed as for want of an answer.—Thompson v. Lockwood, 8 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

11. Husband entitled to an estate tail in remainder in right of his wife, was resident out of the jurisdiction. Order that the wife should enter an appearance and answer separate from the husband.—Rigney v. O'Connell, 2 I. Jur. 186. (R.)

III. 14. To Amended Bill.

12. If the bill be amended, with notice that no answer is required, deft. must, if he desires to answer, do so within the time allowed when an answer is required. It is irregular for ptf. to file a replication before returning deft.'s copy of the bill amended. After such replication has been filed an answer is regular. Deft., if entitled to answer amendments after his former answer, may then answer the case made by the original bill.—Cathcart v. Hewson, H. & Jon. 540. (E.E.)

13. In general, amending a bill is a waiver of exceptions to the answer; but, under the G. O. of 13th June 1730, deft. in such a case must answer not only the amendments, but also the exceptions.—Burroughs v. M'Ilween, 3 Dr. & War. 150; 2 Con. & L. 94. (C.)

14. Leave to answer an amended bill after replication is not subject to all the rules which regulate leave to file a supplemental answer. In a special case, the Court may permit deft. to file an answer to the amended bill notwithstanding the replication, although the notice of motion does not set out the contents or substance of the intended answer.

A bill was amended on the 1st of April, and notice was served on deft. that she was not required to answer. At that time deft. was charged by ptf. with two criminal offences. On the 9th bills were found. The trials lasted from the 18th until the 21st, when deft. was acquitted. Ptf.'s solicitor was his agent for the prosecution. Replication was filed on the 22nd. The Court allowed deft. to answer the amended bill, though she had not, under G.O. 53, served notice of her intention to answer the amendments, and though the time for answering them had expired.—Scott v. S., 9 I. E. R. 451. (R.)

III. 15. Amendment of Answer.

1. The Court will not amend an error in the name of a defendant in the title of his answer. The proper course is to apply to have the answer taken off the file, that it may be amended and re-sworn.—Nolan v. N., 10 I. E. R. 234. (R.)

2. Leave given to a mortgagee defendant to file a supplemental answer to a cause petition, varying in some measure the statement of his title to the mortgage as put forward in his original answer, and putting in issue a deed under which he claimed, but which he had forgotten to mention in his original answer.

Semble—Mere inconsistency between the proposed matter of defence and the original defence is not a sufficient ground for refusing leave to a defendant to file a supplemental answer.—Glascock v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50; 3 Ir. Jur. 115. (C.)—[Followed: Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)]

III. 17. a. Their Form and Requisites.

3. At the foot of exceptions taken to an answer, counsel's certificate need only state that the exceptions are proper and necessary, and not taken or served for delay, according to the 72nd G. O. (Nov. 1834); but need not state "that he has read the bill and answer, and has read and approved of the exceptions," according to the old rule.—Adamson v. Jameson, 1 I. E. R. 199. (R.)

4. Exceptions to an answer were filed without having the certificate of counsel annexed. An application for liberty to amend the exceptions by adding the certificate was refused.—O'Flynn v. Wall, 2 I. Jur. 170. (R.)

III. 17. b. Their Effect.

III. 17. c. When Necessary or Proper to be taken.

III. 17. d. Within what Time to be taken.

5. Under G. R. 75, ptf. has six weeks to except, for insufficiency, to the answer to an amended bill.—Garvey v. Hayes, 11 I. E. R. 270. (R.)

6. The time for excepting to an answer for insufficiency, limited by the 75th G. O. (1843), will not be extended after the six weeks have expired; the rule is binding unless there is fraud or accident.—Thompson v. Beamish, 2 I. Jur. 13. (R.)—[On appeal the order was made extending the time.—2 I. Jur. 33. (C.)]

III. 17. e. Filing, generally, and nunc pro tunc.

III. 17. f. Deposit on.

III. 17. g. Further Exceptions.

III. 17. h. Waiver of Exceptions to Answer.

7. A motion to continue an injunction upon equity confessed by the answer, without any saving of the right to except, is a waiver of all objections to the answer for insufficiency. Plaintiff served notice to continue an injunction upon equity confessed without reserving a right to except, and afterwards filed exceptions to defendant's answer. Held, that the exceptions were irregular, and should be taken off the file.—Crofts v. Lord Egmont, 3 I. E. R. 227; Fl. & K. 82. (R.)

8. A plaintiff, by moving for a receiver upon an answer, without reserving a right to except, is not thereby deprived of his right to do so.—Irvine v. St. George, Flan. & K. 622. (R.)

9. In general, amending a bill is a waiver of exceptions to the answer, but, under the Order of 13th June 1730 (see 54th G. O., 27th March 1843), the defendant, in such case, is bound to answer not only the amendments but the exceptions.—Burroughs v. McCreight,

2 Con. & L. 95; nom. Burroughs v. McIlween, 3 Dr. & War. 150. (C.)

III. 17. j. Reference on Exceptions.

III. 17. k. Argument on, and Hearing of.

III. 17. l. Allowance and Overruling of Exceptions.

1. The Court may allow an exception to an answer in part, and overrule it in part.—Flanagan v. Williams, 2 Jon. 557. (E.E.)

III. 18. Reference of, for Scandal and Impertinence.

2. If a party suffers the Court to make an order upon an affidavit, he cannot afterwards refer it for prolixity, though he himself has not taken any subsequent step in the cause.—Robinson v. Warner, Jon. & Car. 50. (E.E.)

3. When the answering affidavit contains irrelevant or scandalous matter, tending to injure the character of the petitioner, the proper course is to refer the affidavits to the Master to enquire as to their impertinence.—Finnegan v. Keappock, 4 I. Jur. 285. (C.)

III. 19. Sufficiency of Answer.

4. When deft.'s answer is excepted to for insufficiency under the 75th New Rule, it is not to be deemed sufficient until either the Master reports, disallowing the exceptions, or, if the report be not obtained within the time limited by the Rule, until the termination of three weeks from the delivery of the exceptions.—Raymond v. Evans; Wise v. Palmer, 1 I. E. R. 428. (R.)

5. The 45th G. O. applies as well to cases in which there is but one defendant, as to those in which there are more than one defendant to a suit. A sole defendant is not bound to answer more than the interrogatories contained in the bill.—Millar v. M., 6 I. E. R. 308. (R.)

6. Husband and wife entered a joint appearance. He alone answered. Held, that the answer was a nullity; and that the plaintiff might proceed as for want of an answer.—Thompson v. Lockwood, 8 I. E. R. 367. (R.)

7. Bill to establish a right of dues for weighing and stallage of goods in a market under a grant by the lords thereof.—Held, that the grant did not pass the dues, &c., and, therefore, that plaintiff could not except for insufficiency to the answer, in that it did not give discovery in aid of an account, the right to which depended on the title.—Russell v. Beakey, 8 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

8. A defence of purchase for value, without notice, is no answer to a suit to perpetuate testimony.—Talbot v. Kennedy, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (C.)

9. It is not necessary that the £10 lodged on appeal motions should be lodged before serving the notice of appeal.—Mannix v. Drinan, 11 I. E. R. 398. (C.)

10. The M. R. declined to make a consent a rule of Court, on the ground that the effect of the consent was to vary a decree of the Lord Chancellor, and that he had no jurisdiction to vary such a decree. The motion was removed before the Lord Chancellor.—Held, that a copy of the Rolls order must be taken out; and that the new motion was in fact an appeal.—Tennant v. T., 5 I. C. R. 228. (C.)

11. Application for liberty to re-hear a cause after the lapse of three months ought to be made to the Lord Chancellor; not to the Court of C. A.—Peyton v. Lambert, 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.)

12. Since the passing of the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, appeals from the Prerogative Court, standing in the Court of Delegates, have been transferred to the Probate Court.—Anderson v. Preston, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 183. (P.)

13. When, after a decree, material evidence is discovered, and a supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review, is filed to vary the decree, that petition ought to be set down to come on before the Court of C. A. along with the hearing of the appeal from the original decree.—Barton v. Sampson, 10 I. C. R. 161. (C.A.)

1. The Court of C. A., has not power to refuse to a bankrupt, who has passed his final examination, his certificate.—In re Scotts, 5 L. Jur. N. S. 52. (C.A.)

2. It is not necessary, on an appeal from the L. E. Court, to deposit with the officer of the Court any sum of money.—In re Rea's Estate, 14 L. C. R. 195. (C.A.)

IV. 2. When and on what grounds it lies: when barred: when it lies on new matter.

3. In 1839, the ptf. in the fifth cause obtained at the Rolls an order for the transfer of funds to the credit of all the causes; and, in 1840, a further order to pay him the fund then in Court, in part discharge of his demand.

In 1843, the ptf. in the fourth cause appealed against those orders. Held, that the appeal could not be entertained, because of their acquiescence, and the lapse of time.—Murtagh v. Tisdall, and four other causes, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden 250. (C.)

4. The rule against re-hearing an appeal motion is not inflexible; but it is a sufficient ground for refusing it, that the case has been already anxiously considered.—Lady Langford v. Mahony, 11 I. E. R. 319. (C.)

5. Entering into a consent does not preclude a party from appealing.—Delacherois v. —, 2 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

6. The Court of Ch. will not expunge, from an order of the Rolls, recitals which reflect on the character of a party, unless there has been some miscarriage in the proceedings, or some injustice done. An appeal motion for this purpose dismissed with costs.

In a suit for tithe rentcharge, several of the debts were struck out of the bill by side-bar rule, on payment of their proportion, and the costs of subpoena and appearance. The bill was set down against the other eight debts, who then entered into a consent to pay whatever costs were taxed against them. They paid £26 on account. The general costs of the suit were taxed against them to £36. 2s. 10½d. On motion to the Rolls, in Jan. 1854, the Court directed the Taxing Master to review his taxation, and report what amount of costs would be properly charged against those eight remaining debts, if the other sixty-three debts had been charged with the proportion of the costs of the suit to which they would have been liable under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 28. A report was made. In pursuance of it, his Honor directed the ptf.'s solicitor to refund to the eight debts £17. 6s. 3d. out of the £26 paid by them for costs; and that the ptf. should pay to those eight debts the costs of the motion of January 1854, and the proceedings thereunder. On appeal, against the payment of costs directed by the order, it was affirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs.—Chaine v. Dungannon, 7 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

7. Semble—An appeal lies to the House of Lords from an order made under the Ren.

Lease. Conv. Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 105).—Loyard v. Donegal, 4 I. C. R. 450. (R.)—[See, 8 H. L. Cas. 460.]

8. An order was made by the M. R., on motion before the passing of the Ch. Ap. Court (Ir.) Act 1856 (19 & 20 Vic., c. 92); and was reversed by the Lord Chancellor. A motion by way of appeal from the latter decision to this Court—Held, to be in the nature of a second re-hearing; and, there being no special grounds, the Court declined to hear it.—Dobbys v. Adams, 6 I. C. R. 170; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (C.A.)

9. An appeal does not properly lie upon the rulings of a Master: the order itself ought to be made up before the appeal is brought.—Jones v. Stokes, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (R.)

10. Quære—Can a married woman validly consent to a particular form of order?

A married woman having, during her husband's life and after his decease, acted upon such an order, was nevertheless permitted to make it a ground of appeal to the House of Lords.—Boyse v. Rossborough 2 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (H.L.)—[S. c., 6 H. Lds. Cas. 2.]

11. The Court will not hear an appeal against a Master's rulings in a case under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15. The order must be made up.—Cullen v. Nicholson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 212. (R.)

12. An application for liberty to appeal to the House of Lords, from an order of the Court of C. A., ought, after the lapse of a year from the date of the order, to be made to the Chancellor.

Leave to appeal, notwithstanding the lapse of time, may be given, if there be a bona fide ground for appealing; and the delay has arisen from bringing forward further matter to make the whole record complete.—In re Reilly, 8 I. C. R. 455; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 187. (C.)

13. Cases decided in the Court of C. A. are not to be re-heard.—Falkiner v. Hornidge, 9. I. C. R. 168. (C.A.)

14. No appeal lies against granting a certificate to a bankrupt, unless the appellant's objection be made in writing at the final examination.—In re Woodroffe, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 49. (C.A.)

15. A bankrupt stated and settled with his partner an account which the Court of Ch. decreed ought not to be re-opened. This Court refused to sanction the continuance, by the bankrupt or his assignees, of litigation by way of appeal, with a view to go behind that decision, since there could not be shown, on the face of the account, manifest error undiscovered during the Ch. proceedings; nor that substantial benefit would result to the creditors.

The Master in Ch. having been of opinion that the account should be re-opened—Held, that the bankrupt was not, by filing a bill for an account, guilty of wanton litigation.—Re Sim, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 282. (R.)

IV. 3. Within what Time Appeal must be brought.

1. An appeal against orders of the Court refused to be entertained, on the ground of acquiescence and length of time.—Murtagh v. Tisdall, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 250. (C.)

2. The Court will not entertain a motion for liberty to prosecute an appeal to the House of Lords, the time prescribed by the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 33, having elapsed, unless very cogent grounds to account for the delay be shown.—Lysaght v. L., 5 I. Jur. 23 (C.)

3. The fourteen days allowed for appealing from an order of the Master, by the 30th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, are to be reckoned from the day of filing the order in the Registrar's office.—Brereton v. Kennan, 5 I. C. R. 345. (R.)

4. Liberty to appeal to the House of Lords, after the expiration of a year from the date of the decree, will not be granted when the Lord Chancellor is satisfied that the decree is right, and the only reason alleged for the delay is the pendency of negotiations, not with the parties to the cause, but with persons represented by them, which have not misled the person aggrieved by the decree, nor prevented proceedings being had under the decree, which would prove useless if the decree were reversed.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp'n. of Belfast, 6 I. C. R. 27. (C.)

5. The I. E. Court refused to grant a re-hearing pro forma, to enable a party to appeal to the Ch. Ap. Court, under the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 92; such party having suffered the month allowed by the I. E. Court Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 77) to elapse, under a mistaken idea that the period within which an appeal could be brought had been extended to three months by the former Act.—In re Ashe, 6 I. C. R. 33. (I.E.C.)

6. An appeal from an order of the I. E. Court, to the Court of C. A. is an appeal under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 51; and must therefore be brought within one month after the making of the order appealed from.—Ashe v. Dwyer, 6 I. C. R. 177; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (C.A.)

7. Notwithstanding the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 30, the time, for appealing to the H. L. against a decree or order of the Court of Ch. in Ir., is still to be calculated from the time of the enrolment of that decree or order, not from the day on which it was pronounced in Court.—Lambert v. Peyton, 7 H. L. Cas. 423.—[See Peyton v. Lambert, 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.); 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 1.]

8. Application for liberty to appeal to the House of Lords from an order of the Court of C. A., after the lapse of a year from the date of the order, ought to be made to the Lord Chancellor.

Leave to appeal, notwithstanding the lapse of time, may be given, if there be a bona fide honest ground for bringing the appeal, and the delay has arisen from bringing forward further matters to make the whole record complete.—In re Reilly's Estate, 8 I. C. R. 455; 4 I. Jur. N. S. 187. (C.)

9. The three months "within" which every appeal must be entered from the date of any decision or order, excludes the day on which the order is pronounced, and includes the day on which the appeal is entered.—Kennedy v. Cruise, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 11. (C.A.)

10. The three months within which an appeal from an order or decision of the L. E. Court must be entered, in accordance with the 41st sec. of the L. E. Court Act (21 & 22 Vic., c. 72), are to be computed exclusive of the day of the date of such order or decision, and inclusive of the day on which the appeal is entered.—In re Kennedy's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 298; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 11. (C.A.)

11. Application to extend the time to appeal must be made before the expiration of the three months within which the appeal must be brought.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

12. The M. R. has jurisdiction to re-hear cause petitions heard before himself, within the limits and restrictions contained in the 30th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act.

A petition was filed for an injunction, and an account of the profits of a coal mine. On the 27th of May a decree granted the injunction, but not the account. On the 21st of June an action at law was brought for the profits, but stayed by injunction on the 4th of July. An order for a re-hearing was granted, on a motion made early in Nov.—Sloan v. M'Callen, 13 I. C. R. 357. (R.)

13. The time for appealing from a Master's order is to be reckoned from the date of its signature.—Cooke v. Franklin, 16 I. C. R. 469. (R.)

IV. 4. Who may prosecute an Appeal.

14. The H. L. will not give relief to an appellant against an order of which he complains by petition, unless he has taken the proper course to obtain relief in the Court below.—Tommey v. White, 6 Cl. & F. 786.—[See Tommey v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); and s. c., 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 5 I. Jur. 321, H. L.; 3 H. L. Cas. 49; 4 H. L. Cas. 313.]

15. W. owned fee-simple estates in Ireland, which, on his marriage, he charged with a jointure. There was issue, a son, H. After W.'s death, the jointure fell into arrear for some years. Under the settlement, the jointress entered into possession of the estates, and received the rents. H. becoming insolvent, the customary assignments were executed. Afterwards, H. mortgaged his interest in the estates to B., without giving B. notice of the insolvency. As a further security, H. gave a bond and warrant of attorney, providing that B., on redemption, should reconvey the lands, and sign satisfaction on any judgment which might have been entered upon the warrant. The mortgage, having been duly registered, took priority under the Irish Acts over the unregistered assignments. B. filed a bill for foreclosure or redemption, and made the jointress, H., and the assignees parties. The jointure was decreed to be the first charge on the estates, and the mortgage to be the second. Accounts were directed to be taken accordingly. The assignees did not appeal against this decree. H. did. Held, that H. ought not to have been made a party to the suit, and therefore could not appeal against the decree. — Rochfort v. Battersby, 2 H. L. Cas. 888; 14 Jur. 229. — [Affg. Battersby v. Rochfort, 9 I. E. R. 191; 2 Jon. & L. 431. (C.) Revg., on re-hearing, 8 I. E. R. 284. (C.)]

1. A trustee filed a cause petition to recover a portion of the trust property. This petition was dismissed. The trustee was, by order of the Court, removed from being trustee. Held, that he could not maintain an appeal from the order dismissing his own petition. — Leach v. Wallace, 9 I. C. R. 147. (C.A.)

IV. 5. Evidence on Appeals.

2. Evidence, rejected by the Master in the early stages of a suit cannot be used upon appeal; nor can its rejection be questioned, unless made a ground of appeal. — In re M'Kenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

3. On appeal, the Court may admit documentary evidence which was not before the Master when he made the decretal order appealed against. — Boag v. Bradford, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

IV. 6. Abatement and Revivor of. [See PRACTICE, ABATEMENT.]

IV. 7. Effect of Appeal: Staying Proceedings during it.

4. A deft. will not be compelled to convey an estate to the ptf. pursuant to a decree, when there is a bona fide intention to prosecute an appeal against that decree. — Patten v. Wallace, 5 I. E. R. 309. (E.E.)

5. After dismissal of a bill with costs, the defts. were stayed from enforcing them, pending an appeal to Dom. Proc., the ptf. giving security and paying interest upon them. — M'Carthy v. M'C., 11 I. E. R. 399. (C.) — [S. v. 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.): 1 H. L. Cas. 703.]

6. A quo warranto being brought to try the right to an office in the Court of Ch., the relator succeeded in the Court below. Pending a writ of error to the Court of Exch. Chamber, the Court refused to appoint the relator to the office. — Ex parte Kelly, 1 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

7. It is a matter entirely for the discretion of the Court, whether it will stay proceedings pending an appeal to the House of Lords. — In re Browne, 7 I. C. R. 79. (I.E.C.)

8. Proceedings to compel payment of costs will not be stopped pending an appeal, if it appear that the respondent is bona fide in possession of property. — Spread v. Newe, 12 I. C. R. 335; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (C.A.)

IV. 8. General Practice on Appeals.

9. A deft. will not be compelled to convey an estate to the ptf. pursuant to a decree, when there is a bona fide intention to prosecute an appeal against that decree. — Patten v. Wallace, 5 I. E. R. 309. (E.E.)

10. It is not necessary that the £10 lodged on appeal motions should be lodged before serving notice of the appeal. — Mannix v. Drinan, 11 I. E. R. 398. (C.)

11. There is no principle in the English law that a suitor has a right to one Court of Appeal in every case. — Von Stentz v. Comyn, 12 I. E. R. 622. (C.)

12. On an appeal from an order allowing a demurrer, counsel for the ptf. begins. — M'Namara v. Blake, 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)

13. On an appeal only appellant's counsel can be heard in support of his case, but not counsel for parties in some other interest who have not appealed. — Stewart v. Marquis of Donegal, 13 I. E. R. 106. (C.)

14. The M. R. has not jurisdiction to stay the proceedings under a decree of the Lord Chancellor, pending an appeal to the House of Lords. Petitioner having moved for an attachment against a respondent for not executing a deed pursuant to a decree, pending an appeal to the House of Lords from the decree, the motion was directed to stand over, with liberty to the respondent to apply within a week, to the Lord Chancellor, to stay the proceedings pending the appeal. — Osborne v. Smith, 7 I. Jur. 221. (R.)

15. It is not open to counsel, upon appeal from the ruling of a Commissioner in Chamber, to argue questions not raised below, and not appearing upon the notice. — In re Brownrigg's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 363. (I.E.C.)

16. Liability to creditors is not the test of contribution under the Joint-stock Companies Winding-up Acts 1848, 1849. The partnership deed of a Joint-stock Bank provided that the transferor of shares should, from the date of the transfer, have no claim or demand whatsoever, either at Law or in Equity, upon or against the society, or any of the proprietors thereof for the time being (other than the transferee), except for dividends declared previously to the transfer; and on payment of any further instalment or instalments which might have been previously called for, should be for ever discharged from all further liabilities and obligations in respect of the shares transferred, and from all further claims and demands on account of the same. Held, that shareholders who had transferred their shares bona fide, and for valuable consideration, should not be placed on the list of contributories, although they were still liable to the creditors of the bank, the three years from the transfer within which creditors might proceed against them, under the Bankers Act, (6 G. 4, c. 42, s. 9), not having expired.

The Master placed the name of an original shareholder, who had transferred his shares, on the list of contributories, as a qualified contributory. The shareholder moved, by way of appeal, that his name should be omitted from the list. The official manager did not appeal. Held, that the latter could not, on the hearing of the appeal motion, contend that the transfer was informal, and that the shareholder's name should be placed on the list as a contributory, without any qualification.—Ex parte Stirling, 6 I. C. R. 180; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (C.A.)

1. When, after a decree, material evidence is discovered, and a supplemental petition in the nature of a bill of review filed for the purpose of varying the decree, the supplemental petition ought to be set down to come on before the Court of Appeal, along with the hearing of the appeal from the original decree. Barton v. Sampson, 10 I. C. R. 161. (C.A.)

2. Two counsel only are to be heard on each side in the Court of Ch. Appeal.—Bentley v. Robinson, 10 I. C. R. 287; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (C.A.)

3. When the appeal is from the whole of the decree or order, the petitioner's counsel begins.—Brereton v. Barry, 10 I. C. R. 376. (R.)

4. When there has not been at any stage of a cause petition an oral examination of witnesses, oral cross-examination will not be permitted on appeal.—Farran v. Mercer, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 26. (C.A.)

5. A will, which had been lodged in Court, handed out to a solicitor for the purpose of proceedings in the House of Lords.—Massy v. —, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 340. (R.)

6. When an appeal to the House of Lords has been lodged on a decree against which decrees sought to be enrolled would be evidence, the Court of Ch. will not refuse permission to enrol them, or put under terms the party seeking to do so.—Spread v. Neve, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (C.)

7. Unless clearly satisfied that the decree of the Court below, made after deliberation, is erroneous, the Court of Appeal will be slow to reverse it. Lord Wensleydale's judgment in Vernon v. Wright, 7 H. of Lords Cases, 66, approved of.—Uppington v. Tarrant, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 199. (C.A.)

8. The Court, adopting the rule at law on a motion to set aside a verdict as against the weight of evidence, will not on appeal reverse the Master's decision on a question of fact, or direct a further enquiry, merely because a doubt may exist that the decision was right.—Gillespie v. Croker, 15 I. C. R. 182. (R.)

9. On the hearing of an appeal from the whole of an interlocutory order, the appellant's counsel is entitled to begin.—Stelton v. Flanagan, 15 I. C. R. 303. (C.A.)

V. 9. Practice on in the House of Lords.

10. The H. L. will not give relief to an appellant against an order of which he complains by petition, unless he has taken the proper course to obtain relief in the Court below.—Tomney v. White, 6 Cl. & F. 786.—[See Tomney v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); and s.c., 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H. L.); 3 H. L. Cas. 49; 4 H. L. Cas. 313.]

11. The Court of Ch. in Ir. having directed an enquiry into the value of an estate at the time of its assignment, and touching the amount of the interest therein of B. (a purchaser from the assignee), the H. L. reversed the order directing the enquiry, and, without making any order, remitted the case with a declaration of the nature and extent of B.'s rights, leaving it to the Court below to carry that declaration into effect.—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, 7 Cl. & F. 550.—[See the case afterwards, at the hearing on the report and merits, 3 Dr. & War. 456. (C.)]

12. Matter not printed in the papers cannot be made the subject of argument before the H. L.

The H. L., in remitting a cause to the Court below to carry its directions into effect, will, if necessary, not merely declare the principle of its order, but state those directions fully on the face of its order.—M'Can v. O'Ferrall, 8 Cl. & F. 30.—[See 5 I. E. R. 105. (R.)]

13. When there are a cause and a cross-cause, and an appeal is taken against the decree in the cause only, the cross-cause is not in any respect before the House.—Callaghan v. C., 8 Cl. & F. 374.—[See 4 I. E. R. 441; 8 I. E. R. 572.]

14. The first decree in suits, which had been in existence for some years, was made in 1818. The litigation continued; and other decrees were made, on the footing of that decree, between the parties and others who were interested in the same transactions. In 1838, there was made a decretal order to revive and execute all former decrees and orders. These decrees and orders, as well as the decretal order of 1838, were appealed against.—Held, that, after so great a delay, and under such circumstances, the H. L. would not set aside any of the original decrees or orders, upon technical objections, which did not affect the merits of the case.

A decretal order, not alleged to have been made on the appearance of all the proper parties, was therefore irregular to that extent. It directed the revival and execution of several decrees and orders, but the suit in which it was made was regular for some purposes at least. Held, that the decretal order should be reversed, with directions, and the case remitted to the Court below to deal with the suit so as to advance the justice of the case, regard being had to the decision of this House touching the earlier decrees and orders, which the House had sustained as valid.—Lawrence v. Blake, 8 Cl. & F. 504.

1. When no appellant appears to support an appeal, the only order that the H. L. can make is to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution, with costs.—Scanlan v. Usher, 8 Cl. & F. 561.

2. When no person appeared on the appellant's behalf when his appeal was called on, and the agent only of the respondent appeared, but alleged that he had retained counsel, and prayed that the appeal be dismissed with costs, it was dismissed with costs.—Murphy v. Conway, 9 Cl. & F. 73.

3. The Court of Ch. in Ir. having pronounced against P. a decree, with costs, he paid those costs, and appealed to the H. L., which gave judgment in his favour, and reversed that decree, with costs. P. thereupon applied for an order directing the re-payment of the costs which he had already paid. The H. L. refused to make such an order, and left P. to apply to the Court below on the judgment now pronounced.—Clarke v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126.

[P., having originally paid those costs to the solicitor of the opposite party, subsequently applied to the Court of Ch. in Ir. for an order on that solicitor to repay him the amount. The solicitor had, with his client's assent, applied them in paying costs due to him by the client. Held, that P.'s motion should be refused.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)]

4. The H. L., in reversing a decree, which directed immaterial enquiries, and ordering the bill to be dismissed, as at the hearing, with costs, will not relieve the appellant from his costs of prosecuting the enquiries before he appealed.—Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.

5. While a case was pending in the H. L., the deft. in a similar case made an offer to the ptf. to be bound by the decision of the House in the pending case. Ptf. took no notice of the offer, but compelled the deft. to proceed with his defence. Judgment was given against deft., who appealed to this House, and prosecuted the appeal to a hearing after an adverse decision in the previously pending case. Judgment being given against him, he was ordered to pay respondent's costs.—Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

6. When the H. L. varies a decree, but only on a point which had not been raised in the Court below, nor made a ground of appeal, the appellant must pay the costs of the appeal.—Wallace v. Patten, 12 Cl. & F. 491.—[See Wallace v. Patten, 5 I. E. R. 809; Long. & T. 479. (E.E.)]

7. Any document or evidence that has been before the Court below, may, on appeal to the House of Lords, be properly brought under the notice of the house, but no others.—Geraghty v. Malone, 1 H. L. Cas. 89.—[See 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239. (C.)]

8. The House will not grant the costs of an appeal, to come out of the estate, on a mere miscarriage of the Court below, when the subject of litigation, though in the result decided by the Court, was one which might have required to be tried as a question of fact.

The House strongly condemned the custom of each party printing an appendix to his case, and desired, that, in future a joint appendix only should be printed.—Piers v. P., 2 H. L. Cas. 331; 18 Jur. 569.—[Rev. Piers v. P., 10 I. E. R. 341. (C.)—See Piers v. Tuile, 1 Dr. & Wal. 298. (C.); Piers v. P., 11 I. E. R. 358. (R.)]

9. The circumstance, that a person has been made a party to a suit in the Court below, will not, if he was improperly made a party, entitle him to appeal to the H. L. against a decree in that suit.

An objection to the competency of an appeal ought to have been presented to the Appeal Committee, but was not noticed until the hearing at the bar of the House. The objection was, in its nature, a fatal one. Held, that the appeal should be dismissed, but without costs, since the objection had not been taken till so late a stage in the proceedings.—Rockfort v. Battersby, 2 H. L. Cas. 388; 14 Jur. 229.—[Affg.: 9 I. E. R. 191; 2 Jon. & L. 431. (C.); which reversed, on re-hearing, 8 I. E. R. 284. (C.)]

10. On an appeal from a decree made by the Court of Ch. in Ir., no one appeared on behalf of the appellant; but counsel appeared on behalf of the respondent. Without calling on the respondent's counsel, the H. L. dismissed the appeal, with costs.—Martin v. D'Arcy, 3 H. L. Cas. 698.

11. The House of Lords will reverse its own order made upon a misrepresentation, though the misrepresentation be inadvertent, the order reversed having itself reversed a decision of the Court of Ch. Ireland, and being made behind the back of interested parties, and enabling a fraud to be committed by the party presenting the petition on parties who were not present at the making of the order.—Tommey v. White, 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.)

1. Semle—A decree appealed from, but not adjudicated on further than dismissing the appeal generally, may be included in a future appeal.

Semle—Decrees and orders, which have not been enrolled, may, after any length of time, on being enrolled, be brought under appeal with a recent order, made in the same cause, and duly enrolled.

A judgment of the H. L. is conclusive, and cannot be reversed or corrected, except by Act of Parliament.—Tomney v. White, 3 H. L. Cas. 49. [See references to the next case.]

2. A judgment of the H. L., given on an appeal, cannot be reversed. But, if that appeal and judgment have been obtained by suppression and misrepresentation, the H. L. will afterwards discharge the order granting the leave to appeal, and also the order constituting the judgment thereon.

In Jan. 1835, the Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced a decree, which was enrolled in the following May. The proper time for appealing having elapsed, a petition, for leave to appeal against that decree, was presented in Feb. 1839; but its prayer was refused. In 1844, the party, who was dissatisfied with the decree, filed a bill of review. That bill was demurred to for want of equity, and the demurrer was allowed. In 1846, the order allowing the demurrer was appealed against; and, in this appeal, the original decree was expressly complained of. In July 1847, the appeal was dismissed generally by an order, which specially mentioned the order which had allowed the demurrer, but which did not mention the original decree. In 1848, there was presented a petition for leave to appeal against the original decree and against certain other orders, which had been made in the course of the proceedings, but which had not then been enrolled. That petition stated that "it appeared by the order of July 1847 that the decree of Jan. 1835 had not been complained of, and therefore that their Lordships had not made any declaration with respect to it." The petition further stated that "the said decree had never been adjudicated upon by their Lordships."

Other proceedings having been taken, leave was given, on this petition, to include in the appeal the decree of Jan. 1835. The appeal was heard ex parte; and, in June 1850, that decree was reversed. Held, that this reversal had been obtained by suppression and misrepresentation.

The parties, whom that reversal affected, having petitioned for relief, the H. L. discharged the order, which gave leave to appeal against the decree of Jan. 1835, and also discharged the order which had reversed that decree, but without costs.—Ex parte White v. Tomney, 4 H. L. Cas. 313.—[See Tomney v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303; 6 Cl. & F. 786; 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.); 3 H. L. Cas. 49.]

3. Though an appellant comes to London so long before attendance at the hearing of his cause requires his presence that he would not be discharged out of custody, if then arrested, he will nevertheless be discharged, if not arrested until his cause is actually on the paper.—Perase v. P., 5 H. L. Cas. 671.—[See s. c., 7 Cl. & F. 279; 3 I. C. R. 196. (C.); 5 H. L. Cas. 682.]

4. Notwithstanding the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 30, the time for appealing to the H. L. against a decree or order of the Court of Ch. in Ir., is still to be calculated from the time of the enrolment of that decree or order, not from the day on which it was pronounced in Court.—Lambert v. Peyton, 7 H. L. Cas. 423.—[See Peyton v. Lambert, 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.); 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 1.]

5. An objection having been made to the competency of an appeal to the H. L., the Appeal Committee directed that that objection should be heard before the House, which gave judgment in favour of the appellant. The appeal was then heard, and was dismissed on the merits, with costs. The House directed that the costs, which had been incurred by reason of the objection to the competency of the appeal, should be deducted from the general costs.—Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 2.—[See s. c., 7 H. L. Cas. 423; 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.)]

6. The Appeal Committee cannot decide what documents are, and what are not necessary to be printed in the appendix to a case. A question on this point, though known by the parties to exist, was not made the subject of discussion during the argument on the appeal. The H. L. would not hear it discussed afterwards, and refused to make any order touching the costs of the appendix.

The decision appealed against was reversed, and the cause remitted. The Court below was left to deal with the general question of costs.—Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588. [See 9 I. C. R. 535; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 525. (C.)]

7. A conveyance, made under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72, is, under sec. 85, "for all purposes conclusive evidence" that all previous proceedings, leading to such conveyance, have been regularly taken.

Proceedings had been taken to sell estates, whereof the sale and re-sale had been directed, in a manner which, when presented to the notice of this House, was declared to be marked by great irregularity. The complainant, however, had not brought that matter before the Court of Appeal until after the conveyances had been executed. Held, that the statute precluded this House from affording to the appellant relief against the consequences of such irregularities.

When the appellant went before the Court of Appeal, his petition was dismissed with costs. The H. L. reversed the order for costs, but affirmed the dismissal of the appeal.—Power v. Reeves, 11 H. L. Cas. 645.—[See In re Power's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 295. (C.A.)]

V. APPEARANCE.

[For practice under the Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act. see Gam. Ch. Orders, 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 54, 55, 56, 57 157; G. O. (1867), 25-43, 113.

V. 1. Generally: its Effect: Effect of its Want.

1. Notice of motion, to take a bill as confessed against some defendants under the 46th G. O., need not be given to another defendant for whom a parliamentary appearance has been entered.—Tarrant v. Allen, S. & Sc. 676. (R.)

2. If a party has appeared in a cause, it is unnecessary to apply for liberty to serve him with an order of the Court, although he resides out of the jurisdiction.—Smith v. Rooney, Jo. & Car. 104. (E.E.)

3. When a judgment creditor out of the jurisdiction has been served with subpoena and notice under the 22nd and 15th G. O., and the memorandum has been entered under the 16th G. O., it is not necessary to enter a parliamentary appearance, and take the bill pro confesso against the party, in order to bind him by the proceedings.—Burroughs v. Molloy, 7 I. E. R. 6. (R.)

4. The deft. resided out of the jurisdiction. An order was made on the 12th of Dec. to substitute service of subpoena and notice on W., the solicitor for the deft. in the transactions to which the suit related. It did not state when the deft. was to appear, as required by the 31st G. O. when the subpoena is served out of Ireland. The subpoena required the deft. to appear in eight days and to answer in two months. A side-bar rule having been entered by the ptf., a parliamentary appearance was entered on the 8th of January. On the 12th of March the deft. entered a common appearance. Held, that if the order of the 12th of Dec. was irregular in not stating where the defendant was to appear, the irregularity was waived by the common appearance.

Semle—The proceedings were regular; for where an order is made under the general authority of the Court, to substitute service on the solicitor of a deft. who resides out of the jurisdiction, the service is to be considered a service within the jurisdiction, and the deft. must appear and answer within the time limited by the 31st G. O., as mentioned in the notice.—Johnston v. Tottenham, 11 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

5. Some of the defts. had been served out of the jurisdiction with subpoenas, but did not appear, and none of the defts. had answered the bill, although the time allowed for that purpose had expired as to all. Held, that the case came within the meaning of the 25th G. O. Parliamentary appearances were directed to be entered for the defts. who had been served out of the jurisdiction, and that the cause be set down for hearing pro confesso.—Fitzgerald v. Quinlan, 12 I. E. R. 393. (E.E.)

6. When a suit has been instituted, and subsequently a cause petition is presented for the same object, the petition should state the existence of the suit. It is no objection to a motion to discharge the Court's order, that the respondent did not appear in the Master's office.—McConkey v. Gwynne, 4 I. Jur. 146. (C.)

7. The 20th Rule of April 1861 does not apply to cases of persons lodging caveats "in the goods," who are not by interest entitled to do so. In such cases, an appearance entered, accompanied by a notice in the terms of that Rule, and the caveat, will be set aside, with costs.—Russell v. R., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 40. (P.)

V. 2. When substituted: its Incidents.

8. Ptf. neglected to enter for deft. an appearance, within the period which the G. R. allows for that purpose. The Court, without compelling him to enter an appearance, discharged him from custody.—Creagh v. Mahony, 2 Jones, 342. (E.E.)

9. A parliamentary appearance may be entered against a member of parliament, under G. O. 13.

A second parliamentary appearance having been entered irregularly, the first was allowed to stand.

A deft., applying to set aside the parliamentary appearance, need not appear, or adopt the appearance.

Semle—Service of a subpoena is not such a proceeding within G. O. 58 as is waived by an amendment of the bill.—Denny v. O'Connell, S. & Sc. 116. (R.)

10. When husband and wife, defts., are separately served with subpoena within the jurisdiction, and the husband alone appears, ptf. cannot enter a parliamentary appearance for the wife, and proceed to take the bill pro confesso against her separately; nor will the Court award an attachment against the husband for not having entered an appearance for his wife. The proper course, since the new G. Os. is for ptf. to move to set aside the appearance which the husband had entered for himself alone.—Fitzpatrick v. Hackett, S. & Sc. 128. (R.)

11. Practice as to entering an appearance for a deft. served out of the jurisdiction, pursuant to the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.—Atkinson v. Caldwell, 3 I. E. R. 190. (E.E.)

12. When service of subpoena upon a deft. who has gone abroad has been substituted, and no appearance was entered for him—Held, the 2nd G. O. of February 1839 applied, and that a parliamentary appearance might be entered for him.—Wise v. The Bishop of Cork, Flan. & K. 390. (R.)

1. Service of process under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82, allowed, and appearance entered, when the affidavit of service was sworn before a J. P. of the county of M., in America; and deft. was not personally known to the person who served the process.—Atkinson v. Watson, Long. & T. 108. (E.E.)

2. When a deft. is served with subpoena in Ireland, the Court has no jurisdiction to make an order that a parliamentary appearance be entered for an adult deft., or that the Clerk in Court should be appointed to appear and answer for a minor deft. after the fourteen days specified in the 33rd Rule have expired; the side-bar order not having been entered within such fourteen days.—Anonymous, 11 I. E. R. 584. (R.)

3. Parliamentary appearances having been entered for minors within the fourteen days specified by the 33rd Rule, the Court amended the side-bar rules and appearances after the fourteen days had elapsed.—Egan v. Nolan, 11 I. E. R. 585. (R.)

4. A cause is not out of Court as against a deft., for whom the parliamentary appearance has been entered, though more than a year has elapsed since such appearance.

But the Court will exercise a discretion in granting or withholding an order pro confesso in such a case, and will not be bound to act on an old parliamentary appearance.

In this case the parliamentary appearance was entered in Nov. 1846, and an order pro confesso was granted in April 1848.—Blakeney v. B., 13 I. E. R. 84. (R.)

VI. 1. Its Effect.

5. A receiver having neglected to lodge his balance, pursuant to the Master's order, an attachment was issued against him, directed to the sheriffs, who made a return of non est inventus. It was afterwards renewed, and a similar return made. It was then directed to the coroner who made an improper return. An attachment was issued against the coroner which also was renewed from time to time. On taxation, the Master refused to allow the ptf. the costs of those proceedings which he had taken against the receiver and against the coroner. The Court refused in the first instance to allow those costs out of the estate, as it did not appear that the receiver or his sureties were insolvent, but directed the recognizance to be put in suit and the motion to stand over.

Payment of the amount for which the attachment was issued against the receiver would not discharge the contempt. He would still be liable to the costs of the proceedings against him; and, if he could be identified with the coroner, perhaps also for the costs of the proceedings against the coroner.—Erskine v. Baker, 7 I. Jur. 25. (R.)

VI. 2. When and in what Cases an Attachment will be granted: Cause against it.

6. An attachment will not be directed to the coroner until legal grounds for doing so have been laid.—Malcomson v. Gregory, H. & Jon. 152. (E.E.)

7. A deft. being in custody under a ne exeat, a final decree to pay a sum was made against him. Held, that, within a limited time, the Court would discharge him therefrom, but would give ptf. liberty meanwhile to attach deft. for non-payment.—Robinson v. Harris, H. & Jon. 588. (E.E.)

8. A sheriff, refusing to try to execute an attachment issued to compel an appearance in an equity suit, will be attached.—Morgan v. Copeland, 1 Jones, 248. (E.E.)

9. When husband and wife are separately served with a subpoena, and the husband enters an appearance for himself alone, ptf. cannot enter a parliamentary appearance for the wife, and proceed to take the bill pro confesso against her separately. The Court will not award an attachment against the husband for not having entered an appearance for his wife.—Fitzpatrick v. Hackett, S. & Sc. 128. (R.)

10. When a party has been arrested under an attachment, and mistakenly discharged by the sheriff, any application to renew the attachment must be made upon notice to the party.

Quære—Can such an application be sustained under any circumstances? — Cunningham v. M'Cambie, S. & Sc. 427. (R.)

1. It is not cause against an attachment for not taking out leases under the Court, that the tenant was unable to procure sufficient sureties; did not get into possession; and was informed by the receiver's solicitor, that, if he did not procure securities within the next eight days, the next bidder would get the lands.—Humble v. H., S. & Sc. 670. (R.)

2. The letting of land in con-acre is but a mode of farming it.

Therefore the Court will not attach the inheritor for receiving rent from his con-acre tenants, though they have been served with the order to pay their rents to the receiver.—Close v. Brady, Jon. & Car. 186. (E.E.)

3. Solvent parties rescued a distress made by a receiver. The Court granted against them a conditional order for an attachment, and intimated that the receiver should proceed also at Quarter Sessions.—Mahon v. M., Fl. & K. 18. (R.)

4. When a respondent interferes with rents over which a receiver has been appointed, the Court will, upon notice to the party, grant in the first instance an absolute order for an attachment.—Thomas v. T., Fl. & K. 621. (R.)

5. To ground an attachment for non-performance of a decree to pay money, it is not sufficient merely to produce and tender to deft. ptf.'s receipt for the money when the demand is made. The money must be demanded under power of attorney from ptf., and that fact must appear by the affidavit supporting the attachment motion.—Gregory v. Hand, 2 I. E. R. 93. (E.E.)

6. To warrant a party in issuing a writ of replevin, he should have been in clear and unequivocal possession of the thing replevied, when it was taken. If he issues the writ under improper circumstances, he will be attached for contempt; the writ will be quashed; and the goods ordered to be restored.—Comerford v. Blake, 2 I. E. R. 176. (C.)

7. When a decree for a sale contains the usual direction, that all proper and necessary parties shall join in conveying to the purchaser; if one of such parties, being bound by the decree and within the jurisdiction, afterwards refuses to execute the conveyance, he will be attached in the first instance. The Court will not order the Master to execute it in his name, under the statute, until it appears that an attachment cannot induce him to execute it propria manu.—Usher v. Scanlan, 3 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

8. A purchaser cannot be attached for not completing his purchase until after a report of good title has been obtained.—Vincent v. Goig, 3 I. E. R. 480. (R.)

9. On the 14th of March 1838, the purchaser of lands sold under the decree, and over which a receiver had been appointed, went into possession of them. The receiver died; and in May 1842, the inheritor, who was beneficially entitled to the arrears of rent due on the 1st Nov. 1837, applied for attachments for non-payment thereof, against the under-tenants. The Court refused the aid of its process after such a lapse of time.—D'Arcy v. Sherry, 4 I. E. R. 690. (E.E.)

10. A minor, being ordered to execute a conveyance to a purchaser, at her mother's instigation, refused. The Court granted a conditional order to attach the minor for refusing; and against her mother for interfering to prevent the deed's execution.—M'Cartney v. Simonton, 5 I. E. R. 594. (E.E.)

11. Tenants of lands sold under decree refused to give copies of their leases. The Court ordered them to produce their leases to ptf.'s attorney to enable him to take compared copies. Some tenants disobeyed that order. Upon an undertaking from the purchaser and the parties in the cause to confirm the leases—Held, that an attachment should issue against those tenants, unless they produced their leases, and allowed copies to be taken.—Scott v. Miller, 6 I. E. R. 120. (E.E.)

12. Before an attachment can issue for the non-performance of a decree or order of the Court, personal service of such decree or order must be effected.—Whistler v. Aylward, In re Fitton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 1. (C.)

13. An application for an attachment against a party for not executing the purchase deed pursuant to the decree, should be on motion, and the order will be absolute in the first instance.—Brennan v. Carroll, 7 I. E. R. 196. (R.)

14. Every decree and order must be served on the party to obey it, pursuant to the 104th G. O., before any attachment can issue for disobedience thereof. When a solicitor issued an attachment without having served the order on the party, the Court set aside the attachment, with costs against the solicitor.

An order to perform an act "forthwith" means within a reasonable time.—Mackinnon v. Palmer, 7 I. E. R. 203. (R.)

15. Practice under the 105th G. O. in issuing a sequestration, when there has been no attachment.—In re Powell, 7 I. E. R. 452. (C.)

16. When an action at law has been commenced against a party for irregularly issuing an attachment, and arresting the deft. under it, it is in the discretion of the Court to restrain the action.

The Court will not restrain the action when serious or substantial damage has been sustained.—McKinnon v. Palmer, 7 I. E. R. 496 (R.)

1. A counsel for a defendant published in a newspaper what purported to be a report of the proceedings in this Court. This report was exaggerated, incorrect, and injurious, and contained unjustifiable imputations upon the plaintiff. A motion was made to attach the counsel for a contempt of Court. Held, that though the publication might be libellous, yet, the Court, not being satisfied that it was calculated to obstruct the free course of justice, ought not to commit him for contempt.

The several classes of cases in which Courts of Justice have power to commit for contempts fully considered. In all the cases in which Courts have committed for constructive contempts (except Cann v. C.) the publication was either calculated to produce false evidence or attributed perjury to the witnesses pending the suit.

Whatever may be the privilege of counsel, addressing a Court or jury, to comment upon the character of parties or witnesses, such privilege does not justify counsel in publishing such speech, if it contain defamatory matter.—Birch v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 93. (R.)

2. The interest in the lease of lands, over which a receiver had been appointed, was evicted by the head landlord for non-payment of rent. Afterwards the lands were redeemed by a mortgagee, and the receiver restored. The Court refused to grant an attachment against sub-tenants for non-payment of rent during the period of the broken gales; one before the eviction, the other after.—Barrett v. Connellan, 1 I. Jur. 66. (R.)

3. When a receiver has been appointed, an attachment will be granted against a party who, having had notice of that appointment, interferes with the rents before the order has been served upon the tenants.—McAlpine v. St. George, 1 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

4. When the order to pay rent has been served on all tenants of the lands, and A. succeeds one of them in possession, it is not necessary to serve A. with the order to pay, for the purpose of obtaining an attachment for non-payment of rent.—Roche v. Collins, 1 I. Jur. 282. (R.)

5. It is an open question whether this Court will grant an attachment for the rescue of a distress. The question has not been concluded by Ford v. Head, 8 I. E. R. 371, and Mahon v. M., Fl. & K. 18.—Thompson v. Irwin, 2 I. Jur. 53. (R.)

6. An attachment does not lie against a sheriff for not taking a replevin bond.—Donnelan v. Bloise, 2 I. Jur. 304. (C.)

7. If a sheriff is charged with being in collusion with a party against whom an attachment has issued, the practice is to apply that the sheriff should amend his return, and not for an attachment against him.—McCulloch v. Legg, 5 I. Jur. 23. (R.)

8. A rentcharge of £100 was granted out of lands, part of which was let to two tenants, whose rents amounted to £155, and who, by the same deed, attorned to the grantee. A receiver having been appointed over the rentcharge, on petition under the Judgment Acts, the grantor distrained the tenants for £55, the balance of their rents over the rentcharge. Held, that the Court had, by appointing a receiver, attached the whole rent payable by the tenants; and an attachment was awarded in the petition matter.—Hayden v. Shearman, 2 I. C. R. 137. (R.)

9. An affidavit showing cause against a conditional order for an attachment was filed without presenting a petition. The Court, on motion, directed that the notice to show cause should be struck out of the list, and that the conditional order should be made absolute in the office.—In re Dillons, 4 I. C. R. 35. (R.)

10. The appointment in a suit in the Court of Ch. in England, of a receiver over lands in Ireland, operates only as against the parties in that suit; but does not affect the jurisdiction of the Court of Ch. in Ireland to appoint a receiver over the same lands, and to punish by attachment any interference with him in the exercise of his duties. An attachment was accordingly awarded against the bailiff of a receiver appointed by the Court of Ch. in England over lands in the county Cork, for interfering with the collection of rent by a receiver subsequently appointed by the Court of Ch. in Ireland.—Ferguson v. Coote, 7 I. Jur. 175. (M.O.)

11. When parties signed an undertaking to endorse bills to secure a composition after bankruptcy, but afterwards refused to do so, on the ground that they did not understand what they were called upon to sign, and that the bankrupt led them astray as to his circumstances—Held, that they were not at liberty to withdraw the undertaking which they had signed; and that an attachment should issue against them within a week, if they did not sign the bills.—Re Fahy, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 322. (B.)

VI. 3. Affidavits in Support of. See PRACTICE, AFFIDAVITS.

VI. 4. Discharge from Attachment.

12. An order was made under the Contempt Act (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16), to discharge a debt, from custody under an attachment for non-payment of costs, and the costs were directed to be a charge upon funds reported in the cause as due to the debt.

The Court is bound to exercise its power to discharge a party in custody for a contempt, in all cases in which the purposes of justice will not be answered by detaining him in custody.—Joyce v. J., S. & Sc. 703. (R.)

13. An order was made under the Contempt Act (5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16), to discharge a debt.

from custody under an attachment for the non-production of a deed, upon payment of the costs of the attachment proceedings; the debt. and his solicitor having sworn that they could not procure the deed, and that the reference thereto in the debt.'s answer, as being in his possession, had being made through inadvertence and mistake.—Nugent v. N., S. & Sc. 704. (R.)

1. A tenant, who had been attached for non-payment of rent, was discharged from the contempt under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16; but committed for the rent and costs, so as to give the Insolvent Court jurisdiction.—Smith v. S., S. & Sc. 709. (R.)

2. A debt. having been imprisoned eight months, for breach of an injunction against breaking up ancient pasture lands, was discharged from custody, upon undertaking to lay them down again.—Scully v. Skehane, S. & Sc. 710. (R.)

3. The debt., while attending the Court of Q. Sessions, pursuant to his recognizance to prosecute, was arrested under a commission of rebellion for not answering the ptf.'s bill. The Court discharged him from custody.—Graves v. M'Carthy, 2 Jon. 626. (E.E.)

4. A tenant, arrested under an attachment for non-payment of rent, is entitled to his discharge on payment of the sum and costs marked on the writ; and is not to be kept in custody until after payment of the costs of making absolute the conditional order.—Grattan v. Donegal, 2 I. Jur. 98. (R.)

5. A respondent is not entitled to his discharge from custody under a ne exeat regno, upon the ground that he was made amenable to that writ by an arrest under a warrant issued on informations sworn by the petitioner, in respect of the same matters which were in question in the suit; even though the prosecution instituted in pursuance of those informations be eventually abandoned, if the petitioner appear to have had a bona fide intention of prosecuting the criminal proceedings at the time of procuring the arrest.—Kelly v. Birch, 8 I. C. R. 466; 7 I. Jur. 73. (C.)

VI. 5. Against Prisoners.

6. Semble—To fix the Marshal with the amount of a writ, the writ must be delivered to him or to one of his officers. Mere delivery to a person who opened the Marshalsea door is insufficient.

The Marshal of the F.-c. Marshalsea cannot detain a prisoner upon a writ directed to the Sheriffs of the city of Dublin.—Napier v. Molyneux, S. & Sc., 435. (R.)

VI. 6. Service of.

7. Before an attachment for non-performance of a decree or order of the Court can issue, personal service of such decree or order must be effected.—Whistler v. Ayboord, In re Fitton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden 1. (C.)

VI. 7. Entry of.

VI. 8. Execution of Attachment: Return to.

8. A writ of assistance will not be granted to aid the sheriff in executing an attachment directed to him, which issued against a tenant under the Court for non-payment of his rent.—Meagher v. M., 1 Jon. & L. 31. (C.)

VI. 9. For want of Answer.

[See Gen. Order of 1843, 43; Ch. Ireland Act 1867.]

9. When no material discovery from a defendant is necessary, the plaintiff's proper course is to proceed to take the bill as confessed for want of an answer. In such case the plaintiff should not issue an attachment against the defendant for want of an answer, under the 38th G. O.—Johnson v. M'Auley, S. & Sc. 707. (R.)

10. Except in the case of a bill for discovery, an attachment for want of an answer should not be issued. If issued, it will be set aside, since the suit's object may be fully attained by taking the bill pro confesso.—O'Brien v. Manders, 2 I. E. R. 39. (R.)

11. A bill charged that deeds were "in the possession of said debts., or some or one of them." Two debts. allowed the bill to be taken as confessed against them. All the others answered by positively denying possession of the deeds. The Court refused to act upon the argumentative conclusion, as an admission by the debts. against whom the bill had been taken as confessed, that the deeds were in their possession, though ptf.'s solicitor offered to make an affidavit of the fact that those debts.' solicitor had distinctly admitted to him that they had possession of the deeds. In such a case, ptf.'s course is to proceed by attachment for want of an answer, and not to take the bill pro confesso.—Parcell v. Langston, 4 I. E. R. 443. (R.)

12. When an attachment issued for want of answer a few days after the time for answering had expired, without any notice, and there appeared not to be any intention on the part of the debt. to make away with the property, an account of which was sought, the Court discharged the debt., without requiring him to pay any costs, on his undertaking to answer.

Although it is the strict right of a plaintiff to issue an attachment when the time for answering has expired, the Court will not allow the practice to be used oppressively.—Sharpe v. S., 2 I. Jur. 114. (R.)

VI. 10. Attachment for Costs.

[See also COSTS.]

1. The Remembrancer having been appointed guardian to a minor defendant, upon process of contempt for want of an appearance, the Court, upon motion of the minor by her mother and testamentary guardian, allowed her to answer by her testamentary guardian, "paying the costs as offered by the defendant's notice of the 30th Jan.; the costs to be paid within one week after taxation, and the answer to be filed within one week after payment of such costs."

The notice of the 30th January, served by the minor's mother, informed the plaintiff that she had appeared, and was about to answer for the minor. It contained an offer to pay the costs occasioned by the Remembrancer's appointment as guardian. The minor's answer was afterwards filed, and accepted by the plaintiff. The costs not having been paid, the Court granted an attachment against the guardian for non-payment of them.—Brady v. Finnegan, Jo. & Car. 426. (E.E.)

2. After service of a subpoena for costs, the party liable is allowed by the practice of the Court eight days to pay the costs. An attachment sued out before that time has expired is irregular, and will be set aside. But when the party was in custody under an execution when the attachment issued, it was set aside without costs, the party undertaking not to bring an action in respect of the arrest or detention.

An attachment sued out irregularly may be withdrawn, though executed, and another attachment may be sued out on the same subpoena.—Brennan v. Kenny, 2 I. C. R. 94; 4 I. Jur. 112. (R.)

3. Money in the sheriff's hands, levied under an attachment for costs, awarded by a decree, remains in custodia legis, and is not, without further order, the property of the party who has issued the attachment.

An attachment for costs was issued by A. and B. (A.'s solicitor) against C., who paid the amount to the sheriff, and lodged with him a sequestration for a larger amount against A. Held, that the sheriff was not justified in paying the amount received on the attachment to the sequestrators, without the order of the Court.

Costs are decreed to be paid by C. to A., or B. his solicitor. An attachment is delivered to the sheriff. C., who has a demand against A., issues a sequestration for it; pays the costs to the sheriff; and lodges the sequestration with the sheriff.

Semble—If the money be paid into Court, B.'s lien for costs will prevail over C.'s sequestration.—Williams v. Reeves, 12 I. C. R. 173. (R.)

4. An attachment for non-payment of costs, ordered to be paid within six days after service of order, will not be granted until after a personal demand for costs has been made.—In re Crean's Goods, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 181. (P.)

VI. 11. *With Proclamations.*VII. Attachment against Property.

5. In a foreclosure suit, there being a surplus fund after payment of reported incumbrances, and the mortgagor being dead, a puisne judgment creditor obtained an order under 23rd sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, to charge with the amount of the judgment the surplus fund, the residue of the purchase-money of real estate sold under the decree. Held, that the fund was to be considered either as real estate belonging to the heir-at-law of the deceased judgment debtor, or as personalty belonging to his personal representative; and that the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, does not give jurisdiction to attach by a charging order the property of a deceased debtor in the hands of his representative.

Semble—It is very questionable whether the 23rd sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, extends to money.—Wallace v. McCann, 4 I. E. R. 522; Flan. & K. 510. (R.)

6. The 23rd and 24th secs. of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, are to be read in connection; and therefore the charging order under that statute is first a conditional order ex parte, to be made absolute; which last is the order contemplated by the statute.—In re Dunscombe, 9 I. E. R. 4. (R.)

7. To obtain a charging order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, it is not necessary that the judgment should be revived. The Court granted the order on the petition of husband and wife, on a judgment obtained by the wife dum sola, without its having been revived.—Irwin v. Nesbit, 13 I. E. R. 125. (R.)

8. A rentcharge of £100 was granted out of lands, part of which were let to two tenants whose rents amounted to £155, and who by the same deed attorned to the grantee. A receiver having been appointed over the rentcharge on petition under the Judgment Acts, the grantor distrained the tenants for £55, the balance of their rent over the rentcharge. Held, that the Court, by appointing the receiver, had attached the whole rent payable by the tenants; and an attachment was awarded in the petition matter.—Hayden v. Shearman, 2 I. C. R. 137. (R.)

9. Funds in Court in an administration suit were decreed to be paid to A., "as administrator of his late wife," but the Master's report had not been made up showing the amount payable, or whether A. was entitled to any sum in his own right. B., a judgment creditor of A., sought a charging order under the 23rd and 24th sections of the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, upon the funds in Court to the credit of the suit, or whatever portion thereof A. should be entitled to. Held, that A.'s interest in the funds did not justify the Court in charging them by an order under that Act. The funds were directed to be impounded for fourteen days, to give B. an opportunity of filing a cause petition to establish his right.—Burns v. Owen, 6 L. Jur. 192. (R.)

1. An attachment for £6. 17s. 7d., payable under an order of the Court of Ch., was issued in 1837, and was renewed in 1848, but not afterwards, as it could not now be executed in consequence of the 11 & 12 Vic., c. 28. The Court gave liberty to issue a fi. fa. for the amount.—Fenton v. F., 7 L. Jur. 26. (R.)

2. The order made by a Court of Law, under ss. 132, 133, 134, and 135 of the C. L. P. Act 1853, to attach stock standing to the credit of a debtor in a cause in the Court of Ch., does not per se operate as a seizure of, or a charge on the stock.

Semble—The lodging of such an order with the Accountant-General, without obtaining an order of the Court of Ch., does not charge the stock.

Semble—A conditional order does not attach the fund, under the C. L. P. Act.

A conditional order to charge funds in Ch. was obtained in a Law Court, under the C. L. P. Act, on the 30th of June; made absolute on the 8th of August; and lodged with the Accountant-General on the 14th of Nov. A conditional order to charge the same fund was obtained in Ch. by another creditor, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, on the 1st of August; lodged with the Accountant-General on the 7th of August; and made absolute on the 18th of Nov. Held, that the creditor who had obtained the order in Ch. was entitled to the fund in priority to the other.—French v. Balfie, 6 I. C. R. 63; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 299. (R.)

IX. 3. Bill, Amended.

[See PLEADING, BILL, II, 8.]

5. A widow filed a bill to raise arrears of her jointure charged on lands by settlement. Deft.'s answer denied the husband's power to jointure, since he had, at the settlement's date, only an estate tail, which was not barred afterwards. An amended bill, praying for dower, if ptf. was not entitled to jointure, was then filed. Deft. neither answered the amended bill, nor appeared at the hearing. Ptf. was decreed entitled to dower, and to an account of the arrears. Held, that the amended bill was a continuation of the original suit; and that deft. could not, when taking the account, set up in the office the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40, which limits to six years the recovery of arrears of dower, though the amended bill was not filed until after that Act came into operation, and although the original bill had been filed before that date.—Smith v. Walsh, 1 I. E. R. 167. (E.E.)

6. The amended bill is the bill. Therefore, though the original bill may have been answered, it is improper to apply that the amendments may be taken as confessed. The application should be, that the bill may be taken as confessed.—O'Grady v. Barry, 1 I. E. R. 296. (R.)

7. Under G. O. 59 (Nov. 1834), when the bill is amended after answer, the deft. having notice that his answer to the amendments is required, is not entitled to a notice to press for his answer.—Knox v. K., 2 I. E. R. 212. (R.)

8. As a general rule, it is improper to introduce into counsel's briefs both the original and amended bills.—Higgins v. Bateman, 2 Dr. & War. 70. (C.)

9. If, the amendments be too long for interlineation, a bill is amended by new engrossment; ptf. is not obliged to furnish a copy of the re-engrossed bill: it suffices to furnish a copy of the amendments, or to call on deft. to send his copy to be amended.—Fulton v. D'Orsay, 7 I. E. R. 482. (R.)

10. A ptf. may rely on a title, acquired in point of form after the bill has been filed, if it is not inconsistent with his original claim, and is capable of relating back. Therefore, when the devisee of an insolvent debtor filed a bill for renewal, and, the objection having been raised, afterwards procured himself to be appointed assignee, and amended the bill by inserting a statement of that fact.—Held, that he could sustain the bill.—Doyle v. Callow, 12 I. E. R. 241. (C.)

X. BILL OR PETITION, AMENDMENT OF.

[The cases in the I. C. R. refer chiefly to amendments of cause petitions under the Ct. of Ch. (Ir.) Reg. Act 1850, 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89. See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 60, 157, 158: G. O. (1867) 1-40.]

2. Effect of Amendment, and of Motion for leave to Amend.
3. Within what Time: order to Amend in a given Time.
4. When, of Course: when, by Special Application only.
5. Motion to Amend; necessary steps on.
6. Motion to Amend without prejudice; when granted.
7. Other Cases.

X. 1. Amendment of Bill generally: when necessary: when granted: in what cases allowed.

[See also PLEADING II, 8—AMENDED BILL.]

1. Liberty given on motion, after hearing and re-hearing, to amend the prayer, by praying the benefit of proceedings stated in it; a satisfactory reason being given why leave was not asked at the hearing, and the deft. being allowed to answer anew.—Blake v. Foster, Beat. Rep. 464. (C.)

2. In a suit to appoint new trustees, the Court permitted the replication and rejoinder to be withdrawn, and the bill amended by making the infant child of the ptf., born after issue joined, a deft.—Gavacan v. Brophy, 2 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

3. The ptf. and her younger children filed their original bill to raise jointure and portions out of the lands of T. The deft., by answer, insisted that the ptf.'s husband had been tenant in tail of those lands, and that he had not done any act to bar the entail; and claimed the lands as issue in tail. The ptf. then filed what she called an amended bill, making her younger children defts., and claiming dower or jointure out of the same lands.

Quare—Was the latter an original, or an amended bill?—Walsh v. W., Jo. & Car. 52. (E.E.)

4. In a suit for the separate estate of a wife, the husband (an insolvent) and C. were named co-ptfs. On motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, and a cross motion to amend it, liberty was given to amend it by striking out those two co-ptfs.' names, by adding the husband's assignee as deft., and naming S. as the wife's next friend; upon the terms of ptf.'s giving all the defts. security for past costs, making the amendments, and filing a replication within short specified periods, or, in default, the bill to be dismissed, with costs, as against the defendant who made the application.—Sweeney v. Hall, 1 I. E. R. 22; S. & Sc. 662. (R.)

5. A bill may be amended, without an order, once after answer, and after notice to dismiss it for want of prosecution. Such an amendment, made after service of a notice to dismiss, is not cause against the motion to dismiss.—Dycers v. Goulding, 2 I. E. R. 57. (R.)

6. A suit was instituted by husband and wife, in relation to the separate estate of the wife. The husband subsequently became insolvent. The Court allowed the bill to be amended, by making the husband and his assignee defts., and by substituting a person to sue as next friend of the wife, upon the terms of such person giving security by recognizance for bygone, but not for future costs.—Ring v. Nettles, Fl. & K. 51; 3 I. E. R. 53. (R.)

7. When the ptf. assigns his interest in the subject matter of the suit, the Court will not permit his assignee to be made a party by amendment, but will leave him to file a supplemental bill.—McGrath v. Heeran, Fl. & K. 237; 3 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

8. An order to amend without prejudice to process is a side-bar rule which the ptf. takes at his peril.

A deft. who has answered cannot be struck out of the bill by amendment. — v. Zwickerman, 5 I. E. R. 22. (E.E.)

9. An amendment of a married woman's bill, by adding a next friend, allowed.—Johnstone v. Kirkwood, 2 Con. & L. 484. (C.)

10. Semble—If one ptf. desires it, and the defts. assent, the Court will allow the bill to be amended by striking out that ptf.'s name. The other ptf.s. can then make him a deft.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

11. When a state of facts has recently arisen that renders it necessary to amend the bill, the Court will allow a second amendment after answer, though the last of the answers was filed more than twelve months before the notice of motion.—Smith v. Gould, 7 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

12. When a bill has been amended by new engrossment, the matter being too long for interlineation, the ptf. need not furnish a new copy of the re-engrossed bill. It is sufficient to furnish a copy of the amendments, or call upon the deft. to send his copy to be amended.—Fulton v. D'Orsay, 7 I. E. R. 482. (R.)

13. A suit having abated by the death of one deft., the ptf., to revive the suit, filed a bill, setting forth, by way of recital, the matters in the original bill; and, as amendments, stated matters that occurred, some before, and others after the filing of the original bill. Held, this was not an amended bill within the 55th G. O., so as to require a re-statement of the original bill; but that the statement by way of recital was sufficient.

The object of the rule is, to oblige the ptf. to state the whole of his case in one bill, and to prevent the expense of taking out copies of several and successive amended bills, so that the amended bill becomes the only bill, and states the case in full without reference to an original bill. Where this substitution becomes impossible the rule does not apply.

The rule applies to cases in which matters remain as they were when the bill was filed, and not to cases in which subsequent events make it necessary to continue the suit as originally on the record.—Harnett v. Harrington, 7 I. E. R. 502. (R.)

1. In a suit by married women in relation to their separate estates, in which their husbands were made co-ptfs., leave given, after answer, to amend, by striking the names of the latter out of the bill as ptf.s., and making the assignee of one who had become bankrupt, and the others, defts. The amendment does not come within the 50th G. O., so as to make it necessary for the ptf. to join in the affidavit with the solicitor.—Greer v. G., 8 I. E. R. 32. (R.)

2. When one deft. dies after answer, the Court will not permit his devisee to be made a party by amendment.—Listowel v. Callaghan, 8 I. E. R. 472. (R.)

3. Application to amend a petition, verified by affidavit, refused. — v. Steele, 8 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

4. Liberty to amend the bill at the hearing, by including all the creditors, refused.—Connolly v. M'Dermott, 3 Jon. & L. 260. (C.)

5. Plaintiff will not be allowed to amend the bill by putting in issue puisse incumbrances and making the incumbrancers parties, without prejudice to an order to take the bill pro confesso obtained against the principal defendant.—O'Callaghan v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

6. Leave given to amend the bill, without prejudice to the time for answering, under the 52nd Rule, in a matter varying the relief prayed, no copy of the bill having been taken out, and the motion being unopposed.

Quere—Whether it would have been given if opposed?—Law v. Moore, 10 I. E. R. 205. (R.)

7. In Ireland, since the New Rules, leave will be given to amend the bill, although the subject-matter of the amendment occurred after the filing of the bill.—Birch v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

8. A bill, filed in 1844, to raise a sum secured on a term created by a settlement of 1773, stated the proceedings in a suit of A. v. B., by a prior judgment creditor, and prayed the benefit of the decrees and accounts therein; that the decrees might be carried into execution, so far as necessary for the plaintiff's relief; and a sale of the term. The cause stood over at the hearing, to make two minors parties by supplemental bill. One, X., by his answer, impeached the decrees in the suit of A. v. B.; both claimed as purchasers for value under a settlement of 1842, made by W. At the hearing of the supplemental cause in June 1847, plaintiff's counsel contended that X. could not impeach the decrees, as he claimed under W., who had acquiesced in them; and an order was made that the further hearing of the cause should stand over, with liberty to the plaintiff in the meantime to bring before the Court the parties beneficially interested in the decrees in A. v. B. The plaintiff filed a supplemental bill, setting out the whole of the proceedings in A. v. B., and the suit of 1844; certain assignments of the judgment and sum decreed in A. v. B. for the benefit of W.; charging that W. and X., and the parties claiming under the assignment in A.'s right, could not object to have the decrees carried into execution, and praying that they might be carried into execution against them, and that the plaintiff might have the benefit thereof; or if the Court should be of opinion that they could not be carried into execution, according to the terms thereof, with such modification as to the Court should seem meet; and that plaintiff's claim, and all prior and contemporaneous charges might be raised by a sale of the term of 1773. The Court refused to take the bill off the file as irregular. Held, on demurrer, that the order of June 1847, though it authorised the filing of a supplemental bill to bring new parties before the Court, did not warrant the making of a new case; and that the case of estoppel, and the prayer that the decrees might be modified and altered, was a new case and not warranted by the order.

Semble—The frame of the suit and relief prayed being altered, all the necessary parties to the suit of 1844 should be parties, particularly the party representing the term of 1773.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 527. (R.)—[Affid.: 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)]

9. Orders to amend, without prejudice to an order pro confesso, should be made only when the amendment cannot prejudice that defendant.—Baker v. M'Dermott, 1 I. Jur. 162. (C.)

10. After issue joined and witnesses examined by the defendant, the plaintiff will not be permitted to amend the bill by introducing new matter which will alter the frame of the suit, and to which an answer is required.—O'Keefe v. Lanigan, 1 I. Jur. 328. (R.)

11. The bill having been dismissed against a defendant by the 64th Rule, a motion for leave to amend generally was refused with costs. An amendment under the 49th Rule, by which the same defendant was made a party, was held regular, and an order to take the bill pro confesso against him was made.—Hornibrooke v. Ware, 12 I. E. R. 440. (R.)

12. Liberty to amend the bill was given after replication filed, by striking out a party, and showing that he was not a necessary party, without prejudice to the replication or depositions; the amendment being such as the Lord Chancellor could make at the hearing.—Hammond v. Molloy, 2 I. Jur. 69. (R.)

1. The death of a defendant, and the pendency of proceedings to raise a personal representative, are special circumstances such as will induce the Court to relax the 50th G. O. 1843, and permit a second amendment more than six weeks after the last answer has been filed.—Clelland v. Kerr, 2 I. Jur. 99. (R.)

2. An annuitant, defendant in an annuity bill, died before the other defendant answered, but after appearance. The Court permitted the bill to be amended by stating the death of this defendant, and of the payment of the arrears of the annuity to the time of the death.—Owens v. O., 2 I. Jur. 167. (R.)

3. Amendments of cause petitions are to be made without alteration, erasure, or interlineation, by stating the matter of the amendment at the foot of the affidavit to verify, or by endorsement thereon.

Form of order on amendments of cause petitions.

In general the petitioner must abide the costs of the motion for leave to amend, and of the amendment.—Graves v. Holland, 1 I. C. R. 123. (R.)

4. Leave to amend the bill, without prejudice to an injunction, will not be granted as of course. The motion must be made without delay, and be supported by an affidavit stating the proposed amendments, and when the matter of them came to the ptf.'s knowledge.

When the answer had been filed in April, an application made in August for leave to amend by introducing charges and an interrogatory founded thereon, in avoidance of a defence set up by the answer, was refused.

The practice in Ireland in this respect is correctly stated in Donegal v. Berry (1 Hog. 46), and differs from the practice in England as stated in Ferrand v. Hamer (4 M. & Cr. 113). —O'Beirne v. O'B., 1 I. C. R. 152; 3 I. Jur. 65. (R.)

5. When an injunction obtained on filing the bill has upon the coming in of the deft.'s answer been continued until the hearing, and the ptf. for the first time seeks to amend his bill without prejudice to the injunction, the Court will grant a motion to that effect if the proposed amendments be not inconsistent with the case previously made by the bill for the injunction. To sustain such a motion there is not any necessity for an affidavit stating when the matter of the proposed amendments came to the knowledge of the plaintiff.

Donegal v. Berry (1 Hog. 46), and Hamilton v. Patten (1 Cr. & Dix, Ab. Cases, 203), observed upon.—O'Beirne v. O'B., 1 I. C. R. 158; 3 I. Jur. 106. (C.)

6. The Court will allow a petition to be taken off the file, for the purpose of amendment, before answer, and be re-sworn.—Johnson v. Molloy, 3 I. Jur. 190. (C.)

7. A bill was filed in the name of a minor ptf., by next friend. An amendment was sought to be made after the expiration of the time limited by the 50th G. O. (1843). The Court allowed the amendment to be made, on the ground that, as the ptf. was a minor, no decree could be made until his rights were properly stated, which could be done by amendment at the hearing, or by a second bill.—Hamilton v. Wilson, 3 I. Jur. 377. (C.)

8. An answering affidavit to a cause petition having been filed, the petitioner set down the cause for hearing, and subsequently applied for leave to amend. The Court made the usual order for amendment, but made the petitioner pay the respondent his costs of appearing on the motion.

The practice in amending cause petitions stated.

Observations on the practice of filing affidavits in cause petition matters, up to the time of hearing.—Power v. Barron, 2 I. C. R. 112. (R.)

9. Husband and wife were joined as co-ptfs.; the husband's rights being those of a specialty creditor; the wife's, those of a legatee. Held, that she was improperly joined as ptf. The Court allowed the husband to amend by making his wife a deft., to be sued by her next friend.—Evans v. Holton, 4 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

10. When a party has by mistake been made a respondent to a petition, amendment is not necessary; the petition may be dismissed as against him.

The prayer of a petition, when verified, cannot be altered, but must be amended; if necessary, by adding a prayer at foot.—Massy v. Burgess, 4 I. Jur. 75. (R.)

11. Cause petition to administer assets. Referred to the Master, and a discharge filed by the executor, the sole respondent and principal devisee. He alleged that the assets were deficient, and that the other devisee should be brought before the Court. Motion of course to amend the petition's prayer by praying that a competent part of the specifically devised estates might be sold to pay debts; that the proportion to be contributed by each devisee should be ascertained; and that the specific devisee might be bound. Held, that notice of the motion should be served.—Geraghty v. G., 4 I. Jur. 135. (R.)

12. When the petition stated the lease upon which the rent was reserved to be "for lives renewable," it being, in fact, a grant in f.f., the Court dismissed the petition, there being no power in the Court to amend.—Yelverton v. Avonmore, 4 I. Jur. 237. (C.)

13. After answering affidavits had been filed by the respondent, and the cause had come to be heard, counsel for the ptf. applied to let it stand over to amend the petition in particulars pointed out by the deft.'s answer. The Court allowed it to stand over for that purpose, without prejudice to the question of costs. The motion having come on, and the amendment sought by the petitioner being to add the name of a new petitioner, and to make a new case—Held, that such an amendment could not be permitted at that stage of the proceedings.

Semble—The manner of the amendment should be as stated in the notice of this motion.—Browne v. O'Donnell, 6 I. Jur. 158. (C.)

1. Before a cause petition was set down for hearing, the respondent's solicitor informed petitioner's solicitor that respondent was ill, and could not file affidavits. Petitioner's solicitor misunderstood him, and set down the cause for hearing. The Court granted liberty to the respondent to file his affidavit notwithstanding.

When a party wishes to amend a cause petition he must serve notice, and must set out the amendments in full.—Boyle v. Guinness, 6 I. Jur. 161. (R.)

2. A cause petition was allowed to be amended by stating that one of the respondents was in insolvent circumstances, and had taken possession of a part of the assets which were necessary to pay the petitioner's demand.

Leave was also given to enter a side-bar order to strike a respondent out of the petition, on payment to him of his costs up to the time of the notice, but without prejudice to the petitioner having his costs at the hearing, if the Court should think fit.

Form of side-bar order entered in the office without motion.—Taaffe v. French, 7 I. Jur. 234. (R.)

3. In future, no order to amend a cause petition will be made except on production of the Rolls certificate or the Lord Chancellor's order, referring the matter to the Master under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15.—Porter v. Archbold, 4 I. C. R. 651; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (R.)

4. The Court has not jurisdiction on motion, without a petition, to pay out funds lodged under the Trustee Relief Act.—Ex parte Stock, 5 I. C. R. 341. (R.)

5. When a petitioner prays relief on a particular agreement, and a different agreement is produced, the proper course to be taken is for the party to amend his petition, abandoning the relief originally prayed, and praying relief on the agreement produced. If he continues to rely on the original agreement, and seeks relief in the alternative, the petition must be dismissed.—Daly v. Coghlan, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 150. (R.)

6. A petition was dismissed at the hearing, because there was not sufficient notice to postpone a registered deed under which the respondent claimed. A supplemental petition in the nature of a bill of review was filed, putting in issue new matter to prove actual notice; and was set down to be heard before the Court of Appeal along with the re-hearing of the original decree. Their Lordships being of opinion that actual notice was proved, but that the title of the petitioner to the property was not sufficiently clear, remitted the cause petition and supplemental cause to the Court of Ch., and allowed the petitioner to amend, by adding parties, and otherwise as he might be advised, in reference to his title.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 401. (C.A.)

7. In 1828, a bill to raise a charge out of lands was filed in the Exch.; a decree to account was made in 1880. Held, that a petition praying a benefit of the former proceedings could not be referred under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15. Leave was given to amend the petition; the petition to be referred on production of the certificate of amendment.—Neary v. Callan, 10 I. C. R. 285. (C.)

8. H., tenant for life, with remainder to his children as he should appoint, in default of appointment to them equally, appointed to his eldest son, subject to charges for his adult younger children.

The tenant for life and the appointees joined in executing to the appellant a mortgage, to secure a debt of the tenant for life.

The eldest son afterwards filed a petition, alleging the appointment to have been made in pursuance of an agreement between the tenant for life and the appellant; and that the mortgage was a fraud on the power.

The petition also contained charges of actual fraud by the appellant upon the appointees.

The petition prayed that the mortgage might be set aside, as fraudulent, and as a fraud on the power. Held, that, at the hearing, the petition might be amended, by praying that the deed of appointment might be set aside.—Skellon v. Flanagan, 14 I. C. R. 484. (C.A.)—[See s. c., 15 I. C. R. 303; 9 I. Jur. N. S. 341. (C.A.)]

9. In a suit to establish the contents of a lost will, the contents must be set out in an affidavit, or a copy lodged in the registry, and referred to in the declaration. A record made up in the ordinary form, applicable to an existing will, was, at the hearing, ordered to be amended accordingly.—Connor v. McGettigan, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 338. (P.)

10. A possessory petition cannot be amended.—O'Neill v. McErlaine, 16 I. C. R. 280. (R.)

11. A petition in the nature of a bill of review must be, and must state that it is filed with the Court's leave; otherwise it will be dismissed at the hearing.

Quære—Would the Court, at the hearing, allow this amendment; that the petition had been filed with the Court's leave?—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

X. 2. Effect of Amendment: and of Motion for Liberty to Amend.

1. A formal amendment of the bill is not a proceeding which will keep alive a cause, which is out of Court, until service of a subpoena to elect.—Townsend v. Newenham, S. & Sc. 700. (R.)

2. An amendment of the bill under G. R. 54, with notice to deft. to answer the amendments and exceptions which had been allowed by the Master, is a waiver of the exceptions, as ptf. ought to have proceeded under G. R. 56.—O'Grady v. Barry, S. & Sc. 371. (R.)

3. In general, amending a bill is a waiver of exceptions to the answer; but under the Order of 13th June 1730—(see G. O. 54, 27th March 1843)—deft. is, in such a case, bound to answer not only the amendments, but also the exceptions.—Burroughs v. McIlwain, 3 Dr. & War. 150; 2 Con. & L. 95. (C.)

4. At the hearing the cause was allowed to stand for parties, who then were brought before the Court by supplemental bill, which contained new matter affecting the parties to the original bill. Held, that they should be also parties to the amended bill.—McNamara v. Blake, 1 I. Jur. 317. (C.)

5. A material amendment of the bill is a waiver of a parliamentary appearance.—O'Brien v. Clancy, 12 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

6. The G. O. are not so absolutely binding on the Court that they cannot be in any instance relaxed. The general merits of the case and the like are no grounds for departing from them, but only the conduct of the parties, or events in the course of the suit; and, if in the case there appear the ordinary grounds of equitable relief, such as fraud, surprise, or accident, the Court may give relief against the strict construction of the Orders.

A., a deft., answered in Feb.; other defts. answered in April, on whose answer it was necessary to move for documents, which were not produced pursuant to the order made, until August. In Oct. A. served notice to dismiss the bill under the 82nd Order; and the plaintiff served a notice for liberty to make amendments rendered necessary by the answer and deeds. The Court refused to dismiss the bill.—Downing v. Hodder, 12 I. E. R. 371. (C.)

7. Striking out a deft. is not an amendment which entitles a deft. to further time to answer under the 52nd G. O.—Gouldsberry v. G., 2 I. Jur. 52. (R.)

X. 3. Within what Time; Order to Amend in a given Time.

8. When ptf. amends his bill under G. O. 52, and gives deft. notice, deft. should send his copy to be amended within two days; ptf. should return it amended two days after, requiring, if necessary, an answer. The month will run from the date of the return of the bill and notice, and exclusive of it.

If deft. neglects to send his copy for amendment in two days after requisition, and ptf. returns it in two days after he gets it, the month will commence to run on and from the sixth day after that on which deft. was served with notice to furnish his copy.—Greer v. G., 7 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

9. When ptf. amended his bill bona fide after the deft. was entitled to move to dismiss it, the Court refused to dismiss the bill, but made the plaintiff pay the costs of the motion.—Moore v. Lalor, 9 I. E. R. 148. (R.)

10. An order gave leave to amend a cause petition before the following day, and to file an affidavit verifying the amendment, the respondent to have liberty, within fourteen days, to file affidavits in reply. The amendments were not filed for several days. An affidavit, verifying the amendments in detail, but filed prior to the motion for leave to amend, was relied on as sufficiently complying with the order to amend and verify. The Court, on motion, refused to take the amendment off the file for irregularity; but allowed the respondent fourteen additional days (running from the date of the latter motion), to file affidavits in reply. Costs to be costs in the cause.—Guinness v. Phelps, 6 I. Jur. 889. (R.)

X. 4. When of Course: when by Special Application only.

11. After issue joined, the bill cannot be amended except upon affidavit showing the necessity of the amendments sought.—Malony v. Lowry, H. & Jon. 220. (E.E.)

12. An amendment in the prayer was made after publication passed, and after the cause had been set down for hearing.—Smithwick v. S., H. & Jon. 397. (E.E.)

13. When a bill has been amended once after a demurrer allowed, otherwise than "for the purpose of rectifying any clerical error, or an error in names, dates or sums," it cannot be amended a second time in matter of substance, without the leave of the Court upon special motion.

Three demurrers had been put in to the bill, each by a different deft. The demurrers were allowed and the bill was amended after each demurrer in matter of substance. Held, upon the construction of the 49th, 50th, and 64th G. O., that the amendments (except the first) were irregular, same having been made without the leave of the Court upon special motion, and an amendment having been made after the first demurrer was allowed, which amendment was not for the purpose of rectifying a clerical error or an error in names, dates, or sums.—Fitzpatrick v. Lidwell, 10 I. E. R. 31. (R.)

14. When a bill is demurred to on several grounds, one of which is that there is no affidavit annexed corroborating the statement in the bill of the loss of a deed; and this defect is supplied within the ten days limited by the 64th G. O. (1848)—Held, that the filing of this affidavit was an amendment; and that after the ten days no second amendment could be permitted without leave of the Court.—Lord Cork v. Blennerhassett, 1 I. Jur. 164. (R.)

X. 5. Motion to Amend; necessary steps on.

1. Where a state of facts has recently arisen that renders it necessary to amend the bill, the Court will allow a second amendment after answer, though the last of the answers was filed more than twelve months previous to the notice of motion.—Smith v. Gould, 7 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

2. After the original bill had been answered, the ptf. amended the bill by a new engrossment, and subsequently made further amendments without obtaining an order under the 50th G. O. Held, that those amendments were irregular.

The answer mentioned in the 49th and 50th G. O. means an answer to the original bill.—Nolan v. Ball, 8 I. E. R. 573. (R.)

3. The Court will allow a petition to be taken off the file for the purpose of amendment before answer, and be re-sworn.—Johnson v. Molloy, 8 I. Jur. 190. (C.)

4. A cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act cannot be amended (unless in very plain cases), without notice to those respondents who have entered appearances.—O'Brien v. Tredennick, 4 I. Jur. 135. (R.)

5. After answering affidavits had been filed by the respondent and the cause had come on to be heard, counsel for the ptf. applied to let it stand to amend the petition in particulars pointed out by the deft.'s answer. The Court allowed it to stand for that purpose, without prejudice to the question of costs. The motion having come on, and the amendment sought by the petitioner being to add the name of a new petitioner, and to make a new case—Held, that such an amendment could not be permitted at that stage of the proceedings.

Semble—The manner of the amendment should be as stated in the notice of this motion.—Browne v. O'Donnell, 6 I. Jur. 158. (C.)

X. 6. Motion to Amend without Prejudice: when granted.

6. When process to a sequestration for want of answer had issued, leave to amend the bill, without prejudice to the process, refused, the alteration proposed being such as to materially vary the record.—Foster v. Fox, 8 I. E. R. 514. (E.E.)

7. A formal amendment having been made after the bill had been taken pro confesso, and without having applied under G. O. 51, the Court allowed the amendment to stand, without prejudice to the order to take the bill pro confesso.—Martley v. French, 9 I. E. R. 4. (R.)

8. Ptf. will not be permitted to amend the bill, putting in issue puise incumbrances, and making the incumbrancers parties, without prejudice to an order, to take the bill pro confesso, obtained against the principal deft. —O'Callaghan v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

9. Leave to amend the bill, without prejudice to an injunction, will not be granted as of course. The motion must be made without delay, and be supported by an affidavit stating the proposed amendments, and when the matter of them came to the ptf.'s knowledge.—O'Beirne v. O'B., 1 I. C. R. 152; 3 I. Jur. 65. (R.)—[Revd.: 1 I. C. R. 158; 3 I. Jur. 106. (C.)]

X. 7. Other Cases of Amendment.

10. A., who was deft. as an acting executor, died. The Court gave leave to the ptf. to amend by making the other executors parties in the place of A., without paying A.'s costs. —Pye v. Coppinger, 12 I. E. R. 314. (R.)

11. One of several co-ptfs. was of imbecile understanding at the time when the bill was filed. His name was used without authority. The Court would not order the bill to be taken off the file. Aliter if he were the sole ptf.

Quere—Could the Court, under such circumstances, order the imbecile ptf.'s name to be struck out of the bill?—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 225. (R.)

12. When there are several defts., one of whom only has been required to answer the amendments, the proper course is to move to have the bill taken as confessed, and not to set down the cause for a decree pro confesso.

Notice of the amendment of a bill requiring an answer was served on the 31st of Dec. On the 1st of Feb. (the 31st of Jan. being Sunday), notice was served to move to have the bill taken as confessed. The motion was refused as premature.—Walker v. Daly, 10 I. E. R. 232. (R.)

13. A private Act of Parliament provided that a suit on behalf of an Insurance Company, in the name of the secretary, should not abate by the death of the nominal ptf., but might be continued in the name of the secretary for the time being. Held, that the substitution of the name of the new secretary was not such an amendment as would entitle the deft. to further time to answer.

If, under an order to make such an amendment, the ptf. inserts other matter, the deft. will be entitled to further time to answer, although the further amendment may not be material.—Le Capellain v. The Earl of Kingston, 2 I. Jur. 91. (R.)

XI. BILL PRO CONFESSO. See PRACTICE, DECREE—PRACTICE, EVIDENCE—STATUTES, CONSTRUCTION OF, II. 8.

1. One of several defendants was arrested for not answering a bill for tithe composition. Having been two months in custody, the bill was ordered to be taken pro confesso against him. Practice in taking a bill pro confesso pursuant to the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, rule 10.—Savage v. Carboy, 2 Jcn. 315. (E.E.)

2. In moving to have a bill taken pro confesso under G. O. 46, it is not necessary to include in the same application all the defts. who have neglected to answer. Ptf. may, if he pleases, move against each deft. separately.—M'Loughlin v. M'L., S. & Sc. 113. (R.)

3. G. O. 46, to take a bill pro confesso, does not apply to the case of a deft. out of the jurisdiction who has adopted a parliamentary appearance entered by ptf. after service of subpoena, &c., under the 2 W. 4, c. 33, and 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.—Malone v. Tuite, S. & Sc. 200. (R.)

4. G. O. 46, to take a bill pro confesso, does not apply to the case of a deft. out of the jurisdiction, who has entered an appearance after service of the subpoena, &c., under the 2 W. 4, c. 33, and 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 82.—Williams v. Shaw, S. & Sc. 204. (R.)

5. An answer filed by a ptf. for an infant deft. is an answer within G. O. 46, and entitles ptf. to move to have the bill taken pro confesso against the other defts. who have not answered. A notice that ptf. "would proceed to issue process to enforce deft.'s answer, or proceed to have the bill taken as confessed," is a sufficient monthly notice within G. O. 25.

The Court will encourage a suit to get out of litigation as soon as possible.—Keogh v. Murphy, S. & Sc. 330. (R.)

6. When no deft. has answered, the proceeding to take the bill pro confesso must be under G. O. 45.—Warningham v. Watts, S. & Sc. 492. (R.)

7. Notice of motion to take a bill as confessed against some defts. under the 46th G. O. need not be given to another deft. for whom a parliamentary appearance has been entered.—Tarrant v. Allen, S. & Sc. 676. (R.)

8. Service of the month's notice to answer under G. O. 25 is irregular, when no proceeding in the cause has been taken for more than twelve months.

A formal amendment of the bill is not a proceeding such as will keep alive the cause, which is out of Court until a subpoena to elect is served.

When a ptf. seeks a decree under G. O. 45, he must be prepared to show that all his previous proceedings were perfectly regular.—Townshend v. Newenham, S. & Sc. 700. (R.)

9. When no material discovery from a deft. is necessary, the ptf.'s proper course is to proceed to take the bill as confessed for want of an answer.—Johnson v. M'Auley, S. & Sc. 707. (R.)

10. On motion to take a bill pro confesso against the guardian ad litem of a lunatic, the order was made on the terms of serving notice on the lunatic's nearest relations, and on his guardian.—Crawford v. Kernaghan, 1 Dr. & Wal. 195. (C.)

11. The amended bill is the bill. Therefore, though the original bill may have been answered, it is improper to apply that the amendments may be taken as confessed. The application should be—that the bill may be taken as confessed.—O'Grady v. Barry, 1 I. E. R. 206. (R.)

12. A sole deft.'s answer, filed within two days after a decree pro confesso had been obtained, was allowed to stand, and the decree was set aside, upon terms, although the affidavit grounding the application did not particularly show any grounds of defence upon the merits.—Daly v. Duggan, 1 I. E. R. 315. (R.)

13. Some of the defendants having answered, the original bill was afterwards amended. None of the defendants answered the amended bill. Held, upon motion to take the bill as confessed against such of the defendants as had not answered the original bill, that the proper course was to set down the cause to be heard against all the defendants.—Cahill v. Lambert, Fl. & K. 89. (R.)

14. After an order to have the bill taken as confessed against a defendant, the Court will not permit him to answer without an affidavit of merits.—Delamy v. Doolan, Flan. & K. 182. (R.)

15. When no proceedings have been taken against a defendant within a year, the cause is out of Court as to him, though proceedings have, within that time, been taken against other defendants.—Bartley v. Davis, Fl. & K. 620. (R.)

16. Notwithstanding the 34th G. O. of March 1843, leave given to defendant to file his answer after an order to take the bill as confessed against him, although more than three years had elapsed after the order to take the bill as confessed was pronounced, and the cause was in the Lord Chancellor's term list of causes for hearing; the plaintiff having been himself guilty of delay, there being a full affidavit of merits, and the defendant being put under terms, so as not to postpone the hearing of the cause.—Cruise v. Sheil, 6 I. E. R. 182. (R.)

17. When a cause is set down to be heard pro confesso, formal amendments having been made in the bill, the Court at the hearing will require the matter of the amendments to be stated.—Burrough v. Williamson, 6 I. E. R. 374. (R.)

1. Ptf. is not entitled, as of course, to a decree against a party against whom the bill has been taken pro confesso. The case must be made out against him.—Lloyd v. L., 4 Dr. & W. 354; 2 Con. & L. 592. (C.)

2. When no deft. has answered, ptf.'s proper course is to have the cause set down to be heard pro confesso. He cannot move to take the bill as confessed against one deft. The cause cannot be set down to be heard pro confesso against some of the defts.—Blosse v. Lynch, 7 I. E. R. 335. (E.E.)

3. When the sole deft. died after answer, and a bill of revivor and supplement was filed against his executor and devisees, and the latter did not answer, the proper course is to take the bill pro confesso against them, and not to set down the cause to be heard pro confesso against all the defts.—Burnside v. Mayne, 8 I. E. R. 97. (R.)

4. By suffering the bill to be taken as confessed against him, deft. admits the facts stated in it; but ptf. must show that those facts, so admitted, entitle him to relief.—Simmonds v. Palles, 8 I. E. R. 335; 2 Jon. & L. 489. (C.)

5. A formal amendment having been made after the bill had been taken pro confesso, without having applied under the 51st G. O., the Court permitted the amendment to stand, without prejudice to the order to take the bill pro confesso.—Martley v. French, 9 I. E. R. 4. (R.)

6. Ptf. will not be allowed to amend the bill by putting in issue puisne incumbrances, and making the incumbrancers parties without prejudice to an order to take the bill pro confesso obtained against the principal deft.—O'Callaghan v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

7. When a sequestration for contempt in not answering has been issued against a deft., and the sequestrators are in possession, the Court will not permit the bill to be taken pro confesso, if ptf. elects to continue the sequestrators.—Cormick v. C., 9 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

8. Form of order on motion to take bill as confessed against a person alleged to be of unsound mind.—Swift v. S., 11 I. E. R. 557. (R.)

9. An order to take a bill pro confesso may be made, if there be an answer filed when the motion is moved, though none had been filed when notice of motion was served.—Hilhouse v. Tyndal, 12 I. E. R. 316. (R.)

10. When a bill has been amended after answer, and notice given that no answer is required to the amended bill, the plaintiff cannot set down the cause pro confesso, although the defendant has served notice that he will answer the amendments.—Hamilton v. West, 12 I. E. R. 422. (R.)

11. Appearance on the 26th April; order on the 8th of May, staying proceedings until security for costs should be given. Security given on the 4th of Dec.; cause set down pro confesso on the 24th of Jan., the 23rd being Sunday. Held, irregularly, the deft. having the whole of the 24th to answer.—White v. W., 12 I. E. R. 425. (R.)

12. The bill having been dismissed against a deft. by G. R. 64, a motion for leave to amend generally was refused with costs, but an amendment under G. R. 69, whereby the same deft. was made a party, was held regular; and an order to take the bill pro confesso against him was made.—Hornbrooke v. Ware, 12 I. E. R. 440. (R.)

XII. BILL OF DISCOVERY.

[See also PLEADING II, 10, 11.]

13. A deft. in a cross cause to discover evidence, cannot resist a discovery of matter touching which he might have enforced a discovery in the original suit.

A discovery of evidence is not confined to a disclosure of such facts only as will tend to establish affirmatively the case of a ptf. in possession.

A person in possession is not to be called upon by a claimant to discover his title deeds, unless it be shown that there is a common title, or that they will affirmatively establish the claim.—O'Connor v. Malone, S. & Sc. 516. (R.)—[See Amendment of demurrer: ibid, 551. (R.)]

14. When, on a bill for discovery merely, an injunction is granted to restrain action at law, ptf. will not be required to give judgment in that action.—Wilder v. Farrell, 8 I. E. R. 101. (R.)

15. A., by his bill, stated that having a charge affecting the lands of M. held by deft. X., under a lease, an agreement was entered into between them that X. should, in lieu of A.'s charge, grant him an annuity for the lives of himself and his sister, charged on the lands of B., and other properties, including M. A. afterwards discovered that there were charges outstanding affecting B., when X. further agreed that a judgment affecting B. should be assigned to A. as a security, which X. was unable to do; and having broken penal covenants in the lease of M., his interest was evicted by the landlord, C., between whom and X. an agreement was then entered into to give X. a new lease. The bill charged and stated various acts to show that X. evaded performing his agreement, and in order to extinguish A.'s claims on the lands, aided C. to evict the interest in them on a previous promise of a new lease; and prayed a specific performance of the agreements; that the new lease might be decreed liable to A.'s demand and charged with the annuity; that if X. could not fully perform the agreements, by reason of the incumbrances on B., then, that he might do so as far as possible, and indemnify A. against incumbrances; a reference or issue to ascertain A.'s loss by the inability of X. to perform his agreement fully; and that X. should pay the amount. X. demurred to the relief and discovery, assigning as causes that part of the discovery sought was immaterial, being in relation to the new lease, as to which A. had no title to relief; and that as the bill prayed specific performance, A. could not seek part performance with indemnity and compensation. Held, that the demurrer in relation to the relief, seeking that the new lease might be liable, could not be sustained; and that the interrogatories being in part material, A. was entitled to the discovery; that the demurrer, so far as related to the relief of part performance, with indemnity and compensation, would, if so confined, be good; but the demurrer being bad as to the former part, was bad altogether. —Southwell v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 7. (R.)

1. A bill of discovery in aid of a defence at law will not lie against one who is not a party to the record at law.

If a bill prays relief and discovery, the ptf. cannot waive the relief, and insist on the discovery.

A bill by the directors of an Insurance Co. stated matters which amounted to a legal defence; and prayed a discovery of them; that a policy of assurance might be delivered up to be cancelled; and an injunction to stay an action at law brought on it. The bill was against A. (administratrix of the assured) and B. (assignee of the policy), in concert with whom, and by whose directions the bill charged the policy to have been effected; but who was not a party to the action. The Court refused the injunction on the bill as a bill of relief, because it stated facts amounting to a defence at law; or as a bill of discovery, because it prayed relief which the ptf. could not waive. —Anderson v. Dowling, 11 I. E. R. 590. (R.)

XIII. BILL OR PETITION, DISMISSAL OF.

[See PRACTICE, COSTS. See 25 G. 3, c. 51 (Ir.), s. 3; 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 86; G. O. (1867), 102, 136–140.]

XIII. 1. General Orders respecting.

[The cases in the Irish Ch. Rep. refer chiefly to the practice under the Ct. of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, repealed in part by the 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44.]

2. The 81st G. O. of 1843 does not apply to a case in which a receiver has been actually in receipt of the rent, and orders have from time to time been made.

A bill was filed in 1823. The cause was not yet heard. The Court refused to dismiss the bill, as a receiver was in receipt of the rents, and orders had been made in the cause. —Mara v. Tibeaud, 7 I. E. R. 556. (R.)

3 The G. O. of the Court are to be regarded as part of the statute under the authority of which they were made, and not to be departed from on special considerations, but bind the Court, unless there is something in the conduct of the party insisting on them which disentitles him from relying on them.

Semble—The clause in the 82nd G. O. of 1843, "if the ptf. shall not proceed with the cause," would authorise the Court to refuse an application to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution, though none of the courses pointed out by the order were pursued by the ptf., if he was prevented from proceeding by the act of the deft.—A delay in amending the bill, consequent on waiting for judgment in an action brought by the deft.—Held, not such an excuse, especially as it was not brought before the M. R. on the original motion. —Davies v. D., 10 I. E. R. 614. (C.)

4. When the ptf. has been discharged as an insolvent after the filing of the bill, the proper order under the 82nd or 83rd Rule is, that the bill be dismissed against him without costs, if his assignee do not file a supplemental bill within a specified time. —Darling v. Marsh, 11 I. E. R. 261. (R.)

5 The G. O. are not so absolutely binding on the Court that they cannot be in any instance relaxed. The general merits of the case and the like are no grounds for departing from them; but only the conduct of the parties, or events in the course of the suit. If in the case there appear the ordinary grounds of equitable relief, such as fraud, surprise, or accident, the Court may give relief, against the strict construction of the Orders.

A., a deft., answered in Feb. Other defts. answered in April, on whose answer it was necessary to move for documents, which were not produced, pursuant to the order made, until Aug. In Oct., A. served notice to dismiss the bill under the 82nd Order; and the ptf. served a notice for liberty to make amendments rendered necessary by the answer and deeds. The Court refused to dismiss the bill. —Downing v. Hodder, 12 I. E. R. 371. (C.)

6. The Court will not, on the consent of parties, reinstate cause petitions dismissed for want of prosecution under the 20th or 27th G. O. of July 1851, unless there are sufficient grounds, irrespectively of the consent, for reinstating them.

When a cause petition under the Ct. of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act, is dismissed under the 20th G. O., the Court will not, on motion, give costs to a respondent who did not appear when the cause was called on. —Porter v. Archbold, 4 I. C. R. 651; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (R.)

7. When a petitioner becomes bankrupt before the petition stands dismissed by the 27th G. O. of 1851, the suit is not affected by that order.

In such a case the proper course is, to move that the petition do stand dismissed unless the assignee file a supplemental bill within a time to be limited by the Court.

But when, pendente lite, a petitioner voluntarily assigns his property, the suit is not thereby abated, and is therefore within the operation of the 27th G. O.

In the latter case leave to reinstate the petition may be given on payment of the costs of the motion. — Maxwell v. Read, 15 I. C. R. 133. (R.)

1. The appointment of a receiver in a mortgage cause does not take the case out of the operation of the 81st G. O. 1843. — Woodroffe v. Greene, 15 I. C. R. 176. (C.A.)

2. An I. E. Court order for the sale of lands, the subject of a suit in the Court of Chancery, did not, without an order of the latter Court, stay the suit, so as to prevent its being dismissed by the 81st G. O. of 1843.

An order appointing a receiver in a suit praying a sale for the payment of incumbrances did not prevent the suit being dismissed by the 81st G. O. of 1843. — Foss v. F., 15 I. C. R. 215. (R.)

3. Under the 51st G. O. of the 19th May 1857, if the final order in a cause petition be not obtained within the time limited by the Master, the petition is not dismissed, without an order to that effect. — [Moore v. Keogh, 10 I. C. R. 501, not followed.] — Corker v. C., 15 I. C. R. 304. (C.A.)

III. 2. Generally: in what Cases: what is a Ground for.

4. A bill was dismissed with costs, under the 93rd G. O., upon the motion of a deft. who had become bankrupt after filing his answer. — Walcott v. Bristow, S. & Sc. 552. (R.)

5. An order was made on a ptf. residing abroad to stay proceedings until he gave security for costs. He allowed a long time to pass without giving security. Thereupon a further order directed that he should give security before a day named, or that his bill should stand dismissed without costs. — Hardwicke v. Warren, 2 I. E. R. 156; S. & Sc. 645. (R.)

6. A bill to restrain waste, the damage proved being £7.16s., is beneath the dignity of the Court, and will be dismissed with costs at the hearing. — Lambert v. L., 2 I. E. R. 210. (C.)

7. The proceedings of a ptf. residing abroad were ordered to be stayed until he gave security for costs. Having allowed a long time to elapse without giving it, he was further ordered to give it before a certain day; and that, in default, his bill should stand dismissed, with costs. — Knight v. Lord de Blaquiére, S. & Sc. 648, 649; 1 I. E. R. 345. (R.) — [See Powell v. Smith, S. & Sc. 654. (R.)]

8. A petition by a solvent surety of an insolvent tenant, to surrender, or to reduce the rents of premises of which the value had greatly diminished since the lease was made, was dismissed, with costs. — In re O'Neill's Minors, S. & Sc. 686. (R.)

9. A conditional decree for a dismiss set aside, it having been obtained in an abated cause. — Kidd v. Farran, H. & J. 798. (E.E.)

10. Petition presented on behalf of the committee, after the lunatic's death, which did not contain a statement of that fact, dismissed for irregularity. — In re Briscoe, 2 Dr. & War. 501. (C.)

11. Semble—On a proper application, the Court may order to be taken off the file a bill filed as an illusory proceeding to evade the Statute of Limitations. — Boyd v. Higginson, 5 I. E. R. 97. (R.)

12. Bill to set aside a purchase by the deft., or to have it declared a trust for the ptf. The decree established the ptf.'s right to have the purchase declared a trust; and directed accounts, upon the taking of which a large sum was ascertained to be due to the deft. The final decree ordered the ptf. to pay that sum within six months, and directed that thereupon the estate should be reconveyed to the ptf. Payment was not made within the appointed time. Semble—That the dismissal of the bill was the deft.'s proper remedy.

Upon consent, however, the time for payment was enlarged for four months, and a sale was directed if default in paying within that period was made. — Austin v. Chambers, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 85. (C.) — [See s. c., 3 Dr. & War. 178; 6 Cl. & F. 1.]

13. Bill to reform a marriage settlement, on the ground that it was not in conformity with the settlor's contract. The settlement was inconsistent with his instructions, so far as they appeared in evidence. His previous and subsequent acts and declarations consisted with the instructions, but not with the settlement. What the final contract between the parties was did not appear. Fraud, though charged, was not proved. Held, that relief could not be granted on the ground of mistake, since it was possible, though not probable, that the settlor had agreed to make a settlement, such as had been in fact executed.

The bill was dismissed, but without costs. — Bunbury v. Lloyd, 1 Jon. & L. 638. (C.)

14. If a bill cannot be dismissed against all the ptf.s., it cannot be dismissed against any of them. — Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

15. A solicitor may not deal with his client for a security for a debt due to him by a third person, without giving his client all his own information touching the debt, and the nature of the security.

The Court dismissed, with costs, a bill to enforce a security taken by a solicitor from his client on a sum charged upon the principal debtor's estate, and to recover which the client was then prosecuting a suit in Equity; the solicitor having omitted to disclose the circumstances connected with the estate, and particularly that he had other demands affecting it.—Higgins v. Joyce, 2 Jon. & L. 282. (C.)

1. A petition to grant a renewal to a tenant under a lease, with a covenant of renewal, presented by the receiver in a lunacy matter without the concurrence of the committee of the estate, will be dismissed with costs.—In re The Earl of Kilkenny, 7 I. E. R. 594. (C.)

2. When one of two co-ptfs. has no title, the bill must be dismissed generally, though the claim of the other is valid, and relates to an independent subject.—Richardson v. Nixon, 7 I. E. R. 620; 2 Jon. & L. 250. (C.)

3. The H. L. will not give relief to an appellant against an order of which he complains by petition, unless he has taken the proper course to obtain relief in the Court below.—Tomney v. White, 6 Cl. & F. 786.—[See s. c., 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.)]

4. A very voluminous suit against several defts. failed on the three main branches of the relief sought; but the ptf. succeeded in establishing a right to a limited account against one deft., which, though comparatively unimportant, was mixed up with the other matters of the suit, and was bona fide sought by the bill. Held, that the bill could not be dismissed generally.—Flattery v. Anderson, 12 I. E. R. 218. (C.)

5. Chattels real were mortgaged, and judgments were recovered by the mortgagee against the mortgagor, as collateral securities for the sums advanced on mortgage. The mortgagor having died, a bill was filed against his personal representative, praying an account of the sums due in respect of the mortgages; a foreclosure and sale; and an account of the personal estate of the mortgagor. The personal representative in her answer stated her belief that the chattels real were adequate to discharge the sums due. A decree was then taken for an account of those sums, and of the incumbrances prior or contemporaneous therewith, but not directing any account of the personal estate of the mortgagor. A report pursuant to that decree having been made, a decree for sale of the chattels real was pronounced. The proceeds of the sale were insufficient to pay the sums due on the mortgages. Held, that a supplemental bill afterwards filed by the mortgagee against the personal representative of the mortgagor, praying an account of the personal estate of the mortgagor, could not be maintained, and was accordingly dismissed, with costs.—Joly v. Leyden, 13 I. E. R. 444. (C.)

6. Though a bill has been filed on the authority of a reported case, which is afterwards reversed, the Court has not jurisdiction on a motion under the 82nd Rule, to order that the bill shall be dismissed without costs.—Cronin v. Murphy, 1 I. C. R. 233. (R.)

7. When, by mistake, a party has been made a respondent to a petition, amendment is not necessary; the petition may be dismissed as against him.—Massy v. Burgess, 4 I. Jur. 75. (R.)

8. A., being possessed of land, presented a petition under the 5 G. 2, c. 9, to ascertain the boundaries of an adjoining bog to which his title was disputed by the respondent. The Court would not dismiss the petition, but retained it till the petitioner established his right at law.

Semble—Though no jurisdiction be given the Court, by the statute under which the proceedings are taken, to direct an issue, or an enquiry as to the facts, yet the Court, to satisfy itself, will exercise its inherent powers by either of those methods.—Lahiffe v. Gregory, 4 I. Jur. 97. (C.)

9. V., seized in tail of the V. estate, including the lands of B. and G., with remainder to E. in tail, levied fines and suffered recoveries of the V. estate (except the lands of B. and G.) in 1814. In 1844, after the death of V., the Master made a report in the matter of E., and others, minors, finding that V. had by fines and recoveries barred all estates tail in the V. estate. In 1837, E. had attained his full age. In 1845, an answer (without oath or signature) was filed in the cause of W. v. V., by the ptf.'s solicitor, on behalf of E., admitting that V., by fines and recoveries, had legally barred all estates tail in the V. estate. A similar admission was made in an answer filed by E., in 1848, in a creditor's suit of O'B. v. V. A decree to account having been made in W. v. V., the ptf. stated that V., being seized of the V. estate (enumerating inter alia B. and G.), made his will, &c.; and the discharge filed for E. admitted that statement. The Master's report in W. v. V. found that V. had levied fines and recoveries of all the V. estate, and acquired a fee-simple therein; but no evidence was given before the Master to support that finding. The cause of W. v. V., having been set down for final hearing in 1848, was directed to stand over until the return of the report in O'B. v. V.; and a petition having been presented in the I. E. C., it was discovered, after one of those denominations had been sold, that B. and G. were not included in the fines and recoveries. Held, that a cause petition filed by E., praying relief from the effect of the erroneous admissions, could not be maintained, and should be dismissed, with costs; but without prejudice to any other proceeding which he might adopt for the same purpose.—Villiers v. White, 2 I. C. R. 416; 4 I. Jur. 86. (C.)

10. The owner of a judgment affecting only a life estate presented a cause petition to sell it, brought before the Court the creditors on the estate who had charges created before 1840, and prayed to redeem them. They declined to be redeemed. Held, that the petition should be dismissed, with costs, against the creditors on the inheritance.—Elliot v. Osborne, 4 I. Jur. 189. (C.)

1. When the petition stated the lease, upon which the rent was reserved, to be "for lives renewable," it being, in fact, a grant in f. f., the Court, not having power to amend, dismissed the petition.—Yelverton v. Avonmore, 4 I. Jur. 237. (C.)

2. A respondent, who has had a petition dismissed with costs as against him, cannot, upon a subsequent change of circumstances, have the cause re-heard.—Folliott v. Evanson, 6 I. Jur. 51. (C.)

3. A defendant struck out of a bill for tithe rentcharge under 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 28, is liable, not only to the costs of subpoena and appearance, but to his portion of the general costs. When a suit is instituted for the recovery of a very small amount it should be dismissed, as being beneath the dignity of the Court.—Chaine v. Dungannon, 6 I. Jur. 174. (R.)

4. Civil-bill decrees for poor-rate, obtained after the 15th of July 1850, though registered under the Judgment Registry Acts, will not by virtue of the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 105, ss. 17 & 18, affect lands.

A petition was filed to raise by the sale of lands the amount of civil-bill decrees for poor-rate, obtained since the 15th July 1850, and duly filed pursuant to the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 105, s. 17. An affidavit having been made by the clerk of the union, and duly registered pursuant to the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, s. 6, but not registered till after the filing of the petition, the petition was dismissed with costs.—Ballinasloe Guardians v. Lynch, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 92. (R.)

5. By R.'s marriage settlement, in 1767, £1500 were secured as portions for the younger children; that sum to be apportioned as R. might think fit. In 1806, R.'s daughter (a younger child) married G., when R. executed two bonds to secure two sums (£1000 and £500), payable on his death; the former not to bear interest till then; the latter to bear it from the date of the bonds, which were accompanied by warrants of attorney. However, judgments were never entered up. A marriage settlement, of even date with the bonds, vested them in B. (son and heir-at-law of R.) and J., as trustees (they being so described in the bonds), on trust to pay the interest to G. and his wife during their lives; afterwards, in trust for their children, in such shares as G. should appoint; otherwise, equally. No appointment was ever made. In 1807, B. married. A settlement, then executed, conveyed R.'s estates to trustees for 300 years, on trusts, whereof one was to raise £5000, and apply it, in the first instance, in paying the £1500, the portions for R.'s younger children; to apply the balance in paying such specialty debts as "are now due and owing" by R.; and to pay the residue, if any, to R. Subject to this term, the estates were conveyed to R. for life; to B. for life; to B.'s first and other sons in t. m. In 1816, R. died, and B. entered into possession of the estates. R.'s widow took out probate of his will, and received general assets to the amount of £7500. In 1836, B. died. Interest on the money secured to G. was, during B.'s life, paid by his agent, and also during the life of C., B.'s son, who had succeeded, under the settlement of 1807, to the estates. In 1844, part of the £5000 was raised, and the £1500 secured by the settlement of 1767 were paid, but the £1500 secured by the bonds of 1806 were not raised. In 1846, G. died. There was not any evidence that interest had been paid after his death. In 1848, G.'s children filed their bill against C., F. (one of their brothers who for the purposes of the suit had taken out administration de bonis non to R.), and against the possessor of the term. The bill prayed that the money secured by the bonds might be paid out of the term, &c. An enquiry and accounts were directed, and a report made, which was confirmed on further directions. On appeal against the original decree, and against that on further directions—Held, that, under the special circumstances, the suit was maintainable: that, though B.'s personal representative was primarily liable, yet, since the trustees of the bond debt could only sue the actual possessor of the term, since he must then sue C., as holder of the estate subject thereto, and since C., besides being the holder of that estate, was also representative of B., the surviving trustee of the bond debt under the settlement of 1806, a Court of Equity, seeing that all the parties really interested were before it, would not, especially after an enquiry and report, dismiss the bill for matter of form, and thus create a necessity for such a multiplicity of needless suits.—Burrowes v. Gore, 6 H. L. Cas. 907.—[Affg. decrees of the Court of Ch. in Ir.]

6. A bill was filed by the assignee of an insolvent mortgagor, for an account and redemption of a mortgage. Two cause petitions for the same purpose were afterwards filed, but dismissed with costs. A new assignee having been appointed, he moved under the B. and I. Act to be substituted by suggestion as ptf. The Court, on a cross notice by the deft., ordered the costs of the dismissed petitions to be paid before the suggestion was entered.—M'Conkey v. Gwynn, 8 I. C. R. 33. (R.)—[Affd. 10 I. C. R. 261. (C.A.)]

7. Semble—A petition by way of peremptory exception in an interest suit is irregular. Having an erroneous title, the petition was dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

8. By will, bequeathing legacies, and directing payment of debts and legacies, H., a minor, was made residuary legatee, and was also appointed executor with E.

The testator died in 1833, and E. obtained probate, saving the right of H.; took the accounts of the personal estate; and in 1834 invested the ascertained residue in the purchase of real estate, which was then conveyed to E. in trust for H., by a deed showing on the face of it that the lands were purchased with the residuary personal estate. The deed reserved to E. a lien on the lands in case the residue should not amount to the then estimated sum.

H. came of age in 1837, obtained grant of probate, and entered into possession of the purchased lands, and so continued until 1858, when he took a conveyance of the legal estate from E. by a deed reciting the conveyance of 1834; and that the residue amounted to more than the estimated sum.

H. dealt with the lands as absolute owner; and as such, after 1858, granted mortgages of them by deeds reciting that he was seized in fee, free from incumbrances. The mortgagees had no notice, save that appearing on the deeds, that the lands were purchased with assets, or that any legacies remained unpaid. It subsequently appearing that H. had, after he came of age, received and wasted the personal estate, the legatees filed a cause petition to raise their legacies out of the lands in priority to the mortgagees. Held, that the mortgagees were not bound to enquire whether the legacies had been paid; and the petition was dismissed as against them.—Williams v. Massy, 15 I. C. R. 47. (C.)

1. To support an interpleader suit there must be conflicting claims. Therefore, where a reversion subject to a lease for years was devised, and the testator, heir-at-law, did not claim the rent, a petition of interpleader by the tenant against the heir-at-law was dismissed with costs, although there was a question whether the devise was not void for remoteness.

A., and a married woman and her husband, were entitled to the reversion upon, and the rent reserved by a lease. A. was entitled to one moiety, but between the husband and wife arose the question on a settlement, whether she was entitled to the other moiety to her separate use? All three brought ejectment for non-payment of rent, and the lessee filed a petition of interpleader. Held, that the petition as against A. should be dismissed.

Semble—If several are entitled to rent, and all concur in demanding it, though there be conflicting claims between them, the tenant cannot maintain an interpleader suit.—Elliott v. Kempston, 15 I. C. R. 120. (R.)

2. Charges of fabrication and fraud, made in a petition, failed. It was dismissed with costs.—Stubber v. S., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 153. (P.)

3. A petition in the nature of a bill of review must be, and must state that it is filed with the Court's leave: otherwise it will be dismissed at the hearing.

Quære—Would the Court, at the hearing, allow this amendment—that the petition had been filed with the Court's leave?—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

XIII. 3. By Plaintiff.

4. The 25 G. 3(Ir.), c. 51, s. 3, applies to cases in which the ptf. dismisses his bill by rule in the office, not to cases in which it is dismissed by the act of the Court.

In dismissing the bill without costs, the Court deals with the deft.'s acts, not with the ptf.'s.

When the subject-matter of the suit was, by the ptf.'s act, transferred to the Crown pursuant to statute, the Court would not dismiss the bill without costs. The ptf.'s demand having been satisfied by the Crown, and the deft. being justly liable to pay it to the Crown, the Court would not permit him to dismiss the bill with costs, for want of prosecution.—Bunbury v. O'Brien, H. & J. 803. (E.E.)

5. In a tithe suit, several defts. appeared, and put in answers denying their liability, by the same attorney. The answers were almost copies of one another. At ptf.'s desire, the bill was dismissed as against them; and the Court ordered their costs to be taxed, and that the Taxing Officer should disallow the costs of any answer appearing to have been improperly or unnecessarily filed—regard being paid to the suit's nature, and the manner in which it and the defence had been conducted; the costs so ascertained to be paid by ptf.—St. George v. Brazier, 2 Jon. 359. (E.E.)

6. A. was made a deft. solely in relation to certain deeds which the bill alleged to be in his possession, claiming a lien upon them. A. put in a full answer, going through all the statements relating to the other defts., and concluding with a denial that he had the deeds in his possession, &c., or that he claimed any lien thereon. Held, that ptf. might dismiss the bill as against A., upon paying A. his costs properly incurred, regard being paid to the right in which A. was made deft. It was referred to the Master to tax those costs.—Plumptre v. Walsh, 1 I. E. R. 142. (R.)

7. Under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109 (Tithe Composition Abolition Act), s. 1, ptf. is entitled to dismiss his bill without paying costs, though it was filed to recover not only the tithe composition due for 1834, 1835, and 1836, but also the arrears recoverable therewith under the Million Act. He may dismiss it against one of several defts., and retain it against the rest.—Burgh v. Kenny, 1 I. E. R. 264. (E.E.)

8. Ptf. in a suit, commenced before the 16th July 1838, for tithe composition, may dismiss his bill without paying costs, notwithstanding that the usual rule for a replication, or bill to stand dismissed, has been entered by deft. before the entry of ptf.'s rule to dismiss under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 1; and notwithstanding that ptf. has applied for relief under its 41st sec.

A bill does not stand dismissed under the usual rule for a replication until after taxation of the costs.—Synge v. Frost, 1 I. E. R. 389. (E.E.)

9. Deft., having been discharged as an insolvent, filed his answer, and entered the usual rule to dismiss ptf.'s bill with costs. The Court set aside the rule to dismiss, and retained the bill, notwithstanding ptf.'s acceptance of the costs of process after answer filed; but refused ptf.'s application for liberty to dismiss his bill without costs.—Kane v. Russell, 2 I. E. R. 95. (E.E.)

1. A demurrer to the whole bill, for want of a personal representative, as a party, was allowed by notice. The Court, on ptf.'s application stating that a personal representative could not be raised within the ten days allowed by G. R. 64, of 1843, gave him time to amend.—Atkinson v. Ball, 3 Jon. & L. 374. (C.)

XIII. 4. Dismissal by Consent.

2. A bill, which cannot be dismissed against all the defts., cannot be dismissed against any of them.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

3. A cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, was filed to raise the amount of a charge on lands. The order of reference was made, and a receiver appointed. The petitioner alone proved a charge; the respondent paid off the petitioner's charge and costs, and moved to make a consent to dismiss the petition and discharge the receiver a rule of Court. An order was made to stay the proceedings on the petition, and to make the consent a rule of Court.—Dwyer v. Baker, 6 I. Jur. 341. (R.)

XIII. 5. General Effect of.

4. A dismissed petition cannot, even by consent, be reinstated; a new petition must be filed.—Balfie's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (L.E.C.)

5. A decree dismissing a bill for want of ptf.'s appearance at the hearing does not bar another suit for the same demand.—Phibbs v. O'Donel, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (C.)

6. A judgment creditor, on behalf of himself and the other judgment creditors on the life estate of X., instituted a suit to which a trustee for all the judgment creditors was a party. At the hearing, it was dismissed on the merits. Another judgment creditor, who (save so far as the trustee represented him) had not been a party to it, subsequently instituted for a like purpose a suit, which relied upon different equities, and put forward additional facts, supported by new evidence. Held, that the dismissal of the first suit was not an absolute bar to the prosecution of the second.—Dolphin v. Aylward, 15 I. C. R. 583. (C.A.)

7. When an insolvent dies before adjudication, and his petition is dismissed, the Court will, though the order of dismissal is of record, re-instate the petition, so as to have the insolvent's estate administered as if no dismissal had taken place.—Re Young, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 322. (B.)

XIII. 6. Bill: dismissal of for Want of Prosecution.

[Under the Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act 1850, see 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89: Gen. Orders of 1851, No. 27; of June 1856, No. 3. The cases in the Ir. Ch. Rep. chiefly refer to the practice under this Act, which is now repealed in part by 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44.]

8. When the subject-matter of the suit was, by the ptf.'s act, transferred to the Crown pursuant to statute, the Court would not dismiss the bill without costs. The ptf.'s demand having been satisfied by the Crown, and the deft. being justly liable to pay it to the Crown, the Court would not permit him to dismiss the bill without costs, for want of prosecution.—Bunbury v. O'Brien, H. & J. 803. (E.E.)

9. A bill, for a commission to examine witnesses abroad in aid of an action at law, cannot be dismissed under G. O. 93.—Parr v. Howlin, S. & Sc. 124. (R.)

10. When, during more than a year, no proceeding has been taken in a cause, the notice of a motion to dismiss the bill under the 93rd G. O. must be served upon the ptf. personally.—Nolan v. Adamson, S. & Sc. 701. (R.)

11. A motion to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution cannot be made until four months after answer filed.—Kelly v. Bolger, S. & Sc. 440. (R.)

12. A feme sole married after filing her answer. Ptf. having taken no step in the cause for more than two months, husband and wife moved the Rolls to dismiss the bill under G. R. 93. The M. R. allowed the ptf. to amend their bill by making the husband a party, within one week; in default, the bill to stand dismissed without costs. On appeal—Held, that ptf. should within eight days enter the rule to proceed; in default the bill to be dismissed with costs.—Church v. Nugent, 1 Dr. & Wal. 259. (C.)—[Varying Rolls order, S. & Sc. 554.]

13. A bill dismissed for want of prosecution, without costs, ptf. being insolvent.—Nugent v. Palmer, 2 I. E. R. 220. (R.)

14. When the cause is out of Court, the notice of a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution should be served on the ptf. personally, and deft. should come prepared with an affidavit of such service. The ptf., if he appears on the motion, thereby waives the objection that he was not personally served with such notice.

On a motion to dismiss the bill under G. R. 93, and a cross-motion to dismiss it without costs, the Court would not enter into the merits of the cause. Held, that the bill should be dismissed with costs, unless the cause was shown to be within the exceptions specified in the rule.

Though ptf. showed, by affidavit, facts which might, at the hearing, disentitle deft. to costs, and would have sustained an application that ptf. should have liberty to dismiss his bill upon paying deft. the costs of a disclaimer, the Court would not consider that upon this motion; and ordered the bill to be dismissed with costs.—Grier v. Leahy, 2 I. E. R. 227. (R.)

1. Upon a motion to dismiss a bill with costs for want of prosecution, the Court will not allow ptf. to go into the merits, for the purpose of showing that it ought to be dismissed without costs.—Carroll v. Donoghoe, Fl. & K. 18. (R.)

2. When the same solicitor is engaged for several defts., some of whom withhold their answers, the Court will not allow the others to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution.—Moriarty v. Kirwan, Fl. & K. 140. (R.)

3. When a suit has abated by the marriage of a sole female ptf., the Court will order that the suit be revived within a certain time, or in default thereof that the bill be dismissed without costs.—Westropp v. Henley, Fl. & K. 141. (R.)

4. When no proceedings against a deft. have been taken within one year, the cause is, as to him, out of Court, although within that time proceedings have been taken against other defts.—Bartley v. Davis, Fl. & K. 620. (R.)

5. An irregular replication affecting to join issue with, amongst others, a deft. who had appeared, but not answered, though he was only a formal party, is not a proceeding in the cause, to save the ptf.'s bill from being dismissed for want of prosecution.—M'Loughlin v. Reilly, 4 I. E. R. 175. (R.)

6. When there is a bona fide prosecution of a suit, although five months may have elapsed since a deft. who applies to dismiss the bill, has answered, the application to dismiss, will be refused with costs.—Kelinge v. Audley, 4 I. E. R. 630. (C.)

7. A cause abated by sole ptf.'s death. His executor filed a bill of revivor, not seeking an answer, and served subpoenas, but did not (though defts. had appeared) enter the rule to revive. Motion to dismiss, with costs, the bill of revivor for want of prosecution, under G. O. 82, refused with costs; that G. O. not authorising such an application. Deft. having afterwards moved that ptf. might enter the rule to revive within a limited time—in default, the bill to be dismissed with costs,—the Court granted that motion.—Power v. Davies, 5 I. E. R. 446. (R.)

8. When a suit, to the prosecution of which no obstacle existed, was dormant and apparently abandoned for several years; and it appeared that but for the lis pendens the demand should long ago have been barred by the Statute of Limitations; the Court refused an application (although made on behalf of minors) for further time to prosecute it—the case being within the 81st G. O. of 27th March 1843.—Callanan v. Blake, 6 I. E. R. 100. (R.)—[Affd.: 6 I. E. R. 353. (C)]

9. Statement of the objects and policy of the 81st G. O. of 27th March 1843, and of the considerations by which the discretion of the Court to grant or refuse applications for further time to proceed is governed.—Mills v. M., 6 I. E. R. 106. (R.)

10. When a ptf. and the person whom he represented, had allowed a suit, instituted in 1818, to foreclose a mortgage upon which there had been no payment of interest since 1811, to sleep since 1825—Held (affirming an order of the M. R.), that further time ought not to be given for the prosecution of the suit under the 81st G. O.—Callanan v. Blake, 6 I. E. R. 353. (C.)

11. A deft. is at liberty, under the 83rd G. O., to dismiss the ptf.'s bill for want of prosecution after the rule for publication has been served.—Madden v. Kirwan, 6 I. E. R. 374. (R.)

12. When no proceeding has been taken by the ptf., nor by a deft. within the year, the cause is out of Court as relates to that deft., though another deft. may have taken a proceeding within the year.—Hodges v. Barton, 8 I. E. R. 38. (R.)

13. When a cause was set down for hearing, but, being defective for want of parties, stood over generally, and no further proceedings were taken; upon motion of the defts., more than a year afterwards, the bill was dismissed for want of prosecution.—Hughes v. Maitland, 8 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

14. The 82nd G. O. will not be relaxed. When the ptf. cannot show due diligence, and is disabled from filing a replication in consequence of requiring to amend his bill, the bill will be dismissed.—M'Loughlin v. M'L., 8 I. E. R. 109. (R.)

15. Deft. having served a notice under the 76th G. Rule, and being served by the ptf., in reply, with notice that upon obtaining an order for which he had applied, to take the bill as confessed against other defts., he would file a replication, is entitled to costs up to the day of service of ptf.'s notice.—Jones v. Hewett, 8 I. E. R. 517. (E.E.)

16. Application under 77th New General Rule, by a deft., who was a mere trustee, to dismiss ptf.'s bill, refused.—Bryan v. Cambie, 8 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)

17. Under the 83rd G. O. the deft. is entitled to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, though the ptf. has entered and served the rule for publication, unless he also set down the cause within the time prescribed.—Hamilton v. M'Cormick, 8 I. E. R. 582. (R.)

1. When ptf. amended his bill bona fide after the deft. was entitled to move to dismiss it, the Court refused to dismiss the bill, but made ptf. pay the costs of the motion.—Moore v. Lator, 9 I. E. R. 148. (R.)

2. It is no answer to a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution by one deft., that another deft. has obtained an order staying the ptf. until he give security for costs.—Kelly v. Magee, 9 I. E. R. 216. (R.)

3. When the ptf.'s bill has been dismissed, with costs, for want of prosecution, the deft. is entitled to stay him in another suit for the same object, until the costs of the first suit are paid.

The merits of the case cannot be discussed on the motion.—Montgomery v. Johnson, 9 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

4. Amendments of the bill had been prepared by counsel before, but were not made until after notice to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution. Held, no answer to the motion.—Mark v. Willington, 11 I. E. R. 269. (R.)

5. When there are several creditor's suits, and a decree has been made in one, and an order has been made staying the proceedings in the others on the usual terms, the defts. in the stayed suits may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, for the purpose of being paid their costs; and are not bound to wait until the funds are allocated or realised in the suit which proceeds.—Milward v. Fagan, 12 I. E. R. 313. (R.)

6. A deft. may move to dismiss a bill under the 88rd G. Rule, after publication passed.—Harrison v. Mason, 13 I. E. R. 83. (R.)

7. If a cause is out of Court, it is, in the Exchequer, sufficient to serve the notice, to have the bill dismissed for want of prosecution, upon the solicitor. Secus at the Rolls.

On motion to dismiss a bill for want of prosecution, the Court will not enter into the merits of the case.—Dogherty v. D., 2 I. Jur. 110. (E.E.)

8. After an absolute order for sale has been made in the I. E. Court, this Court may order a bill to be dismissed for want of prosecution.—Donovan v. Bissett, 2 I. Jur. 244. (R.)

9. Bill to foreclose a mortgage: answer, admitting the debt.

Absolute order for sale in the I. E. Court upon the petition of another creditor.

Motion by deft. to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution.

Cross motion to stay the proceedings in this Court.

Original motion refused with costs: proceedings stayed, the Commissioners of the I. E. Court not considering it desirable that the proceedings in this Court should be continued.—Fawcett v. Minchin, 2 I. Jur. 245. (R.)

10. After the institution of a foreclosure suit, and the filing of the answer of certain defts. in that suit, who were incumbrancers prior to the ptf., a near relative of theirs presented to the I. E. Court a petition, whereon was made an order to sell the mortgaged premises. A subsequent motion on their behalf, under the 82nd G. O., to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, was refused, with costs; but the Court, proprio motu, stayed the suit.—Bernard v. Bond, 1 I. C. R. 198; 2 I. Jur. 311. (C.)

11. Bill to restrain an action involving a question of forgery. The Court allowed the action to proceed; the ptf. obtained a verdict; but a bill of exceptions taken remained undisposed of at the time of the motion below mentioned.

An answer to this bill had been filed; more than two months had elapsed; and no replication had been filed.

Motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution.

No rule: ptf. undertaking to file a replication within two days.—Clements v. Heenan, 3 I. Jur. 130. (R.)

12. A motion to restore a cause petition, dismissed for want of prosecution, should not be granted as a matter of course. There must be special circumstances, and it must appear that substantially justice would be defeated if the Court were to refuse the application.—Cassan v. Carr, 2 I. C. R. 577; 5 I. Jur. 178. (R.)

13. A cause petition was filed on the 25th Feb. 1853, and the time for the respondent filing an affidavit was extended to the 14th of April. The petitioner applied to set down the petition for hearing on the 25th Nov. The Registrar refused to set it down, being of opinion that the two whole terms had expired, under the 27th G. O. The Court, on motion, allowed the petition to be reinstated.

Quære.—Whether the two whole terms were to be counted from the twenty-one days after filing the petition, or from the end of fourteen days after the 16th of April, the day to which the time for respondents filing affidavits was extended.—M'Donnell v. M. G. W. Railway Company, 6 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

14. Some special ground must be shown in order to support an application to reinstate a cause petition dismissed by the operation of the 27th G. O. of 1851.—Carey v. Browne, 4 I. C. R. 210; 6 I. Jur. 349. (C.)

15. Notice of a cause petition was sent to a solicitor, supposed to be the general solicitor of respondents, on the 18th of March. He on the 22nd acknowledged its receipt, and undertook to appear on receiving a copy of the petition. Same having been sent as required on the 23rd, the solicitor entered an appearance for the defts. on the 25th of March, and the Registrar refused to set down the petition in M. Term, on the ground that two whole terms had elapsed under the 27th G. O., from the time when it might have been set down for hearing, and that therefore the petition stood dismissed. Held, that the Registrar was right, as the service was to be deemed as effected on the 18th; but the Court directed the petition to be reinstated, under the special circumstances.—Sanders v. S., 7 I. Jur. 63. (R.)

1. An order for liberty to file interrogatories does not imply an extension of the time for setting down the cause; and, unless such order for the extension of the time is obtained, the petition will stand dismissed pursuant to the 27th G. O., as if there had not been any such order.

The Court may in such case allow the petition to be reinstated.—Montgomery v. Maine, 7 I. Jur. 284. (R.)

2. The rule in Huthwaite's Case (2 I. Ch. Rep. 54), that an unredocketed judgment is not only null and void as against a subsequent mortgage, but also null and void against an intervening redocketed judgment, is not applicable when the mortgagee makes no claim to the fund to be distributed. A mortgage cause to which a receiver has been extended, who continued in receipt of the rents. Held, not within the operation of the 81st G. O. of 1843.—Woodroffe v. Greene, 14 I. C. R. 224. (R.)—[Affd.: 15 I. C. R. 176. (C.A.)]

XIII. 7. On behalf of Infants

3. Amendments to the bill prepared before, but not made till after notice to dismiss for want of prosecution—Held, no answer to the motion.—Mark v. Willington, 11 I. E. R. 269. (R.)

XIII. 8. Motion for.

4. An order to dismiss a bill made in a suit abated by a ptf.'s death—that circumstance not being properly before the Court when it made the order—is not a nullity. There should be an order to set it aside.—Hayes v. Woodley, 2 I. Jur. 42. (R.)

5. A petitioner did not comply with an order to give security for costs. Held, that the respondent's proper application then was: not to at once dismiss the petition, with costs; but for an order that the security be given within a limited time, and that, in default, the petition do stand dismissed, with costs.—Martin v. Bunbury, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 274. (R.)

6. The ptf. propounded a will, and got an order that either party be at liberty to set the cause down for hearing; but did not pay the duty, and declined to act on the order. Thereupon the deft. moved to dismiss the suit, and condemn the will. Held, that the motion was irregular. The proper course is, for the deft. to pay the duty, take out a copy of the order, and set down the cause.—Goslin v. G., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 306. (P.)

BILL OF EXCEPTIONS. See PRACTICE, EXCEPTIONS, BILL OF.

XIV. BILL OF INTERPLEADER. See PLEADING, II, 12—PRACTICE, COSTS—PRACTICE, EVIDENCE—PRACTICE, PAYMENT INTO COURT.

7. It is not an objection to an interpleader bill by a tenant that it appears by his bill that the rent was adversely demanded by two persons, one of whom had prima facie a legal right to receive it, as the lessor's devisee and executrix, and the other a mere equitable claim as heir-at-law, when the adverse claimants were litigating, and the tenant was threatened with distress. The tenant, though not a party in the principal cause, may, on notice in the cause, apply for an injunction, without putting the estate to the expense of an interpleader suit.—Doran v. Everitt; Byrne v. Everitt, 2 I. E. R. 28. (R.)

8. A., the heir-at-law, and his ancestor's devisees, both claimed the reversion. A. served notice on the tenants to pay him the accruing rents. The devisees recovered by distress the first and second gales that fell due. Before the third gale became due, a tenant filed an interpleader bill. Held, that he was entitled to do so, and to pay the rent into Court, though A. insisted that the tenant's lease was void as against him.—Rickard v. Hyde, 2 I. E. R. 299. (C.)

9. It is not an objection to an interpleader bill that one party's right is legal, and the other's equitable; but both must claim the same subject adversely, not under each other.

Ptf. in an interpleader suit may be deprived of his costs, and decreed to pay the costs of those defts. who acted properly. Defts. who, by persisting in an unfounded claim, have caused the suit to be proceeded with, may be decreed to pay the costs of their co-defts. and of the ptf., so far as the suit was properly instituted.—Glynn v. Locke, 5 I. E. R. 61; 3 Dr. & War. 11; 2 Con. & L. 21. (C.)

10. Ptf. filed an interpleader bill, and brought in the money, but dismissed the bill before any deft. answered. Held, not entitled to draw the money.

Quære—Are the defts. entitled to their costs thereout?—M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 8 I. E. R. 145. (R.)

11. A. lodged money of B.'s at a bank; took a deposit receipt in the name of B.; afterwards lodged a small sum additional, and took a deposit receipt for the whole by B.'s authority, in the name of B.'s daughter, X., stating it was a provision for her. After B.'s death, A. refused to give the deposit receipt to X., and set up a claim to the money as B.'s administrator. The bank refusing to pay X. without the receipt, X. and A. brought actions against them. Held, that the effect of the dealing was conclusively to constitute the bank the debtor of X. only, and that they could not sustain an interpleader suit.

A bill of interpleader cannot be sustained if the claim of one defendant is not at least colourable.

A defendant against whom a bill is dismissed cannot be made to pay costs, though the suit is caused solely by his misconduct.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 8 I. E. R. 241; 2 Jon. & L. 380. (C.)—[See s. c., 6 I. E. R. 312. (R.)]

1. An interpleader bill having been filed against husband and wife, separate subpoenas and notices were served under an order to substitute service which required them to appear and answer at different times. The husband appeared, and filed a separate demurrer, which ptf. set down for argument, and afterwards moved to set aside for irregularity. The Court refused the motion, and made an order, n. p. t., that the husband and wife should defend separately.—Doyle v. Dumoncel, 11 I. E. R. 342. (R.)

2. Observations on the circumstances under which a tenant may file an interpleader petition against his landlord, and a party claiming adversely to the landlord.—Brennan v. Shearman, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 338. (R.)

XV. BILL TO PERPETUATE. See PRACTICE, EVIDENCE. See PLEADING, II, 14.

3. A bill for a commission to examine witnesses abroad in aid of an action at law cannot be dismissed under G. O. 93.

An order for a commission to examine witnesses should state the time within which it is to be executed. When no time is specified, the proper application is, that ptf. do proceed within a given time, or pay deft. his costs; or,

Semble—Deft. might apply to discharge the order on the ground of unreasonable delay in proceeding upon it.—Parr v. Howlin, S. & Sc. 124. (R.)

4. In a suit to perpetuate testimony, liberty was given ptf., under the 13 G. 3, c. 9, to pass publication of depositions of witnesses examined de bene esse in the suit.—Scanlan v. McCoy, Fl. & K. 366. (R.)

5. After replication filed in a suit to perpetuate testimony, it is not necessary to obtain an order to examine witnesses.—Allen v. Hackett, 11 I. E. R. 355. (R.)

6. Bill to perpetuate testimony of witnesses touching the execution and attestation of a will of 1845, whereby a will of 1838, under which the deft. claimed, was stated to be revoked. Plea, that the ptf. put the deft. by force out of a part of the lands, and that the remainder was in the occupation of tenants under leases, or from year to year, who had not acknowledged the ptf.'s title, or paid him rent due; and that the ptf. would, by action at law against the tenants, forthwith try his title. Held, on the authority of Drew v. Clarke (1 Sim. & Stu. 108), a good plea.—Lundesay v. L., 12 I. E. R. 508. (R.)

7. Semble—In a suit to perpetuate testimony it may be more prudent to proceed by bill than by cause petition.—Kiernan v. K., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 149. (R.)

8. A petition to perpetuate testimony of the contents of a lost deed was filed by one claiming a reversionary interest thereunder. Held, that, under a commission issued pursuant to its prayer, the respondents could not examine witnesses on their own behalf; and that the defence of purchase for value, without notice, is no answer to a suit to perpetuate testimony.—Talbot v. Kennedy, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (C.)

XVI. BILL OF REVIEW: PROCEEDINGS AND EVIDENCE ON. See PLEADING, II, 8—PRACTICE, COSTS.

9. Liberty to file a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review refused to a defendant; because the defence sought to be introduced was originally within his means of knowledge, and was inconsistent with the defence before relied on.—Blaks v. Foster, Beat. Rep. 461. (C.)

10. Where a decree is not a personal one, it is not within the 26th of Sir Richard Bolton's Rules, requiring performance of the decree before the filing of a bill of review and reversal.—Kelly v. Lennon, Fl. & K. 90. (R.)

11. Difference between a bill of review, and a bill in the nature of a bill of review; doctrine of the Court respecting them. The time for filing a bill of review is regulated by analogy to the time limited by 6 G. 1, c. 6, for bringing a writ of error—i. e., twenty years after the judgment, and five years after the disability, if any, of the ptf. in error has been removed.—Kelly v. Lennon, 1 Jon. & L. 305; 7 I. E. R. 98. (C.)

12. To sustain a bill of review, proceeding on facts discovered after the decree complained of has been pronounced, it must be shown that leave of the Court to file it was regularly obtained.

To sustain a bill of review, for error apparent on the decree complained of, it is not enough that the bill contains allegations that the decree is erroneous; but error, on the face of the decree, must be shown.—Tomney v. White, 1 H. L. Cas. 160.—[See 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); 6 Cl. & F. 786; 3 H. L. Cas. 1; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.)]

13. A commission of review is granted only in cases of a clear, distinct, and manifest error in law or fact.—Kelly v. Thewles, 2 I. C. R. 510. (C.)

14. A petition in the nature of a bill of review must be, and must state that it is filed with the Court's leave; otherwise it will be dismissed at the hearing.

Quære—Would the Court, at the hearing, allow this amendment; that the petition had been filed with the Court's leave?—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

XVII. BILL OR PETITION OF REVIVOR.—See
G. O. (1867), 141-143.

[See also PLEADING, II, 7.]

[The cases in the I. C. R. refer chiefly to revivor under the Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act 1850, 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89.]

1. It is necessary to obtain the Court's leave to file a bill of revivor and supplement before issue joined, when the suit has not wholly abated.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 1 Jones, 579. (E. E.)

2. When a cause abates by the sole ptf.'s death, and it becomes necessary to file a bill of revivor and supplement, that may be done without obtaining the Court's order.

But when the cause abates by the death of one of several defts., and it becomes necessary to file a bill of revivor and supplement, the leave of the Court must first be obtained. Brown v. Allen, 3 I. E. R. 503. (E. E.)

3. After a decree to account, the bar to the right of reviving the suit, which arises from delay in the proceedings, depends altogether upon the discretion of the Court.

After a decree to account, the Court will entertain a bill of revivor at any time within twenty years, unless there has been such a variation of the rights of parties as to occasion danger of working positive injury and injustice to other persons.

After a decree to account, either party might have forced on the suit, and, therefore, one cannot object laches to the other.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 356; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

4. Form of decree on bill of revivor and supplement in a suit for partition, when, after the former decree, some of the parties interested in the estate die, having devised that interest; and when, after proceedings taken under the former commission, but before its return, some of the commissioners of perambulation die.—Herbert v. Beerhaven, 5 I. E. R. 23. (E. E.)

5. In 1794 there had been a decree in the Court of Ch. for the sale of a term in settled estates, to pay incumbrances. At the sale, in 1808, the purchaser procured, by fraud and contrivance, a conveyance of the fee and inheritance instead of the term, and went into possession thereof. The first tenant in tail, being no party to this conveyance, in 1822 filed a bill to set aside the sale as void against him; to have the purchaser declared a trustee for him; and for an account of mesne rates. In 1823 the purchaser answered, and no further proceedings were had until 1839, when a bill of revivor and supplement was filed against the personal representative and devisees of the purchaser. Held, that the length of time permitted to elapse was no bar to the principal relief sought, but the account of mesne rates was directed only from the filing of the bill of revivor and supplement in 1839, from which period also interest was to be allowed on sums for which the defendants were entitled to credit. By reason of the great delay, plaintiff was not entitled to costs.—Thornhill v. Glover, 3 Dr. & War. 195. (C.)

6. An executor filed a bill before probate, and died without having proved his testator's will. Subsequently the present plaintiff obtained letters of administration, c. t. a., and filed a simple bill of revivor to continue the suit. Held, that such a bill could not be maintained.

Though it is generally true that an objection to a bill of revivor ought to be taken by plea or demurrer, yet, when the plaintiff in his bill of revivor misrepresents the character which he fills, the objection may be taken at the hearing.—Stuart v. Burrowes, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 265. (C.)

7. The sole defendant died after answer. A bill of revivor and supplement was filed against his executor and devisees. The latter did not answer. The proper course is, to take the bill pro confesso against the devisees, and not to set down the cause to be heard pro confesso against all the defts.—Burnside v. Mayne, 8 I. E. R. 97. (R.)

8. A cause abated by ptf.'s death in 1829. In 1836 a bill of review was filed. In 1841 an order to revive was made. Held, that it could not be successfully objected that the cause had not been effectually continued.

Semble—There is not a rule requiring a bill of revivor for any purpose to be filed within six years after the abatement.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

9. When a personal representative sues or is sued, and dies, the administrator de bonis non may proceed, or be proceeded against by bill of revivor, or by bill of revivor and supplement. He is not bound so to frame his bill; he may at his election file an original bill.

An administrator obtained a decree declaring a judgment to be held on trusts. The judgment was fraudulently assigned, and the administrator de bonis non filed a bill stating the proceedings in the original suit; making the assignee a party; praying that he might be declared entitled to the benefit of the decree, and accounts and enquiries thereby directed, and to an assignment of the judgment; or original relief, if he was not entitled to the benefit of the suit and decree. Held, on demurrer, that the bill, being an original bill as to the assignee, the ptf. could not have proceeded by bill of revivor; and although the bill might have been framed as a bill of revivor and supplement, as against the representative of the deft. in the original suit, it was sustainable as against him either as an original bill, or as an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill.

The 57th G. Rule does not apply to an original bill in the nature of a supplemental bill. Banfield v. O'Shaughnessy, 12 I. E. R. 63. (R.)

1. Practice on reviving a cause petition matter abated by the death of a sole petitioner.—Nason v. Peard, 2 I. C. R. 553; 5 I. Jur. 847. (R.)

2. Order on motion for leave to file a petition of revivor and supplement.—Johnson v. Madden, 2 I. C. R. 659; 6 I. Jur. 161. (R.)

3. The Court has not power to order service out of the jurisdiction of the notice of a suggestion to revive a suit.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 489. (C.)

4. Liberty to file a petition of revivor merely may be obtained by motion of course; notice ought to be served when it is sought to file a petition of revivor and supplement.—Williamson v. Tuckey, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (R.)

5. A. had against B. a claim for an apportionment of a gale of rent allocated and paid to B. by the receiver in the cause. In another cause A. and B. were entitled to portions of the interest on a mortgage. Pending the latter suit B. assigned his claim to C. In it sums were allocated to A. and C. in respect of their claims. On motion by A. the Court refused to pay the claim for apportionment out of the sum allocated to C.—Russell v. Barrington; Barrington v. Grady; Barrington v. B., 16 I. C. R. 175. (R.)

6. An order to file a bill of revivor and supplement will not be made on a motion ex parte.—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

XVII.* Bill, Supplemental.

[See also PLEADING, II. 3, 4, 5.]

7. Liberty to file a supplemental bill, in the nature of a bill of review, refused to a deft., because the defence sought to be introduced was originally within his means of knowledge, and was inconsistent with the defence before relied on.—Blake v. Foster, Beat. Rep. 461. (C.)

8. A supplemental bill was filed merely to bring before the Court a tenant in tail who had come into being since the pronouncing of the decree in the original cause. All the defts. in that cause appeared at the hearing of the supplemental suit. Held, that, since they appeared in consequence of a notice by the ptf., they were entitled to their costs of the hearing against ptf., who should not have those costs [over].—Wallace v. Blake, 1 Dr. & Wal. 378. (C.)

9. Ptf. charged B., named a deft., to be out of the jurisdiction, but omitted to pray process against him on his coming within it. Held, that ptf. was, nevertheless, entitled to the costs of a supplemental suit instituted to compel him to join as a conveying party in the deed to the purchaser under the decree.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 Dr. & Wal. 717. (C.)

10. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 41, applies to ptf. only. When the assignee of an insolvent deft. dies, a supplemental bill is necessary to bring the new assignee before the Court.—Meagher v. O'Mara, Fl. & K. 269. (R.)

11. After the original cause was set down in the Chancellor's list for hearing, one deft. became insolvent. Ptf. filed a supplemental bill, bringing the insolvent's assignee before the Court. The time for answering having expired, the supplemental cause was set down in the Rolls list, to be heard on bill pro confesso against the assignee, the original cause being still unheard. Held, that there could not be in the supplemental cause a decree before the original cause was heard, since otherwise there would be two decrees; and that, therefore, the supplemental cause must be set down to be heard along with the original cause.—Smith v. Chichester, 2 I. E. R. 32. (R.)

12. It is improper to move for leave to file a supplemental bill, either before or after issue joined, since no order is necessary for that purpose.—Knox v. K., 2 I. E. R. 33. (R.)

13. Whenever an old interest is transmitted to, or a new interest vested in a new party, after the suit's institution, that, strictly speaking, is supplemental matter, though it occurs before issue joined. In some cases, however, the new party has been brought before the Court by amendment.—Carnegie v. Johnson, 3 I. E. R. 197. (E.E.)

14. Semble—When a ptf. has not any right to file his original bill, a subsequently accruing right cannot be made a ground for bringing the matter before the Court by way of revivor and supplement.—Byrne v. B., 4 I. E. R. 621; 2 Dr. & War. 71; 1 Con. & L. 189. (C.)—[Affg.: Fl. & K. 435. (R.)]

15. When, after decree, the principal deft.'s interest was assigned, the assignee was not permitted to intervene, without being made a party by supplemental bill.—Crofts v. Mitchell, 6 I. E. R. 373. (R.)

16. When a deft. becomes insolvent pending the suit, the provisional assignee is properly made a party to the suit by supplemental bill.—Roddy v. Molloy, 13 I. E. R. 90. (R.)

17. The principles on which the Court acts in allowing supplemental and amended bills are applicable to cause petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act. The Court therefore refused leave to file a supplemental petition, by which an entirely new case was made, after a decretal order had been pronounced on the original petition, and an issue had been tried at law under it.—Urquhart v. Deey, 2 I. C. R. 97; 4 I. Jur. 134. (R.)

18. The Master, on a cause petition under the 15th sec., appointed a receiver over lands to pay a judgment debt. A third person claimed to be entitled to the rents under a lease made after the judgment. The Court gave leave to file a supplemental petition to set aside the lease, but offered no opinion whether that was the proper course.—Woodhouse v. Molony, 7 I. Jur. 38. (R.)

1. The Lord Chancellor has not jurisdiction to entertain an application for liberty to use new evidence upon a re-hearing of a cause before the Court of Appeal. Such evidence must be put in issue by a supplemental petition in the nature of a bill of review. The application for liberty to file it must be made at the Rolls Court.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (C.)

2. When a supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review, has been filed, this Court has jurisdiction, under the 19 & 20 Vic., c. 92, to hear the supplemental petition along with the re-hearing of the decree in the original cause; and the proper practice is, to set down such petition for hearing before the Court of Appeal, along with the re-hearing of the decree appealed from.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (C.A.)

3. A supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review founded on newly discovered facts, cannot be maintained when the newly discovered facts, if previously known, would not have influenced the decree of which complaint is made, but would have merely induced the party complaining of the decree to take a different course in the original suit.—Nason v. Peard, 10 I. C. R. 233; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 137. (C.)

4. When a supplemental petition, in the nature of a petition of review on newly discovered matter, has been filed, the original cause must be re-heard before the Court of C. A., simultaneously with the supplemental petition.

For this purpose, the original petition should be set down in the Chancellor's list of causes, and the order for re-hearing should direct that the supplemental petition be heard together with it.—[Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71, followed.]—Radcliff v. Orme, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)

5. A principal made to his agent two leases, which the Court set aside. The agent sub-leased part of the lands to two tenants. One sub-lease was made before, and the other after the filing of the cause petition impeaching the original leases, which was not registered as a lis pendens, nor was any notice of it served on the sub-tenants. The Court refused an injunction to dispossess them, and put the petitioner's representative into possession; but directed the motion to stand over to let a supplemental petition be filed against the sub-tenants.—Geoghegan v. Blackstock, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 28. (R.)

6. If the decree in the original suit merely directs a common account against an agent, a decree, charging him with what he might without wilful default have received, cannot be made in a supplemental suit.—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

RESPECTING COSTS OF A CAUSE STANDING OVER, OR BEING STRUCK OUT OF THE LIST. See PRACTICE, COSTS.

See PRACTICE, HEARING AND SETTING DOWN CAUSES. PRACTICE, BILL DISMISSAL OF. PLEADING, BILL, DISMISSAL OF.

XVIII. 1. Cause generally.

7. If a female deft., against whom process has issued, marries pending the suit, the process will be continued against her and her husband.—M'Namara v. Lysaght, H. & J. 623. (E.E.)

8. An order allowing a plea of the Statute of Limitations does not put the cause out of Court.—Howlett v. Lambert, Flan. & K. 593. (R.)

9. When no proceedings have been taken against a deft. within a year, the cause is out of Court as to him, although proceedings have been taken within that time against other defts.—Bartley v. Davis, Flan. & K. 620. (R.)

10. The ptf. entered a rule to confirm the report, and the order that the cause be set down to be heard on report unexcepted to, and merits, on the same day. The deft. afterwards excepted to the report. Held, that the cause was irregularly set down, that it should, therefore, be struck out of the list, and that the ptf. should pay the costs of the day.—Scully v. S., 3 I. E. R. 384. (E.E.)

11. Upon a hearing upon a special finding by the Master, the Court is confined to the alternatives thereby put.—Montgomery v. Southwell, 2 Con. & L. 263; 3 Dr. & War. 171. (C.)

12. Order of hearing counsel:—First, leading counsel for ptf.: then the junior upon the evidence; then the deft.'s three counsel: and the second counsel for the ptf. to reply.—Taylor v. T., 2 Con. & L. 422. (C.)

13. When no proceeding has been taken by the ptf. in the cause, nor by a deft. within the year, the cause is out of Court as relates to that deft., though another deft. may have taken a proceeding within the year.—Hodges v. Barton, 8 I. E. R. 38. (R.)

14. A cause was set down for hearing, but, being defective for want of parties, stood over generally. No further proceedings were taken in the cause. Upon motion of the defts., more than a year afterwards, the bill was dismissed for want of prosecution.—Hughes v. Maitland, 8 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

1. Ptf.'s solicitor is entitled to give out briefs and fees to counsel upon the day on which he sets down the cause to be heard pro confesso.—Ivie v. Gahan, 9 I. E. R. 223. (R.)

2. After the report and final decree in the cause, the Court will permit, at the instance of the party having the carriage of the cause, judgment creditors concurring in the sale to come in and prove their demands, with liberty to surcharge and falsify the accounts already taken in the cause; it being for the advantage of all parties, and to save the expense and delay of a supplemental suit.—Clarke v. Jessop, 10 I. E. R. 40. (R.)

3. The defts appeared by the same solicitor on the 7th of Oct. 1845, and on the 19th of Jan. 1846 several joined in filing an insufficient answer. A further answer was filed, which was also excepted to, and reported insufficient, and thus ptf. did not obtain a full answer from any deft. until the 2nd of Dec. 1846. He served notice in that month, to take the bill as confessed against the defts. who had not answered at all, and also against those who had not answered fully. Held, that the cause was not out of Court as to the defts. who had not answered, or those who had not answered fully, and the motion was granted.—Birch v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 203. (R.)

4. Although a suit be totally abated by a sole ptf. assigning away his interest or becoming insolvent, it is yet capable of being continued so as to allow the benefit of it, under this doctrine, to creditors proving charges under a decree made in a suit seeking the continuance and benefit of the abated suit. When the original ptf. made an assignment by deed for the benefit of creditors, one trust of which was to continue the abated suit, and original bills in the nature of bills of revivor and supplement were filed by the trustee, and a c. q. t. of this deed, stating it, and praying the benefit of the abated suit, the receiver appointed in which was continued, a decree made and entitled in the new suits only, without referring to the abated one, but reciting among the evidence the proceedings in it, was Held, to be such a decree as entitled creditors proving charges under it to the benefits of the abated suit for this purpose.

The practical application of Lord Redesdale's classification of bills observed on.—Bennett v. Bernard, 10 I. E. R. 584. (C.)

5. The Court has authority to permit the assignee of a judgment creditor to continue proceedings in his own name. But when the original proceedings have been taken by a trustee, and an assignment has thus been rendered necessary, the Court will not give the costs of the motion to continue.—Weir v. Ormsby, 1 I. Jur. 283. (R.)

6. A cause is not out of Court as against a deft. for whom a parliamentary appearance has been entered, though more than a year has elapsed since such appearance,

But the Court will exercise a discretion in granting or withholding an order pro confesso in such a case, and will not be bound to act on an old parliamentary appearance.

In this case the parliamentary appearance was entered in Nov. 1846; an order pro confesso was granted in April 1849.—Blakeney v. B., 13 I. E. R. 84. (R.)

7. At the hearing of cause petitions, of which notice has been served, junior counsel should be retained to open the petition, as in causes.—Russell v. Bevan, 1 I. C. R. 62, note. (C.)

XVIII. 2. Adjourning a Cause.

8. It appeared at the hearing that D., a deft charged only in his individual capacity, was also a necessary party as representative of M., deceased. On that ground, the Court refused to order the cause to stand over, or to oblige ptf. to amend, but directed an account of M.'s assets, though not prayed by the bill; with liberty for D. to rely in the office on any defence which he might have made at the hearing, if he had been charged by the bill in his representative capacity.—Phillips v. P., 1 I. E. R. 179. (C.)

9. Semble—When, on the construction of a deed, there is a reasonable doubt whether the party, who is charged as entitled to the first estate of inheritance, has that estate, the Court will allow the cause to stand over to be amended by bringing before the Court the person who, if the party charged as tenant in tail takes only a life estate, would indisputably represent the inheritance.—Whaley v. Morgan, 2 Dr. & Wal. 330. (C.)

10. When a deft., by his answer, insists that he is a purchaser for value, and without notice, proof of payment of the purchase money is an essential part of the defence. If, at the hearing, deft. fails to prove this, the Court will not allow the cause to stand over to enable deft. to supply that defect.—Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 81. (C.)

11. On showing cause against an injunction obtained on a possessory bill, the Court cannot order the cause to stand over, with liberty to amend the bill by putting in issue matter not stated in, or exactly consistent with it: such a motion is analogous to the final hearing of an ordinary cause.—Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

12. The Court refused to stay a mortgagee's suit after a decree in another creditor's suit, in which the ptf. was a puisne judgment creditor, who filed his bill within a year of the entry of his judgment, and whose right to a sale of the estate depended on setting aside a settlement puisne to the mortgage under which no tenant in tail was in esse.

If a prior mortgagee does not insist on being redeemed at the first hearing, he cannot do so at the final hearing.—Foster v. Ker, 12 I. E. R. 51. (C.)

1. When affidavits are filed so recently that they cannot be answered before the hearing, the Court will, if the filing parties insist on using the affidavits, allow the petition to stand; and make those who cause the delay pay the costs thereby occasioned.—Figgis v. F., 4 I. Jur. 273. (C.) Anderson v. O'Connor, ibid.

XVIII. 3. Advancing a Cause.

2. In a creditor's suit the ptf. obtained a decree to account. Afterwards, and before the decree was made up, the ptf. was paid his demand.

The ptf. having neglected to prosecute the suit, the Court gave the carriage thereof to a third person, who alleged himself to be a creditor of the deceased.—Hines v. O'Keeffe, 2 Jon. 624. (E.E.)

3. A cause ought not to be transferred from the long to the short cause list, when it involves the decision of any point requiring argument.—Kane v. Johnson, 1 I. E. R. 279. (E.E.)

4. Some of the debts. had been served, out of the jurisdiction, with subpoenas, but did not appear. None of them had answered the bill, although the time allowed had expired as to all. Held, that the case came within the 25th G. O.; that parliamentary appearances should be entered for the debts. who had been served out of the jurisdiction; and that the cause be set down for hearing pro confesso.—Fitz Gerald v. Quinlan, 12 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

XVIII. 4. Consolidating Causes.

5. The Court will not, under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 28, consolidate petitions, unless it clearly appears that no injustice can be done thereby.—Lysaght v. L., 3 I. Jur. 162. (C.)

6. The Court will not, on the application of a ptf., consolidate a suit in which a decree to account has been made, with one which has not reached that stage of proceeding.—Goold v. G., 4 I. Jur. 85. (C.)

XVIII. 5. Restoring a Cause; Reinstating.

[The cases in the Ir. Ch. Rep. refer to the dismissal of petitions for want of prosecution, reinstating, &c.]

7. A motion to restore a cause petition, dismissed for want of prosecution, should not be granted as a matter of course. There must be special circumstances, and it must appear that substantially justice would be defeated if the Court were to refuse the application.—Cassan v. Carr, 2 I. C. R. 577; 5 I. Jur. 178. (R.)

8. Order to revive a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850, the suit having abated by the death of one of the respondents.—Ryall v. Farmer, 5 I. Jur. 377. (R.)

9. A cause petition was filed on the 25th February. The respondent's time for filing affidavits was extended to the 14th of April. The petitioner applied to set down the petition for hearing on the 25th Nov. The Registrar refused to set it down, as he was of opinion that the two whole terms were expired under the 27th G. O. The Court, on motion, allowed the petition to be reinstated.

Quære—Whether two whole terms were to be counted from the twenty-one days after filing the petition, or from the end of fourteen days after the 16th of April, the day to which the time for respondents filing affidavits was extended?—McDonnell v. M. G. W. Railway Co., 6 I. Jur. 129. (R.)

10. An order for liberty to file interrogatories does not imply an extension of the time for setting down the cause; and, unless such order for extension is obtained, the petition will stand dismissed, pursuant to the 27th G. O., as if there had been no such order.

The Court may, in such case, allow the petition to be reinstated.—Montgomery v. Mayne, 7 I. Jur. 284. (R.)

11. When a petitioner becomes bankrupt before the petition stands dismissed by the 27th G. O. of 1851, the suit is not affected by that order.

In such a case the proper course is to move that the petition do stand dismissed unless the assignee file a supplemental bill within a time to be limited by the Court.

But when, pendente lite, a petitioner voluntarily assigns his property, the suit is not thereby abated, and is therefore within the operation of the 27th G. O.

In the latter case leave to reinstate the petition may be given on payment of the costs of the motion.—Maxwell v. Read, 15 I. C. R. 133. (R.)

12. A cause petition, which stood dismissed under the 27th G. O. of 1851, was reinstated, upon the sole ground (although some proceedings had been had upon it, and there had been some delay on a respondent's part) that the petitioners were minors; but only on payment of respondents' costs of the motion within ten days after taxation. Otherwise the motion to stand refused with costs, without further order.—Thompson v. Thomas, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 143. (R.)

13. An order extended, beyond the day upon which the petition would stand dismissed under the 27th G. O. of 1851, the petitioner's time to file affidavits in reply. Upon motion for liberty to set down the cause for hearing, although two terms had elapsed since the answer was filed, and that, if necessary, the cause might be reinstated, the Court, without special ground, reinstated the petition.—Armstrong v. A., 17 I. C. R. 132. (R.)

XVIII. 6. Retaining a Cause.

1. Retaining the bill, and giving the party liberty to bring an ejectment, is substantially the same as directing an issue.—Blackwood v. Gregg, H. & Jon. 310. (E.E.)

2. The bill charged that the ptf.'s ancestor's alleged will was a forgery, and prayed an issue:—Whether it was his will or not? and that the defts. might be restrained from setting up temporary bars. The cause was heard upon sequestration against the devisees named in the will. Held, that the Court could only decree the bill to be retained, with liberty to the ptf. to bring an ejectment, and that the defts. be restrained from setting up temporary bars.—Nelson v. Averell, 2 Jon. 782. (E.E.)

3. A cause petition filed in 1854 was allowed to be amended by stating the death of A., a respondent, in 1850, intestate; that B., his heir-at-law, was heir-at-law of the mortgagee, and as such claimed to be entitled to part of the fund in Court; and by naming him as a respondent. The time being about to expire within which the cause could be set down, the notice of motion asked that it should be retained for a longer time. This was refused with costs.—Irvine v. De Ryther, 7 I. Jur. 225. (R.)

4. The Chancery Registry Offices being open during vacation on only two days in each week, the last day for application fell on a day between those on which the office was open. A petition filed on the next office day was retained.

The proper course is to apply to extend the time.—Wilmot v. Aylmer, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 26. (C.A.)

XVIII. 7. Speeding a Cause.

5. When a bill has been amended after answer, and notice given that no answer is required to the amended bill, the ptf. cannot set down the cause pro confesso, although the deft. has served notice that he will answer the amendments.—Hamilton v. West, 12 I. E. R. 422. (R.)

6. In a suit by bill and answer, after decree, the deft.'s solicitor died. No solicitor was named in his stead. The Court, on the application of the deft. having carriage of the proceedings, allowed him to proceed in the suit before the Master: serving the other defts.—those who resided out of the jurisdiction by substitution of service or otherwise—as the Master should direct.—De Morin v. Henry, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 300. (R.)

7. A cause petition was not set down for hearing in proper time, because the petitioner was thrown off his guard by a pending negotiation for a settlement, and an understanding founded on an unauthorised arrangement between the solicitors as to the hearing. Motion to reinstate the petition, granted.—Shanney v. O'Leary, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 12. (C.)

8. A dismissed petition cannot be reinstated even by consent. A new petition must be filed.—Balfe's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (L.E.C.)

XIX. CAUSE, CONDUCT OF.

9. In a creditor's suit ptf. obtained a decree to account, but was paid his demand before that decree was made up. Ptf. having neglected to prosecute the cause, the Court gave the carriage of the suit to a third person, alleging himself to be a creditor of the deceased.—Hines v. O'Keefe, 2 Jon. 625. (E.E.)

10. A receiver's duty is to collect the rents, but not to assume the management of the cause.—Callaghan v. Reardon, S. & Sc. 682. (R.) [See Callaghan v. Reardon, 1 Cr. & Dix Notes of Cas. 231. (R.)]

11. Semble—The Court, having made an erroneous decree to account, is not bound to continue the error by further proceedings in the suit taken on the return of the Master's report.—Roberts v. Hughes, Beat. Rep. 417. (C.)

12. The Court will not re-hear a cause in which the decree is not made up, but remains in minutes.—The Commrs. of Ch. Don. & Beg. v. Hunter, 1 Dr. & War. 544. (C.)

13. In a question touching the carriage of a decree for a sale, in two suits, the solicitor, C., in the first, was assignee of a charge prior to the ptf.'s, and it was in that cause reported at £1800, but in the second cause at £900, because of a difference in the accounts decreed, —Held, that, C. having by the assignment an interest different from the ptf's., the carriage of the decree should be given to the ptf's. in the second suit.—Keons v. Magawly, 7 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

14. The 106th G. Rule does not apply when a decree to account was obtained so far back as twenty-five years ago, and the suit had since abated and been revived several times.—Cavanagh v. Blake, 8 I. E. R. 515. (E.E.)

15. When a property has paid the creditor having the carriage of the proceedings, and the residue is more than sufficient to pay the remaining creditors, the Court will, on application, transfer the carriage of the proceedings to the owner.—In re Lambert, 3 I. Jur. 235. (I.E.C.)

- (XX. a.) 1. Chancery Regulation (Ir.) Act 1850 (13 & 14 Vic., c. 89.)
- a. Generally.
 - b. Special Case.

[See also under the several headings—PLEADING, I, 14; II, 18; V, 26—PRACTICE, ANSWER, BILL, OR PETITION, &c. &c.]

1. a. Generally.

1. When petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act are unnecessarily prolix, the Court will direct the Master to have regard, in the taxation of costs, to the matter improperly introduced.—Johstone v. Linde, 1 I. C. R. 19; 3 I. Jur. 3. (C.)

2. Cause petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act will be heard, in the first instance, on the petition, and affidavits filed in opposition to or support of the same, and on the answers to any interrogatories filed.—Glascock v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50. (C.)

3. Interrogatories having been annexed without leave of the Court to a cause petition, it was ordered that they should be allowed to stand; costs occasioned by them were reserved until the hearing.—O'Malley v. Denny, 1 I. C. R. 118. (C.)

4. In general, cause petitions should be verified by the petitioner.

Form of order on application that the petition be received without the petitioner's affidavit.—Montgomery v. Eyre, 1 I. C. R. 120. (C.)

1. b. Special Case.

5. When a petition, in the nature of a special case, is presented under the 11th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, it is not necessary to the maintenance of such a petition that all the parties interested in the question for adjudication should concur in the statement of facts put forward in the petition.

Nor is the sanction of the Master necessary to such a petition, where a party interested, but not a petitioner, is under any of the disabilities mentioned in that section.

Whether the rights of persons, under such disabilities, should be bound adversely, must be considered in each case.

It is indispensable in every petition under that section that the documents relied on should be fully set out in the petition, or that copies of such documents should be furnished to the Court and to the parties.

Where a petition under that section prayed a declaration of the invalidity of an appointment under a power, and of the validity of a subsequent appointment—Held, that the donee of the power and an appointee (a feme covert), whose husband was a party, were necessary parties.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 208; 3 I. Jur. 205. (C.)—[See s. c., 1 I. C. R. 497. (C.)]

6. By a petition under the 11th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, it appeared that A., entitled to the interest of a legacy of £3000 during her life, with a power to appoint the principal amongst her children (which power did not authorise an exclusive appointment), having three sons and a daughter, by deed in 1834 appointed that sum equally amongst her two younger sons and her daughter; and made a provision aliunde for her eldest son. Subsequently the daughter married; the eldest son died in non-age. The petition stated that A. having been advised that the appointment in 1834 was not a valid execution of the power, by deed in 1850 appointed £1900 to one of the surviving sons, £1000 to the other, and £50 to the daughter; and left £50 unappointed. The petition was presented by the two surviving sons, and prayed that the appointment of 1834 should be declared invalid, and that the appointment of 1850 should be declared valid. Counsel appeared at the hearing for the daughter, and supported the prayer of the petition. Her husband resisted the petition, and in his affidavit stated that his wife was, at the instigation of A., living separate from him, and that A. had executed the latter appointment in order to defeat the former, on faith of which he alleged that he had married the daughter. The affidavit also alleged that A. was in collusion with her sons for the purpose of obtaining the fund, or a large portion of it, to pay her own debts. There was not any evidence given on either side. The Court refused to make the declaration prayed for, and dismissed the petition without prejudice, and without costs.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 497. (C.)—[See s. c., 1 I. C. R. 208. (C.)]

7. A special case should be framed thus, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 11:—A statement of the facts, followed by a series of interrogatories, signed by a counsel on each side.—In re Trusts of Guinness's Will, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (R.)

- (XX. a.) 2. Summary Order in reference to the Master, under the 15th sec. of the Court of Ch. Ir. Reg. Act 1850.

8. On a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, for an account on foot of a legacy charged upon lands; for payment of the sum found due; the Court refused to make a summary order under the 15th sec.; being of opinion that although the case fell within the spirit, it was not within the letter of that sec.—Kirk v. Edmondstone, 1 I. C. R. 17. (C.)

9. When the conuzor of a judgment is alive, the Court will not pronounce a summary order under the Ch. Reg. Act, upon a petition praying an account on foot of the judgment, and a sale of the real estate.—Ingram v. Russell, 1 I. C. R. 18. (C.)

1. The Court will not make a summary order of reference upon a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, to which interrogatories are annexed.—Ryan v. Mulligan, 1 I. C. R. 20; 3 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

2. A petition under the Ch. Reg. Act may be verified by the solicitor of the petitioner, but not in the short form given by the Act. The solicitor's affidavit should concisely verify the details of the petition.—Ex parte Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 21. (C.)

3. To induce the Court to pronounce a summary order of reference, under the Ch. Reg. Act, for the administration of assets, there should be an affidavit that there is not any other proceeding pending for the same purpose.—Triphook v. Griffin, 1 I. C. R. 21. (C.)

4. When a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act has been verified by the solicitor and not by the petitioner in the form given by the Act, the Court will not make a summary order under the 15th sec. Notice must be served of the petition, and it must be set down for hearing as a cause petition.—Stackpole v. Stott, 1 I. C. R. 22, note. (C.)

5. A judgment creditor who has registered an affidavit of ownership of lands by the debtor, pursuant to the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, which gives to such registration the effect of a mortgage, is entitled to proceed summarily under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act.—Woodroffe v. Fannin, 1 I. C. R. 23. (C.)

6. On a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act for a partnership account, it appeared that an arbitration had taken place upon the subject in dispute, and that an award was made, although not under seal.—Held, that the case was not one for a summary order under the 15th sec., and that notice must be served upon the respondent.—Murphy v. Keller, 1 I. C. R. 24. (C.)

7. When, upon a petition presented under the Ch. Reg. Act, by a creditor, on behalf of himself and all other creditors of a deceased person, for administration of his real and personal assets, the usual order of reference to the Master has been made under the 15th sec., the Court will not dismiss the petition on payment to the petitioner of his debt and costs, as the order of reference is equivalent to a decree to account in a plenary suit, and therefore confers upon the other creditors an interest in the proceedings.—Stokes v. Coltsman, 1 I. C. R. 44; 3 I. Jur. 63. (C.)

8. Amendments of cause petitions are to be made without alteration, erasure, or interlineation, by stating the matter of the amendment at the foot of the affidavit to verify, or by endorsement thereon.

Form of order on amendments of cause petitions.

In general the petitioner must abide the costs of the motion for leave to amend, and of the amendment.—Graves v. Holland, 1 I. C. R. 123. (R.)

9. When a notice that a cause petition was "set down in the list of causes for hearing before the Lord Chancellor under the Court of Chancery (Ireland) Regulation Act 1850," was served upon a respondent, and the petition was set down in the list of causes under the 15th sec., the Court being of opinion that such a notice was likely to mislead, refused to make a summary order under that sec., and transferred the petition to the general list.—Livesay v. Maxwell, 1 I. C. R. 254; 3 I. Jur. 250. (C.)

10. A party entitled to the interest, during his life, of money charged upon lands, may, under the 15th and 27th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, obtain on petition, praying merely a receiver over the lands, a summary order of reference to the Master for that purpose.—Bennett v. Briscoe, 1 I. C. R. 594. (C.)

11. The 8th G. O. of the 31st of July 1851 applies only to cause petitions presented with respect to the administration of real or personal estate, when a summary order is sought for under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act.—Holmes v. Walker, 1 I. C. R. 596. (C.)

12. When a summary order has been made under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, the Master has authority to deal with all objections to the petition on the ground of multifariousness, or of the absence of proper parties.—Taylor v. Young, 1 I. C. R. 650; 4 I. Jur. 88. (C.)

13. The Court will make a summary order under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, upon a cause petition, filed by an incumbrancer and annuitant, praying—not redemption, foreclosure, or sale—but the appointment of a receiver over lands, subject to his (the petitioner's) incumbrance and annuity, although a petition for the sale of the same lands has been previously presented in the I. E. Court by the owner of the lands.—Carter v. C., 1 I. C. R. 592. (C.)

14. A cause petition presented by a legatee for the administration of the real and personal estate of the testator, named no person who had proved the will as a respondent; but stated that four executors had been named in the will, one of whom alone proved it, and had since died, and the others, who were named as respondents, had acted as executors, although they had not joined in taking probate. Held, that the case was a proper one for a summary order under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act.—Agnew v. Connell, 1 I. C. R. 716. (C.)

15. A petition for the sale of lands, in payment of the vendor's lien on those lands for unpaid purchase money, falls within the summary jurisdiction of the Court under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, and the 9th G. O. of July 1851.—Enraght v. Mahony, 2 I. C. R. 241. (C.)

1. When a petition has been referred to the Master under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, he has power to direct service of notice under the 32nd G. O. of 1851, for the purpose of binding persons by the proceedings in the cause.—Stanley v. S., 5 I. C. R. 416. (C.)

2. The Court's jurisdiction to make a summary order of reference upon petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, praying the appointment of guardians, allowance of maintenance, settlement of a scheme of education, &c., in minor matters, will be exercised with great reluctance.

Semble—It is better to present a summary petition in the minor matter.—Garnett v. G., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 314. (C.)—[See also Charleville a Minor, 13 I. C. R. 6. (C.)]

3. The Court's jurisdiction to make a summary order of reference upon petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, praying the appointment of guardians, allowance of maintenance, settlement of a scheme of education, &c., in minor matters, will be exercised with great reluctance.

Semble—It is better to present a summary petition in the minor matter.—Fetherstone v. Moore, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

4. A petition to carry into execution the trusts of a will, even though it seeks to charge a trustee as for wilful default, may be referred to the Master, under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act.—Johnston v. J., 5 I. C. R. 493; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 315. (C.)

5. A., entitled to the lands of G., devised them to B. B. mortgaged G. and X. to C. A. was at his death indebted to D. On a petition filed by D., praying for an administration of A.'s assets, and that C.'s mortgage might be thrown on X. in the first instance—Held, that the suit came within the jurisdiction conferred by the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15.—Murray v. Madden, 6 I. C. R. 228. (C.)

6. An order of reference, under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, in an administration suit, cannot be obtained without a personal representative being named as a party.—Cleary v. C., 8 I. C. R. 264. (C.)

7. District administration having been granted, on the usual affidavit that the testator's assets did not amount to more than £200, the administrator attempted to obtain £1000, to which the intestate was entitled. Proceedings to revoke the district administration were taken. Held, that a summary order of reference of a suit for administration and a receiver might be made, without the three weeks' demand of account required by the G. O.—Wales v. Grier, 12 I. C. R. 88. (C.)

XXI. Charge and Discharge. See ACCOUNT, VIII.—PRACTICE, ACCOUNT.

[See also PRACTICE, MASTER, REFERENCE TO.]

8. Quære—How far the officer is authorised to decide between the parties in a cause on a pleading by way of discharge filed in the office, and relying upon the Statute of Limitations?—Thwaites v. M'Donough, 2 I. E. R. 97. (E.E.)

9. A creditor, coming in under a decree, cannot rely upon a will as creating a trust in his favour, unless it has been put in issue sufficiently for that purpose, either by the pleadings in the cause, or by the charge and discharge in the office.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 2 I. E. R. 361. (E.E.)

10. A creditor on foot of a paramount charge went into possession of the debtor's estate under his will, of which she was a trustee, and by which she took some benefit. The will directed payment of a puisne mortgage out of another fund. She did not pay it; but paid the rents for the benefit of the c. q. t., without paying that or other puisne incumbrances. In a creditor's suit—Held, that she could not be charged with any money beyond the sums appropriated to her own use, as against the principal or interest of her own demand, for the benefit of a puisne creditor, especially as he had been a solicitor, and had advised her, though as a friend, and without payment, in the application of the rents.—Boyd v. Murdock, 7 I. E. R. 607; 2 Jon. & L. 203. (C.)

11. A suit for an account against an elegit creditor in possession was heard on bill and answer. The only evidence before the Master to charge debt. with the rent of certain lands, was an admission in the answer, which was accompanied by a statement that the lands were erroneously included in the elegit, and belonged to a third person with whom debt. had accounted. Held, that the Master was not bound to take the entire statement in the answer, but might on admission charge debt. with the rent received, and find that the property belonged to the debtor.—M'Donnell v. Alcock, 8 I. E. R. 127. (C.)

12. The Court will not permit a discharge, sworn and filed, to be amended; but will, in a proper case, permit a further discharge to be filed.—Fenton v. F., 8 I. E. R. 363. (R.)

13. The Court will not suffer a party who has not relied on the Statute of Limitations by his discharge, to do so by a supplemental discharge.—Kelly v. Rutledge, 8 I. E. R. 378. (R.)

14. In a decree for an account of old standing against an executor, a direction was inserted allowing him to discharge himself by affidavit of items, though exceeding 40s.—Dooner v. D., 12 I. E. R. 580. (C.)

15. A creditor's application for liberty to file a discharge to the charge of another creditor, to raise the question of the Statute of

Limitations, was refused, because of considerable neglect and delay on the applicant's part.—Kelly v. Rutledge, 2 I. Jur. 154. (C.)

1. H., a judgment creditor, made a debt., permitted a report and decree to be made in 1828, which omitted all mention of his claims. In 1855, he obtained an order permitting him to file a charge and obtain at his own expense a separate report in respect of his claims; but reserving to the persons who had proved in the cause a right to rely on the decree against his claims. The Master found that his incumbrance was subject to the rights and priorities established by the decree of 1828. Held, that, on the true construction of the order of 1855, the Master was right in so finding.

Quære—Whether the order of 1855 was right in permitting H. to file a charge in respect of a claim omitted in a decree to which he was a party?—Knox v. Waters, 5 I. C. R. 430. (C.)

2. In 1810, two judgments on a joint and several bond, against D. and B., to secure £2200, and in 1812 another judgment, to secure £1000, against D., were entered up by X., as trustee for the Mayo Infirmary. In 1819, a joint and several bond to secure £3200, the sum for which the judgments were obtained, was executed by D. and B. to X., who gave warrants to satisfy the judgments. In 1823, two deeds were executed by D. and B., by the first of which they conveyed lands to trustees, to sell with their consent, or the consent of the survivor, and to stand possessed of the purchase-money, on trusts declared by the second deed, viz.—to apply £8275 as D. and B. should appoint; in default of appointment, to pay the sum of £3200 due to X., the trustee of the Mayo Infirmary (a party to the deed in another character), on a judgment against D. and B., his executors, &c. No sale was had. In 1826, D. died. In 1827, X. died, without entering judgment on the bond of 1819, and before the judgments of 1810 and 1812 were satisfied. In 1832, B. and the trustees of the deed of 1821 mortgaged to the ptfs., who had notice of the deed of 1823, but not of the bond of 1819; and who, without enquiring whether the £3200 had been paid to the Mayo Infirmary, merely required the judgments of 1810 and 1812, which they supposed to be the judgment referred to by the deed of 1823, to be satisfied. Judgment was entered on the bond of 1819 in 1838, and assigned in trust for the Mayo Infirmary, to A., who, in a foreclosure suit filed by the ptfs., proved the judgment, and was, by the final decree, decreed to be paid in the priority of 1838. Y., executor of X., who was not a party to the suit, after the decree, obtained an order allowing him to prove his claim under the deed of 1823, on the usual terms of making up a report at his own expense. Held, on objections to the report under that order, that a trust was created by the deed of 1823 in favour of X., under which the £3200 was charged on the lands.

That the ptfs. had notice that the £3200 was due to the Mayo Infirmary under the deed of 1823; and having neglected to enquire whether it had been paid, could not ward off the claim by reason of the inaccuracy in the description of the security under which it arose.

That X. having executed the deed, though not made a party thereto, as trustee for the Mayo Infirmary, the doctrine of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale (3 Sim. 1) did not apply; and that he might have enforced the trust created for him.

That Y. not having been a party to the suit, the order of 1854 was right in permitting him to come in and prove his demand, although it was in substance for the same debt which had been decreed to A.—Gurney v. Oranmore, 5 I. C. R. 436. (C.)

3. When an incumbrancer, made a party to a suit, permits a decree pro confesso negating the facts on which his claim depends, and afterwards permits a final decree to be taken, which does not provide for his rights, he cannot be permitted to come in and file a charge, and obtain a separate report respecting his claims. — Gurney v. Oranmore, 5 I. C. R. 447; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 442. (C.)

4. A party having lapsed the time for filing a discharge, the Master of the Court enlarged the time, and the Commissioner in Chamber made an order allowing the party to file a discharge, in which one of the defences relied on was the Statute of Limitations. The Court, on appeal, refused to set aside such order, considering the matter entirely within the discretion of the Commissioner before whom it had come. — In re Mason, 6 I. C. R. 592; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 53. (I.E.C.)

5. The parties entitled to a fund, for a long series of years, dealt with it in a particular way. Held, in the absence of any positive evidence to show what their shares in the fund were, that they must be taken to have been entitled to it, in the shares pointed out, by their mode of dealing with it.

On appeal from a Master's order, the Court considered that certain matters had not been properly put in issue before the Master, and allowed the appellant to file, and use upon the appeal motion, a supplemental charge, putting the matters in issue.—Sneyd v. Stewart, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 105. (R.)

XXIII. COMMISSION OF PARTITION, PERAMBULATION, &c. See ESTATE, VII—STATUTE, II.

1. On a bill of partition, by one tenant in common against another, a receiver will not be granted unless a case of exclusion is shown.—Spratt v. Ahearne, 1 Jones, 50. (E.E.)

2. In a partition case the Court will not order the party objecting to the non-service of reverser to disclose his name, &c., to the petitioner; but will not give him the costs of the day unless he undertakes to do so.

The petition will be allowed to stand over to give the petitioner time to effect such service.—Kelly v. Skelton, 1 Jones, 555. (E.E.)

3. A commission of perambulation for settling boundaries cannot be obtained by petition, under the 5 G. 2, c. 9, when minors are interested.—In re O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

4. The affidavit of service did not state that the persons served were the only persons in possession of those lands, which the Court considered a fatal defect.—In re O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

5. In partition suits, in future, all parties are to abide their own costs until the issue of the commission; but the costs of issuing and executing it, and of the final hearing and decree, are to be paid by the parties in proportion to their respective interests.—M'Bride v. Malcolmson, 2 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

6. A bill stated that the lands of B., part of which contained 159 acres, and part 46 acres, had for many years before 1794 been held by the same tenants, so that the boundaries became confused; that in 1804 A. was seized in fee of the 159 acres, and held the 46 acres by lease from H. for a term; that the mearings and boundaries of the 46 acres had not since been ascertained, the entire of the lands having been since the making of the lease, as they had been for 100 years before, held by the persons who owned the fee-simple lands; that they had been so mixed up that it was impossible to discover the boundaries, or ascertain where the 46 acres were situated. After deducing ptf.'s title, the bill stated that deft. claimed to be entitled, as H.'s assignee, to the 46 acres; that ptf.'s interest under the lease had determined; and prayed a partition, or a commission to ascertain the boundaries. On demurrer—Held, that the bill could not be sustained for a partition, since no title to a partition at law was shown; nor as a bill to ascertain boundaries, since the parties were independent proprietors; the inference being, that deft. was in possession of the 46 acres, and that the owner of the fee-simple lands, and not the deft., was responsible for the confusion of the boundaries.

In Equity a petition will be decreed only when ptf. would be entitled to a partition at Law.—O'Hara v. Strange, 11 I. E. R. 262. (R.)

7. When the boundaries have been confused, or land has been encroached on by the tenant, the question of boundary or encroachment should be determined before a f-f. grant is executed under the Ren. Lease. Con. Act, either by ejectment, or, if there be an outstanding legal estate, by an issue.

Form of the order directing an issue.

Semble—The Court has no jurisdiction, on a petition under the Act, to issue a commission to ascertain the boundaries.—Ireland v. Wilson, 1 I. C. R. 623. (R.)

8. After decree in a partition suit, and before the return of the writ of partition and commission of perambulation, one of the commissioners, and A., one of the defts. who was entitled to a part of the lands, died. The cause having been revived by suggestion, and the Master having approved of a new commissioner, the Court, on motion, directed a renewal of the writ and commission, and directed the part allotted by the decree to A. to be allotted to his widow and children, pursuant to his will, as stated in the suggestion.—Valentine v. Middleton, 2 I. C. R. 93. (R.)

9. In partition suits, the costs of issuing and executing the commission and the final decree and hearing, should be borne by the parties in proportion to their respective interests.

The several parties respectively abide their own costs of all subsequent proceedings.

The costs of mutual deeds of partition, and of having them settled by the Master, are subsequent costs, and are to be borne by the parties respectively.

The fact of one of the parties being a minor does not vary the rule.

The ptf. will not be allowed the costs of a deed of disclaimer by the trustees of a deft., who, though necessary, had not been made parties to the suit; nor the costs of a case to counsel advising such deed.—Balfé v. Redington, 2 I. C. R. 324. (R.)

10. A cause petition was presented for the partition of a house and lands, the respondent not having appeared, an order was made for partition, in the proportion of five-eighths to the petitioner, and three-eighths to the respondent; and to "divide" into two equal parts the dwelling-house, offices, kitchen garden, lawn, orchard and plantations;" and one part thereof to allot to the petitioner, and the other part to the respondent. The two commissioners agreed upon leaving the house quarter (including the dwelling-house, offices, kitchen garden, lawn, orchards, and plantations), equal to two-eighths of the entire, and divided the rest of the lands into six equal parts. The commissioner for the respondent insisted upon having the entire of the house quarter included in the respondent's share, but the commissioner for the petitioner insisted on having the house division, offices, kitchen garden, orchard, and plantation divided, pursuant to the order. He, in presence of the other commissioner and of the respondent, cast lots upon them and upon the other six lots; allotted them accordingly; and made a return exactly in the terms of the order of partition, which the other commissioner refused to sign. Held, upon a motion for an attachment against the latter commissioner for disobeying the order of the Court, that the motion should stand over, in order that the respondent should have liberty to apply for a re-hearing of the petition in Chancery, as the commissioners ought to have had power to allot the entire house to one, and a compensation in land to the other.—Foster v. Higgins, 6 I. Jur. 409. (R.)

XXIV. COMMISSION OF REBELLION.

1. Semble—If deft. has been arrested under a commission of rebellion, ptf. may, by entering the proper rule, compel him, in a fit case, to give security to abide the decree.—O'Dell v. Curreen, 1 Jones, 48. (E.E.)

2. The police must assist commissioners of rebellion in executing that writ. If they, when called on, refuse to do so, they may be attached for contempt of Court.

Semble—G. R. 6, for the guidance of the police, applies only to a voluntary interference by the police in the execution of a writ, decree, or civil order.—Knox v. Gavan, 1 Jones, 190. (E.E.)

3. The deft. being in attendance on the Court of Q. Sessions, pursuant to his recognizance to prosecute, was arrested under a commission of rebellion for not answering the ptf.'s bill. The Court discharged him from custody.—Graves v. M'Carthy, 2 Jon. 626. (E.E.)

XXV. COMMISSION OF REVIEW. See PLEADING, BILL OF REVIEW—PRACTICE, BILL OF REVIEW.

4. A commission of review, after the judgment of a Court of Delegates, should issue only when there is some doubtful and important question of law, or when there has been some clear mistake in fact, or some gross miscarriage. The circumstances that the Delegates admitted proofs refused by the Prerogative

Court, and which materially altered the case, though the new evidence removed the weight of that by which the Prerogative judge was much influenced, and would (as alleged) have altered his decision; and that the Delegates doubted, and were divided; and the Judge whose opinion turned the scale had changed it unexpectedly at the last moment; are no grounds for such a commission, especially when the opinion of the Chancellor inclines to that of the majority of the Delegates.—Von Stentz v. Comyn, 12 I. E. R. 622. (C.)

XXVII. CONSENT IN COURT. See ACQUISITION—BARRISTER—HUSBAND AND WIFE, III—PRACTICE, DECREE.

[General Order, 1848.]

5. When the object of a consent is to appoint a receiver over outstanding personal estate, the amount of the salary to be allowed should be fixed by the consent.—Burke v. B. Flan. & K. 89. (R.)

6. A consent, which recites as facts, matters of legal inference, without showing the grounds for it, will not be made a rule of Court when the correctness of the inference is material.

A consent, signed by all the parties, respecting acts to be done by a receiver, will be made a rule of Court; but the receiver will thenceforth be considered only as the parties' private agent.—Gunning v. Ryan, 2 I. E. R. 140. (R.)

7. A consent, the object of which is the allowance of a sum of money, paid by a receiver on account of costs, will not be made a rule of Court, unless signed by the parties themselves, as well as by their attorneys.—Coleman v. Mason, 2 I. E. R. 322. (E.E.)

8. When a consent is in the nature of an allocating order, there must be an affidavit that it has been signed by all the creditors who have proved in the cause.—Cooke v. Briscoe, Flan. & K. 39; 3 I. E. R. 28. (R.)

9. A consent that one-fourth of £500, to which a married woman was entitled, be paid to her and to her husband, was made a rule of Court, without her being examined to waive her equity.—Loughrey v. Lahiffe, 3 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

10. A consent that a receiver may be appointed, and that he may not be obliged to account before the Master, will not be made a rule of Court.—Richey v. Gleeson, Flan. & K. 99. (R.)

1. The names of all the parties to the cause ought to be set out in the title of a consent, which it is sought to make a rule of Court.—Scott v. Miller, 6 I. E. R. 219. (E.E.)

2. A consent to dismiss the bill without costs was signed by one ptf. on behalf of himself and of another ptf., who was of imbecile understanding, and also by the third ptf.; but not by or with the privity of their solicitor. It was also signed by the defts. and by their solicitors. On a motion to make the consent a rule of Court—Held, that the signature of the solicitor was not essential to the validity of the consent, as the clients might compromise their claims without his assistance or privity; not however prejudicing any rights which the solicitor might have.

That the signature on behalf of the imbecile ptf. was a nullity, as he was not competent to authorise the act; and that the consent could not be made a rule of Court.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 221. (R.)

3. A consent will not be made a rule of Court unless written on paper, bookwise, and with proper margins for binding up.—Anonymous, 8 I. E. R. 109. (R.)

4. In a cause in which a minor is concerned, it is irregular and improper for the parties or their solicitors to enter into any consent, without disclosing, on the face of it, the fact that one of the parties is a minor. A side-bar rule entered on such a consent, when that fact did not appear—Held, irregular.—Gatchell v. G., 8 I. E. R. 391. (E.E.)

5. Application to make a consent a rule of Court, the object being that the officer should enquire into the rights of the parties, and as to the costs, the cause not having been heard, refused.—Lecky v. Bell, 8 I. E. R. 506. (E.E.)

6. Consent to pay money to an attorney in the cause must be signed by the clients.—O'Carney v. O'C., 8 I. E. R. 506. (E.E.)

7. The Court will not make a consent a rule of Court, unless the names of all the parties in the suit are stated in the consent.—Minchin v. Walpole, 9 I. E. R. 139. (R.)

8. The Court will not, on the application of the client, set aside an order made on a consent signed by his solicitor, on the allegation that he acted without authority; there being no fraud or misrepresentation.—Connelly v. O'Reilly, 11 I. E. R. 333. (R.)

9. When the parties before decree entered into a consent to take accounts, which was made a rule of Court, and a Master's report obtained on it, upon which the cause was set down—Held, the cause could not be heard.—Hodnett v. Going, 11 I. E. R. 421. (C.)

10. A submission to arbitration made a rule of Court by consent in a cause is within the 10 W. 8, c. 14 (Ir.)—[Garde v. G., 4 Law Rec. N. S. 115, followed. Dennis v. Deane, 8 Law Rec. N. S. doubted.]—Goggin v. Downing, 13 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

11. A party entered into a consent, the terms of which were extremely disadvantageous to himself, and stated on affidavit that he laboured under a misapprehension of the terms of such consent when he entered into it. The Court referred it to a Commissioner in Chamber to ascertain his rights, and award such compensation as he might be entitled to, declaring that none of the parties should be bound by the consent entered into.—In re Wilton, 3 I. Jur. 208. (I.E.C.)

12. When one party to a cause is a lunatic, the application to make a consent to admit documents a rule of Court ought to be made to the Lord Chancellor, even though the cause is in the Rolls list.—Litton v. Power, 7 I. C. R. 64. (C.)

18. A counsel engaged for the deft. published in a newspaper what purported to be a report of the proceedings in this Court. The report was in many respects exaggerated, incorrect, and injurious, containing unjustifiable imputations upon the plaintiff. A motion having been made for an attachment against him for a contempt of Court—Held, that though the publication might be libellous, yet the Court, not being satisfied that it was calculated to obstruct the free course of justice, ought not to commit him for contempt.

The several classes of cases in which Courts of Justice have power to commit for contempts, fully considered. In all the cases in which Courts have committed for constructive contempts (except Cann v. Cann) the publication was either calculated to produce false evidence or attributed perjury to the witnesses pending the suit.

Whatever may be the privilege of counsel, addressing a Court or jury, to comment upon the character of parties or witnesses, such privilege does not justify him in publishing the speech, if it contains defamatory matter.—Birch v. Walsh, 10 I. E. R. 93. (R.)

1. The conditional order for the appointment of a receiver in Chancery renders every party to the cause or matter, who interferes with the rents payable to the receiver, guilty of a contempt.—Delacherois v. —, 2 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

XXXVIII. 3. Effect of Contempt.

2. The affidavit of a party against whom process of sequestration has issued, will not be heard as cause against a conditional order obtained in the cause, such affidavit not stating any irregularity in the proceedings.—Creed v. C., Longf. & T. 581. (E.E.)

3. A defendant in contempt to a sequestration cannot show cause by affidavit against making a conditional order for a receiver on process absolute.—Creed v. Moore, 4 I. E. R. 684. (E.E.)

4. When a defendant has been served out of the jurisdiction with subpoena to appear and answer, and does not appear, process entered against him without the order of the Court is irregular, and will not be allowed to stand.—Persse v. Bayley, 5 I. E. R. 586. (E.E.)

5. A party who is in contempt for disobedience of an order of Court, can be heard only to show irregularity in the order.—Madden v. Woods, 7 I. E. R. 637. (R.)

6. Decree pro confesso against a defendant, although the plaintiff was in contempt when the cause was set down, the costs having been paid before the decree was pronounced.—Casey v. C., 11 I. E. R. 327. (R.)

XXVIII. 4. Discharge from Contempt.

7. A deft., arrested under process of contempt for want of an appearance, will not be discharged from custody until he puts in his answer.

Semble—If a deft. has been arrested under a commission of rebellion, ptf. may, by entering the proper rule, compel him, in a fit case, to give security to abide the decree.—O'Dell v. Curreen, 1 Jones, 48. (E.E.)

8. In a title suit, a deft., who had been attached for want of an answer, applied to be discharged from custody. Ptf. did not insist on his answering. Held, that deft. was entitled to be discharged on paying the debt, with such costs as he would have been liable to pay if he had been sole deft., and also the costs of the motion.

In a similar case a deft., who had incited the parishioners to oppose ptf.'s claim, was discharged on paying the debt; the costs of filing the bill; the costs of all the proceedings against him, and of the motion.—Weldon v. M'Gee, 1 Jones, 160. (E.E.)

9. An order was made under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, to discharge deft. from custody under an attachment for non-payment of costs. The costs were directed to be a charge on funds reported due to deft. in the cause.

The Court is bound to exercise its power to discharge a party in custody for a contempt in all cases in which the purposes of justice will not be answered by detaining him in custody.—Joyce v. J., S. & Sc. 703. (R.)

10. An order was made, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, to discharge a deft. from custody under an attachment for non-production of a deed, upon paying the costs of the attachment proceedings; deft. and his solicitor having sworn that they could not procure the deed, and that the reference to it in deft.'s answer, as being then in his possession, was made through inadvertence and mistake.—Nugent v. N., S. & Sc. 704. (R.)

11. A tenant, who had been attached for non-payment of rent, was discharged from the contempt under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16; but committed for the rent and costs, so as to give the Insolvent Court jurisdiction.—Smith v. S., S. & Sc. 709. (R.)

12. A deft. had been eight months in prison for breaking an injunction against breaking up ancient pasture lands. An order to discharge him was made, upon his undertaking to lay down the lands again.—Scully v. Skehane, S. & Sc. 710. (R.)

13. A sequestration on a final decree abates with the suit. A deft. was arrested for contempt in not furnishing a rental to sequestrators. Under an attachment sued out pending abatement by the death of a sole ptf., he was discharged by the Court.

It is the practice in Ireland to grant attachments to receivers against tenants under the Court, notwithstanding a total or partial abatement of the suit.—Brennan v. Kenny, 2 I. C. R. 579; 4 I. Jur. 112. (R.)

14. The days mentioned in the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, s. 12, Rule 2, which enacts that if a defendant, in custody for contempt, shall not have been sooner brought to the bar of the Court, the ptf. shall bring him by habeas corpus to the bar of the Court within thirty days of his being in custody, and if not, the Sheriff shall discharge him, are to be computed without reference to the orders of the Court as to the computation of time. The deft. was committed on the 10th of April, and brought up on the 13th of May. Held, that he was entitled to his discharge.—Trustees of Lord-Portarlington v. Scrope, 2 I. C. R. 588. (R.)

Taxation of Costs in the House of Lords; 12 & 13, Vic., c. 78.

Taxation of Costs in the House of Commons; 10 & 11, Vic. c. 69.

XXX. 1. Costs generally.

1. When the costs of making or appearing on a motion are ordered to either party, and the order names the amount, if the solicitor of the party entitled thereto produces his bill to the Registrar, and objects that that sum is inadequate, the bill is then laid before the M. R. If he deems the sum inadequate, the order is amended by expunging the specific sum and leaving the order one for costs generally or, perhaps, in a clear case, by increasing the sum specified.—Walker v. W., 1 I. E. R. 149. (R.)

1. Costs of proceedings for an injunction in the nature of a writ of estrepement, and which do not pray an account or answer, are seldom, if ever, given to the landlord.—Chatterton v. White, 1 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

2. As a general rule, in Courts of Equity, the costs follow the result.—Burgh v. Kenny, 1 I. E. R. 264. (E.E.)

3. Ptf., having charged that B., named a deft., was out of the jurisdiction, omitted to pray process against him on his coming within the jurisdiction. Held, that ptf. was, nevertheless, entitled to the costs of a supplemental suit instituted to compel him to join as a conveying party in the deed to the purchaser under the decree.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 Dr. & Wal. 717. (C.)

4. When transactions between principal and agent are in their inception impeachable from the existence of that relation, but afterwards receive validity by confirmatory acts of the principal, whose bill to impeach those transactions is dismissed on those grounds, the defendant (the agent) is not entitled to the costs of his defence.—De Montmorency v. Devereux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410. (H.L.).—[See 7 Cl. & Fin. 188.]

5. The costs incurred by a ptf. in litigating and reducing considerably the demand of a creditor, whose demand is prior to that of the ptf., are not costs which the ptf. is entitled to be paid in preference to the demand of such creditor, who, at the final hearing, had a decree for payment of his demand and costs.—Jauge v. Jackson, Fl. & K. 45. (R.)

6. When the deft. has a good defence on the merits, but does not put his case forward distinctly by his answer, the ptf.'s bill will be dismissed, but without costs.—Steele v. Mitchell, 2 Dr. & Wal. 568; 3 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

7. In consequence of a controversy between the receiver and tenants under the Court, the latter came in and took a reference upon the subject at their own expense. After the proceedings had gone to a great length, it appearing that the Master would report in favour of the tenants, the parties in the cause, by consent, discharged the receiver, to prevent the report from being made up. The Court ordered the ptf. and deft. to pay the tenants all their costs of coming into Court, and of the reference, &c. Afterwards, a consent was entered into, and made a rule of Court, whereby the tenants waived the costs so ordered, upon the terms that the Master should be at liberty to continue the reference, notwithstanding the discharge of the receiver; and that the question of costs should abide the coming in of the report. Before the proceedings under the reference could be renewed, the suit abated by the death of the ptf., and the parties refused to revive the cause. There was an application that the person entitled under the ptf.'s will to his interest in the cause, in respect of a valuable chattel real, the subject of the suit, and the deft., or either of them, should pay the tenants the costs formerly ordered, and those since incurred. Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to make any order in the case.—Hutchins v. H., 3 I. E. R. 217 (R.); and see note to this case, ibid.

8. The ptf. had a decree for a sale, &c., but were thereby ordered to pay the costs of W., who had disclaimed, and as to whom the bill was dismissed. Shortly after the decree, W. died before his costs had been taxed or furnished. The ptf. continued to proceed in the cause as if no abatement had taken place, and in two years after W.'s death obtained, out of the produce of a sale under the decree, the full amount of their demand and costs. Subsequently, W.'s administrator proceeded to have W.'s costs taxed, and the ptf.'s solicitor attended upon the taxation, but protested against the proceeding, as W. had died before taxation, and the suit had not been revived by or against his administrator. The Master, however, taxed the costs, and (after allowing the ptf. time to raise their objection by application to the Court, which they declined to make, but still insisted upon their objection) certified that he had done so in the presence of the ptf.'s solicitor, &c. Thereupon W.'s administrator issued and served upon the ptf. a subpoena for the costs. The ptf. moved to set aside the subpoena for irregularity. Held, that the motion should be refused; and that it would have been refused with costs but for Averall v. Wade (1 Moll. 571, n.), which, it was declared, ought not to bind this Court.

Semble—The more proper course for W.'s administrator would have been, instead of issuing a subpoena, to have applied to the Court, after the taxation, for an order upon the ptf. to pay.

Quere—As to the case of Jupp v. Geering, 5 Madd. 325?—Barry v. Stawell, 3 I. E. R. 18; Fl. & K. 1. (R.)

9. If, after decree, one of several defts. dies, and the cause remains in operation between the ptf. and the other defts., the right to the costs decreed to him is not affected by that deft.'s death before taxation.—Barry v. Stawell, 3 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

10. Defts. who, by persisting in an unfounded claim, have caused the suit to be proceeded with, may be decreed to pay the costs of their co-defts. and of ptf., so far as the suit was properly instituted.—Glynn v. Locke, 5 I. E. R. 61; 3 Dr. & War. 11; 2 Con. & L. 21. (C.)

11. When the case turns upon a dry question of law, the ptf. must, if it be decided against him, pay the costs.—Ferguson v. Lomax, 3 Dr. & War. 238. (C.)

12. When, at the time of a motion, no order is made regarding the costs of it, they follow the costs in the cause, especially in the case of injunction bills.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

1. Costs of re-docketing a recent judgment not allowed in a petition matter.—Macken v. Newcomen, 7 I. E. R. 114; 2 Jon. & L. 17. (C.)

2. The costs of raising a family charge should be borne by the estate; but costs occasioned by dealings with the charge should be borne by the charge, not by the estate.—Stewart v. Marquis of Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 621; 2 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

3. Costs given against a party who, by his want of caution in settling an estate, without giving notice that it was subject to a prior demand, necessitated a suit by the prior incumbrancer to establish his rights.—Wise v. W., 2 Jon. & L. 403. (C.)

4. In a suit between claimants under a will, and an inconsistent deed executed by the testator, the costs are not paid out of the assets, on the ground that the testator created the difficulty, but are subject to the ordinary rule in adverse suits.

Costs given against a trustee under a trust deed, which was held revoked, when he had also a beneficial interest, and insisted that the deed was valid.—Irwin v. Rogers, 12 I. E. R. 159. (C.)

5. Costs in Equity are in the nature of a debt and not of damages.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimbleston, 1 I. Jur. 49. (R.)

6. A deft. was arrested under an attachment for costs of an answer which was prolix and impertinent. The ptf. permitted him to be discharged without payment of the costs. Held, that the ptf. did not thereby lose his right to the costs.—Swift v. S., 2 I. Jur. 65. (R.)

7. Costs of the cause do not include costs incurred before the filing of the bill—necessity for special direction.—Cantwell v. Martin, 2 I. Jur. 293. (C.)

8. In a motion for liberty to proceed at law, the Master of the Rolls refused to name a sum for the costs of the motion, in order to obviate the necessity of a second application.—Ex parte Colthurst; re Barretts Minors, 4 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

9. When an administrator has recovered a chattel interest in lands by a decree declaring his costs to be duly charged on the estate, his solicitor cannot file a petition in his own name to realise his own portion of those costs.—In re McAlister's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 134. (L.E.C.)

XXX. 2. How Costs are Lost.

- a. Generally.
- b. By Fraud.
- c. By tender of Demand.

XXX. 2. a. How Costs are Lost generally.

10. The Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced against P. a decree, with costs. P. paid them to the solicitor of the opposite party. He, with his client's assent, applied the amount in paying costs due by the client to himself, and in paying the costs of an appeal which P. took to the H. L. against the decree. The H. L. reversed the decree, with costs. Thereupon P. applied for an order directing the repayment of those costs. The H. L. refused to make such an order, and left P. to apply to the Court below on the judgment now pronounced.—Clark v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126.

[P. applied to the Court below for an order directing the solicitor to repay him the amount. Held, that the motion should be refused.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 422. (C.)]

11. When an order is moved for which might and ought to have been procured to be made as part of another order previously obtained, the applicant will not get his costs of the second motion, though successful.—Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

12. Any documents, which could be used at Law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in Equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; but, subject to enquiry, if deft. be taken by surprise. Such a method of proof may, however, affect the costs.—Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

13. Neither the costs of a petition to charge a fund in Court, nor of a cross motion to draw money out of Court which has been so charged under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, will be granted when the respondent does not appear.—King v. Brownrigg, 1 I. Jur. 81. (R.)

14. A decree directed that ptf. resident in England should pay a deft. her costs. Before exemplifying this decree in England the deft. served a subpoena upon the ptf. in England. Held, that she was not entitled to the costs, the service being unnecessary.—Stamer v. Nesbitt, 1 I. Jur. 298. (C.)

15. When upon consent an order had been made in Jan. 1846 staying further proceedings in a cause (in which there were two ptf., a trustee, and c. q. t.), and directing that the costs of the ptf. should be taxed and ascertained, the defts. undertaking to pay such costs; and those costs were not taxed until subsequently to the death of the principal ptf. (the c. q. t.), which occurred in Dec. 1848; a motion to compel the defts. to pay the costs so taxed was refused with costs, although the solicitor of the ptf. offered an undertaking to procure for the defts., from the personal representative of the deceased ptf., a receipt for the taxed costs of the cause.—Upton v. McGarry, 13 I. E. R. 164. (C.)

16. A cause petition, properly falling within the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, was set down and heard as an ordinary cause petition. The Court refused at the final hearing (not having been called on before to do so) to make any order as to the extra costs occasioned by the petitioner not having availed himself of the provisions of that section; the question not having been raised at the original hearing of the petition.

Form of decree, made, when pending the proceedings in this Court, an order for sale of the lands of the respondent was made in the I. E. Court.—Eyre v. Little, 4 I. C. R. 604; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 6. (C.)

1. The 8th G. O. of May 1857 directs that the facts deposed to in an affidavit, which are within the deponent's knowledge, shall be distinguished from those stated on belief founded on the information of others. Semble—That the costs of only so much of an affidavit as violates this G. O. are to be disallowed on taxation.—Crawford v. Pilon, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 4. (R.)

XXX. 2. b. By Fraud.

2. When a transaction, suspicious in its commencement, can be sustained only by subsequent confirmatory acts, the party so sustaining it must pay his own costs of investigating the circumstances.—De Montmorency v. Devereux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 7 Cl. & F. 188. (H.L.)—[Affg. 1 Dr. & Wal. 119. (C.)]

3. R., occupier of premises, agreed to give them up to a company for a sum, but subsequently refused, stating that another person also had an interest in them. The company lodged the money in Court to his separate credit. Upon petition by R.; Held, that the lodgment was an admission by the company of his title, and that he was entitled to be paid without a reference; that the company, having made an insufficient tender, was not entitled to costs; nor was R. entitled, his proceedings being mala fide.—In re Ir. S. East. R. Co., 1 I. Jur. 155. (E.E.)

XXX. 2. c. By tender of Demand.

XXX. 3. Apportionment of, and Contribution for Costs.

4. Upon distribution of funds in a creditor's suit, there not being any specific incumbrancer, the several debts and creditors were directed to pay ptf. their proportions of the difference of the costs between party and party, and attorney and client, in proportion to their demands, although neither the bill prayed, nor did the decree direct that they should so contribute.—Bracken v. Drought, 2 Jones, 114. (E.E.)

5. A specific incumbrancer filed a bill for a sale. Held, that judgment creditors, proving under a decree to take an account of prior incumbrances, were not bound to contribute to the payment of the plaintiff's costs, though their demands exhausted the funds, and left nothing for the plaintiff.—The Marquis of Downshire v. Tyrrell, 2 Jones, 804. (E.E.)

6. Pending a reference under an order whereby, inter alia, the Master was directed to report the costs of the reference, and of the order to pay out the funds, the Master transferred the carriage of the decree, &c., from C. to W., another creditor, and reported that the costs of the reference would be payable to W., then having the carriage of the decree. Held, that C. was entitled to so much of the costs of the reference as had been incurred before that transfer.—Kelly v. K., 1 I. E. R. 317. (R.)

7. Costs of a partition suit must be borne by the parties according to the interests allotted to them respectively.—M'Bride v. Malcolmson, 2 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

8. Several children appeared, and proceeded jointly, by the same solicitor, for a sum to which they were entitled in equal shares. Having incurred costs to a considerable amount, two of the children died. There being a continuing litigation as to the persons entitled to their shares, the solicitor in the meantime allowed the surviving children to draw out their shares of the fund, without any deduction for the costs for which they were jointly and severally liable. He now applied for payment out of the sum in Court (which constituted the shares of the two deceased children) of the entire amount of the costs. Held, that that sum was liable, in the first instance, for that proportion only of the costs which they should have paid, if the others had contributed equally; and that it was the duty of the solicitor to have taken care that the costs should be borne equally by the several younger children.—Crone v. O'Dell, 3 I. E. R. 12. (R.)

9. A creditor, who has been stayed from proceeding in his suit, and compelled to come in under the decree in another suit, will not be ordered to contribute to the costs of ptf. in that suit, as between attorney and client. The rule only applies to persons coming in voluntarily under the decree.—O'Brien v. FitzGerald, 3 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

10. One of several c. q. trusts of a fund charged upon land, filed a bill against the owners of the estate; the other c. q. trusts and the trustees (who had refused to act); to raise its amount, and for payment thereof to the persons entitled. Held, that the suit being for the benefit of all the c. q. trusts, they were bound to contribute, in proportion to their shares, to the difference between the taxed costs between party and party, and the plaintiff's costs of suit, taxed as if he were the trustee of the fund.—Bagge v. —, 3 I. E. R. 494. (E.E.)

11. Creditors who prove under a decree obtained in an administration suit instituted by a legatee, are not bound to contribute to the difference between ptf.'s costs between attorney and client, and party and party.—Lynch v. Skerritt, 3 I. E. R. 504. (E.E.)

1. A moiety of an estate was devised, subject to legacies, to A. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. Held, that the tenant for life, tenant in tail, and legatees, must bear their own costs of a partition suit; and that the tenant for life had no equity to call on the tenant in tail to contribute to the costs of the suit.—Greer v. Mercer, 4 I. E. R. 706. (E.E.)

2. In a suit to recover tithe composition, ptf. obtained a decree, with costs, and levied all the costs off one deft. Held, that that deft. was entitled to contribution from his co-defts., and that payment of that contribution would be compelled by summary order.

Seemle—One co-deft. having died after taxation, the others were not bound to contribute in greater proportion than if he were living.—Staples v. Smith, 6 I. E. R. 211. (E.E.)

3. The plaintiff and others having joined in a plan for making a proposed railway, meetings were held. The names of the plaintiff and defendants, in all twenty-five, were printed in a prospectus as provisional directors, and published in different newspapers. There was not sufficient evidence to fix the remainder of the twenty-five with having acted as directors; but there was sufficient to establish the acting of the plaintiff and seven defendants. The plaintiff took no shares in the proposed company, and the defendants only a few. At one of the meetings, where the parties attended, V. was appointed engineer. The proposed plan was afterwards abandoned, and V. brought an action for his bill against the plaintiff in England (he being the only one of the directors residing there), of which the plaintiff gave the defendants notice. V. recovered, and the plaintiff paid. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to contribution to V.'s bill and the costs of the action, against the defendants; and that the rate of contribution should be regulated by the number of those who had acted as directors, so as to render themselves liable to V.; and not by the number of those named as provisional directors, or by the number of the shares.

That the project having been abandoned, the bill was properly filed for contribution, and not for winding up the affairs of the company, as if it had been a partnership.

M. had been one of the twenty-five named as directors, but had taken an indemnity from the solicitors of the proposed company. The plaintiff called him as a witness on the trial of B.'s action; and his evidence having been objected to, gave him a release from all liability. By means of his evidence V.'s demand was considerably reduced. The bill sought to have M.'s share also borne rateably by the plaintiff and defendants. Held, that the release to M. did not discharge the other parties from their liability to contribute.

That the plaintiff would not be entitled to contribution to the loss of M.'s share, unless the examination of M. as a witness was necessary. An enquiry was directed on this point.

Principle of contribution in equity.

Distribution of costs in such a suit.—Lefroy v. Gore, 7 I. E. R. 228; 1 Jon. & L. 571. (C.)

4. Upon the distribution of the funds, the produce of real estate, in a suit instituted by a simple contract creditor, on behalf of himself and other creditors who should come in and contribute to the expenses of the suit, the fund being a sufficient one, the plaintiff is not entitled to make judgment creditors contribute (in proportion to their demands) to his costs between solicitor and client.—Newby v. Drew, 10 I. E. R. 58. (R.)

5. A decree declared that the defts. A. and B. should pay to the ptf. his costs of the cause when taxed and ascertained. Held, that the effect was not necessarily to establish contribution in moieties between the parties.

A decree against two, for payment of costs, is joint and several. The registration of such decrees under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27, does not alter its effect.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 1 I. Jur. 49. (R.)

6. A decree against several, for payment of costs, is joint and several; and a receiver may be appointed over the lands of one of them, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, without making the others parties to the petition.

The costs given by a joint and several decree for payment of costs are in the nature of a debt. Therefore there must be contribution between the parties liable.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 13 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

7. The Court of Ch. will not expunge from an order of the Rolls recitals which reflect on the character of a party, unless there has been some miscarriage in the proceedings, or some injustice done. An appeal motion for this purpose dismissed with costs.

In a suit for tithe rentcharge several defts. were struck out of the bill, by side-bar rule, on payment of their proportion, and the costs of subpoena and appearance. The bill was set down against the other eight defts., who entered into a consent to pay whatever costs were taxed against them. They paid £26 on account. The general costs of the suit were taxed against them to £36. 2s. 0½d. A motion was made to the Rolls in Jan. 1854, and an order obtained directing the Taxing Master to review his taxation, and report what amount of costs would be properly charged against these eight remaining defts., if the other sixty-three defts. had been charged with the proportion of the costs of the suit to which they would have been liable under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 28. A report was made. In pursuance of it, his Honor directed the ptf.'s solicitor to refund to the eight defts. £17. 6s. 8d. out of the £26 paid by them for costs, and that the ptf. should pay to these eight defts. the costs of the motion of Jan. 1854, and the proceedings thereunder. Held, on appeal, against the payment of costs directed by the order, that this order should be affirmed, and the appeal dismissed with costs.—Chaine v. Dungannon, 7 I. Jur. 89. (C.)—[Rolls motion reported, 6 I. Jur. 174. (R.)]

1. The Lord Chancellor having ordered all the respondents in a cause petition matter to pay the petitioners their costs when taxed; and that all parties should be at liberty to apply to the Court as they should be advised; and the entire amount of these costs having been paid by two of the respondents; the M. R. ordered a reference to ascertain what amount a third respondent should contribute as and for his share of the costs so paid.—M'Cauleland v. Wynne, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 193. (R.)

2. An order was made in a partition suit, in Dec. 1856, to bind persons, not parties, under the 32nd G. Order of 1851. The order was not entered in the final decree, which directed that the parties should respectively bear their own costs, up to and including the first hearing of the cause in June 1856; and that they should respectively bear and pay the costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the final hearing, rateably, and in proportion to the value of the estates allotted to them. Held, that the petitioners were not entitled to a rateable proportion of the costs of the order of Dec. 1856.—O'Gorman v. Pratt, 9 I. C. R. 343. (R.)

XXX. 4. From what Fund Costs are payable: in what order.

3. After an order to pay out a deficient fund to the parties as reported, ptf. was obliged to take further proceedings in the cause. The order did not provide for the costs thereof. No application was made until all the creditors, except one, had drawn out the sums allocated to them respectively. Held, that ptf. was entitled to be paid out of the remaining share the costs necessarily incurred in those further proceedings.—Birch v. Alt, 1 I. E. R. 228. (R.)

4. A ptf. abandoned a cause in which he had obtained a decree to account. Without any restraining order having been served upon him, he came in, and proved his debt in another cause. Held, that a deft. (a creditor whose demand was puiſne to ptf.'s), in the abandoned cause, was not entitled to have the costs incurred by him in the abandoned cause paid out of ptf.'s portion of the fund brought into Court in the other cause.

Semle—Deft. should have applied for carriage of the decree in the abandoned cause, and had his costs added to his demand.—Downshire v. Tyrrell, 2 I. E. R. 66. (E.E.)

5. A supplemental bill was filed merely to bring before the Court a tenant in tail who had come into being since the decree in the original cause was pronounced. All the defts. in that cause appeared at the hearing of the supplemental suit. Held, that since they appeared in consequence of a notice served by ptf., they were entitled as against him to their costs of the hearing; but that ptf. should not have them over.—Wallace v. Blake, 1 Dr. & Wal. 378. (C.)

6. Incumbrancers on a life estate, who are necessary parties to a suit to sell the inheritance to pay charges prior to that life estate, are only entitled to their costs against that life estate, and not against the ptf's generally.—Ennis v. Brady, 1 Dr. & Wal. 720. (C.)

7. Several children appeared and proceeded jointly by the same solicitor for a sum to which they were entitled in equal shares, and incurred costs to a considerable amount. Two of the children died. There being a continuing litigation as to the persons entitled to their shares, the solicitor in the meantime allowed the surviving children to draw out their shares of the fund without any deduction for the costs for which they were jointly and severally liable; and now applied for payment, out of the sum in bank (which constituted the shares of the two deceased children), of the entire amount of the costs. Held, that this sum was liable, in the first instance, for that proportion only of the costs which they should have paid if the others had contributed equally; and that it was the duty of the solicitor to have taken care that the costs should be borne equally by the several younger children.—Crone v. O'Dell, 8 I. E. R. 12. (R.)

8. The final decree directed a sale for payment of demands and costs, according to priority; and as to the deft. B. ordered, that he should have his costs out of the residue, if any. On the ptf.'s motion that B.'s solicitor should bring in the title-deeds, &c., in his hands, relating to the lands about to be sold under the decree, it appeared that B. was insolvent; that the fund would be deficient; and (it was alleged) that the costs in the cause for which the solicitor claimed a lien were incurred in proceedings by which the fund distributable under the decree had been increased to a very large extent. The solicitor was ordered to bring in the deeds, &c., but it was referred to the Master to ascertain the sum due to him for costs, and to enquire and report how far they had been incurred in proceedings by which the fund distributable had been increased. The Master reported upwards of £300 to be due to the solicitor for costs of proceedings whereby the fund distributable had been increased by upwards of £10,000. On the solicitor's motion for payment, out of the fund, of the sum reported due, and for the costs of the reference and of the motion—Held, that the costs in question being in the nature of salvage costs, should have been specially secured by the decree, and that the decree might be amended in that particular.

That, under such circumstances, the Court would not have been justified in taking the title deeds, &c., from the solicitor, without requiring his costs to be paid to him; and that, notwithstanding the form of the decree, and the deficiency of the fund, his motion should be granted.—Grey v. Matthews, 3 I. E. R. 530—[See notes, pp. 533, 534]; Fl. & K. 309. (R.)

9. The value of a settled estate being less than the sum charged thereon for younger children's portions, the inheritor filed against the younger children a bill to sell the estate. At the final hearing he asked for his costs in priority to their demands. Held, that, in the absence of any agreement to that effect, he was not entitled to them.—[Head v. Massey, 2 Moll. 467, overruled.]—Hughes v. Nash, 3 I. E. R. 495. (E.E.)

1. When a suit is necessitated by any difficulty in construing a will, the costs are payable out of the estate: testator himself having created the difficulty.—Comms. of Ch. Don. & Beq. v. Cotter, 1 Dr. & War. 498. (C.)—[Rev. 2 Dr. & Wal. 615. (C.)]

2. By the settled practice, ptf. in a creditor's suit only gets costs in the same rank as his demand, except such as have been incurred for the benefit of the parties in the cause; e. g., of making out title to the estate to be sold.—Nelson v. Brady, 4 I. E. R. 359; 2 Dr. & War. 143; 1 Con. & L. 239. (C.)

3. When litigation is occasioned by the ambiguity of a will, the costs of all parties shall come out of testator's general personal estate.—Lamphier v. Despard, 1 Con. & L. 200.—[See 4 I. E. R. 334; 2 Dr. & War. 59. (C.)]

4. When the misapplication of the funds of a public body had gone on for a great length of time, and no imputation was cast upon the trustees, they, though removed, were allowed their costs out of the fund: this, however, not to be a precedent for cases which should be defended afterwards, and in which the same point should arise.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.)

5. The costs of parties brought before the Court as prior incumbrancers upon an estate, and of their trustees, are to be paid out of the fund in the same priority with their demands, and not by the ptf. in the first instance. When, however, the fund is deficient, the ptf. will be obliged to pay them their costs.—Hall v. Hill, 5 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

6. Practice as to attorneys applying to be paid their costs out of the funds decreed to their clients.—Anon., 5 I. E. R. 38. (E.E.)

7. A bill was filed in this Court by the conuzee to recover the amount of a judgment. The real and personal representatives of the conuzor were made parties. Held, that the defts., co-heiresses-at-law of the conuzor, who, by their answer, did not claim any interest in the premises affected by the judgment, were not entitled as against the ptf. to their costs of the suit; but only against the surplus fund arising from the sale of the premises decreed to be sold.—Rutherford v. Cottnam, 8 I. E. R. 391. (E.E.)

8. The ptf. in a stayed suit, when liable to pay a deft. costs, is bound to pay them though no funds for the purpose have been realised.

—Tangney v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 114. (R.)—[Affirmed: ibid. 207. (C.)]

9. The ptf. in a stayed suit, who has paid the costs of a deft. according to the rule in Loflie v. Forbes (2 I. E. R. 443), is not entitled to them out of the funds in the receiver's hands, unless the estate is clearly sufficient to pay them according to their priority.

In Loflie v. Forbes there was a fund sufficient to pay all creditors.—O'Keeffe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 116. (R.)

10. The costs of proving a will in the common form are always paid out of the residue, and should not be charged on a legatee.—Nugent v. N., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

11. Unpaid costs have the same priority as the demand in establishing which they were incurred.—In re Hawkesworth's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 255. (C.A.)

12. A testator's widow by will declared that she, in pursuance of all power and authority vested in her by his will, bequeathed £800, of which she was possessed, to her daughter for life, and that, at her death, £400 should be given to testatrix's grandson, the other £400 to be equally divided among her four granddaughters (naming them). Held, that that £800 was the proper sum to bear the costs of establishing claimants' respective claims; and that the daughter's personal representative, who unsuccessfully contended that she was entitled absolutely to that £800, was entitled to his costs out of that fund.—Touhy v. Burke, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 292. (C.)

XXX. 4. a. Costs of Employing Counsel.

13. No alteration is allowed in a bill of costs after service of the copy, without the permission of the Remembrancer, and notice to the other party.

Party allowed counsel's attendance at the signing of the draft report, when an application had been made to delay the signing thereof.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

14. The ptf.'s solicitor is entitled to give out briefs and fees to counsel upon the same day that he sets down the cause to be heard pro confesso.—Ivie v. Gahan, 9 I. E. R. 223. (R.)

15. When an injunction or receiver is prayed by the bill, the defts. interested in resisting the motion are entitled to the costs of two briefs on the filing of their answers. The ptf. is not entitled to the costs of briefs unless he has moved, or served a bona fide notice of motion; or unless some act has been done by the defts. after the briefs were bona fide made up, which rendered the motion or service of notice unnecessary.

The bill prayed an injunction. Upon the coming in of the answer the solicitor prepared two briefs for the injunction motion. The suit was compromised before the briefs were given out or notice of motion served. Held, that the ptf. was not entitled to the costs of the briefs against the deft.—Broadbent v. Hughes, 10 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

1. A fee to counsel for settling a draft report, is not allowed in taxation of costs between party and party.

In allowing the costs of attested copies it is discretionary with the Taxing Master whether he will allow for the copy of the whole or a part only of a document.

Practice before the 1st G. O. of April 1847, as to fees to counsel in the Master's office.—Clanmorris v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 144. (C.)

2. Motion, by the successful party, to be allowed the costs of two counsel upon the arguments in this Court, and in the C. P.; the case having been important.

The Court allowed costs of one counsel here, and of two in the C. P.—In re Whitsitt, 4 I. Jur. 183. (I.E.C.)

3. The Taxing Masters do not in cause or other petitions, or on motions, allow to counsel refreshing or consultation fees; but this practice will, as to refreshing fees, be altered by a G. O. of the Court of Ch.—Doner v. Walsh, 5 I. Jur. 345. (C.)

4. A cause petition had been moved under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, for which the solicitor charged £22 in his bill of costs. The Taxing Master struck off £1. 1s. Held, on a motion to review the taxation, that the Court had no power to alter the amount of a fee to counsel. The case was sent before the Taxing Masters to report upon.—Murray v. Shadwell, 6 I. Jur. 125. (R.)

5. On a motion to allocate funds, a cross notice being moved at the same time, though questions of difficulty are raised, and the motion lasts several days, no refresher fees to counsel will be allowed on taxation; nor will the Taxing Officer be directed to review his taxation, though he certify that the rule is a hardship on the parties in the particular case.—Houston v. Barry, 6 I. Jur. 25. (R.)

6. Refresher fees on motions will not be allowed on taxation between party and party. Order at the Rolls.—Houston v. Barry, 6 I. Jur. 49. (R.)

7. The costs of a third counsel for the petitioner, upon the hearing of a cause petition, disallowed, as between party and party, even under circumstances which rendered the employment of the three counsel not unreasonable.—Collis v. Stewart, 6 I. Jur. 51. (C.)

8. On a motion made in Feb. to draw out purchase money which had been lodged in Court by a public company, an order was made for that purpose, and several deeds referring to the title of the party applying were entered as read. Briefs of these deeds in full were allowed on taxation; and a motion in Nov. to review the taxation, and amend the order by striking out the deeds, was refused.

The counsel who was first retained for the motion having become unwell, a second brief and fee was allowed, as the Court does not approve of the practice of counsel handing over their briefs to another to move for them.—Poor-law Commrs. v. Fitzgerald, 7 I. Jur. 110. (R.)

9. Fees upon the briefs of the two counsel on each side, as a general rule, not to be reduced; and in all important cases a brief and fee to be allowed to a third counsel.—Muskerry v. Putland, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 118. (C.A.)

10. On taxation of costs only two counsel shall be allowed on a motion, except under very special circumstances.—In re Grady, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 49. (C.)

11. An insolvent deft.'s provisional assignee is not entitled to a fee for counsel to approve of a deed which the assignee is called upon to execute under a decree.—Wallace v. Macan, Fl. & K. 554. (R.)

12. Costs of appearing by counsel at the argument are not allowed to a trustee who has brought in the fund under the Trustee Relief Act, when all the beneficiaries are free from disability, and the case has been fully argued on their behalf, although the contrary practice prevails in England.—Lockhart's Trust; ex parte Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

XX. 5. Payment and tender of Costs: when necessary: their Effect.

13. A bill, filed by husband and wife, to foreclose a mortgage, the wife's separate property, was dismissed with costs. The Court refused, on petition under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, to appoint a receiver over other property to which the wife was entitled for her separate use.—Hackett v. Farrell, 4 I. E. R. 515; Fl. & K. 549. (R.)

14. An order of the House of Lords, dismissing an appeal, was by side-bar order made a rule of Court. The Court directed the Clerk of Writs and Appearances to issue a subpoena for the costs of the appeal.—O'Ferrall v. McCan, 5 I. E. R. 105; Fl. & K. 635. (R.)

15. When a party, ordered to pay costs, absents himself to avoid personal demand and service of the certificate of the costs, the H. L. will order service to be substituted on his agents in the appeal.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 708, note.

16. When a party is served with the certificate of costs, and personal demand is made, and he does not pay them, the H. L. will, on petition by the party entitled, order the recognizances to be estreated to pay the costs, together with costs of the petition.—Callaghan v. C., 8 Cl. & F., 709, note.

17. An award directed that A. should pay B. money, and that B. should pay A. half the costs when taxed. Held, that a tender by A. of the balance between the sum awarded and the half of the taxed costs was not a compliance with the award. — Watt v. W., 7 I. E. R. 334. (E.E.)

1. A decree directed the deft. to pay the ptf.'s costs which were afterwards received from the deft. by the ptf.'s solicitor, under a power of attorney from his clients. The deft. appealed from the decree, which was reversed. The bill was eventually dismissed, with costs. The costs paid by the deft. to the ptf.'s solicitor had been retained by him, with the consent of the ptf. to defend the appeal (the costs of which exceeded that sum); and in part payment of the costs already due. Held, that, though there was no actual transfer of the money, yet in point of law, the payment to the principal was complete; and that the deft. was, therefore, not entitled to an order upon the solicitor of the ptf. for the repayment of those costs. — Smith v. Clarke, 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)

2. After a demurrer was allowed under the 64th G. O. (1843), the ptf. moved for liberty to amend, and serve new subpoenas against the demurring defts. Motion refused, the costs of the demurrer being unpaid. — Sherlock v. Disney, 1 I. Jur. 127. (R.)

3. Bill by A. to raise a mortgage. Cross-bill by inheritor, impeaching deeds on the ground of fraud. A demurrer to the cross-bill for multifariousness was allowed, and liberty given to the ptf. to amend within a week after the costs should be taxed. A petition was presented by A. to the I. E. Court. The inheritor, on showing cause, raised the same questions as by the cross-bill, and offered to submit them to the decision of the Commissioners, who refused to entertain them; but directed that the order should not be made absolute if proceedings were taken by the inheritor. Bill by inheritor for the same purpose as the cross-bill. Order made that further proceedings should be stayed in that suit until the costs of the demurrer should be paid. — Allman v. Crofts, 2 I. Jur. 289. (R.)

XXX. 6. Security for Costs.

4. In a suit against an attorney, to set aside a conveyance made as a security for untaxed costs, the Court refused to order the deed to be lodged in Court. — Carr v. Moulds, H. & J. 714. (E.E.)

5. The ptf. being resident out of the jurisdiction, and his bill having been reported prolix, the Court restrained him from proceeding in the cause until he paid the costs of the reference, and report of prolixity, though the deft. had neglected to compel him to give security for costs. — La Touche v. Lawler, 2 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

6. When, during the suit's progress, a ptf. goes abroad in order to attend to his affairs, and not with a view to abscond from his creditors, but with the intention to return to this country, he will not be required to give security for costs.

A motion to stay a ptf.'s proceedings until he shall give security for costs should be made as early as possible; but circumstances may exist under which such a motion would never be too late. — Home v. Thompson, S. & Sc. 622. (R.)

7. A ptf., a non-commissioned officer residing with his regiment in India, will not be compelled to give security for costs.

A motion, that a ptf. residing abroad shall give security for costs, is an application made to the Court's discretion. — Fisher v. Bunbury, S. & Sc. 625. (R.)

8. Proceedings of a ptf., who had misdescribed his residence in the bill, were stayed until he gave security for costs.

Executors and administrators, like other suitors, must give security for costs.

Before serving notice of a motion to stay proceedings until ptf. gives security for costs, it is not necessary to apply to ptf.'s solicitor for security. — Shaw v. Dempsey, S. & Sc. 628. (R.)

9. A motion, to stay the ptf.'s proceedings until they should give security for costs, was refused with costs, because the deft.'s affidavit to support the motion misrepresented some, and suppressed other material facts.

Quære—Can such a motion be sustained after a decree to account has been pronounced? — Murphy v. Archdall, S. & Sc. 630. (R.)

10. A London stockbroker, whose name was still used in the firm there, being appointed executor of one who had contracted to grant, for a large sum, a lease of mines in Ireland, filed a bill for specific performance; and in his affidavit, to oppose a motion to stay his proceedings until he should give security for costs, stated that he had given up his residence in England, and had at some expense removed his family to Ireland, where he had taken a permanent residence. In one passage he stated his intention to reside in Ireland altogether; but in other passages that he intended to reside in Ireland until this suit, and all other affairs of his testator in Ireland should be finally arranged and settled. Motion refused, without costs. — Pike v. Vigors, S. & Sc. 635. (R.)

11. When a ptf. resides abroad, and it is ordered that his proceedings shall be stayed until he gives security for costs, the security of a person residing abroad, who has large real estates within the jurisdiction, will not be accepted by the Court.

Such a surety, along with a co-surety to answer for interlocutory costs, might be accepted.

Circumstances may exist under which the usual number of sureties will be dispensed with.

The proceedings of a ptf. residing abroad were ordered to be stayed until he gave security for costs. Having allowed a long time to elapse without giving security, the Court further ordered him to give security before a certain day; and that, in default, his bill should stand dismissed with costs.—Knight v. Lord de Blaquiere, 1 I. E. R. 375; S. & Sc. 648 and 649. (R.)—[See Powell v. Smith, S. & Sc. 654. (R.)]

1. A ptf., who is a seafaring man, will not be required to give security for costs, although he is abroad, and has not any residence or property within the jurisdiction.—Gowran v. Barnett, S. & Sc. 651. (R.)

2. A motion that a ptf., an army surgeon, residing abroad with his regiment, should give security for costs, was refused with costs.—Wright v. Everard, S. & Sc. 651. (R.)

3. In a bill for dower, the proceedings of the ptf., who resided out of the jurisdiction, were stayed until she should give security for costs.

Secus—If the bill was a cross-bill, or a bill for an injunction to restrain proceedings at law

The ptf. was allowed the option of giving security, or of lodging the amount in Court.—Maguire v. M., S. & Sc. 652. (R.)

4. A motion to stay the proceedings of a ptf., who appeared by the bill to be resident abroad, until he should give security for costs, was refused, when the month's notice to answer had been served, and the time for appearing had expired.—Eyre v. Dwyer, S. & Sc. 653. (R.)

5. When it appears on the face of the bill that ptf. is residing abroad, a motion to stay his proceedings until he shall give security for costs may be made without notice.—Lord Yarborough v. Brazier, 2 I. E. R. 463; S. & Sc. 653, note. (R.)

6. Proceedings stayed until ptf., residing abroad, give security for costs. He suffered a long time to elapse without giving it. The Court then ordered him to give security before a day named; in default, his bill to stand dismissed with costs.—Powell v. Smith, S. & Sc. 654, note. (R.)

7. The Court will not allow a co-ptf. to be withdrawn from the record without requiring security to be given to all the defts. for past costs.—Sweeny v. Hall, 1 I. E. R. 22; S. & Sc. 662. (R.)

8. A person, who had resided in England, came to Ireland to assert his title to lands here. Failing in an ejectment, he filed a bill in which he was described as A. B., late of R., in England, but now of the city of Cork. During the preceding three years, he had occasionally been in Ireland, and had stopped at a public-house in Cork, but had not as yet taken any fixed abode in Ireland. In his affidavit, made to oppose a motion to stay his proceedings until he should give security for costs, he stated that he had made Ireland his fixed domicile and residence; and intended to bring his wife from England to live with him. The motion was refused, but without costs.—Rushton v. Heazle, S. & Sc. 654. (R.)

9. Ptf., residing out of the jurisdiction, and suing as executor, may be compelled to give security for costs.—Cathcart v. Hewson, Hayes, 173. (E.E.)

10. A., being in this country by license from the Secretary of State, filed a bill. If, pending the suit, his license expires, and he leaves the country, deft. may compel him to give security for costs. The demand sought to be established by the bill is not such a security as the Court requires.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 1 Jones, 175. (E.E.)

11. A co-ptf. cannot be withdrawn from the record without security for past costs being given to all the defts.—Sweeny v. Hall, 1 I. E. R. 22; S. & Sc. 662. (R.)

12. Application that ptf., out of the jurisdiction, an officer serving with his regiment in India, should give security for costs, refused with costs.—Everard v. —, 1 I. E. R. 421. (R.)

13. A ptf. residing abroad did not within a reasonable time give the security for costs, as ordered. The Court ordered him to give it before a day named; and that, in default, his bill should stand dismissed without costs.—Hardwicke v. Warren, 2 I. E. R. 156; S. & Sc. 645. (R.)

14. Ptf. residing abroad ordered to give security pursuant to former order, on or before the first day of next Term; in default, his bill to be dismissed with costs.—Knight v. Wilson, 2 I. E. R. 158. (R.)

15. A ptf. holding in Jamaica the office of stipendiary magistrate, under 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 73, is not bound to give security for costs.—Cocking v. Alexander, Fl. & K. 391. (R.)

16. Semble—Where a security for future costs is given in consideration of the solicitor prosecuting a cause, on the subject-matter of which the security is given, it is maintenance.

When a security is expressed to be given for costs generally, can it be sustained to the extent of costs which have been incurred at the date of the execution of the deed?—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

17. A femme couverte and infant, as co-ptfs., by the same next friend, filed a bill in vacation. The deft. filed a demurrer within the month allowed by the rules of Court, and at the time of filing it, served a notice on the ptf. that he would apply, on the sitting of the Court, to have the proceedings stayed, unless security for costs were given, or the next friend changed. Held, that the defendant had not, by demurring, taken such a step as waived his right to require security for costs.

The poverty of the next friend of an infant will be no ground for the defendant's requiring security for costs. But the poverty of a next friend of a femme covert is a ground for requiring security for costs to be given; and the same rule prevails when the same person is next friend both of a femme covert and infants who are co-ptfs.—Drinan v. Mannix, 5 I. E. R. 190; 3 Dr. & War. 154; 2 Con. & L. 87. (C.)

1. When the plaintiff resides out of the jurisdiction, each deft. is entitled to a separate security for costs, to be immediately available whenever costs in the cause, or of interlocutory proceedings, are awarded to him against the ptf. Even when the order is, that the ptf. give one security for the costs of all the defts., and such security is given accordingly, it is to be considered as representing a fund to be applicable, from time to time, in payment of the costs of each of the defts., according to the priority of the orders by which they were awarded.—Eyre v. Mackay, 6 I. E. R. 115. (R.)

2. When the ptf. comes to reside permanently within the jurisdiction, and the order is rescinded, the recognizance entered into as security for the costs of the suit will be vacated.—Sterne v. Goodisson, 7 I. E. R. 89. (R.)

3. A motion that the ptf., resident out of the jurisdiction, do give security for costs, must be made upon notice, and is not of course.—Ivie v. Keogh, 7 I. E. R. 90. (R.)

4. A motion to restrain the ptf., until he gives security for costs, must be upon notice.—Nugent v. Hill, 7 I. E. R. 90, note. (R.)

5. The beneficial owner of an old judgment, to avoid liability to costs in a suit to be instituted to raise its amount, procured it to be assigned to a pauper, and filed a bill in his name. Held, that the proceedings should be stayed until the ptf. gave security for costs.—Burke v. Lidwell, 1 Jon. & L. 703. (C.)

6. Security for costs was required from a ptf. on the ground of poverty, when he had no beneficial interest in the property to be recovered, which had been assigned to him collusively to evade liability to costs.—Burke v. Hutchinson, 7 I. E. R. 508. (C.)—[See Worrall v. White, 9 I. E. R. 572; 3 Jon. & L. 513 (C.)]

7. A deft., who having appeared to an injunction bill, suffers the ptf. to make his order for the injunction absolute, is too late to require security for costs.—Foster v. Eyres, 7 I. E. R. 638. (R.)

8. Service of notice of motion to give security for costs will not stop the ptf's. proceeding to hear the cause.—Ivie v. Gahan, 8 I. E. R. 371. (R.)

9. It is no answer to a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution by one deft., that another deft. has obtained an order staying the ptf. until he gives security for costs.—Kelly v. Magee, 9 I. E. R. 216. (R.)

10. Security for costs refused, notwithstanding affidavits stating the poverty of the ptf.; that he was a trustee as to one moiety of the subject of the suit; disclosing facts which would be a good defence; and raised a suspicion of champerty and collusion between the ptf. and his solicitor.—[Burke v. Hutchinson, 7 I. E. R. 508, explained.]—Worrall v. White, 9 I. E. R. 572; 3 Jon. & L. 513. (C.)

11. Semble—It is not an objection to an equitable mortgage given for costs due, that they had not been ascertained or delivered.—[Ex parte Boville (2 Mont. & Ayr. 382, n.) observed on.]—Bristow v. Warner, 10 I. E. R. 246. (C.)

12. Security for costs refused after the time for answering had expired, and a notice had been served to have the bill taken as confessed.—Nolan v. French, 10 I. E. R. 211. (R.)

13. Security for costs refused after the time for answering had expired.—Freel v. Trant, 11 I. E. R. 278. (R.)

14. Bill filed on the 8th June, the ptf. residing out of the jurisdiction. Defts. appeared on the 14th August; the time for answering expired on the 14th Oct. Notice of a motion for security for costs was served on the 1st Nov. No further proceedings were had. Motion for security refused with costs.—Daniel v. Cunningham, 1 I. Jur. 36. (E.E.)

15. A mortgagee resident out of the jurisdiction presented a petition for a receiver, and obtained a conditional order. Upon the motion to show cause, the respondent objected to the petitioner being heard without his giving security. The petitioner was allowed to proceed, his solicitor undertaking to pay such costs as the Court would direct.—Prater v. Portarlington, 1 I. Jur. 259. (R.)

16. The bill prayed that a policy of assurance should be delivered up to be cancelled, and a discovery in aid of a defence to an action at law on it. Ptf's. resident in England were ordered to give security for costs.—Anderson v. Dowling, 12 I. E. R. 307. (R.)

17. On the 16th June an order was made for appointment of a receiver over a term of years, in which the respondent had an equitable interest. On the 19th June these lands were seized by the sheriff under a fi. fa. issued by another judgment creditor. The Court refused to set aside the order for the receiver, upon the application of an execution creditor. The party moving this motion being out of the jurisdiction, was ordered to give security for costs.—Scott v. Nixon, 2 I. Jur. 91. (R.)

18. The next friend of a married woman should be a person of substance, else the Court will require security for costs to be given.—Keogh v. K., 2 I. Jur. 155. (R.)

19. On the 12th Nov. 1849, an order was made that the ptf. should give security for costs. The ptf. not having done so, an order was made that the ptf. should give the security within one month, or, in default, that the bill should be dismissed with costs.—Popera v. Phinket, 2 I. Jur. 258. (R.)

1. Motion for security for costs. Notice served before the expiration of the time for answering in vacation. Motion granted.

The deft. was granted fourteen days to answer after the security was given.—O'Beirne v. Cornwall, 3 I. Jur. 27. (R.)

2. An officer on half-pay, resident abroad, is not privileged from giving security for costs.

When a ptf. becomes liable to give security for costs, after answer, the filing of the replication will not preclude the deft. from obtaining the order.

The deft. became aware of the ptf.'s liability to give security for costs on the 25th of June, but did not serve notice of motion until the 29th of Oct. Held, not too late.

Semble—The notice should be served before the time for answering has expired, if it expires in the vacation.

The cases and practice as to security for costs considered. Form of the order.—Long v. Tottenham, 1 I. C. R. 127; 3 I. Jur. 76. (R.)

8. If the next friend of a married woman be insolvent, the Court will stay the proceedings until the next friend be changed, or she shall give security for costs.—M'Keon v. Walsh, 1 I. C. R. 608. (R.)

4. When an answer is not required by the notice of a cause petition, the respondent may move for security for costs at any time before he takes a step in the cause, and before the petition is set down in the Lord Chancellor's list for hearing.

But if interrogatories be annexed to the petition and the respondent is required to answer them by the notice, he must move for security for costs before he takes a step in the cause, and before the time for answering has expired.

In England the motion may be made at any time before the deft. takes a step in the cause; in Ireland, at any time before he has taken a step in the cause, unless he is in contempt.—Long v. L., 1 I. C. R. 618. (R.)

5. The amount of the security for costs required in a cause petition is £50 instead of £100, the amount required in a suit commenced by bill.—M'Heath v. Taylor, 2 I. C. R. 117. (R.)

6. An affidavit, made in a cause petition matter, to resist a motion for an injunction, is not a waiver of the respondent's right to security for costs.

Security for costs ordered in a suit for an injunction to restrain proceedings in an action at law, the petition also seeking other relief.—Leeson v. L., 4 I. C. R. 28. (R.)

7. When it appears by the cause petition, that the petitioner resides out of the jurisdiction, the respondent cannot move for security for costs, after the cause petition has been set down.—Bentley v. Robinson, 4 I. C. R. 37. (R.)

8. A., residing out of the jurisdiction, filed a bill to recover the amount of judgments. B., a notice party, entered an appearance in the common form. On a motion by B., further proceedings were stayed until security for costs should be given by A.

In a cross-bill, or bill for an injunction by a ptf. out of the jurisdiction, it is not usual to order such security to be given.—Knight v. Nagle, 7 I. Jur. 15. (R.)

9. An officer in the navy of the E. I. Company's service will be required to give security for costs.—King v. Field, 7 I. Jur. 328. (R.)

10. In a suit simply for renewal, and to restrain proceedings in ejectment to recover possession of the lands, the respondent is not entitled to security for costs, though the petitioner resides out of the jurisdiction.—Harwood v. Tenison, 5 I. C. R. 340. (R.)

11. A cause petition had been filed against a minor respondent, but no Master had been nominated pursuant to the 2nd G. O. of 1851, and the 190th G. O. of 1843. On a motion by a respondent to strike the cause out of the Lord Chancellor's list—Held, that this was not such an irregularity as would entitle the respondent to have it struck out. An order was then made for the appointment of a guardian ad litem.

Semble—When a respondent is precluded from appointing a guardian ad litem, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 21, by reason of the petitioner's solicitor not complying with the general rules by nominating a Master, and a motion for the purpose is thereby rendered necessary, the petitioner's solicitor should be charged with the costs of such motion.

When a petitioner out of the jurisdiction lodges the usual sum of £50 as security for costs, and the costs of the matter are likely to exceed that amount, the order for lodging that sum may be made without prejudice to an application for a further lodgment afterwards, if the costs are likely to exceed that sum.—O'Dell v. Massey, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 170. (R.)

12. A petitioner who, pending a cause, goes to reside out of the jurisdiction, will not be ordered to give security for costs, unless it appears distinctly that he has gone to reside abroad permanently.—Norris v. Duckworth, 6 I. C. R. 57. (R.)

13. A sum had been lodged in Court as security for costs. An application that it should be increased, upon the ground that it was insufficient to cover the costs already incurred, was refused with costs.—Shannon v. Fegan, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (C.)

14. When the period for answering expires during the vacation, and, together with notice of the affidavit in answer being filed, the respondent serves notice of a motion to obtain security for costs, the right to move is not waived by the step taken in the cause by filing the affidavit.—Alker v. A., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (R.)

1. This Court will not establish, as a general rule, that the security to be given for costs shall not exceed a particular sum. The special circumstances of each case must be enquired into.

Seable.—In inexpensive cases, £100 may suffice.—O'Keefe v. Hughes, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 204. (P.)

2. On motion, that the ptf., resident out of the jurisdiction, do give security for costs; the Court requires from the deft. an affidavit of merits.—Murray v. Mulligan, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (P.)

3. A next-of-kin, a caveator, who merely requires to cross-examine the attesting witnesses to the will relied on by the ptf., is not liable to give security for costs by reason of his being abroad.—Stewart v. S., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 323. (P.)

4. A next-of-kin, applying under an order of a Master in Ch. for an assignment of an administration bond to be put in suit against a surety, the administrator having made default, is not liable to give the surety security for costs on an allegation that he is a pauper. Applicant's laches does not prevent the assignment of the bond.—In the Goods of Collins, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 267. (P.)

5. A petitioner did not comply with an order to give security for costs. Held, that the proper application for the respondent to make was, not to at once dismiss the petition with costs; but for an order that the security be given within a limited time; and that, in default, the petition do stand dismissed with costs.—Martin v. Bunbury, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 274. (R.)

6. The Clerk of the Inspectors of Fisheries appointed under the 24th & 25th Vic., c. 109, whose salary is paid by the Paymaster-General, though he resides out of the jurisdiction, is exempt from giving security for costs.—Wynne v. Knox, 14 I. C. R. 149. (R.)

XXX. 7. Setting off Costs.

7. Ptf.s. in an ejectment recovered against the defts., with costs, which they assigned to their attorney, ptf. in the equity suit, against the same defts. The assignment was not executed by all the parties. The bill was dismissed with costs, amounting to less than the costs at law. Held, that the attorney was not entitled to set off the costs of dismissing the bill against so much of the costs of the action at law, either in his character of attorney, or of assignee of the ptf.s. at law.

The solicitor's lien for costs is subordinate and to be postponed to the equities between the parties.—Gwynn v. Krous, 7 I. E. R. 274. (R.)

8. Deft. at law filed a bill of discovery in aid of his defence against the ptf., who withdrew his record, which had been set down for trial; and became liable to the deft.'s costs of the day, which were taxed. Ptf. in equity, after the deft. had answered, entered a rule to dismiss his bill with costs, which were taxed; and a subpoena was issued by deft. in equity to pay them. Upon motion of the ptf. in equity, the Court set off the costs payable to him in the suit at law against those payable by him to the deft. in equity.—Marquis of Salisbury v. Maguire, 7 I. E. R. 499. (R.)

9. The Court will not allow a claim for costs to be set off against a demand not arising in the suit itself, though arising in another suit concerning the same matter.—Reilly v. Shiel, 1 I. Jur. 31. (E.E.)

10. Several objections to title were taken by a purchaser, some of which were allowed and others disallowed. On motion that the purchaser be discharged—Held, that the costs of the successful objections should be set off against those which were disallowed.—Ruskell v. Church, 1 I. Jur. 259. (R.)

11. A motion was refused, with costs, to be paid by A. and B. to C., a deft., who was liable to pay a sum decreed against him, which A. afterwards became entitled to as executor. The Court refused to set off the costs against the sum decreed.—Brennan v. Kenny, 2 I. C. R. 592; 4 I. Jur. 112. (R.)

12. The Court has not jurisdiction in a petition matter under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 53, to order the interest on a mortgage due by a solicitor to his client, and retained by the solicitor, to be set off against costs furnished by the solicitor, where the solicitor denies his intention of giving this set-off, except as against some costs not included in the bill which was the subject of the petition.

When, on a petition praying a reference for taxation of costs, and that on the taxation the Master might be directed to have regard to an undertaking on the solicitor's part to charge costs out of pocket only, the Court simply ordered a taxation without mentioning the undertaking, it was not by this order intended to reserve the question upon the undertaking; or that that question should not be open to the Taxing Master.

Quære.—Whether the Court has jurisdiction upon a petition under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 53, to decide on the validity or construction of such an undertaking?—Borough v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 179. (R.)

XXX. 8. When Stayed by, or on Appeal.

13. Deft. was restrained from proceeding against relators for costs of an information dismissed with costs, upon affidavit made of an intention to appeal, and upon terms.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp. of Dublin, 2 Moll. 355. (C.)—[See 1 Bll., N. S. 312.]

14. When there has been a decree with costs in the Court below, the deft. may, upon showing that he is bringing a bona fide appeal, obtain an order from the Court to respite the payment of costs pending the appeal.

When a case has been sent to a Court of Law, and this Court (Chancery) gives a decree with costs, including the costs at law, and this decree is reversed "with costs of the suit in the Court below," the deft. is entitled as of course to the costs at law.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344; 2 Con. & L. 160. (C.)

1. After dismissal of a bill with costs, the defts. were stayed from enforcing them, pending an appeal to the H. L.; the ptfs. giving security, and paying interest upon them.—M'Carthy v. M'C., 11 I. E. R. 399. (C.)

2. Only one fee is allowed to a solicitor for attendance on a motion.—Doolan v. Tibeaud, 2 Jones, 314. (E.E.)

3. In a tithe composition suit all the defts. appeared by one attorney. Those defts. who were tenants from year to year answered the bill separately at length. On motion—Held, that ptf. might dismiss his bill against those defts. upon paying them their costs; and the Court directed the Taxing Officer to disallow the costs of the whole or of any part of any answer which should appear to have been filed improperly and unnecessarily.—Armstrong v. Bannon, 2 Jones, 258. (E.E.)

4. The bill prayed a sale, and an account, and payment of prior and contemporaneous incumbrances. A prior elegit creditor answered at unreasonable length. The Court directed the Remembrancer, when taking the costs, to pay regard to the answer's length.—O'Brien v. O'B., Jon. & C. 193. (E.E.)

5. Costs ordered to be taxed fourteen years after security given for payment of them, it appearing that the costs had not been paid, although payments had been made on account of them; that the security had been given pendente lite, while the relation of attorney and client existed between the parties. No account having been then settled between them, the client being then in embarrassed circumstances, some oppression having been used towards him by the attorney, but the vouchers having been given up to the client, it was ordered that the bills of costs should be prima facie evidence of the business done, and of the reasonableness of the charge, with liberty to the client to surcharge and falsify.—Fowler v. Moore, 2 Jones, 415. (E.E.)

6. Judgment had been entered on a bond and warrant of attorney given twenty-seven years ago for costs due to a solicitor. The Court refused, on an allegation that they had not been taxed or settled, a reference to taxation at the instance of the client's surety, and against the executor's executor of the solicitor, who had died twenty years before.—Maxwell v. O'Dell, S. & Sc. 194. (R.)

7. The Master has not jurisdiction under G. O. 201, to tax costs, except with the consent of both solicitor and client.—Massey v. Millar, S. & Sc. 425. (R.)

8. Under G. O. 201, the Master has jurisdiction to tax mere conveyancing costs between solicitor and client.—Re Smith's Trustees, Fl. & K. 627. (R.)

9. The H. L. having dismissed an appeal, its order was, by side-bar order, made a rule of Court. Held, that the Clerk of Writs and Appearances should issue a subpoena for the costs of the appeal.—O'Ferrall v. M'Cann, Fl. & K. 635. (R.)

10. The Court will not review a Master's taxation of costs unless he has erred in principle.—Darley v. Nicholson, 1 Con. & L. 391. (C.)

11. A solicitor, pending a suit to administer the assets of a deceased client, brought an action against the executrix, and obtained judgment for the entire amount of very heavy untaxed bills of costs, relating, for the most part, to proceedings at law and an arbitration. He afterwards filed a charge under the decree to account in the administration suit, insisting on his demand on foot of the judgment. It appearing that the bills of costs contained several extraordinary and apparently excessive charges, the Court, on the motion of the deft. in the cause, grounded on an affidavit specifying the objectionable items, referred it to the Master to tax the costs for which the judgment had been obtained; with liberty to the Master, as to the costs of proceedings in other Courts, to refer to the Taxing Officers of those Courts.—Gower v. Donovan, 5 I. E. R. 329. (R.)

12. An administrator employed a solicitor to recover debts due to his intestate, and gave him a power of attorney, under which he received moneys, and acted generally. Out of the moneys so received he retained sufficient to pay his costs, which had never been furnished to the administrator, or taxed. After his death they were furnished to his executor, who approved of them. Held, on petition, that the administrator de bonis non of the intestate was entitled to have the bill of costs referred for taxation, and would have been equally entitled had there been actual payment to, instead of retention by the solicitor.

The general rule is, that if a personal representative, or any other person acting in a fiduciary character, employs a solicitor, and pays his bill, the c. q. t., or person otherwise beneficially entitled to the estate out of which the costs are to come, cannot require a taxation of the bill, the relation of attorney and client subsisting only between the former parties.

The solicitors, whose bill was sought to be taxed, were in receipt of moneys under a power of attorney, some of which they retained for their costs. Held, that this retention was not such a payment as precluded taxation.

It is now settled, that the Courts are at liberty, if a third person pay a solicitor's bill, and the costs are taxable, to refer it for taxation.

Semble—That a bill of costs will not be referred for taxation after payment, if the party entitled to call for the taxation had had a previous offer by the solicitor to have the bill taxed, and refused it.—Langford v. Mahony, 5 I. E. R. 569; 4 Dr. & War. 81; 2 Con. & L. 817. (C.)

1. As a general rule, it is improper to introduce into counsels' briefs both the original and amended bills.—Higgins v. Bateman, 2 Dr. & War. 70. (C.)

2. No alteration in a bill of costs allowed after copy served, except by the Remembrancer's permission, and on notice to the other party.

Party allowed counsel's attendance at the signing of the draft report, upon an application to delay that signature.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

3. Mortgagee's solicitor, at the time of the loan, perused the title deeds, and was paid by the mortgagor the costs thereof. After decree for sale in the mortgage cause, the same solicitor prepared the abstract of title under G. O. 138. That abstract, though deducting the title to the time of sale, did not contain any new deeds. The Master refused to allow the costs of perusing the deeds upon this occasion. On appeal—Held, that the Master should not be directed to review his taxation.—Scott v. King, 7 I. E. R. 483. (R.)

4. A bill of costs having been referred for taxation, the parties agreed in the office upon the sum to be reported. Afterwards, the client discovered entries in his own handwriting of advances made to the solicitor for which he had not received credit. He applied that the costs should be referred back to the Master for taxation. Held, that the motion should be refused with costs.—Austin v. Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 178. (C.)

5. The Court has not jurisdiction, when directing taxation of a solicitor's bill of costs, to order any account of dealings between the parties wherein the solicitor did not act as such, even though he has given credit in the bill for such items.—Sneyd v. Conroy, 8 I. E. R. 469. (R.)

6. A client, on petition, obtained an order against his solicitor to tax costs as between solicitor and client, upon undertaking to pay the balance. Held, that this order was not a bar to the more extended relief to which the client was entitled.—Gomley v. Wood, 9 I. E. R. 418; 3 Jon & L. 678. (C.)

7. This Court has not authority to order the personal representatives of a deceased solicitor to have his costs taxed, even though they are in possession of the client's deeds.—Turkington v. Kiernan, 9 I. E. R. 477. (R.)

8. In the taxation of costs allowances were claimed which the Taxing Master refused to make, the question not being raised by the requisition. The Court referred it to the officer to make the allowances if he thought fit to do so.—Walshe v. Sheehy, 1 I. Jur. 78. (R.)

9. A Court of Equity will direct a taxation though all the costs be for conveyancing.—S. & W. R. Co. v. O'Ferrall, 1 I. Jur. 193. (R.)
[Such costs are now taxable at Law and Equity, 12 & 13 Vic., c. 53.]

10. A suit having terminated, the debts were ordered to have their costs out of the fund. C., who acted as solicitor in his own name for one debt., B., and in the name of S., a former solicitor, for another, without disclosing this circumstance, had his costs taxed in the presence of the ptf.'s solicitor and obtained payments of the amounts respectively. C. also represented to the debt. B., for whom he acted in his own name, that he was entitled to costs as between solicitor and client, and received from B. £100, the fund being insufficient to discharge the claim of the debts. Held, on appeal, that the petitioner was bound to show distinctly that she was prejudiced by the solicitor not disclosing that he appeared for both debts., or that the taxation would have been different; that some overcharge or imposition amounting to fraud should be specifically pointed out, to induce the Court to open the taxation; and that having paid the £100 without pressure, and allowed four years to elapse, showed that it was the failure of the fund which induced the petitioner to complain of the charges.

The petition also prayed that the costs of C., a third party, which had been paid out of the fund, to the surplus of which the petitioner was entitled, should be re-taxed, because improper items had been introduced which amounted to fraud. The Court refused to make the order in the absence of C., although the circumstances under which the application was made might have warranted the Court in making the order if C. had been before the Court.—Dickson v. Caulfield, 2 I. Jur. 75. (R.); ibid, 217. (C.)

1. The Taxing Master cannot entertain a question of retainer. Form of order on a petition for the taxation of costs.—In re Bunbury, solicitor; ex parte Boughton, 8 I. Jur. 190. (R.)

2. A railway company having taken lands occupied by D.'s tenants, and the parties not having agreed to the compensation offered, steps were taken for holding an inquisition, in which one solicitor acted for D. and the tenants. The company afterwards acceded to the valuation made for the tenants; a verdict was taken by consent for D.; and the company gave a written undertaking to pay any sum to which the solicitor was entitled as solicitor for D. and his tenants, when ascertained by the proper officer, under their Act of Incorporation. They took a conveyance from D., the costs of which and of making title were taxable in Ch. under their Act. The costs of ascertaining the compensation for the tenants should properly under it have been settled with their claim by Justices of the Peace; and the costs of an inquisition were taxable in a Court of Law. The solicitor, having furnished separate bills of costs for D. and the tenants, to which the company objected, petitioned for taxation and to enforce payment. Held, that the costs of D. only could be taxed or enforced in this Court, and that the undertaking gave no jurisdiction as to the costs of the tenants.—The Marquis Drogheda v. G. S. & W. Ry. Co., 12 I. E. R. 108. (C.)

3. A landlord is entitled to have the costs of obtaining leave to proceed at law, against a tenant over whose interest there is a receiver, taxed as against the fund in Court.—Ferguson v. St. George, 4 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

4. When petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act are unnecessarily prolix, the Court will direct the Master to have regard in the taxation of costs to the matter introduced improperly.—Johnstone v. Linde, 1 I. C. R. 19; 3 I. Jur. 3. (C.)

5. A solicitor was in custody under an attachment. The Court granted a writ of habeas corpus, directed to the Marshal of the Four Courts Marshalsea, to bring him before the Taxing Master upon the taxation of bills of costs.—Walsh v. Wilson, 2 I. C. R. 79. (R.)

6. Untaxed costs having been introduced by the solicitor into an account which he swore was subsequently stated and settled between himself and his client, who promised to pay the balance due on foot of the account, the Court had not jurisdiction, under the Solicitors Act, to order the taxation of the costs. The only course whereby the client can obtain relief, is by cause petition, or bill filed for the purpose of opening the account.—Anderson v. Cassidy, 5 I. Jur. 23. (R.)

7. A solicitor having taken proceedings for several bills of costs due to him by a receiver, some of them being Chancery costs, and some civil-bill costs: the receiver presented his petition to stay proceedings till the costs were taxed.

The bills were referred to the officer to tax them as between solicitor and client. He was directed if the civil-bill costs had not been taxed, to refer them to the Assistant Barrister for taxation.—In re Tully, 6 I. Jur. 209. (R.)

8. The Taxing Master having reduced counsel's fees, on taxation between party and party, not because the amount [was excessive, but because the fee had been increased at the instance of the counsel, the Court directed the Master to review his taxation as to those items.

Semble—It would be illegal for the Bar, as a body, to fix a minimum fee for any particular class of business; but any individual member of the Bar may decline to take a fee less than a certain amount.

The Taxing Masters, in taxation between party and party, should only allow the usual and accustomed fee payable on each particular class of business, though a larger fee has been paid to counsel.—O'Brien v. Cantwell, 12 I. C. R. 221; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 354. (R.)

9. A petition for taxation was presented more than a year after the bill of costs had been furnished, by one of two trustees, behind his co-trustee's back. No rule: though the solicitor had commenced against the petitioner alone an action at law for the amount.—In re M'Cay a solicitor, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (R.)

10. On taxation between solicitor and client there is not any inflexible rule against allowing a consultation or refresher fee of more than two guineas, if the larger fee was paid with the client's knowledge and authority.—

When a solicitor resides in the country, and carries on his Dublin business by an agent, special charges for attendances in Dublin may be allowed on taxation between solicitor and client, if the client knows that a special sum, larger than that ordinarily chargeable, is charged, and if the case was such as required the solicitor's personal attendance in Dublin.

Semble—Such a special charge should not be allowed for attending at the hearing, and the consultation before it.—Belfast Harbour Commissioners v. Lawther, 17 I. C. R. 147. (R.)

11. Order to amend (by striking out a mistakenly inserted item) a bill of costs which had been referred, but not lodged, for taxation.—In re Abbott & Moore, 17 I. C. R. 200. (R.)

XXX. 9. a. 2. Jurisdiction under particular Statutes touching Taxation of Costs.

(Solicitors Act, 12 & 13 Vic., c. 53.)

12. A solicitor must advance the sum payable to the Chancery fund on a bill of costs referred for taxation; but will be entitled to have it, and his other costs of taxation, included in the sum certified on foot of the bill, in case it is not reduced by more than one-sixth. If more than one-sixth be struck off, he must bear all the costs of the taxation, the client's as well as his own.—Hodgens v. Wheeler, 3 I. E. R. 323; Fl. & K. 162. (R.)

1. When lands are purchased by commissioners under the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 61, for the purposes of the Act, and the purchase money is lodged in Court, the Court will, under the words "reasonable costs, charges, and expenses," in the 29th section, award to the parties entitled, the costs necessarily incurred by them in obtaining payment from the Court, and in having the money invested upon trusts similar to those to which the lands purchased were subject.—In re The Shannon Commissioners, 3 I. E. R. 355; Fl. & K. 13. (R.)

2. Upwards of £32,000 were paid, within ten years, by a Town Council, to their solicitor for costs. Some of his bills were taxed by the Second Remembrancer; the rest were taxed by or under the immediate direction of another solicitor, who was appointed by the Town Council for that purpose. It was sworn that this taxation was faithful and strict. On the other hand, it was stated that portions of those costs had been incurred for business improperly transacted, or useless in its results. Within the same ten years, the Town Council expended nearly £30,000, on costs to other solicitors and a parliamentary agent. Portions of those costs were taxed by the Master of the Q. B., and part by the solicitor of the Town Council and by his town agent. Almost all had been paid more than a year before information filed. The greater part of the parliamentary business was transacted before, but the costs were taxed after the 10 & 11 Vic., c. 69, and the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 78, became law.

The Master was directed to enquire, when taking the accounts, what portions of costs, for which the Town Council might claim credit, were duly and properly incurred, and were properly chargeable against the borough funds. With respect to so much of such costs as had not been taxed, the Master was to be at liberty, if he thought fit, to require that portion to be taxed, or to tax or moderate them himself.—Att.-Gen. v. Belfast Corporation, 4 I. C. R. 119. (C.)

3. On a petition praying a reference for taxation of costs; and that the Master should be directed to have regard, on the taxation, to the solicitor's undertaking to charge only costs out of pocket; the Court, without mentioning that undertaking in the order, simply directed a taxation. Held, that this order did not reserve the question upon the undertaking; neither was it thereby intended that that question should not be open to the Taxing Master.

Quære—Has the Court jurisdiction, upon a petition under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 53, to decide on the validity or construction of such an undertaking?—Borough v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 179. (R.)

XXX. 9. b. Costs of Taxing Costs.

4. When a solicitor retains deeds, &c., claiming a lien for costs, this Court, upon the client's petition, may, upon its inherent authority over its officers, refer the bill for taxation; and, if more than one-sixth is taxed off, disallow the solicitor's costs of taxation; order that the client's costs upon the taxation shall be deducted from the taxed costs; and that the solicitor shall deliver up the deeds, &c., upon payment of the balance. The Court declined to follow the decision in Rogers v. Peterson, 4 Mee. & W. 588.—In re Lawlers, 3 I. E. R. 102; see note, 105; Fl. & K. 73. (R.)

5. On taxation of a bill of costs, the solicitor must advance the sum payable to the Chancery fund.—Hodgens v. Wheeler, 3 I. E. R. 323; Fl. & K. 162. (R.)

6. An order referred it to the Master to tax bills of costs, furnished by a solicitor in pursuance of the statute, and stayed his action to recover them; the client undertaking to pay the balance. The Master reported that, upon taxation, more than one-sixth had been struck off each bill. Held, that the solicitor should pay as well his own costs of the taxation, as his client's.—Power v. Nagle, 3 I. E. R. 105; Fl. & K. 78. (R.)

7. An attorney, who had received money on account of costs, contended that a balance remained due, and threatened to file a bill to recover it. The client obtained a reference upon petition praying that the sum received by the attorney should be ascertained, and his costs taxed as between party and party. The client was wrong respecting the principle of the taxation, and also in praying repayment of the whole amount received by the attorney, instead of merely the balance over-paid. Nevertheless, Held, that the attorney should pay all the costs of the reference and other proceedings in the matter, save the costs of so much of the petition and answering affidavit as were incidental to the principle of taxation.—Armstrong v. Pollock, 6 I. E. R. 663. (E.E.)

8. When costs are taxed, and more than one-sixth is struck off, the Court will disallow the costs of taxation.—Downing v. Hodder, 4 I. C. R. 27. (R.)

9. Several bills of costs, including costs for business in the I. E. Court, were furnished to the client at different times. The attorney having refused to sign an undertaking to pay the costs of taxation, in case one-sixth of the costs were taken off, upon the petition for taxation, it was objected that if less than one-sixth was taken off some of the bills, the costs of the petition and taxation should be apportioned. The order for taxation was made in the usual form, directing that, if the costs, when taxed were less by one-sixth than the costs furnished, the petitioner should pay the costs of petition and taxation, and, if not less by one-sixth, then respondent should pay them.—In re Martin, 7 I. Jur. 196. (R.)

1. Where costs are referred for taxation, the petitioner (the client) may lodge in the office the copy of the costs furnished to him by the solicitor, and may issue a summons to tax, and the summons will be dealt with in the taxation according to the result and directions of the order.

If the solicitor lodge a copy of costs for taxation pursuant to order, he is not allowed the costs of such copy, unless he has first served notice on the client to lodge the copy of the costs served on him, and he has refused to do so.

If either the client or the solicitor, after having been served with notice, refuse to attend the taxation, the Master will be directed to proceed with the taxation ex parte; but the Taxing Masters feel a difficulty in carrying out this rule in the absence of the necessary documents.—Kelly v. Moore, 7 I. Jur. 303. (R.)

2. Where, after the usual order of reference to tax was made, neither party lodged the costs nor issued a summons to tax, and a motion was made for an attachment against the solicitor for thus disobeying the order of reference, the Court made no rule on the motion, and let each party abide his own costs.—Minchin v. Dillon; Byrne v. Dillon, 7 I. Jur. 329. (R.)

3. An English solicitor having transacted business in England for a client then residing there, who subsequently came to reside in Ireland, served his bill of costs on the client in Ireland, and proceeded at law in Ireland to recover the amount. On petition by the client for a taxation of the bill under the statute,—Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to order the taxation in Ireland of an English bill of costs. The question of costs of the motion having stood over till the termination of the action at law, and more than one-sixth having been struck off the bill on a reference to the Master of the Law Court, no costs of the petition or of this motion were given.—Roe v. Dodd, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 250. (R.)

XXX. 9. c. Effect of Taxation and of its Omission; Appeal, Re-hearing, and Revision for Costs.

[As to Appeal, see also XXX. 10. e., post.]

4. When a decree is pronounced to pay the ptf. a sum of money and costs, the costs bear interest (under the 27th sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105), not from the date of the decree, but from the date of the certificate of taxation.—Lidwell v. L., 7 I. E. R. 91. (R.)

5. In appeals respecting costs, the Court entertains not only questions whether a principle of taxation was correct or not, but also whether a given principle was applicable or not to the particular items.

On taxation between solicitor and client, the costs of a case laid before counsel for an opinion on a point decided by the decree disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor was not justified in endeavouring to re-open the question.

On a reference, A. and B. had a common interest in one question, and A. a separate interest in another. On the former the Master directed one charge to be filed for both. During the proceedings on it the Taxing Master allowed only one term fee to the solicitor who acted for both A. and B. Held, that he was right in disallowing the second, and the taxation was affirmed.

In the course of the cause, the opinion of a strange counsel was taken, and the Taxing Master allowed only the costs of a short case, such as might have been laid before a counsel acquainted with the cause. The Court refused to interfere with this discretion, considering it doubtful if in strictness the case should have been allowed at all.

A solicitor is entitled to charge for fully instructing every counsel employed at the hearing. When A. and B. had a common interest in one question at the hearing, and A. only was interested in another question, and the Taxing Master disallowed the charges for so much of the briefs to A.'s counsel as related to the former question, the taxation was sent back to be reviewed.—Newby v. Drew, 12 I. E. R. 24. (C.)

6. Upon consent, an order was made in Jan. 1841 staying further proceedings in a cause (in which there were two ptf.s., a trustee and c. g. t.), and directing that the costs of the ptf.s. should be taxed and ascertained, the defts. undertaking to pay such costs. They were not taxed until after the death of the principal ptf. (the c. g. t.), which occurred in Dec. 1848. A motion to compel the defts. to pay the costs, so taxed, was refused, with costs, although the solicitor of the ptf.s. offered an undertaking to procure for the defts. from the personal representative of the deceased ptf. a receipt for the taxed costs of the cause.—[Barry v. Staveil (Fl. & K. 1, considered).]—Upton v. McGarry, 13 I. E. R. 164. (C.)

7. The Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced against P. a decree, with costs. P. paid them to the solicitor of the opposite party. The solicitor, with his client's assent, applied the amount in paying costs due by the client to himself, and in paying the costs of an appeal which P. took to the H. L. against the decree. The H. L. reversed the decree, with costs. Thereupon P. applied for an order directing the repayment of these costs. The H. L. refused to make such an order, and left P. to apply to the Court below, on the judgment now pronounced.—Clark v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126.

[P. applied to the Court below for an order directing the solicitor to repay him the amount. Held, that the motion should be refused.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)]

1. The owner of certain lands, by a marriage settlement granted them in trust, among others, to pay certain debts which were set out in a schedule attached thereto. The creditors, having instituted a suit, obtained in Chancery, a decree establishing their rights. From this there was an appeal, which was resisted by the principal creditor only, to the House of Lords; and their Lordships differing in opinion, the decree below was affirmed; but no order was made as to the costs. It appeared also that if the appeal had succeeded, none of the scheduled creditors would have obtained anything on foot of their demands. Held, that each of the creditors in the schedule to the deed should contribute rateably to the costs of resisting the appeal.

The proper course for seeking the costs against the deft. is to set down the cause for hearing before the Chancellor upon the House of Lords order.

An application may be made for an order to the Taxing Master here to tax the H. L. costs.—[See also Hamilton v. Synge, 4 I. C. R. 182. (R.); 4 I. C. R. 551. (C.)]—Hamilton v. Synge; Simpson v. Synge, 7 I. Jur. 121. (R.)

XXX. 9. d. When a Party shall pay Taxed Costs: when only Fixed Costs.

2. The deft. having succeeded in two interlocutory applications, with costs to be paid to him by the ptf.; they were measured by the Court, pursuant to the 159th G. O. The bill was afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution. Upon taxation, the Master, notwithstanding the award of the sum for costs, taxed the deft.'s costs of the two applications to sums greater than those awarded. Held, that the sum awarded by the Court was final and conclusive, and that the Master was not authorised to tax those costs.

The 159th G. O. applies to all interlocutory motions.—Woodley v. W., 7 I. E. R. 77. (R.)

XXX. 9. e. When a Party shall pay only Costs in the Cause: when Extra Costs.

3. Ptf. obtained an order to set aside a minor's appearance, and that the minor should appear and answer by the officer. The minor's uncle obtained this order to be set aside, and that the minor might appear and answer by him as guardian. Held, that he was not bound to pay the costs of the first order, which were costs in the cause.—Wallen v. Barry, 6 I. E. R. 124. (E.E.)

4. When, at the time a motion is made, no order is made respecting its costs, they follow the costs in the cause, especially in the case of an injunction bill.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

5. In taxing costs between party and party, counsel is not allowed a fee for settling a draft report. In allowing the costs of attested copies, it is discretionary with the Taxing Master whether he will allow for the copy of the whole, or of part only of a document. Practice before 1st G. O. (April 1847) touching fees to counsel in the Master's office.—Clanmorris v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 144. (C.)

6. On taxation between solicitor and client, the costs of a case laid before counsel for an opinion on a point decided by the decree disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor was not justified in endeavouring to re-open the question.

On a reference, A. and B. had a common interest in one question, and A. a separate interest in another. On the former, the Master directed one charge to be filed for both. During the proceedings on it, the Taxing Master allowed only one term fee to the solicitor who acted for both A. and B. Held, that he was right in disallowing the second, and the taxation was affirmed.

In the course of the cause the opinion of a strange counsel was taken, and the Taxing Master allowed only the costs of a short case, such as might have been laid before a counsel acquainted with the cause. The Court refused to interfere with this discretion, considering it doubtful if in strictness the case should have been allowed at all.

A. solicitor is entitled to charge for fully instructing every counsel employed at the hearing. When A. and B. had a common interest in one question at the hearing, and A. only was interested in another question, and the Taxing Master disallowed the charges for so much of the briefs to A.'s counsel as related to the former question, the taxation was sent back to be reviewed.

In appeals respecting costs, the Court entertains not only questions whether a principle of taxation was correct or not, but also whether a given principle was applicable or not to the particular items.—Newby v. Drew, 12 I. E. R. 24. (C.)

7. A cause was ready to be heard pro confesso. Upon application of a deft.'s solicitor, the ptf. did not set down the cause. The Taxing Master, upon taxation between solicitor and client, having disallowed the costs of making out briefs for the hearing, this Court refused to direct the Master to review his taxation. Upon taxing costs between solicitor and client, the Taxing Master refused to allow for business done for a deceased client, unless upon the written direction of the client. The Court refused to direct a review of the taxation on that ground, although there was an affidavit of the solicitor that the business was done by the express direction of the client.

The Court will not direct the Master to review his taxation, unless a question of principle is involved.—Kelly v. Achmuty, 2 I. Jur. 62. (R.)

costs furnished, the petitioner should pay the costs of petition and taxation, and, if not less by one-sixth, then respondent should pay them.—In re Martin, 7 I. Jur. 196. (R.)

1. Where costs are referred for taxation, the petitioner (the client) may lodge in the office the copy of the costs furnished to him by the solicitor, and may issue a summons to tax, and the summons will be dealt with in the taxation according to the result and directions of the order.

If the solicitor lodge a copy of costs for taxation pursuant to order, he is not allowed the costs of such copy, unless he has first served notice on the client to lodge the copy of the costs served on him, and he has refused to do so.

If either the client or the solicitor, after having been served with notice, refuse to attend the taxation, the Master will be directed to proceed with the taxation ex parte; but the Taxing Masters feel a difficulty in carrying out this rule in the absence of the necessary documents.—Kelly v. Moore, 7 I. Jur. 303. (R.)

2. Where, after the usual order of reference to tax was made, neither party lodged the costs nor issued a summons to tax, and a motion was made for an attachment against the solicitor for thus disobeying the order of reference, the Court made no rule on the motion, and let each party abide his own costs.—Minchin v. Dillon; Byrne v. Dillon, 7 I. Jur. 329. (R.)

8. An English solicitor having transacted business in England for a client then residing there, who subsequently came to reside in Ireland, served his bill of costs on the client in Ireland, and proceeded at law in Ireland to recover the amount. On petition by the client for a taxation of the bill under the statute,—Held, that the Court had not jurisdiction to order the taxation in Ireland of an English bill of costs. The question of costs of the motion having stood over till the termination of the action at law, and more than one-sixth having been struck off the bill on a reference to the Master of the Law Court, no costs of the petition or of this motion were given.—Roe v. Dodd, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 250. (R.)

[As to Appeal, see also XXX. 10. e., post.]

4. When a decree is pronounced to pay the p^{tf}s. a sum of money and costs, the costs bear interest (under the 27th sec. of 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105), not from the date of the decree, but from the date of the certificate of taxation.—Lidwell v. L., 7 I. E. R. 91. (R.)

5. In appeals respecting costs, the Court entertains not only questions whether a principle of taxation was correct or not, but also whether a given principle was applicable or not to the particular items.

On taxation between solicitor and client, the costs of a case laid before counsel for an opinion on a point decided by the decree disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor was not justified in endeavouring to re-open the question.

On a reference, A. and B. had a common interest in one question, and A. a separate interest in another. On the former the Master directed one charge to be filed for both. During the proceedings on it the Taxing Master allowed only one term fee to the solicitor who acted for both A. and B. Held, that he was right in disallowing the second, and the taxation was affirmed.

In the course of the cause, the opinion of a strange counsel was taken, and the Taxing Master allowed only the costs of a short case, such as might have been laid before a counsel acquainted with the cause. The Court refused to interfere with this discretion, considering it doubtful if in strictness the case should have been allowed at all.

A solicitor is entitled to charge for fully instructing every counsel employed at the hearing. When A. and B. had a common interest in one question at the hearing, and A. only was interested in another question, and the Taxing Master disallowed the charges for so much of the briefs to A.'s counsel as related to the former question, the taxation was sent back to be reviewed.—Newby v. Drew, 12 I. E. R. 24. (C.)

6. Upon consent, an order was made in Jan. 1841 staying further proceedings in a cause (in which there were two p^{tf}s., a trustee and c. g. t.), and directing that the costs of the p^{tf}s. should be taxed and ascertained, the defts. undertaking to pay such costs. They were not taxed until after the death of the principal p^{tf}. (the c. g. t.), which occurred in Dec. 1848. A motion to compel the defts. to pay the costs, so taxed, was refused, with costs, although the solicitor of the p^{tf}s. offered an undertaking to procure for the defts. from the personal representative of the deceased p^{tf}. a receipt for the taxed costs of the cause.—[Barry v. Stawell (Fl. & K. 1, considered).]—Upton v. M'Garry, 13 I. E. R. 164. (C.)

7. The Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced against P. a decree, with costs. P. paid them to the solicitor of the opposite party. The solicitor, with his client's assent, applied the amount in paying costs due by the client to himself, and in paying the costs of an appeal which P. took to the H. L. against the decree. The H. L. reversed the decree, with costs. Thereupon P. applied for an order directing the repayment of these costs. The H. L. refused to make such an order, and left P. to apply to the Court below, on the judgment now pronounced.—Clark v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126.

[P. applied to the Court below for an order directing the solicitor to repay him the amount. Held, that the motion should be

refused.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)]

1. The owner of certain lands, by a marriage settlement granted them in trust, among others, to pay certain debts which were set out in a schedule attached thereto. The creditors, having instituted a suit, obtained in Chancery, a decree establishing their rights. From this there was an appeal, which was resisted by the principal creditor only, to the House of Lords; and their Lordships differing in opinion, the decree below was affirmed; but no order was made as to the costs. It appeared also that if the appeal had succeeded, none of the scheduled creditors would have obtained anything on foot of their demands. Held, that each of the creditors in the schedule to the deed should contribute rateably to the costs of resisting the appeal.

The proper course for seeking the costs against the deft. is to set down the cause for hearing before the Chancellor upon the House of Lords order.

An application may be made for an order to the Taxing Master here to tax the H. L. costs.—[See also Hamilton v. Syngé, 4 I. C. R. 182. (R.); 4 I. C. R. 551. (C.)]—Hamilton v. Syngé; Simpson v. Syngé, 7 I. Jur. 121. (R.)

XXX. 9. d. When a Party shall pay Taxed Costs: when only Fixed Costs.

2. The deft. having succeeded in two interlocutory applications, with costs to be paid to him by the ptf.; they were measured by the Court, pursuant to the 159th G. O. The bill was afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution. Upon taxation, the Master, notwithstanding the award of the sum for costs, taxed the deft.'s costs of the two applications to sums greater than those awarded. Held, that the sum awarded by the Court was final and conclusive, and that the Master was not authorised to tax those costs.

The 159th G. O. applies to all interlocutory motions.—Woodley v. W., 7 I. E. R. 77. (R.)

XXX. 9. e. When a Party shall pay only Costs in the Cause: when Extra Costs.

3. Ptf. obtained an order to set aside a minor's appearance, and that the minor should appear and answer by the officer. The minor's uncle obtained this order to be set aside, and that the minor might appear and answer by him as guardian. Held, that he was not bound to pay the costs of the first order, which were costs in the cause.—Wallen v. Barry, 6 I. E. R. 124. (E.E.)

4. When, at the time a motion is made, no order is made respecting its costs, they follow the costs in the cause, especially in the case of an injunction bill.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

5. In taxing costs between party and party, counsel is not allowed a fee for settling a draft report. In allowing the costs of attested copies, it is discretionary with the Taxing Master whether he will allow for the copy of the whole, or of part only of a document. Practice before 1st G. O. (April 1847) touching fees to counsel in the Master's office.—Clanmorris v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 144. (C.)

6. On taxation between solicitor and client, the costs of a case laid before counsel for an opinion on a point decided by the decree disallowed, on the ground that the solicitor was not justified in endeavouring to re-open the question.

On a reference, A. and B. had a common interest in one question, and A. a separate interest in another. On the former, the Master directed one charge to be filed for both. During the proceedings on it, the Taxing Master allowed only one term fee to the solicitor who acted for both A. and B. Held, that he was right in disallowing the second, and the taxation was affirmed.

In the course of the cause the opinion of a strange counsel was taken, and the Taxing Master allowed only the costs of a short case, such as might have been laid before a counsel acquainted with the cause. The Court refused to interfere with this discretion, considering it doubtful if in strictness the case should have been allowed at all.

A. solicitor is entitled to charge for fully instructing every counsel employed at the hearing. When A. and B. had a common interest in one question at the hearing, and A. only was interested in another question, and the Taxing Master disallowed the charges for so much of the briefs to A.'s counsel as related to the former question, the taxation was sent back to be reviewed.

In appeals respecting costs, the Court entertains not only questions whether a principle of taxation was correct or not, but also whether a given principle was applicable or not to the particular items.—Newby v. Drew, 12 I. E. R. 24. (C.)

7. A cause was ready to be heard pro confesso. Upon application of a deft.'s solicitor, the ptf. did not set down the cause. The Taxing Master, upon taxation between solicitor and client, having disallowed the costs of making out briefs for the hearing, this Court refused to direct the Master to review his taxation. Upon taxing costs between solicitor and client, the Taxing Master refused to allow for business done for a deceased client, unless upon the written direction of the client. The Court refused to direct a review of the taxation on that ground, although there was an affidavit of the solicitor that the business was done by the express direction of the client.

The Court will not direct the Master to review his taxation, unless a question of principle is involved.—Kelly v. Achmuty, 2 I. Jur. 62. (R.)

XXX. 9. f. Allowances beyond Taxed Costs : of Costs, whether as between Party and Party, or Solicitor and Client.

1. In a charity cause, in which no improper point has been made, it is usual to tax all parties' costs as between solicitor and client, not as between party and party.—Gaffney v. Hevey, 2 Dr. & Wal. 25. (C.)

2. In a redemption suit, the ptf., as a general rule, must pay the costs of all necessary parties. A question arose between two defts., as to which of them was entitled to the sum brought into Court by the ptf.; and the cause stood over from day to day to have that question argued. Held, that refreshing fees to the defts.' counsel were part of the costs in the cause to be paid by the ptf.—Wynne v. Brady, 5 I. E. R. 239. (E.E.)

3. Taxation of costs between solicitor and client; solicitor's fee for perusing and signing approbation of a draft deed submitted for approbation of his client, who was to be an executing party.—Westly v. Greene, 5 I. E. R. 449. (R.)

4. The taxation of costs is sufficiently provided for by the 156th G. O. Therefore, the Court refused to direct taxation as between solicitor and client.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 2 Con. & L. 98; 3 Dr. & War. 162. (C.)—[Affd.: 2 H. L. Cas. 837.]

5. £700 being claimed for costs of business done for the client, between 1808 and 1819, and a suit in respect of them instituted between the parties, they were, in 1840, taxed by agreement before the Master to £500. The client having discovered, amongst his own papers, and in his own handwriting, memoranda specifying sums of money given by him to the solicitor, for which the latter had not given credit—Held, that the client was not entitled to have the costs retaxed in 1842.—Austin v. Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 178. (C.)

6. The 159th G. O. does not affect the taxation of costs as between solicitor and client.—Brangan v. Gorges, 7 I. E. R. 225. (R.)

7. Costs of registry searches directed by counsel refused to be allowed to the solicitor on a taxation as between solicitor and client.

Costs of proceedings in a cause taken after its object had been, with the solicitor's knowledge, otherwise obtained, not to be allowed, on a taxation between solicitor and client, except under special circumstances.—Lady Langford v. Mahony, 3 Jon. & L. 97. (C.)

8. A mortgagor, in consideration of the mortgagee abstaining from proceeding to foreclose, undertook to pay all his costs, as between solicitor and client. Having failed to perform his promise to pay off the mortgage, and being again threatened with proceedings, he paid the mortgagees' solicitor his costs. On a petition under the Solicitors Act—Held, that he was not entitled to a taxation of the costs as between party and party, there not having been any fraud or undue pressure; and the mortgagees not being parties to the proceeding.

Quere—Whether the rule that a mortgagee is entitled, as against the mortgagor, to all costs between solicitor and client prevails in Ireland?—Ex parte Fletcher, 2 I. C. R. 595. (R.)

9. Refresher fees on motions will not be allowed on taxation between party and party.—Houston v. Barry, 6 I. Jur. 49. (R.)

10. The costs of a third counsel for the petitioner upon the hearing of a cause petition, disallowed, as between party and party, even though the employment of three counsel was not unreasonable.—Collis v. Stewart, 6 I. Jur. 51. (C.)

11. A solicitor having taken proceedings for several bills of costs due to him by a receiver in a cause, some being Chancery costs and some civil-bill costs, the receiver presented his petition to stay proceedings till the costs were taxed. The bills were referred to the officer to be taxed as between solicitor and client; and he was directed, in case the civil-bill costs should appear not to have been taxed, to refer the civil-bill costs to the Assistant Barrister for taxation.—In re Tully, 6 I. Jur. 209. (R.)

12. When costs are referred for taxation, the petitioner (the client) may lodge in the office the copy of the costs furnished to him by the solicitor, and may issue a summons to tax. The summons will be dealt with in the taxation according to the result and directions of the order.

If the solicitor lodge a copy of the costs for taxation pursuant to order, he is not allowed the costs of such copy, unless he has first served notice on the client to lodge the copy of the costs served on him, and he has refused.

If either the client or the solicitor, after having been served with notice, refuse to attend the taxation, the Master will be directed to proceed with the taxation ex parte; but the Taxing Masters feel a difficulty in carrying out this rule in the absence of the necessary documents.

When, after the usual order of reference to tax was made, neither party lodged the costs nor issued a summons to tax, and a motion was made for an attachment against the solicitor for disobeying the order of reference, the Court made no rule on the motion; and let each party abide his own costs.—Kelly v. Moore, 7 I. Jur. 303. (R.)

13. A general cause petition was filed against several respondents. The chief respondent, when about to file his affidavit, laid the draft affidavit before counsel, with a case for his opinion to advise proofs. Several other affidavits were subsequently filed. The petition was heard, and dismissed, as against this respondent, with costs. The costs of this case and opinion not having been allowed by the Taxing Master, on taxation between party and party—Held, in accordance with the opinion of the other two Taxing Masters, but without laying down any general rule, that the respondent was entitled to the costs of the case and opinion; but that if the petition, had been dismissed for want of prosecution, the respondent would not be entitled to such costs; that a case for direction of proofs should be allowed for at some stage of the proceedings; that the filling of the answering affidavit by the respondent is in the nature of issue joined, and appears to be the time at which such case should be allowed.

As a general rule the costs of an attendance on a third party to borrow a necessary document are not allowed; but, if expense is thereby saved, the Taxing Master may exercise his discretion in allowing such costs.—Abbott v. Geraghty, 7 I. Jur. 373. (R.)

1. The solicitor for the petitioner was changed in the progress of the suit, which was brought to a conclusion by the new solicitor, and decided in petitioner's favour. The costs were furnished by the new solicitor as between party and party, and by the former solicitor as between solicitor and client; and by consent both bills were referred to taxation together. When the summons to tax came on, the former solicitor refused to produce the papers for the taxation of the party and party costs, until his costs as between solicitor and client were first taxed and paid. It was ordered that the Taxing Master should have both bills under taxation at the same time, and should strike out of the solicitor and client costs all items not properly vouched; the documents necessary for that being sufficient at the same time for vouching the other bill.—King v. Edie, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 176. (R.)

2. The Taxing Master having, on taxation between party and party, reduced counsel's fee, not because the amount was excessive, but because the fee had been increased at the counsel's instance, the Court directed a review of the taxation respecting those items.

On taxation between party and party, the Taxing Masters should allow only the accustomed fee payable on each particular class of business, though a larger fee has been paid to counsel.—O'Brien v. Cantwell, 12 I. C. R. 221; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 334. (R.)

3. The practice is, on taxation between party and party, to allow the costs of two counsel only, on the hearing of a cause petition matter.

Under special circumstances, the Court ordered the Master to allow the costs of a third counsel.

In taxation of costs between party and party no fee to counsel is allowed for settling the draft affidavit of the petitioner, in reply to the respondent's affidavit in answer.—Cloran v. Clancarty, 13 I. C. R. 1. (R.)

4. When, after argument, final judgment is postponed, additional Court fees are necessary on the day of its delivery, as well as refreshers to counsel.—Gamble v. Robinson, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 55. (P.)

5. On taxation of costs only two counsel will be allowed fees on a motion, except under very special circumstances.—In re Grady, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 49. (C.)

XXX. 10. a. Abandonment of Motion, &c.: after Notice to Appear, &c.

1. A cause, wherein a decree to account had been pronounced, was abandoned by the ptf., who, without having been served with any restraining order, came in, and proved his debt in another cause. A creditor, whose debt was paise to the ptf.'s, was also a deft. in the abandoned cause. Held, that this deft. was not entitled to be paid, out of the ptf.'s portion of the fund brought into Court in the second cause, the costs incurred by him in the abandoned cause.

Semle—The deft. should have applied for the carriage of the decree in the abandoned cause; and had his costs added to his demand.—Marquis of Downshire v. Tyrrell, 2 I. E. R. 66. (E.E.)

2. In a suit in the Exchequer, ptf. discontinued it before decree, without obtaining an order providing for payment of the costs incurred therein, and came in under a decree in this Court. Held, that this Court could not give the costs of the Exchequer suit.—Finlay v. Heeran, 7 I. E. R. 485. (R.)

XXX. 10. b. Account.

XXX. 10. c. Costs of Administration Suits.

3. Ptf. having filed a bill against the remainderman, the Court gave no costs to any party, so far as the suit related to the construction of the will creating the entail, but gave the remainderman the costs of the residue of the suit as against ptf.—Flood v. Digby, 2 Jon. 582. (E.E.)

4. The costs incurred by a ptf. in litigating and reducing considerably a creditor's demand, which is prior to ptf.'s, are not costs which ptf. is entitled to be paid in preference to that creditor's demand. At the final hearing, that creditor obtained a decree for payment of his prior demand and his costs.—Jauge v. Jackson, Fl. & K. 45. (R.)

5. The decree in an administration suit provided that the costs of the solicitor of the inheritor should be paid out of the surplus fund, if any. Some part of the costs had been incurred in increasing the fund for those beneficially interested. The inheritor was insolvent. Held, that he was entitled to be paid in the first instance, without waiting for a surplus fund to be formed.—Grey v. Matthews, Fl. & K. 309; 3 I. E. R. 530. (R.)

6. When the necessity of going to the Court is caused by the will of the testator, the costs of the suit must come out of the testator's general personal estate.—Lamphier v. Despard, 1 Con. & L. 207; 2 Dr. & War. 65. (C.)

7. By settlement £2500 were charged on an estate for lives renewable for ever, for the issue of the marriage, subject to appointment. Part, being appointed to one child on her marriage, was settled. The residue was never appointed. After the death of the first settlor, A., solicitor of B., the other child, acting under a power of attorney, obtained a renewal, and instituted, but never prosecuted, a suit in B.'s name to raise his portion of the unappointed charge. On the death of B., A. obtained limited administration to him; and, with the parties entitled to the married child's share of the charge, filed a bill to raise the charge. A receiver was appointed, and funds got in. The lands having been sold in a creditor's suit and the settlements lodged in the office by order, without prejudice to A.'s lien—Held, that A. had not any lien for costs on the deeds, since B., through whom he got the deeds, had not had any exclusive right to them; and that there could not be any lien transferred to the funds.

That A. was entitled out of the funds to the costs of procuring the renewal, and also to the costs of the limited administration out of the funds reported to B.'s representative; but that he was not entitled out of the funds in the cause to his costs of the suits instituted by him in B.'s lifetime, and as his administrator after his death.—Molesworth v. Robbins, 8 I. E. R. 1. (R.)—[Affid., 1 I. E. R. 223; 2 Jon. & L. 358. (C.)]

8. A deft. died after appearance, but before answer. He was struck out of the bill, with costs, by side-bar rule, and his administrator was made a party by amendment. Held, that the administrator was entitled to the costs incurred by his intestate.—Short v. Carroll, 9 I. E. R. 468. (R.)

9. The costs of a suit, in the nature of an ejectment bill, to recover devised property, on a construction, though doubtful, of a will, are not within the rule in administration suits, that the costs come out of the estate.—Johnson v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 386. (C.)

10. A creditor, ptf. in an administration suit to carry out the trusts of a voluntary deed, including personal estate, is entitled to his costs in the first instance, having put the personal estate in a train to be realised.—O'Dowda v. O'D., 11 I. E. R. 464. (C.)

11. In an administration suit by one of the next-of-kin of an intestate, the other next-of-kin are within the 15th G. O., and the ptf. must pay their costs if they are required to answer. The objection need not be made at the first hearing.—Beddy v. Smith, 11 I. E. R. 467. (C.)

1. In administration suits, concerning personal estate, when there is no fund to pay the ptf., the general rule is, that he does not get costs out of a fund belonging exclusively to creditors of a higher degree, unless they be salvage costs, or there are special circumstances. The ptf., a simple contract creditor, knew that the judgment debts would, as they did, exhaust the assets. Her object in the suit was to have a certain fund decreed to be equitable assets. She failed. No costs were given.—Fisher v. King, 11 I. E. R. 460. (C.)

2. An administrator whose accounts, as put forward by his answer, were completely falsified, was decreed to pay the whole costs of the suit.—Orr v. Milliken, 1 I. Jur. 217. (C.)

3. Costs of all necessary parties to an administration suit occasioned by a question on a will come out of the general assets, and cannot be thrown on a particular fund, though the only difficulty arises between the parties interested in that fund, and there is no question as to the rest of the assets.—Williams v. Armstrong, 12 I. E. R. 356. (C.)

4. A creditor who has brought an action at law against an administrator, and has notice of a decree to administer the assets, is not in general entitled to his costs of appearing on a motion to enjoin him from proceeding with the action.

A civil-bill decree against an administrator is in the nature of a judgment de bonis propriis. Therefore the Court, though it will enjoin a creditor from enforcing such a decree against the assets, after a decree to administer them, will not restrain him from enforcing it against the administrator personally.

Semble—A decree to administer assets is a defence to a civil-bill against the administrator, if pronounced before the hearing of the civil-bill. Secus—If pronounced after the hearing, but before an appeal to the Judge of Assize.—Powell v. P., 12 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

5. When a bill would not be sustainable, a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act cannot be supported. Such a petition is equally open to an objection for multifariousness.

Upon a petition, plainly open to such an objection, the Court will not pronounce a summary order of reference without notice.

Costs of proceedings before the Court in such a petition are within the jurisdiction of the Court only, and not of the Master. On petitions for the administration of assets, the Court, in making an order of reference to the Master, will include a direction that the petitioner's costs already incurred shall be payable to him in the same order as his demand (if any), and out of the same fund or by the same party.—Cuming v. Taylor, 1 I. C. R. 25; 3 I. Jur. 65. (C.)

6. A. bequeathed £20,000, in trust for the building and endowment of a college for clerical students connected with the General Assembly of Irish Presbyterians; to be built where the trustees should decide, and to be under such rules, &c., as they should determine, subject to the advice and directions of the Assembly. The suit was to administer A.'s assets; and to carry into execution the trusts of her will. Held, that the costs incurred by the trustees in the settlement of a scheme for the due application of the £20,000, were to be borne by that bequest, and not by the general residuary fund.

The General Assembly (who were not parties to the cause) presented a petition for leave to intervene in the office as if they had been joined, and that their costs of doing so might be allowed to them out of the £20,000. The order made on the petition merely provided that they should be at liberty to intervene, if they thought fit, and reserved until the final hearing all questions as to any claim by them for costs. Under this order they proceeded before the Master.

Held (at the final hearing), that they were not entitled to their costs as against any fund, since they were not parties to the cause so as to be liable to costs; and the order permitting them to intervene did not provide for their costs as prayed by the petition.—Dill v. Brown, 3 I. C. R. 127; 4 I. Jur. 355. (C.)

7. The Court will not decide, on the first hearing of a cause petition for an administration, that the extra costs caused by setting it down as a general cause petition, instead of for a summary reference, should be paid by the petitioner.—Green v. Giles, 3 I. C. R. 487. (C.)

8. When an administration suit is instituted by persons claiming as next-of-kin, upon fair grounds, and the petitioners get the assets brought into Court, they will be entitled to the costs of suit, out of the assets, though failing to sustain any claim as next-of-kin.—Ryan v. R., 8 I. Jur. 274. (M.O.)

9. In suits to administer real and personal estate when there are no specific incumbrances affecting the real estate, the petitioner is entitled to his costs out of the fund in priority to all creditors.

Semble—When two matters are consolidated duplicate costs for carrying on the proceedings in them should not be allowed.

Observations on the practice of solicitors acting for several parties who have conflicting interests. — Smith v. Murphy, 10 I. C. R. 42. (R.)

10. A., possessed of £4000 stock, bequeathed £2000 of it to B. £1000 of the remainder he bequeathed for the use of Protestant schools of St. Peter's parish, and another, £1000 for the use of the school attached to the Episcopal chapel in B.-street. The chapel in B.-street had no school attached to it. B.-street was in St. Peter's parish. Held, that with regard to the second £1000, the will showed a general charitable intention, which might be executed cy-pres, in favour of Protestant schools in St. Peter's parish. It was referred to the Master to settle a scheme.

The costs, down to and including the hearing, ordered to be paid out of the residue;

the costs of the reference to be borne by the fund.—Daly v. Att.-General, 11 I. C. R. 41; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (C.)

1. The day before she died, testatrix, V., bequeathed a legacy to her sister, B. The will was then properly attested by two witnesses. Immediately after they had signed, B., at V.'s request, and as she thought for greater security, signed her name to the will. After V.'s death, B. cut her own name off the will. Held, that she signed as an attesting witness, and must pay the costs incurred by her spoliating the will.—Toker v. Maguire, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (P.)

XXX. 10. d. Costs of Amendment.

2. When a suit is necessitated by the difficulty of construing a will, the costs are payable out of the estate; the testator having created the difficulty.—Comms. of Ch. Don. & B. v. Cotter, 1 Dr. & War. 498. (C.)—[Revg. on another point, 2 Dr. & Wal. 615. (C.)]

3. Application, for costs of amendments not yet answered, refused.—Hughes v. Maitland, 5 I. E. R. 167. (R.)

4. By amendment, after answer, ptfs. made a new case, of which they had been aware on filing the original bill; and prayed relief on the new case, omitting the old prayer. On motion—Held that ptfs. should pay deft. £10 for the costs of so much of his answer to the original bill as would have been unnecessary if ptfs. had originally put forward their new case, besides paying 20s., late currency, on making the amendments.—Walsh v. Studdert, 2 I. E. R. 213. (R.)

5. When there is an amended bill, the costs of briefing the original bill will not be allowed.—Higgins v. Buteman, 2 Dr. & War. 70. (C.)

6. A., deft. as an acting executor, died. The Court allowed ptf. to amend by making the other executors parties in A.'s stead, without paying A.'s costs.—Rye v. Coppinger, 12 I. E. R. 314. (R.)

XXX. 10. e. Costs of Appeal.

7. An order made by the House of Lords, dismissing an appeal, had, by the usual side-bar rule, been made a rule of Court. The Court directed the Clerk of Appearances and Writs to issue a subpoena for the costs of the appeal.—O'Ferrall v. M'Can, Fl. & K. 635; 5 I. E. R. 105. (R.)

8. After a day appointed for hearing, and extended on terms, the party did not comply with those terms. The H. L. dismissed the appeal with costs.—Mahon v. Irwin, 4 Cl. & F. 559.

9. A petition for re-hearing may be dismissed with costs, though the petitioner be given some relief.—Uppington v. Bullen, 2 Dr. & War. 184; 1 Con. & L. 291. (C.)

10. When a party is served with the certificate of costs, and a personal demand is made, yet he does not pay them, the H. L. will, on petition of the party entitled, order the recognizances to be estreated to pay costs, together with costs of the petition.—Callaghan v. C., 8 Cl. & F. 709, n.

11. When a party, ordered to pay the costs, absents himself to avoid personal demand and service of the certificate of the costs, the H. L. will substitute service on his agents in the appeal.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 708, n.

12. While a case was pending in the H. L., deft. in a similar case offered ptf. to be bound by the decision in the pending case. Ptf. took no notice of the offer, but compelled deft. to go on with his defence. Judgment was given against deft., who appealed, and prosecuted the appeal to a hearing after an adverse decision in the case previously pending. Judgment being pronounced against him in his own case, he was ordered to pay the costs.—Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

13. When the H. L. varies a decree, but only on a point which had not been raised in the Court below, nor made a ground of appeal, the appellant must pay the costs of the appeal.—Wallace v. Patten, 12 Cl. & F. 491.—[See Wallace v. Patten, 5 I. E. R. 309; Long. & T. 479. (E.E.)]

14. The H. L. will not grant costs of an appeal to come out of an estate, upon the mere miscarriage of the Court below, when the subject of litigation, though actually decided by the Court, might have required to be tried as a question of fact.

The H. L. strongly condemned the practice of each party printing an appendix to his case, and desired that in future a joint appendix only should be printed.—Piers v. P., 2 H. L. Cas. 331; 13 Jur. 569.—[Revg. 10 I. E. R. 341. (C.)]

15. It is not necessary that the £10 lodged on appeal motions should be lodged before serving the notice of appeal.—Mannix v. Drinan, 11 I. E. R. 398. (C.)

16. After dismissal of a bill with costs, the defts. were stayed from enforcing them, pending an appeal to Dom. Proc., the ptfs. giving security and paying interest upon them.—M'Carthy v. M'C., 11 I. E. R. 399. (C.)—[See 1 H. L. Cas. 703; revg. 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.)]

17. A decree declared the ptf. and others, specialty and simple contract creditors, entitled to a charge on lands. An appeal to the House of Lords, was defended by the ptf. at his own expense. The decree was affirmed, without costs. Before the appeal was decided, a final decree was pronounced, directing a sale, and giving the ptf. his costs in priority with his demand. Held, that he was not entitled to his costs of defending the appeal, as costs in the cause; but that as the other creditors had an interest in, and had derived a benefit from the defence of the appeal, they were bound to contribute to the costs, out of the funds reported to them, rateably, in proportion to the amount of their respective demands.—Hamilton v. Synge, 4 I. C. R. 182; 7 I. Jur. 121. (R.)—[Affd.: 4 I. C. R. 551. (C.)]

1. An objection having been made to the competency of an appeal to the H. L., the Appeal Committee directed that that objection should be heard before the House, which gave judgment in favour of the appellant. The appeal was then heard, and was dismissed on the merits, with costs. The House directed that the costs, which had been incurred by reason of the objection to the competency of the appeal, should be deducted from the general costs.—Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 2.—[See s. c., 7 H. L. Cas. 423; 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.)]

2. Costs of the appeal added to the appellant's security.—Eyre v. M'Dowell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (H.L.); 9 H. L. Cas. 619.

3. The Appeal Committee cannot decide what documents are, and what are not necessary to be printed in the appendix to a case. A question on this point, though known by the parties to exist, was not made the subject of discussion during the argument on the appeal. The H. L. would not hear it discussed afterwards, and refused to make any order touching the costs of the appendix.

The decision appealed against was reversed, and the cause remitted. The Court below was left to deal with the general question of costs.—Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588.—[See 9 I. C. R. 535; Dr. Rep. temp. Nap. 525. (C.)]

XXX. 10. f. Costs of Attorney-General and of the Crown.

4. The Attorney-General, made a party to a cause as representing a charge belonging to a deceased bastard, is not entitled to costs if nothing is reported due on the charge.—Murphy v. Osborne, 9 I. E. R. 254. (C.)

5. In proceeding on a sci. fa. on a recognition, costs cannot be given against the Crown.—The Queen v. Hubart, 11 I. E. R. 397. (C.)

6. As a general rule, intervenients do not get their costs; but the Attorney-General, when he intervenes as a necessary party, will be allowed his costs.—Daly v. Burke, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (P.)

7. The Att.-Gen., served with notice of a motion for administration to goods in which the Crown had not any interest, and as to which it made no case, is not entitled to the costs of appearing on the motion when other persons unsuccessfully impeached the legitimacy of the deceased.—Redmond v. Barber, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 312. (P.)

XXX. 10. g. Costs of Bankrupt and Insolvent: of their Assignees.

8. The assignee of an insolvent mortgagor was made a party to a suit to foreclose the mortgage, but died during its progress. The mortgaged premises were the mortgagor's only property. The ptf., in order to induce a creditor of the mortgagor to become his assignee, undertook to pay him his costs in the suit. Held, that the ptf. was entitled to those costs as part of his own costs of suit.—Maxwell v. Smyth, Jo. & Car. 72. (E.E.)

9. After a decree to account, ptf. (in whose name as an insolvent's assignee the bill was filed), applied to have it taken off the file, because the attorney had used his name without his knowledge or consent. At the bar he only asked to be indemnified against costs, the suit being for the estate's benefit. Held, that the motion should be refused with costs.—Bell v. Dawson, H. & Jon. 801. (E.E.)

10. The ptf. compelled a deft., assignee of an insolvent, to answer the bill; but afterwards compromised the suit with the substantial defts., though noticed not to do so without providing for the assignee's costs. On motion, the Court refused to dismiss the bill without costs.

The assignee having answered the bill at length, the Court directed the officer, in taxing the costs, to allow the assignee only such costs as he had properly incurred.—O'Reilly v. Ward, H. & J. 815. (E.E.)

11. Insolvent, when deft., is not entitled to his costs.—Conlan v. Jackson, 1 I. E. R. 276. (E. E.)

12. An insolvent mortgagor's assignee having died during a foreclosure suit, another creditor agreed to become assignee, and be made deft., on ptf. undertaking to pay his costs, to expedite the suit, and save expense to the fund. Held, that ptf. was entitled to be paid those costs out of a fund in bank to the credit of the cause.—Maxwell v. Scanlan, 1 I. E. R. 277, n.

13. In a foreclosure suit, the provisional assignee having been made a deft., in consequence of the insolvency of one of the mortgagors, was declared entitled to his costs against the ptf.; the latter to have them over against the fund.—Sproule v. Oates, 2 I. E. R. 323. (E.E.)

14. It is discretionary with the Commissioner of Bankruptcy to give any costs or charges to the summoned party suspected of having the bankrupt's property, or supposed to be indebted to him.—In re O'Connor, 3 I. E. R. 364. (B.)

15. Quere—Is a mortgagee entitled to the costs of a foreclosure suit prosecuted by him after a notice from the assignee of the mortgagor, a bankrupt, requiring him to proceed to sell the mortgaged premises, under the G. O. in bankruptcy of 1832?

In such a case the mortgagee was held entitled to the costs of a foreclosure suit, the notice from the assignee not offering to pay him the costs incurred up to the time of its service on him.—Bernard v. Sadler, 4 I. E. R. 61. (E.E.)

1. The provisional assignee of an insolvent debt. is not entitled to a fee for counsel to approve of a deed which he is called upon to execute under a decree.—Wallace v. M'Cann, Fl. & K. 554; 4 I. E. R. 522. (R.)

2. During a foreclosure suit the mortgagor was discharged as an insolvent. His assignee was made a debt. That assignee died. A new assignee having been appointed, he appeared by the former assignee's attorney. Held, that the new assignee was entitled to his own costs, and those of the first assignee.—Lahey v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 108. (E.E.)

3. The provisional assignee of a bankrupt mortgagor is not entitled to his costs against the mortgagee, ptf. in a foreclosure suit.—Hughes v. Kelly, 3 Dr. & War. 482; 2 Con. & L. 223; 5 I. E. R. 286. (C.)

4. The provisional assignee of the Insolvent Court, made a party debt. as such, stands in the place of the debtor; and is not entitled to his costs as against the ptf., when the debtor would not be so entitled.—Walker v. Molloy, 6 I. E. R. 218. (E.E.)

5. A bill, by an uncertificated bankrupt, stated that all, except one, of the creditors who had proved under the commission, had proved, and that between that creditor and the assignee there was collusion. Held, that the bill was not maintainable. A demurrer by the assignee was allowed, but without costs, since the assignee should have submitted to the jurisdiction.—Wyse v. Waters, 1 I. Jur. 180. (R.)

6. In 1827 a commission of bankruptcy issued. Proceedings were taken in Ch. relative to the estate of the bankrupt. Several of the Commissioners having died before 1836, when the 6 W. 4, c. 14, came into operation, the commission did not pass to the Commissioners then appointed. Also in 1845, by order of the Court of Ch., a sum was transferred to the matter of the commission. Until 1850 no creditor applied for a renewal of the commission; and there was no assignee. On petition by the solicitor for the former assignee, an order was made that his costs should be taxed without the renewal of the commission.—In re Pepper & Locke, 2 I. Jur. 164. (C.)

7. An order was made in 1847, superseding a commission of bankruptcy against a party, with costs, to be paid by the petitioning creditors. Before those costs were paid, that party was, in 1849, discharged under the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors. Held, that the assignee in the insolvency matter, having been a petitioning creditor in the bankruptcy matter, took the costs under the order of 1847, subject to the lien of the solicitor who had obtained that order; and could not be allowed to set off as against that lien a debt due to himself by the insolvent when those costs were incurred. Upon motion, the Court varied the order of 1847, by directing the petitioning creditors to pay to the solicitor the amount of the taxed costs.—In re Petticrew, 2 I. C. R. 102. (C.)

8. An insolvent mortgagor's assignee filed a bill for an account, and to redeem a mortgage. Two cause petitions for the same purpose were afterwards filed, which were dismissed with costs. A new assignee moved under the B. and I. Act to be substituted by suggestion as ptf. The Court, on a cross notice by the debt., ordered the costs of the dismissed petitions to be paid before the suggestion was entered.—McConkey v. Gwynn, 8 I. C. R. 33. (R.)—[Affirmed: 10 I. C. R. 261. (C.A.)]

9. When property is sold under a fi. fa., with notice to the execution creditor of an act of bankruptcy committed by the debtor, the assignees are entitled to damages, besides the produce of the sale. The execution creditor must pay the damages, together with the costs, of which the sheriff must bear a portion.—Re Nolan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (B.)

10. When the Master had, in his discretion, settled the entire of a fund upon a wife and her children, the Court refused on appeal by the petitioners, the husband's assignees in bankruptcy, to interfere with that discretion, or to charge the fund with their costs. Motion refused, with costs.—James v. Smith, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 337. (R.)

11. A trader filed a petition against himself. Afterwards a creditor filed another, and got priority; and the costs of the petition filed by the trader were not given him.—Re Daly, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 418. (B.)

12. Although a party establishes his claim, costs will not be given when private transactions demand investigation.—Re Curran, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 59. (B.)

13. A trader, who under the arrangement clauses petitions the Court, obtains the usual protection, and procures an order for the assignee to receive and possess his estate, cannot, even by special arrangement with his attorney, lodge with, or transfer to him any portion of his assets, as security for his costs, so as to create a lien in the attorney's favour. An attorney, who in an arrangement matter voluntarily hands over to the official assignee scrip or railway shares, deposited with him by his client (the trader), will have no equitable claim on foot of those shares for costs due to him by his client.

An attempt to fasten on a trader's assets, of which the attorney has got possession, a special lien by special contract, as security for his costs, those assets being bound by an order of the Court procured by that attorney, must fail; since it would be against the rights and equities of the several creditors bound by the vesting order.

When proceedings are taken bona fide, without the Court's authority, or the assignee's sanction, the attorney is not entitled to any lien for costs; but, when the assignees concede the right of proving for those costs, the Court will sanction it.—Re North, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (B.)

1. Traders, by falsely representing their circumstances, obtained forbearance. They contrived to have their trade carried on by members of their family, and to place property beyond the reach of their general creditors. They fully and truly disclosed their trade dealings; but the Court, nevertheless, adjourned for twelve months the granting of the certificate, and gave the opposing creditors costs out of the estate.—Re Scotts, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 20. (B.)

XXX. 10. h. Bank of England.

XXX. 10 i. Bill or Petition, Dismissal of.

[See PRACTICE. BILL, DISMISSAL OF.]

2. The 25 G. 3, c. 51, s. 3, applies to cases in which the ptf. dismisses his bill by rule in the office, not to cases in which it is dismissed by the act of the Court. In dismissing the bill without costs, the Court deals with the deft.'s acts; not with the ptf.'s.

When the subject matter of the suit was, by the ptf.'s act, transferred to the Crown pursuant to statute, the Court would not dismiss the bill without costs. The ptf.'s demand having been satisfied by the Crown, and the deft. being justly liable to pay it to the Crown, the Court would not permit him to dismiss the bill with costs, for want of prosecution.—Bunbury v. O'Brien, H. & J. 803. (E.E.)

3. Ptf., having compelled a deft., an insolvent's assignee, to answer the bill, compromised the suit with the substantial defts., though noticed not to do so without providing for the assignee's costs. On motion, the Court refused to dismiss the bill without costs.

The assignee having answered the bill at length, the Court directed the officer, in taxing the costs, to allow the assignee only such costs as he had properly incurred.—O'Reilly v. Ward, H. & J. 815. (E.E.)

4. A process-server pleaded guilty to an indictment for perjury respecting the service of process. Held, that ptf. and his attorney should, in this special case, pay defts. all their costs of setting aside the process, except those of the prosecution, over which the Court considered it had not any control.

Quare—Is ptf. generally liable for costs of setting aside process against defts. who have convicted the process-server of perjury?

Semble—The process-server's affidavit is conclusive touching the fact of service, until a conviction for perjury is had.—Egan v. Doherty, 2 I. E. R. 68. (E.E.)

5. When a bill is filed in consequence of a difficulty arising upon a will, under which the adverse parties claim, the Court, in dismissing it, will not give costs.—Graham v. Thynne, 2 I. E. R. 407. (E.E.)

•6. When dealings between solicitor and client, or principal and agent, are in their inception voidable in equity, but have been saved from impeachment because the client or principal has confirmed them by acts, the solicitor or agent will not be entitled to costs of a suit instituted by the client or principal to impeach those dealings, though the bill be dismissed.—De Montmorency v. Devereux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 7 Cl. & F. 188; West, 64; 4 Jur. 403.—[Affg. 1 Dr. & War. 119. (C.)]

7. Upon a motion to dismiss with costs a bill for want of prosecution, the Court will not allow ptf. to go into the merits of the case to show that the bill should be dismissed without costs.—Carroll v. Donoghoe, Fl. & K. 98. (R.)

8. A suit abated by the marriage of the sole ptf. Deft. moved that it be revived within a certain time, or, in default, that the bill be dismissed with costs. Held, that the bill should be dismissed without costs.—Westropp v. Healy, Fl. & K. 141. (R.)

9. On dismissing the ptf.'s bill, the Court will not give costs when the deft. has imperfectly stated his case in his answer.—Steele v. Mitchell, 3 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

10. A petition claiming exemption from payment of the rentcharge in lieu of tithe, may be dismissed with costs, the Court, after argument, holding that it had jurisdiction so to dismiss it, although the statute is silent as to costs.—Chambers v. Earl of Shannon, 5 I. E. R. 335. (R.)

11. Deft. at law filed a bill of discovery against the ptf. in aid of his defence. Ptf. at law withdrew his record, which had been set down for trial, and became liable to the deft.'s costs of the day, which were taxed. Ptf. in equity, after the deft. had answered, entered a rule to dismiss his bill with costs, which were taxed, and subpoena issued by the deft. in equity for payment of them. Upon motion of the ptf. in equity, the Court set off the costs payable to him in the suit at law against those payable by him to the deft. in equity.—Marquis of Salisbury v. Maguire, 7 I. E. R. 499. (R.)

12. When a bill is dismissed, the Court cannot decree the costs to be paid by a deft. whose misconduct occasioned the suit.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 8 I. E. R. 241; 3 Jon. & L. 380. (C.)

13. Deft. having served a notice under the 76th G. Rule, and being served by the ptf., in reply, with notice that, upon obtaining an order for which he had applied, to take the bill as confessed against other defts., he would file a replication, is entitled to costs up to the day of service of ptf.'s notice.—Jones v. Hewett, 8 I. E. R. 517. (E.E.)

1. Ptf. amended his bill bona fide after the deft. was entitled to move to dismiss it. The Court refused to dismiss the bill, but made the ptf. pay the costs of the motion.—Moore v. Lalor, 9 I. E. R. 148. (R.)

2. When a cause is set down for a dismiss, the deft. setting it down is alone entitled to costs, and any other defts. appearing will not get costs.—Furcell v. P., 11 I. E. R. 516. (C.)

3. During the progress of a suit, the ptf. obtained leave to sue in forma pauperis. The bill was subsequently dismissed with costs, for which the ptf. was arrested. Held, that the order dismissing the bill with costs generally, was erroneous, and that the ptf. should be therefore discharged.—Staunton v. Barrington, 1 I. Jur. 347. (R.)

4. Where there are several creditors and suits, and a decree has been made in one of them, and an order has stayed the proceedings in the other suits on the usual terms, the defts. in the stayed suits may move to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution, for the purpose of being paid their costs, and are not bound to wait until funds are allocated or realised in the suit which proceeds.—Milward v. Fagan, 12 I. E. R. 313. (R.)

5. An appeal from a decree for the ptf. was argued in the H. L. Before judgment the ptf. died. The deft. revived the cause against his executors. The H. L. reversed the decree, and dismissed the bill "with costs of the suit in the Court below."—Held, that the decree made in the Court below on this order should be couched in the same words. Its words giving costs payable by the executors, the decree was varied on a re-hearing.—Eyre v. Hollier, 12 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

6. Bill to raise a mortgage; answer by the deft. B. and wife in Dec. 1849. A petition was subsequently presented to the I. E. Court by a brother-in-law of B., upon which an order for sale was made. In May 1850, a motion by B., that the bill might be dismissed for want of prosecution, was refused with costs.—Bernard v. Bond, 2 I. Jur. 235. (R.); ibid, 311. (C.)

7. Though a bill has been filed on the authority of a reported case, which is afterwards reversed, the Court has not jurisdiction on a motion under the 82nd G. O. to order that the bill shall be dismissed without costs.—Cronin v. Murphy, 1 I. C. R. 238. (R.)

8. The owner of a judgment, affecting only a life estate, presented a cause petition for its sale; and brought before the Court the creditors on the estate who had charges created before 1840, and prayed to redeem them. They declined to be redeemed. The Court dismissed with costs the petition against the

9. A bill for tithe rentcharge was filed against several defts. Sixty-three of them agreed to pay, and were struck out of the bill. An irregular side-bar order was entered that the bill be dismissed as against them, with costs. They paid the rentcharge due by each, and the costs of subpoena and parliamentary appearance. The remaining eight defts. only owed 8s. 9d. rentcharge at the time of filing the bill, and the ptf.'s solicitor then wrote to them saying they were only nominal defts. The bill was afterwards set down to be heard against them, and they then consented to pay whatever costs should be taxed against them. Costs, being the general costs of the suit, were taxed against them to £36. 2s. 0½d.

The Taxing Master was directed to review the taxation, and report what amount of costs would have been properly chargeable against them, if the side-bar order had not been made; but the Court, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 28, had ordered "that the sixty-three defts. should be struck out of the bill, on paying the rentcharge due by each, and the proportion of the costs of the suit to which they would be liable, under that sec., as if one general bill of costs had been made against all the defts."

When a side-bar order to dismiss a bill as against some defts. is irregularly entered, and injustice, respecting the costs of the suit, is done to other defts., the Court will relieve against the injustice.

A defendant struck out of a bill for tithe rentcharge, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 28, is liable not only to the costs of subpoena and appearance, but to his portion of the general costs.

When a suit is instituted to recover a very small amount, it should be dismissed, as being beneath the dignity of the Court.—Chaine v. Dunganon, 6 I. Jur. 174. (R.)—[Affid.: 7 I. Jur. 89. (C.)]

10. The Court will not, on the consent of parties, reinstate cause petitions dismissed for want of prosecution under the 20th or 27th G. O. of July 1851, unless there are sufficient grounds, irrespectively of the consent, for reinstating them.

When a cause petition is dismissed under the 20th G. O., the Court will not, on motion, give costs to a respondent who did not appear when the cause was called on.

In future, no order to amend a cause petition will be made, except on production of the Rolls certificate or the Lord Chancellor's order, referring the matter to the Master, under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act 1850.

—Porter v. Archbold, 4 I. C. R. 651; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (R.)

11. A bill was filed by the assignee of an insolvent mortgagor, for an account, and to redeem a mortgage.

Two cause petitions, for the same purpose, were afterwards filed, which were dismissed, with costs. A new assignee moved, under the Bankruptcy and Insolvency Act, to be substituted by suggestion as ptf. Held, that the costs of the dismissed petitions must be paid before the suggestion was entered.—M'Conkey v. Gwynne, 10 I. C. R. 261. (C.A.)—[Affg. Rolls decision, 8 I. C. R. 33. (R.)]

1. When, on the death of one of two petitioners, an order is made on behalf of the respondent that the surviving petitioner shall revive within a limited time, or that the petition will be dismissed; the dismissal will be with costs.—Corr v. C., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 212. (R.)

2. Charges of fabrication and fraud, made in a petition, failed. It was dismissed, with costs.—Stubber v. S., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 153. (P.)

XXX. 10. j. Cause standing over, or struck out of List: Costs of the Day.

3. Ptf.'s solicitor ordered to pay the costs of the day, because of his non-attendance in Court when the case was called on.—Courtney v. Stack, 2 Dr. & War. 251; 1 Con. & L. 366. (C.)

4. This is a bill for a redemption, in which, as general rule, the ptf. must pay the costs of all necessary parties. Spode is a party deft.; he is, therefore, entitled to his general costs in the cause. This is the ordinary case of a cause being ordered by the Court to stand over from one day to another, nothing in particular appearing on the face of the record, but merely the cause standing over at the desire of the Court. The ptf. must, therefore, pay the refreshing fees; for where a party is entitled to his costs generally, and the cause stands over from day to day, the refreshing fees are costs in the cause.—Wynne v. Brady, 5 I. E. R. 243. (E.E.)

5. When a cause at hearing is directed to stand over, the ptf. to pay the costs of the day, if there are not any special directions in the order, the costs of the day only include dockets of refreshers, refreshing fees of two guineas to each counsel, attendance on counsel, and one day's attendance at the hearing.—Hamilton v. H., 2 I. Jur. 227. (R.)

6. It is in the discretion of the Court to make summary orders. If, in consequence of a serious question arising, the Court say "no rule," it may reserve all questions of costs until the case comes in a more formal manner before it.—Hatchell v. Chancellor, 3 I. Jur. 13. (C.)

7. When parties file affidavits so recently that their opponents cannot answer them before the hearing, if the parties filing insist on using the affidavits, the Court will allow the petition to stand, and make the party causing the delay pay the costs occasioned thereby.—Anderson v. O'Connor, 4 I. Jur. 275. (C.)

8. When in a proceeding under the Ch.

Reg. Act one party files an affidavit so shortly before the hearing as to take the opposite party by surprise, and insists upon using that affidavit, the Court will allow the case to stand over; and will order the party on whose behalf the affidavit has been filed to pay the costs of the day.—Figgis v. F., 2 I. C. R. 38; 4 I. Jur. 275. (C.)

XXX. 10. k. Charity.

9. Relators refused to proceed further in an information. New relators, who offered an indemnity for all past and future costs, were appointed.—Att.-Gen. v. Mayor and Corp. of Cashel, S. & Sc. 833. (R.)

10. Misapplication of the funds of a public body went on for a great length of time. No imputation was cast upon the trustees, who were removed. They were allowed their costs of the fund.

This case is not to be a precedent for cases to be thereafter defended, in which the same point should arise.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.)

XXX. 10. l. Costs of Commissioners.

11. The Court will, under the words, "reasonable costs, charges, and expenses," in the 2 & 3. Vic. 61, s. 29, award all necessary costs incurred by parties in obtaining payment out of Court of the purchase-money of lands required for the purposes of the commission, or of having it invested in trusts similar to those to which the lands so required were subject.—In re The Shannon Commissioners, Fl. & K. 13; 3 I. E. R. 355. (R.)

12. The Court will, under the words, "and to make such other order in the premises as to the Court shall seem just and reasonable," of the 6 G. 4. c. 193, s. 29, give the costs of attending the inquisition to ascertain the value of the lands required by the company.—In re The Ulster Canal Company, Fl. & K. 16. (R.)

13. The Court will not, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 56, order the Poor-law Commissioners to pay the costs relating to the re-purchase of lands, to be settled to the same uses as those to which the lands sold were subject.—In re Lord Mountsandsford, Fl. & K. 368. (R.)

14. Under the 5 & 6 Vic., c. 62, the Commissioners of Woods and Forests are bound to pay the costs of a reference to ascertain the rights of parties to the purchase-money of premises purchased under the Act, as expenses incidental to the purchase.—In re Commissioners of Woods & Forests, 7 I. E. R. 487. (R.)

XXX. 10. m. Costs of Proceedings Touching Contempt.

15. Deft. having been arrested under process of contempt for not answering a bill, swore his answer just before the expiration of the time within which ptf. was bound to have him brought to the bar of the Court, and, at the same time, served ptf. with notice not to remove him from Dublin. The answer was afterwards filed. Ptf. brought deft. to the bar of the Court. Deft. applied for costs of his removal. Held, not entitled to them.—Stopford v. Cronin, 2 Jon. 536. (E.E.)

1. A conditional order for an attachment for non-payment of rent was granted against a tenant to the Court. On a motion to show cause, a reference to the Master was directed to ascertain the amount due. The carriage of this order was given to the petitioner, who delayed proceeding thereon till after service by the tenant of a notice of motion in the Rolls Court, that the cause shown should be allowed; and for the costs of the original motion to show cause. Held, that the tenant's proper course was to apply to the Master under the 122nd G. O. of 1843, for a report that the petitioner had not proceeded on the order, that no rule should be made on the motion; and that each party abide his own costs.—Agar v. Phaire, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 43. (R.)

2. A. bequeathed £20,000 in trust, for the building and endowment of a college for clerical students connected with the General Assembly of Irish Presbyterians; to be built where the trustees should decide; and to be under such rules, &c., as they should determine; subject to the advice and directions of the Assembly. The suit was to administer A.'s assets, and to carry into execution the trusts of her will. Held, that the costs incurred by the trustees in the settlement of a scheme for the due application of the £20,000 were to be borne by that bequest, and not by the general residuary fund.

The General Assembly (who were not parties to the cause) presented a petition for leave to intervene in the office as if they had been joined, and that their costs of doing so might be allowed to them out of the £20,000. The order made on the petition merely provided that they should be at liberty to intervene if they thought fit, and reserved until the final hearing all questions as to any claim for costs by them: under this order they proceeded before the Master. Held (at the final hearing), that they were not entitled to their costs as against any fund, since they were not parties to the cause so as to be liable to costs, and the order permitting them to intervene did not provide for their costs as prayed by the petition.—Dill v. Brown, 3 I. C. R. 127; 4 I. Jur. 355. (C.)

XXX. 10. n. Costs of Creditors.

[See also PRACTICE, CREDITOR'S SUIT—PRACTICE, COSTS, 10. c., ADMINISTRATION SUITS.]

3. In the case of a deficient fund, if a creditor who has obtained a separate report after the final hearing, procures the cause to be re-heard, the decree may be altered by refusing costs to a deft. who had been decreed them: the facts detailed in the report being such as, if known at the final hearing, would have prevented the Court from giving him costs.—Robinson v. Harris, H. & J. 412. (E.E.)

4. The costs of the ptf. and of the several parties to the cause, having been ordered to be paid out of the fund, and a puisne creditor, not a party, but whose demand had been decreed to be paid, having obtained leave to attend the taxation of costs,—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of reading over the bills of costs of the several parties to the cause.—Phillips v. Page, H. & J. 819. (E.E.)

5. A puisne creditor filed a bill to redeem a prior mortgagee; and for a sale, offering by his bill to pay the prior mortgagee what should appear due to him. The prior mortgagee was proceeding to foreclose, and by answer accepted the offer. On the hearing, he insisted that the fund was deficient, and that ptf. should by the decree undertake to redeem him. Held, that ptf. was only bound to undertake to pay him whatever additional costs and expenses ptf.'s suit had caused him.—Att.-Gen. v. Redmond, 2 Jon. 254. (E.E.)

6. An insolvent mortgagor's assignee was made deft. in a foreclosure suit, but died during its progress. The mortgaged premises were the mortgagor's only property. To induce one of the mortgagor's other creditors to become his assignee, ptf. undertook to pay him his costs in the suit. Held, that ptf. was entitled to them as part of his own costs.—Maxwell v. Smyth, Jo. & Ca. 72. (E.E.)

7. Costs of a creditor bona fide carrying the decree into effect for the benefit of all parties, and making the fund available, are an exception to the general rule, that ptf.'s costs stand in the same degree with his demand. The rule in Taylor v. Gorman, 1 Dr. & Wal. 235, n., qualified.—Kelly v. K., 1 I. E. R. 317. (R.)

8. Ptf. in a creditor's suit is entitled, in priority to the demands of the other creditors, to the costs incurred by him bona fide, and for the benefit of all parties, and with their assent, in making out title to the premises decreed to be sold.

Semble—He is entitled to his costs in the cause in equal priority with his demand; but, if by his exertions, he realises a personal fund for the benefit of all the creditors, he is entitled to his costs as the first charge upon that fund.—Maguire v. Dundass, 1 I. E. R. 25; Jo. & Ca. 2. (E.E.)

9. By the Court's settled practice, ptf. in a creditor's suit is entitled to costs only according to the priority of his demand.—Gray v. Crawford, 1 I. E. R. 274; Jo. & Ca. 174. (E.E.)

10. Ptf., one of many creditors under a composition deed, filed a bill to carry its trusts into execution. He was obliged to make all the parties to the deed defts., besides several scheduled creditors who had refused to join as co-ptfs. Held, that notwithstanding the suit was, in its result, altogether for debts,' benefit, and the fund had been made available by ptf.'s exertions, still, according to this Court's settled practice, ptf. was only entitled to be paid his costs in equal priority with his demand.—Taylor v. Gorman, 1 Dr. & Wal. 235, n. (C.)

1. A judgment creditor of the tenant for life filed his bill against those representing the estate, and an elegit creditor of the inheritance in possession; and prayed an account of what, without wilful default, he might have received. It appearing to the Court that the conduct of the ptf. was inequitable, as the account prayed for by him might have been taken in a Court of Law—Held, that the elegit creditor was entitled to his costs as against the ptf.

The ptf. having filed a bill against the remainderman, the Court gave no costs to any party, so far as the suit related to the construction of the will of the party creating the entail; but gave the remainderman the costs of the residue of the suit against the ptf.—Flood v. Digby, 2 Jones, 582. (E.E.)

2. If lands have been sold under a decree, and judgment creditors, knowing that the fund cannot reach them, necessitate the filing a supplemental bill against them, they will not get their costs in that suit.

Semle—They will be compelled to pay the costs occasioned by such vexatious conduct.—Barrett v. Bermingham, 1 I. E. R. 417; S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

3. In a creditor's suit the heir-at-law of the debtor, who has been decreed his costs out of the surplus fund, cannot have them against the ptf. if that fund prove deficient.—Hunt v. Bateman, Long. & T. 379. (E.E.)

4. When there are several creditors' suits, and proceedings in the last instituted are stayed, and the ptf. ordered to go in under the decree in the first cause, and prove his demand, including his costs properly and necessarily incurred, and the costs which he should be liable to pay to the several debts, he is personally liable, in the first instance, to pay the costs of the debts, who are not obliged to wait until funds are allocated or realised in the first cause. But when the restrained cause, though unnecessary, was not vexatiously instituted, and the ptf. had been compelled to pay the costs of some of the debts., the Court ordered the receiver in the first cause to pay to him the amount of the costs which he had been so compelled to pay.—Loftis v. Forbes, 2 I. E. R. 443. (R.)

5. The costs incurred by a ptf. in litigating and reviving the demand of a creditor, which is prior to the ptf.'s, and for the payment of which, with costs, the decree provides, are not costs which the ptf. is entitled to be paid in priority to the demand of such creditor.—Jauge v. Jackson, Fl. & K. 45. (R.)

6. A creditor who proves his demand under a decree to administer assets, will not be heard upon the final hearing of the cause to ask for costs incurred by him in the office in reducing the ptf.'s demand; there being no special case made for that purpose by the report.—Loughny v. Dillon, 3 I. E. R. 55. (E.E.)

7. A simple contract creditor, who institutes a suit to administer personal assets, and seeks to have his costs as against judgment and specialty creditors who may come in under the decree, ought to make a case for it by his bill, and show that a suit was necessary for the due administration of the assets, and payment of his debt; or else that, by his exertions, he has made a fund available, which would otherwise have been lost.—Drake v. Ford, 3 I. E. R. 56. (E.E.)

8. Before the passing of the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, a judgment creditor proceeded by elegit and inquisition, but was kept out of possession of the estate by prior creditors. He afterwards obtained an order extending a receiver obtained on the petition of a prior creditor to the matter of his petition on his judgment. Held, that he was entitled to the costs of the proceedings at law in the same priority with his demand.—Barry v. Wilkinson, 3 I. E. R. 121. (E.E.)

9. When the bill prayed a sale, and account and payment of prior and contemporaneous incumbrances, and a prior elegit creditor had put in an answer of unreasonable length, the Court directed that the Remembrancer should, in taxing the costs, have regard to the length of the answer.—O'Brien v. O'B., Jo. & Ca. 193. (E.E.)

10. The final decree ordered a debt. to have his costs against the ptf., and the ptf. to have them over with his own costs, out of the money arising from the sale. The ptf. was a puisne reported creditor. The Court refused to pay him the amount of those costs (for payment of which the defendant was proceeding against him by attachment), out of rents brought in by the receiver; but stayed the debt's proceedings, until further order. Such a decree for costs is not to be enforced against the ptf., unless the fund be insufficient, or he be guilty of laches in the prosecution of the suit.—Crofts v. Poe, 3 I. E. R. 151. (E.E.)

11. A creditor who has been stayed from proceeding in his suit, and compelled to come in under the decree in another suit, will not be ordered to contribute to the costs of the ptf. in that suit, as between attorney and client. The rule only applies to persons coming in voluntarily under the decree.—O'Brien v. Fitzgerald, 3 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

12. Costs of the suit given to the ptf., a simple contract creditor, in priority to the demands of judgment and specialty creditors; the suit being necessary, and having been properly conducted.—Jameson v. Farrer, 3 I. E. R. 346. (E.E.)

1. Creditors who prove under a decree obtained in a suit instituted by a legatee to administer the assets of the deceased, are not bound to contribute to the difference between the ptf.'s costs between attorney and client, and party and party.—Lynch v. Skerrett, 3 I. E. R. 504. (E.E.)

2. By the settled practice of the Court of Ch., a ptf. in a creditor's suit, is entitled to his costs only in the priority of his demand, except such costs as have been plainly incurred for the benefit of the parties in the cause, such as making out title to the estate to be sold.—Nelson v. Brady, 1 Con. & L. 239; 2 Dr. & War. 148; 4 I. E. R. 359. (C.)

3. On a bill filed by the executors of a judgment creditor to raise the amount due on the judgment, it appeared that the ptf. were overpaid. Held, that they should pay the costs of the suit.—Graves v. Wright, 1 Con. & L. 267; 2 Dr. & War. 77. (C.)

4. The demand of the creditor having been paid off in the progress of the suit, is no reason for depriving him of his costs.—Wynne v. Brady, 5 I. E. R. 239. (E.E.)

5. The costs of unnecessarily re-docketing judgments not to be allowed.—Macken v. Newcomen, 7 I. E. R. 114; 2 Jon. & L. 16. (C.)

6. Construction of the Rule as to judgment creditors. In a suit instituted before the G. Rule of June 1842, the ptf. having served judgment creditors, defts. not in possession by receivers, with subpoena to hear judgment, were decreed to pay the costs of their appearing, and not to have them over.

If they appeared without subpoena, they should bear their own costs.

Such of the judgment creditors as had answered since that Rule, decreed to pay their own costs, unless they had been served with a notice to press, in which case the ptf. were decreed to pay them.

Judgment creditors having receivers, entitled to answer and appear, and to have their costs.—Bank of Ireland v. O'Malley, 7 I. E. R. 121. (C.)

7. More than six years' interest cannot be recovered on a judgment affecting only a reversion, on the ground of the lands having been in possession of a prior incumbrancer, when the possession of the prior incumbrancer (whose charge overrode both life estate and inheritance) was during the continuance of the previous life estate.

Judgment creditors made notice parties, who put in an answer relying on a point which might have dismissed the bill, but afterwards availed themselves of the decree, and proved their demands under it—Held, entitled only to such costs as they would have had without answering.

Semle—A bill by a judgment creditor, for a sale in the lifetime of the conuzor, cannot be sustained as against judgment creditors whose judgments are before November 1840.—Vincent v. Going, 7 I. E. R. 463; 1 Jon. & L. 697. (C.)

8. Ptf., in a suit in the Exchequer, discontinued that suit before decree, without obtaining an order for payment of the costs incurred in it; and came in under the decree in a suit in this Court. Held, that this Court has not power in this suit to give the costs in the Exchequer suit.—Finlay v. Heeran, 7 I. E. R. 485. (R.)

9. A creditor instituted a suit against the real and personal representatives of the principal debtor, and against one of his sureties (omitting the other surety), and obtained a decree to account. He afterwards filed a supplemental bill against the representatives of the other surety, but since they did not derive any benefit from the proceedings in the original suit, and since ptf. might have framed it so as to have obtained therein the relief sought by the supplemental bill—Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of the original suit, as against the representatives of the second surety.—Cuffe v. Young, 2 Jon. & L. 17. (C.)

10. If the person liable to pay tithe rent-charge fail to do so, within ten days after service of notice, as prescribed by 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, the rentcharger is then entitled to prepare his petition; and is justified in refusing to receive the arrears without the costs incurred in preparing his petition and incidental thereto.

What are reasonable costs in such case.—Macartney v. Graydon, 8 I. E. R. 99. (R.)

11. The practice of giving priority to costs of resisting claims in creditors' suits observed on.—Carroll v. Darcy, 10 I. E. R. 321. (C.)

12. When a receiver has been appointed in a suit, and a judgment creditor who is a notice party, and might obtain full relief in the suit, presents a petition to extend the receiver, he shall not have the costs of the petition, though there be a suspicion of collusion between the ptf. and deft. in the suit.—Honan v. Galway; Clift v. Galway, 1 I. Jur. 36. (E.E.)

13. Defts., as judgment creditors who had been served with a notice to consent, to be paid according to the priority, made to pay costs.—Burke v. Killikelly, 1 I. C. R. 1. (C.)

14. An order was made in 1847, superseding a Commission of Bankruptcy against a party, with costs, to be paid by the petitioning creditors. Before those costs were paid, that party was, in 1849, discharged under the Act for the Relief of Ins. Debtors. Held, that the assignee in the insolvency matter, who had been one of the petitioning creditors in the bankruptcy matter, took the costs under the order of 1847, subject to the lien of the solicitor who had obtained that order; and could not be allowed to set off against that lien a debt due to himself by the insolvent when those costs were incurred. Upon motion, the Court varied the order of 1847, by directing the petitioning creditors to pay the solicitor the amount of the taxed costs.—In re Petticrew, 1 I. C. R. 102. (C.)

1. In an administration suit by a judgment creditor, when the ptf. recovers part of his demand rateably with other judgment creditors, he is entitled to be paid his full costs out of the fund in the first instance.—Perry v. Magrath, 6 I. Jur. 349. (C.)

2. A decree declared the ptf. and other creditors entitled to a charge upon lands. There was an appeal to the House of Lords, which was resisted by the ptf. at his own expense. The decree was affirmed without costs. Before the appeal was decided, a final decree was pronounced in the Court of Ch. here, directing a sale, and giving the ptf. his costs in the same priority as his demand.

Semle—That the ptf. could not in any way have obtained the costs of resisting the appeal as part of his costs in the cause.

Held, that as the other creditors had an interest in, and had derived a benefit from, his resistance to the appeal, they were bound to contribute to the costs reported to them, rateably in proportion to the amount of their respective demands.—[Affirming Rolls decision: 4 I. C. R. 182.]—Hamilton v. Syngé, 4 I. C. R. 551; 7 I. Jur. 121. (C.)

3. When there are no incumbrances prior to his, a petitioner having the carriage of the suit is entitled to his costs out of a fund the produce of real estate, in the first instance, and in priority to the demands and the costs of creditors, in equal priority with him.—[Taylor v. Gorman, (1 Dr. & Wal. 235, n.) observed on.]—Watson v. Fitzpatrick, 11 I. C. R. 213. (R.)

4. On a compensation motion the Court will not allow, out of the funds, the costs of creditors opposing it, when the estate is duly protected, on the motion by the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings.—Clendinning v. Brett, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (L.E.C.)

5. Administration refused to a creditor who had cited next-of-kin to accept and refuse, though the estate was insolvent, and considerable delay had occurred on the next-of-kin's part in applying for a grant; but the creditor was allowed his costs out of the estate.—Forster v. Murphy, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 135. (P.)

6. One interested as a creditor, &c., is not in general entitled to the costs of citing the next-of-kin to accept or refuse administration, if the latter appear and accept, unless a conditional decree has been made; and unless such person has cited all the prior parties the 31st Rule (Contentious) does not apply, which directs him to enter a side-bar rule that the deft. do extract within fourteen days, or in default the administration to be given to the ptf.—Wade v. Stephens, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 158. (P.)

XXX. 10. o. Cross Cause. [See PRACTICE, XXX, 1, Generally.]

XXX. 10. o.* Crown.

7. The deft. demurred to the inquisition and return of the sheriff to a writ of extent. The demurrer was allowed.

The Crown applied for liberty to quash the former proceedings, and to issue a new extent. Held, that the Court might make it part of the terms upon which they would grant the application—that the Crown should pay the deft. the costs of the former proceedings.—The Queen v. Perrin, 4 I. E. R. 429. (Rev. Exch.)

XXX. 10. p. Decree for Administration of Assets. [See PRACTICE, XXX. 10. c., ADMINISTRATION SUITS.]

XXX. 10. q. Demurrer or Plea allowed; submitted to; overruled; or ordered to stand for Answer.

8. A demurrer to that part of a bill which sought ptf.'s costs as administrator, was overruled. Held, that the ptf. was entitled to the costs of the hearing.—Howlett v. Lambert, 2 I. E. R. 254. (R.)

XXX. 10. r. Discovery.

9. Deft. demurred to the bill, on five grounds, one of which suggested a fact dehors the bill, and another contained an inadmissible averment. Demurrer overruled. Held, that, nevertheless, at the hearing, deft. was entitled to demur ore tenus, and newly assign some of the original causes; but if he did so, should pay the costs of the hearing.—Daly v. Kirwan, 1 I. E. R. 156. (R.)

XXX. 10. s. Dower.

10. When a petition is presented by a widow, who is guardian of her minor children, to have her right to dower ascertained, and the amount paid out of the annual rents, the heir-at-law being a minor, the dowress is entitled, when her right is declared, to have the costs of her petition, and the proceedings thereunder, out of the minor's estate.—In re Purcell's Minors, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 225. (R.)

11. A., on his marriage with C. in 1804, conveyed lands, of which he was equitable tenant in tail, to B., as an indemnity against incumbrances on other lands purchased by B. from A. On his father's death afterwards, the legal fee descended on A. In 1813, C. joined A. in conveying the estates to the use of himself, his heirs, and assigns—habendum, free from dower. They levied a fine to the uses of this deed, whereby A. had charged lands held p. a. v., with an annuity of £200, by way of jointure, for C. After A.'s death, these lands proved only sufficient to pay prior incumbrances. C. filed against all persons (except bona fide purchasers for value since 1813) interested in the lands, a bill claiming dower, and for an account. Held, that, as against B., the bill should be dismissed with costs; but that the account should be decreed against the heirs of those claiming as volunteers under A. As against them also the bill would have been dismissed, if, before levying the fine, the legal fee had been actually conveyed for indemnity purposes; the Court would not have had jurisdiction to relieve against the fine.—Loyd v. L., 2 Con. & L. 592. (C.)

XXX. 10. t. Executors, Administrators, Trustees, Committees, &c. [See also PRACTICE, XXX. 10. c., ADMON. SUITS.]

1. An executor, filing a bill against agents of his testator, is liable for the balance and costs only to the amount of assets, the institution of the suit not being an admission of assets.

A submission to arbitration by an executor is not per se an admission of assets.—Mocher v. Frazer & Reed, Beat. Rep. 578. (C.)

2. A solicitor's executors were, Held, entitled to costs of a suit instituted by them to raise the amount of judgments given for untaxed bills of costs, on account of the dealings between the conuzor and his devisee with the conuzee, though more than one-sixth was struck off one bill on taxation, and though deft. had offered a reference to arbitration, and to pay whatever might be found due after taxation, and after all proper credits had been allowed.—Humfrey v. Gurley, 1 Dr. & Wal. 183. (C.)

3. A trustee who refuses to join in his co-trustee's answer, and does not put in a different answer, is not entitled to his costs.—Young v. Scott, 1 Jones, 71. (E.E.)

4. Under a decree to sell lands, a trustee for the inheritor was declared the purchaser. There was a report of bad title. Held, that he was entitled to his costs out of the fund in Court, the inheritor having been ignorant of his own title, and never had the means of knowing it; and he having acted in good faith.—Kirby v. O'Shee, 1 Jones, 164. (E.E.)

5. In a creditor's administration suit, the deceased's executor is entitled to his costs, though the estate proves insufficient to pay the debts. To such a case, the rule regulating costs according to priorities is inapplicable.—Harwood v. Bland, 2 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

6. When ptf. brings before the Court, as deft., a party, named executor, who had refused to act, and states that fact in his bill; that deft. is entitled as against ptf. to the costs of an answer in the nature of a disclaimer.—Weldon v. W., 1 Dr. & Wal. 379. (C.)

7. A demurrer to so much of the bill as sought an account, &c., of ptf.'s costs and expenses as administrator was overruled. Held, that ptf. was therefore entitled to his costs of the hearing.—Howlett v. Lambert, 2 I. E. R. 254. (R.)

8. When a cause is continued after the death of an executor who has been a party, he will be declared entitled to his costs up to the time of his death. The administrator de bonis non of the original testator will not be declared entitled to those costs.—Wood v. St. George, 1 Con. & L. 365. (C.)

9. When a legatee is admittedly entitled to a fund under a will, but claims more, and threatens a suit for payment, the executors are entitled to retain, to meet the costs of the suit, the fund to which the legatee's title is admitted.—Ridge v. Newton, 1 Con. & L. 381; 2 Dr. & War. 239; 5 I. E. R. 389. (C.)

10. The executor of a mortgagor was not entitled to costs against the ptf. in a foreclosure suit when there were no personal assets of the mortgagor forthcoming, and there appeared to be a deficient fund.—Grace v. Lord Mountnorris, 2 Dr. & War. 432. (C.)

11. The trustees in this case allowed their costs out of the fund.—The Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.) —[The case is reported in 1 Dr. & War. 353. (C.); Affirmed, 2 H. Lds. Cas. 837.]

12. An English creditor of an intestate employed Irish solicitors, carrying on business in partnership, to recover his debt out of the arrears of an annuity and a judgment debt, the property of the intestate, to which three estates were liable. The solicitors obtained administration in this country to the intestate for the English creditor; instituted a suit in his name to recover the amount of the arrears and the judgment; and obtained from the administrator a power of attorney authorising them to act for him in all matters connected with the administration. The owners of two of the estates charged paid their proportions of the sum to the solicitors; obtained releases from them in the name of the administrator; and were struck out of the suit. The owner of the third estate refused to pay his share; and by his answer, filed before the others had paid their shares, insisted that the other two estates were exclusively liable to the demand of the ptf. An amended bill was afterwards filed against him, making the owners of the other two estates parties. Before the suit was heard the administrator died. His executors proved his will in this country, and attempted to obtain administration de bonis non to the intestate. They failed in obtaining it. It was granted to the owner of one of the estates charged with the annuity, who had paid her share of the arrears, she being one of the next-of-kin to the intestate. After the grant of administration, the Irish solicitors furnished an account to the executors of their client. From that account it appeared that they had retained large sums out of the money paid to them in the course of the suit; and had incurred costs exceeding by a small sum the entire amount of the money retained by them. The bills of costs were furnished at the same time. They contained charges for the expense of proving the will in this country; of the attempt made to obtain administration de bonis non to the intestate; and charges, to a very large amount, for registry searches, made under the advice of counsel, for the purposes of the suit, some of which appeared to have been made after the release of the owner of two of the estates, against those estates. That account was acquiesced in by the executors, although there was no formal settlement of it, nor any taxation of the costs. The administrator de bonis non of the intestate having petitioned to tax those bills—Held, affirming an order of the M. R., that the settlement with the executors of the deceased administrator was not a bar to her right to a taxation.

That the solicitors, acting under a power of attorney from the administrator, were bound to apply the moneys received by them in payment only of the charges properly allowable against the assets of the intestate.

When a trustee employs a solicitor in matters concerning the trust estate, and pays him out of the proceeds of that estate, the c. q. t. is not entitled to have the solicitor's bill of costs taxed; but the trustee will only be allowed in his account such charges as were fair and reasonable. — Lady Langford v. Mahony, 5 I. E. R. 569; 4 Dr. & War. 81; 2 Con. & L. 317. (C.)

1. When the misapplication of the funds of a public body has gone on for a great length of time, and no imputation was cast upon the trustees, they, though removed, were allowed their costs out of the fund.—Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.)

2. Trustees will be allowed the costs of separate answers, if the Master finds that the circumstances were such as to justify them in so answering. — Dudgeon v. Gormley, 2 Con. & L. 422; 4 Dr. & War. 158. (C.)

3. When a petition was presented by a co-trustee, under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, to appoint a person as trustee in the place of the other trustee, who was out of the jurisdiction, and had not been heard of for twenty years, costs were refused to be granted to the petitioner. — In re Chambers, 3 Dr. & War. 496. (C.)

4. Defts. (trustees), who had severally filed similar demurrers, instead of joining in one demurrer, not allowed the costs of the demurrers, although successful. — Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

5. Costs given to a trustee up to the decree to account only, when his account had been much reduced in the office.—Fozier v. Andrews, 7 I. E. R. 595; 2 Jon. & L. 199. (C.)

6. A trustee, who was required by the bill to answer certain interrogatories, answered them and disclaimed. Held, that he was only entitled to the costs of the disclaimer.—Murphy v. O'Shea, 8 I. E. R. 829; 2 Jon. & L. 422. (C.)

7. A deft. having died after appearance, but before answer, was struck out of the bill with costs, by side-bar rule. His administrator was made a party by amendment. Held, the administrator was entitled to the costs incurred by the deceased deft.—Short v. Carroll, 9 I. E. R. 468. (R.)

8. The costs of a suit to set aside a deed for fraud will not be given against a solicitor, who was a party to the fraud, and is a party to the suit in respect of other liabilities, unless they are prayed against him by the bill. — Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

9. A creditor presented a petition. A petition was subsequently presented by the trustees of the debtor's estate, who served notice of cause against the order granted to the first petitioner, which notice was withdrawn, the notice of withdrawal making no offer as to costs. Held, that the petitioner was entitled to his costs generally, to be paid personally by the trustees.—In re Scott, 2 I. Jur. 8. (I.E.C.)

10. W., having made a settlement with a general power of revocation, made a will by which, after reciting that he had been induced to execute the settlement contrary to his intentions, and that it was fraudulently obtained from him, he directed its trustees and executors to use their best exertions and take all steps necessary to have the deed cancelled. He then disposed of the property included in the deed. Held, a good revocation under the power.

In a suit between claimants under a will and an inconsistent deed executed by the testator, the costs are not to be paid out of the assets, on the ground that the difficulty was created by the testator; but are subject to the ordinary rule in adverse suits.

Costs given against a trustee under the trust deed, which was held to have been revoked, when he had also a beneficial interest, and insisted on its validity. — Irwin v. Rogers, 12 I. E. R. 159. (C.)

11. A., who was deft. as acting executor, died. The Court gave leave to the ptf. to amend, by making the other executors parties in the place of A., without paying A.'s costs.—Rye v. Coppinger, 12 I. E. R. 314. (R.)

12. A lunatic claimed as heir-at-law of T., who had devised estates to trustees for charitable purposes by a testamentary instrument, of which the validity as a will was impeached. A suit was instituted. An issue to try the validity of the instrument was directed as necessary to free the lunatic's estate from doubts. The trustees were directed to conduct the suit as ptf's. The verdict was against the will. Held, that, though the trustees were not entitled to their costs under the decree, yet the Court could, on petition, give them their costs out of the lunatic's estate.—In re Turnley, 12 I. E. R. 581. (C.)

1. When trustees have presented a petition for the purpose of lodging money in Court under the 11 & 12 Vic., c. 68, they need not present a second petition in order to ascertain the costs. The trustees should retain their probable amount; and, if upon taxation any balance remains in their hands, it may be lodged in Court by side-bar order.—In re Desmond, 2 I. Jur. 21. (R.)

2. An executor took out probate, the entire personal estate being included in a mortgage by the testator. A bill to foreclose was filed by the mortgagee, in which the executor necessarily incurred expense. Held, on application for these costs, that the executor was not entitled to them unless there were personal assets after payment of the mortgage.—Marshall v. M'Areavy, 2 I. Jur. 105. (C.)

3. Trustees of real estate, upon trust, to sell to pay prior charges, are entitled to costs of a suit to carry out the trusts; but only out of the surplus, after payment of the charges.

When the fund was deficient, the Court refused them costs.—White v. Villiers, 3 I. C. R. 125. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement, £1000 were settled in trust for the husband and wife for their lives, and the life of the survivor, and then for all and every, or such one or more, exclusively of the other or others of the children or child of the intended marriage, or the issue of any such children or child who might happen to die leaving such issue, at such ages, days, or times; and if more than one, in such shares and proportions, &c., as the wife should appoint; in default, as the husband should appoint. The husband covenanted to effect a policy upon his life, and to assign it to the trustees upon the same trusts. There were six children. The wife died. The husband appointed the fund and policy, and assigned his life interest therein to the eldest daughter, who had just attained age. The trustees, acting under the advice of counsel, refused to transfer the fund and policy to the appointee. Circumstances were stated in their answer calculated to excite some suspicion as to the bona fides of the appointment; but the validity of the appointment itself and assignment were not impeached. Held, that the trustees were not entitled to the costs of a suit brought against them by the daughter to compel the transfer, though they were not decreed to pay the costs of the suit.—Mallet v. Osborne, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 72. (C.)

5. A trustee, who has acted fairly and bona fide, will not be deprived of his costs of a suit against him to compel him to account, merely because a claim made by him has been disallowed in the office, and the Master has found him a debtor on the account, if the petitioner's claim against him has been greatly reduced.—Norris v. Duckworth, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 188. (R.)

6. The trustees of a bridge, authorised by statute to levy a sum out of the county, with the approval, and in accordance with a resolution of the Grand Jury, brought into Parliament a bill to enable them to levy a further sum. The bill was thrown out by the Lords, for non-compliance with the standing orders of the House. Held, that the trustees could not be allowed the costs of the bill.—The Att.-Gen. v. Le Hunte, 8 I. C. R. 437. (R.)

7. A testator named his wife and two gentlemen, who relinquished the office, testamentary guardians of his children. The Court appointed their mother their sole guardian, who, at her death, desired that her executor and another might be guardians. The Court, however, nominated the two gentlemen originally named. The executor of the mother, in accordance with her wish, opposed, though unsuccessfully, that appointment. Held, that he should have credit for his costs incurred in that opposition.—Johnstone; re Johnstones, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 27. (R.)

8. An executor, who propounded a will, was also residuary legatee. The residuary clause would pass nearly £6000. The will was drawn by two R. C. clergymen, of whom one was a total stranger to the testator, V., and the other was the executor's son. V., very advanced in life, died the day after the execution of the will.

V.'s sister and sole next-of-kin, who impeached the entire will, had been privy to its drawing, but not allowed to be present. The verdict confirmed the will, save the residuary clause, which it condemned. Held, that V. had been wilfully misled by the drawers touching the meaning of the residuary clause; that the general principle regarding executors' costs of proving a will did not apply; and that each party should bear his own costs.

Semble, contra—If the ptf. had omitted from his pleading the residuary clause, or if the deft. had admitted the will, except that clause.—Kelly v. K., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 227. (P.)

9. When executors and residuary legatees under an earlier will impeached a later one, on the grounds of incapacity of the testatrix, and undue influence and fraud practised upon her, and not only failed to sustain those pleas, but were themselves by the evidence plainly guilty of fraud and contrivance in the preparation of the earlier will, they were condemned in the costs of the suit, though they were put forward to sustain charitable gifts in that will. Next-of-kin being also legatees under such fraudulent will, and not impeaching it, but impeaching the last will, which was decreed for—refused costs. But next-of-kin, not being legatees in and impeaching such will, allowed the costs of the pleadings, &c. The Court, considering it unnecessary for their protection to appear, none of the next-of-kin were allowed the costs of the trial of the issue.—Gamble v. Robinson, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 55. (P.)

10. A. devised real estate in trust for her husband, for his life; and directed the trustees to sell and convey the property absolutely to him for a named sum, applicable to the purposes of the will, provided that he declared, within one year after her death, that he accepted the proposal.

Semble—The right of pre-emption to him was a gift. The trustees, therefore, were not bound to make out title to him, nor were they entitled to receive, out of A.'s assets, and to the prejudice of the persons entitled to the residue, the costs of making out title.

Solicitors having been employed by the trustees to make out the title, the costs were allowed on taxation against the trustees, personally, under the Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 53), ss. 3, 4.—In re Davison & Torrens, 17 I. C. R. 7. (R.)

1. Costs of appearing by counsel at the argument are not allowed to a trustee who has brought in the fund under the Trustee Relief Act, when all the beneficiaries are free from disability, and the case has been fully argued on their behalf, although the contrary practice prevails in England.

The costs of lodgment, and of the motion for costs, will be given.—Lockhart's Trust, ex parte Lady Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

XXX. 10. u. Exceptions, Allowed or Overruled.

2. If exceptions to the report be argumentative, the Court will visit with costs the excepting party.—Vereker v. Lord Gort, 1 I. E. R. 175. (C.)

3. When objections to a Master's report are filed and allowed, if the objector neglects to get a Master's order for payment to him of the costs occasioned by the objections, and subsequently moves the Rolls for payment of those costs, he must pay the costs of the motion, even though allowed the costs of the objections.

When objections are argued in the office, the Master should make a ruling under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, touching the costs. If he reserves the question of costs the, M. R. will not make any order concerning them, except upon a special certificate of the Master.—Pepper v. Foster, 5 I. Jur. 177. (R.)

4. When, on exceptions to the Master's report, an issue is directed, upon which a verdict favourable to the excepting party is given, the ordinary rule respecting the costs of exceptions applies, and each party must bear his own costs of the issue.—Nixon v. Dane, 6 I. C. R. 226. (C.)

XXX. 10. v. Heir-at-law: Next-of-kin.

5. A mortgagee's infant heir is entitled to the costs incurred on a reference, under the 1 W. 4, c. 60.—Earl of Miltown v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 338. (R.)

6. A bill was filed to recover a judgment debt out of the conuzor's real and personal estates. Held, that deft., a minor, the conuzor's heiress-at-law, was not entitled as against

ptf. to the costs of putting in an answer.—Downes v. Hogan, 2 I. E. R. 112. (E.E.)

7. In a creditor's suit the debtor's heir-at-law, who has been decreed costs out of the surplus fund, cannot, if it proves deficient, have them against ptf.—Hunt v. Bateman, Long. & T. 379. (E.E.)

8. Under the decree in an administration suit, the inheritor's solicitor was declared entitled to be paid his costs out of the surplus, if any. Held, that, under the special circumstances, he was entitled to his costs, though the fund proved deficient.—Grey v. Mathews, 3 I. E. R. 430; Fl. & K. 309. (R.)

9. When the heir-at-law, being made a deft., impeaches the testator's will by his answer, although the decree afterwards establish the will, he is entitled to his costs.—Wilson v. Simpson, 7 I. E. R. 336. (E.E.)

10. A bill was filed in this Court by the conuzee to recover the amount of a judgment, to which the real and personal representatives of the conuzor were made parties. Held, that the defts., co-heiresses-at-law of the conuzor, who, by their answer, did not claim any interest in the premises affected by the judgment, were not entitled as against the ptf. to their costs of the suit; but only against the surplus fund arising from the sale of the premises decreed to be sold.—Rutherford v. Cottam, 8 I. E. R. 391. (E.E.)

11. The heir-at-law of a mortgagor is not entitled to his costs against the ptf. in a creditor's suit.—Pepper v. Foster, 10 I. E. R. 352. (C.)

12. Although an heir-at-law may contest an action brought to recover property, which he would inherit if no valid disposition had been made aliunde, and on failing will generally be entitled to his costs, when he abandons his position as heir-at-law, and defends in a different capacity, he falls within the rule as to ordinary defts., and the costs abide the event of the trial.—Ffrench v. F., 2 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

13. V., having produced to two persons a paper, told them that it was his will, and requested them to witness his execution of it. The paper was folded so that only a blank space at the bottom was visible to the witnesses; the writing, if any, was hidden.

One witness deposed that he saw not any trace of writing inside the paper. The other, averring that it contained some writing, could not say what that writing was.

V., in their presence, signed his name on the blank portion. They attested the paper in his presence, and in that of each other. Held, a valid will.

The next-of-kin did not call any witnesses. Held, that they were entitled to their costs out of the estate.—Byrne v. Hogan, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

1. The executor and general residuary legatee allowed the mother and next-of-kin of the testatrix, who had a jointure out of the lands, to enjoy the whole profits thereof for her life, and did not prove the will; and the mother took out letters of administration to her daughter as to an intestate. In a suit to prove the will after the mother's death—Held, that the next-of-kin of the testatrix were entitled to their costs of seeing it formally proved.—Giles v. Dickenson, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 272. (P.)

2. Next-of-kin, caveators, who appeared, but did not plead, are not liable to costs at suit of an executor propounding a will, and moving to dismiss the suit for want of a plea. Cliff v. Jones, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 324. (P.)

3. When the heir-at-law successfully resists probate of a will of real estate, the Court of Probate has no jurisdiction to charge the real estate with the costs of the litigation.—Newton v. N., 13 I. C. R. 245; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 129. (C.A.)

4. An heir-at-law, who fails to establish the contents of an alleged lost will, is not exempted from costs, though he swears that he propounded the will from representations made to him touching its validity, which representations he believed.

A will propounded, and impeached only by a plea alleging a later will, cannot be decreed for unless some evidence of execution be given; an affidavit will suffice.—Whitney v. W., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 392. (P.)

5. When a will of an aged person was drawn from instructions taken by her spiritual adviser, who, though not taking any beneficial interest under it, yet took most extensive fiduciary powers as sole trustee and executor for the benefit of the next-of-kin; and an alleged memorandum containing such instructions was not forthcoming; and the will was drawn from such memorandum by the attorney of the clergyman, who did not see the testatrix in reference thereto, nor witness it; and the draft made by the attorney was not shown to the testatrix nor produced at the trial, the Court gave the next-of-kin their costs out of the estate, though the will was established.—Keogh v. Wall, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 418. (P.)

6. The rule of the Prerogative Court as to favouring next-of-kin as to costs still holds; and therefore in this case, on account of the great age of the testator and the peculiar position of the principal legatee, the Court thought the next-of-kin should be excused from paying costs, though they had pleaded incapacity and undue influence, and withdrew from the case during its progress.—Douce v. Reed, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (P.)

7. An heir-at-law who pleaded fraud and undue influence as to the making of a codicil, and did not make due enquiries of the drawer of the will and others as to the circumstances; and who put forward a witness whose evidence was palpably untrue, and known to be so by the deft., who failed altogether in his opposition; was condemned in costs. An heir-at-law stands on the same ground as to costs as a next-of-kin.—Campbell v. C., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (P.)

8. Next-of-kin, legatees under a fraudulent will, not impeaching it; but impeaching a later will, which was decreed for; refused costs.

Next-of-kin, not legatees in, but impeaching the fraudulent will, allowed costs of the pleadings, &c. The Court, considering it unnecessary for their protection to appear, none of the next-of-kin were allowed costs of the trial of the issue.—Gamble v. Robinson, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 55. (P.)

9. A legatee, who is next-of-kin, impeaching as legatee a later will, because of want of capacity or undue influence, and failing, is, in general, liable to costs.

Next-of-kin are more favoured regarding costs.

Three wills, differing materially from each other, were written within four days. The latest will was established; but the next-of-kin, who had intervened, got his costs.—Doyle v. Leary, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (P.)

XXX. 10. w. Husband and Wife.

10. Bill to foreclose a mortgage vested in trustees for a wife's separate use. The husband was made a deft. Held, that he was entitled to his costs out of the fund.—Dillon v. M'Carthy, 3 I. E. R. 192. (E.E.)

11. When a bill filed by husband and wife is dismissed with costs, the husband is alone liable for the costs, although the bill related exclusively to the separate property of the wife.—Hackett v. Farrell, 4 I. E. R. 515. (R.)

12. When husband and wife file a bill respecting the real property of the wife, and the husband dies before the decree, the wife surviving is not liable for the costs of this suit.—Johnson v. Biron, 5 I. E. R. 154. (E.E.)

13. When the entire of a fund in Court being the wife's chose in action, is put under settlement for the benefit of the husband and wife, and their issue, the costs of the settlement, &c., cannot be paid out of the fund, but must be defrayed by the husband.—Harpur v. Ball, 8 I. E. R. 580. (R.)

14. In a proceeding in which a married woman and her husband are co-ptfs. or co-petitioners, a sequestration cannot issue for costs against her separate estate. Semble—It is otherwise if she sues by her next-of-kin.—Keogh v. Cathcart, 12 I. E. R. 215. (C.)—[Rev. the Rolls decision; 11 I. E. R. 280.]

15. A person having instituted proceedings in the Consistorial Court to obtain probate of a pretended will; Maria D., a married woman, who was entitled to administration as next-of-kin of E. (in the event of the will being defeated), employed the ptf.s., who were proctors, to appear in her behalf. D., the husband, had no property; but his wife had considerable separate estate, and both wife and husband signed the proxy, authorising the ptf.s. to act in the progress of the suit. The evidence showed that the wife was active during its progress; and two petitions were presented by her, stating that she had employed the ptf.s. as her proctors, and requiring to have their costs taxed, offering to pay same when ascertained. On a bill filed to have the costs as against the wife's separate estate—Held, that the ptf.s. were entitled to have their costs as against the wife's separate estate.

That a deft. could not refer to the contents of a bill as originally filed, to show that the ptf.s. then made a case entirely different from that in the amended bill, now at issue between the parties.

That the costs of such parts of the ptf.s. bill as were altered by amendments, was a matter for taxation.—Swift v. Donnellan, 2 I. Jur. 193. (C.)

XXX. 10. x. Incumbrancers: Mortgagor and Mortgagee, Legal and Equitable.

1. Semble—When a supplemental suit is necessitated by a judgment creditor's refusal to permit his demand to be proved under the decree at the estate's expense, he will be compelled to pay the costs of the supplemental suit.—Averall v. Wade, S. & Sc., 399, n. (R.)

2. If judgment creditors, knowing that the fund cannot reach them, necessitate the filing of a supplemental bill against them, they will not get their costs in that suit.

Semble—They will be compelled to pay the costs occasioned by such vexatious conduct.—Barrett v. Bermingham, S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

3. In an incumbrancer's suit in Ireland—Held, that, according to the practice in Ireland, ptf.s. were entitled to costs only in equal priority with their demands.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198. (C.)

4. Costs of assigning a judgment to a trustee of a conuzee for family purposes, to which assignment the conuzor was not a party, are not chargeable against the conuzor.—D'Arcy v. Burke, 2 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

5. Ptf., one of many creditors in a composition deed, having filed a bill to carry its trusts into execution, was obliged to make all the parties to the deed, and the several scheduled creditors, who had refused to join as co-ptf.s. defts. Held, that, although the suit was altogether for the defts.' benefit, and the fund had been rendered available by ptf.'s exertions, yet, according to the settled practice of the Court, ptf. was entitled to his costs only in equal priority with his demand.—Taylor v. Gorman, 1 Dr. & Wal. 235, n. (C.)

6. Incumbrancers on a life estate, necessary parties to a suit to sell the inheritance to pay off charges prior to that life estate, are entitled to their costs only against that life estate, not against ptf.s. generally.—Ennis v. Brady, 1 Dr. & Wal. 720. (C.)

7. If the mortgagee of lands, subject to an annuity, files a bill to foreclose, and makes the annuitant a party, the bill will be dismissed with costs as to the annuitant, because he is not a necessary party.—Paynes v. Creagh, 2 I. E. R. 190. (C.)

8. In a foreclosure suit, the provisional assignee having been made a deft., in consequence of the insolvency of one of the mortgagors, was declared entitled to his costs against the ptf., the latter to have them over against the fund.—Sproule v. Oats, 2 I. E. R. 323. (E.E.)

9. In a suit to foreclose a mortgage after the death of the mortgagee, it appeared that the mortgagee had bequeathed the mortgage debt in different portions to several persons. Amongst these, £2000 had been bequeathed to A. and B., and the survivor of them, his executors, &c. The personal representative of the survivor had been made a deft., and £2000 were reported due to him. Held, that he was entitled to be paid his costs according to the priority of his demand, notwithstanding that the general rule of the Court in foreclosure suits was, to allow only one set of costs against the inheritance.—Cane v. Brownrigg and others, 2 I. E. R. 413. (E.E.)

10. When a bill was filed to foreclose a mortgage vested in trustees for the separate use of a femme covert, the husband, having been made a deft., was held entitled to his costs out of the fund.—Dillon v. M'Carthy, 3 I. E. R. 192. (E.E.)

11. The value of a settled estate being less than the sum charged thereon for younger children's portions, the inheritor filed a bill against the younger children for a sale of the estate, and, at the final hearing, asked for his costs in priority to their demands. Held, that in the absence of any agreement to that effect he was not entitled to them: overruling Head v. Massey, 2 Moll. 467.—Hughes v. Nash, 3 I. E. R. 495. (E.E.)

12. The costs of incumbrancers upon a fund charged upon an estate are to be borne, not by the estate, but by the fund. — v. Henry, 3 I. E. R. 493. (E.E.)

13. Quære—Is a mortgagee entitled to the costs of a foreclosure suit, prosecuted by him after a notice from the assignee of the mortgagor, a bankrupt, requiring him to proceed to sell the mortgaged premises under the G. O. in bankruptcy of 1832? Held, that the mortgagee was entitled to the costs of the suit, the notice from the assignee not offering to pay him the costs incurred up to the time of its service on him.—Bernard v. Sadler, 4 I. E. R. 61. (E.E.)

1. In 1817 the deft. confessed a judgment; and in 1821 mortgaged his estate as an additional security for the sum due on the judgment. The mortgagee filed a bill, and obtained a decree for a foreclosure and sale, no incumbrances being proved under the decree to account. The purchaser under that decree having objected to the title, on the ground of the existence of judgments prior to the mortgage, the mortgagee called on the judgment creditors, by notice, to prove their demands under the decree; or that he would file a supplemental bill against them, and seek to charge them with the costs thereof. Several creditors proved accordingly. The fund was insufficient for payment of the demands proved. Held, that the ptf. was not entitled to the costs of the suit up to the final decree in the priority of his judgment.

Semble—That as the conuzor of the judgment was alive, he would have been entitled to the costs of the suit in the priority of his judgment, had the judgment creditors voluntarily come in under the decree, and sought to have the benefit of it.—Cooke v. Campbell, 4 I. E. R. 431. (E.E.)

2. A mortgagee, after his mortgage is forfeited, executes several sub-mortgages, and files a bill of foreclosure, making the sub-mortgagees defts. Held, that he is entitled to the costs of the sub-mortgagee against the estate.—Smith v. Chichester, 4 I. E. R. 580; 1 Con. & L. 486; 2 Dr. & War. 393. (C.)

3. The bill in a suit to raise the arrears of a jointure, and to have it decreed well charged upon lands, contained the usual prayer for a sale; but there was no prospect of the annual rents not being sufficient for the payment of all arrears and the accruing gales. Held, that the ptf. should pay the costs of making prior creditors, who would have been necessary only in the event of a sale, parties. Locke v. Darley, 2 Dr. & War. 256; 1 Con. & L. 406. (C.)

4. An insolvent mortgagor's executor is not entitled to his costs against plaintiff in an ordinary suit for foreclosure and sale.—Grace v. Lord Mountmorris, 2 Dr. & War. 432. (C.)

5. The costs of incumbrancers, or their trustees, who are declared entitled to costs, are to be paid out of the fund according to their priorities, in the first instance; and if the fund be deficient, the ptf. may then be required to pay them.—Hall v. Hill, 2 Con. & L. 135; 3 Dr. & War. 69; 5 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

6. The provisional assignee of a bankrupt mortgagor is not entitled to his costs against the mortgagee, the ptf. in a foreclosure suit.—Hughes v. Kelly, 2 Con. & L. 228; 3 Dr. & War. 482. (C.)

7. At the time of the sale, the lands were subject to a mortgage. The purchaser retained the purchase-money, to pay incumbrances affecting the estate. The mortgagee afterwards filed a bill against the assignee of the vendee, to foreclose and sell. That suit was compromised by the mortgagee going into possession. Held, that the mortgagee's costs in that suit were to be paid with his demand out of the estate, and not out of the paid purchase-money.—Croly v. Callaghan, 5 I. E. R. 25. (E.E.)

8. After a decree to account in a foreclosure suit instituted by a puisne mortgagee against a prior mortgagee and mortgagor, the prior mortgagee (in whom the legal estate was vested) assigned his mortgage to R., who, upon his marriage, assigned it to the trustees of his settlement. The ptf. filed a supplemental bill against R. and the persons claiming under his settlement. Held, that the prior mortgagee was entitled to his costs up to the time of the assignment of the mortgage, but not to the costs of appearing upon the final hearing; and that the defts. to the supplemental bill were entitled to the costs of that suit and to the costs in the original suit, subsequent to the assignment of the mortgage, in the same priority with their demand.

The mortgagor was discharged as an insolvent, and his assignee was made a party to the suit. He died, and a new assignee was appointed, who was made a party, and appeared by the same attorney as the former assignee. Held, that the new assignee was entitled to his own costs and those of the former assignee.—Lahey v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 107. (E.E.)

9. In a foreclosure suit, the mortgagor having been discharged under the Insolvent Debtors Act, and the provisional assignee being a deft., the Court refused to order the ptf. to pay and add to his demand the costs of the provisional assignee, as such deft.—Betham v. Mitchell, 5 I. E. R. 218. (R.)

10. A mortgagee who, after the mortgagor's bankruptcy, unnecessarily files a bill to foreclose, will not get more costs than he would have been entitled to by proceeding in the bankruptcy matter. Hogan v. Baird, 4 Dr. & War. 296. (C.)

11. In a suit instituted before the G. R. of June 1842, ptf. having served, with subpoena to hear judgment, judgment creditors, defts. who were not in possession by receivers, were decreed to pay the costs of their appearing, and not to have them over.

The judgment creditors, if they appeared without subpoena, should bear their own costs. Such of them as had answered since that Rule, decreed to pay their own costs, unless they had been served with a notice to press, in which case ptf. were decreed to pay them.

Judgment creditors, having receivers, entitled to answer and appear, and to have their costs.—Bank of Ireland v. O'Malley, 7 I. E. R. 121. (C.)

1. Costs given against a party who, by his want of caution in settling an estate, without giving notice that it was subject to a prior demand, rendered necessary a suit by the prior incumbrancer to establish his rights.—Wise v. W., 2 Jon. & L. 403. (C.)

2. Mortgagee's solicitor, at the time of the loan, perused the title-deeds, and was paid the costs thereof by the mortgagor. After the decree for sale in the mortgage cause, the same solicitor prepared the abstract of title under the 138th G. O., which, though deducing the title to the time of sale, did not contain any new deeds. The Master having refused to allow the costs of perusing the deeds, the Court refused to direct him to review his taxation.—Scott v. King, 7 I. E. R. 483. (R.)

3. Costs of raising a family charge under a power, but not of the suit to raise it, given out of the estate.—Greene v. G., 8 I. E. R. 473; 2 Jon. & L. 529. (C.)

4. Costs rendered necessary by assignments of family charges are not subject to the same rule as in mortgage cases. They must be borne by the charge assigned, and not by the estate.—Stewart v. Donegal, 8 I. E. R. 621; 2 Jon. & L. 636. (C.)

5. Costs of a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession, given him up to answer, and against him for the rest of the suit, when the sum due at the filing of the bill was only £10; the balance afterwards against him; and his conduct vexatious.—Snagg v. Frith, 9 I. E. R. 285; 3 Jon. & L. 383. (C.)

6. A person who opened a sale with the assent of the parties, for the purpose of preventing a sacrifice of the property, but, being outbid, was not the purchaser, allowed the costs of opening the sale, on the ground of having benefited the estate.—Cuffe v. Young, 9 I. E. R. 475. (R.)

7. In a creditor's suit a puisne incumbrancer, who is a necessary party, and against whom a decree is made, but who, from the suit's frame, cannot have relief under the decree, is not entitled to his costs against ptf.; ptf. to have them over with his demand out of the estate.

The dictum of the M. R. in Croker v. Copley, 2 Moll. 471, denied to be law.—Joyce v. De Moleyns, 9 I. E. R. 576; 3 Jon. & L. 698. (C.)

8. An overpaid mortgagee, puisne to the ptf., has no right to his costs, though not paid off at the time of putting in his answer.—Meredyth v. Creed, 1 I. Jur. 210. (C.)

9. When a prior incumbrancer obtains an order in an Exchequer cause for a receiver, he will not be allowed the costs of a motion for discharging a receiver, appointed by a puisne judgment creditor in this Court, out of the funds in the receiver's hands.—Murray v. Sayers, 2 I. Jur. 154. (R.)

10. A deft. who had been ordered to account for the produce of a policy of insurance, in terms absolutely assigned to him, but held, under the circumstances, to have been assigned by way of mortgage, decreed his costs as in an ordinary redemption suit, and also the costs of proceeding for the amount of the policy.—Murphy v. Taylor, 1 I. C. R. 92; 3 I. Jur. 85. (C.)

11. In a suit for an account, foreclosure, and sale, by a ptf. having two incumbrances upon the estate, he is not entitled to all his costs of suit in priority with his elder incumbrance; but shall be decreed his costs of suit in priority with that incumbrance, save so far as they are occasioned by his puisne incumbrance; and the costs so occasioned he shall be decreed to have in priority with the puisne incumbrance.—Hancock v. H., 1 I. C. R. 444. (C.)

12. The legal estate of a mortgage was vested in two trustees, one of whom was out of the jurisdiction. The Court, in order that the mortgage might be reconveyed to the mortgagor, pursuant to a decree in a foreclosure suit, made an order under the Trustee Act that the mortgage should vest in the other trustee solely, and directed the costs of the petition to be costs in the suit.—Corker v. Ryan, 3 I. C. R. 562; 6 I. Jur. 238. (R.)

13. A mortgagee in possession brought an action for rent, which proved abortive, because brought in the name of a party who had no legal title to the rent, and against a party who was not legally liable to pay it. A consent was entered into, by which it was agreed that the record should be withdrawn, that each party should abide his own costs, and that the ptf. should not bring any other action for the rent. Held, in a suit to charge the mortgagee with wilful default, that he was not chargeable with the rent, which he had failed to recover, as the consent did not release the rent, and afforded no defence to the recovery of rent at law or equity; but that, as the action had failed by the neglect of the mortgagee, he was not entitled to credit in the account between him and the mortgagor for the costs of the action.—Burke v. O'Connor, 4 I. C. R. 418. (R.)

14. A decree made on a bill filed by a judgment creditor, in the lifetime of the conuzor, ordered the ptf., within twelve months, to redeem a prior mortgage of 1838; and that, in default, the bill should stand dismissed, with costs, as against the mortgagee. If the ptf. redeemed, the decree directed a sale to pay incumbrances. The decree was not made up. The ptf. did not redeem the mortgage; but before the twelve months for redemption expired, presented to the I. E. Court a petition to sell the lands. No further proceeding was taken in the Chancery cause. Held, that neither the ptf. nor the mortgagee had a right to be paid their costs in that cause out of the money obtained for the lands in the I. E. Court.—In re Ashe, 5 I. C. R. 305. (P.C.)

1. A mortgagee refused to join in a conveyance of lands purchased by the Poor-law Commissioners, under their powers. Held, that this refusal did not disentitle the mortgagor to any part of the costs necessarily incurred by, and payable to him, under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act 1845.—O'Brien v. The Poor-law Commissioners, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 97. (R.)

2. D., a party in an administration suit, had a jointure charged on the testator's real estate; and was also interested in the surplus of his real and personal estate. Held, that D. was entitled to have in the priority of the jointure only the costs incurred in respect of her jointure, and not the costs incurred in respect of her interest in the surplus.—Guinness v. Darley, 6 I. C. R. 21; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 401. (C.A.)

3. A mortgagee in possession must pay the costs of a redemption suit against him, if it is found that, at the time of its institution, a balance was due to the mortgagor.

The mortgagee in possession of a several fishery refused to surrender the premises to the mortgagor until he gave a promissory note and a guarantee for the amount claimed by the mortgagee to be due. In a suit by the mortgagor against the mortgagee for an account, and for damages caused by negligent fishing of the weir, a balance was found to have been due to the mortgagor when possession was given up; but the claim for damages was disallowed. Held, that the mortgagee should pay the costs of the suit, but was entitled to the costs of those parts thereof in which he had succeeded.—O'Neill v. Innes, 15 I. C. R. 527. (C.)

4. The ptf.'s solicitor in a mortgage suit, being, as the mortgagee's executor, a co-ptf., was only allowed costs out of pocket.—Macartney v. Dickey, 16 I. C. R. 409. (R.)

XXX. 10. x.* Incumbered Estates Court. See PRACTICE, LIV. a. LANDED ESTATES COURT.

XXX. 10. y. Infant: Prochein Ami: Guardian.

5. The Remembrancer having been appointed guardian to a minor deft., upon process of contempt for want of an appearance, the Court, upon motion of the minor by her mother and testamentary guardian, gave her liberty to answer by her testamentary guardian, "paying the costs, as offered by the deft.'s notice of the 30th January, the costs to be paid within a week after taxation, and the answer to be filed within a week after the payment of such costs." The notice of the 30th Jan. had been served by the mother. The minor's answer was afterwards filed and accepted, the costs not having been paid. The Court made an order for an attachment against the guardian for non-payment of those costs.—Brady v. Finnegan, Jon. & Ca. 426. (E.E.)

6. The infant heir of a mortgagee is entitled to the costs incurred, on the reference under the 1 W. 4, c. 60.—Earl of Miltown v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 338. (R.)

7. The tenant of a minor's estate obtained an order of reference respecting renewal of his lease. The order directed (inter alia) that the minor's costs of the reference should be paid by the tenant. On the reference, the minor's guardian insisted that the tenant was not entitled to renew without paying renewal fines. A protracted litigation ensued, which trebled both parties' costs of the reference. It appeared that the tenant was entitled to renew without paying a fine; and that, for several years, he had been paying, in his own wrong, on account of renewal fines, sums amounting to £300. Held, that the guardian should execute the renewal without requiring payment of the costs of the reference.—Campbell v. Bryan, 2 I. E. R. 54. (R.)

8. A bill was filed to recover the amount of a judgment debt out of the conuzor's real and personal estate. The deft., a minor, was the conuzor's heiress-at-law. Held, that she was not entitled as against ptf. to costs of putting in an answer.—Downes v. Hogan, 2 I. E. R. 112. (E.E.)

9. A receiver having applied to the Court for a reference to the Master as to the liability of a lunatic to renew the lease of the land over which the receiver was appointed, was ordered to pay the costs of the enquiry, as he had not previously applied to the committee to make the application to the Court.—In re Doolan, 2 Con. & L. 232; 3 Dr. & War. 442. (C.)

10. Wherever costs are awarded to be paid by minors, the necessary meaning of the decree is, that they shall be paid by the person liable by law to pay them; that is, by the next friend, for and on their behalf. The language of the decree must be expounded by the rule of law, which exempts the infants from liability, and casts it on the next friend.—Purcells v. Woodley, 5 I. E. R. 380. (R.)

11. The ptf. obtained an order to set aside the appearance of a minor, and that the minor should appear and answer by the officer. The uncle of the minor obtained an order to set aside that order, and that the minor should be at liberty to appear and answer by him as his guardian. Held, that he was not bound to pay the costs of the first order, but that they were costs in the cause.—Wallen v. Barry, 6 I. E. R. 124. (E.E.)

12. The Court has no power under the 1 W. 4, c. 65, s. 14, to give the landlord the costs of appearing on a petition under the 12th sec.

for liberty to the guardian of an infant to accept of the renewal of a lease.—In re Leech, 9 I. E. R. 318; 3 Jon. & L. 189. (C.)

1. Where a puisne incumbrancer is a necessary party, but his demand from the frame of the suit cannot be paid in it, he will not be allowed his costs against the ptf.

Ellis v. Molloy (1 Mol. 536) is overruled.—Joyce v. De Moleyns, 9 I. E. R. 576; 3 Jon. & L. 698. (C.)

2. When a suit abated by the death of the ptf., a minor suing by his next friend, the order to revive, or that the bill be dismissed, will be made without costs.—Ross v. R., 2 I. Jur. 251. (R.)

3. When a petition on behalf of an infant is presented by a solicitor, a stranger to the infant, even although the Master should find that the petition is proper, and for the benefit of the infant, the Court will not award out of the infant's estate to the petitioner any costs except costs out of pocket.

Such a petition was presented by a solicitor praying investigation into the conduct of a testamentary guardian with respect to the property of an infant. The Court referred the matter of the petition to the Master, who found that the petition was proper, and for the benefit of the infant. Although the Court was not satisfied with the conduct of the guardian, and the circumstances of the case warranted suspicion, yet, as the petitioner had not previously ascertained that none of the relatives or friends of the infant would present such a petition, the Court refused to grant him out of the minor's estate even costs out of pocket.

The Lord Chancellor of Ireland has power under the statute 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 7, to appoint a receiver over the estate of a minor, upon petition, and without the filing of a bill for that purpose.—In re Goode, 1 I. C. R. 256; 3 I. Jur. 50. (C.)

4. In a minor matter it had been necessary to go into the Master's office to obtain the conversion of a freehold. There was considerable litigation touching the frame of the conveyance.

The Court gave the minors, as against the petitioner, their costs incurred in the proceedings in the matter of the Act.—In re Boyces Minors, 3 I. Jur. 53. (R.)

5. The guardian is allowed her costs as costs in the matter.—Ex parte Coote, 6 I. Jur. 107. (R.)

6. C. having been found lunatic by inquisition, obtained leave to traverse. The Lord Chancellor directed one of the Masters of the Court to act as committee, and to oppose the traverse, which he did by the Solicitor for Minors and Lunatics. The traverse succeeded. Held, that C. was not entitled to have the receiver discharged without providing for the costs of the Solicitor for Minors and Lunatics incurred in his case.—In re Crosbie, 11 I. C. R. 432. (C.)

XXX. 10. y.* Injunction.

7. When a ptf., in obtaining an injunction ex parte, has suppressed a material fact, the injunction will be dissolved with costs.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 6 I. E. R. 57; 3 Dr. & War. 183; 2 Con. & L. 76. (C.)

8. When at the time of a motion no order is made regarding the costs of it, they follow the costs in the cause, especially in the case of injunction bills.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

9. In a possessory suit for an injunction, the rule that costs of suit are not given does not apply to the costs of the motion to show cause. If the cause is deemed insufficient, the deft. becomes liable to pay the costs of the motion.—Coppinger v. Carnegie, 1 I. Jur. 27. (R.)

10. Suits for injunctions to restrain waste, when no answer is filed, and the account sought is waived, should not be brought to a hearing by the petitioner, merely for the purpose of getting his costs of suit.—Harvey v. Ferguson, 15 I. C. R. 277. (C.)

11. Suits for injunctions to restrain waste should not be brought to a hearing where no account is sought or the account is waived, if an injunction has been obtained, and the right to continue it is not disputed. If, however, the respondent's conduct forces the case to a hearing, the petitioner will, if successful, be entitled to his costs of suit.

Semble—In such suits, when no account is sought, the petitioner should call by notice upon the respondent to state whether he disputes the right to have the injunction continued.—Dunsany v. Dunne, 15 I. C. R. 278. (C.)

XXX. 10. z. Insufficiency of Answer.

XXX. 10. aa. Interpleader.

12. In an interpleader suit, the ptf. if right is entitled to his costs; and any deft. may be compelled to pay them. If the ptf. is wrong he gets no costs, and, on the contrary, may be saddled with costs.

A bill of interpleader may be dismissed with costs, as against some of the parties. Others, who by their notices justified it, will be refused their costs.—Glynn v. Locke, 2 Con. & L. 28; 3 Dr. & War. 11; 5 I. E. R. 61. (C.)

13. The ptf. having filed an interpleader bill and brought the money into Court, dismissed the bill with costs by side-bar rule before any of the defts. answered. Held, that the ptf. was entitled to draw the money so lodged.

Quære—In such case are the defts. entitled to their costs out of the money lodged in Court?—McKiernan v. Kernan, 8 I. E. R. 145. (R.)

14. An action of covenant was brought against a trustee, who lodged the amount claimed in Court, and filed a bill of interpleader, which was dismissed with costs on demurrer. Held, that the trustee was entitled to have the money returned without deducting the costs.—Doyle v. Dumoncel, 11 I. E. R. 517. (R.)

1. Trustees of policies of assurance filed a bill to ascertain the rights of different claimants of the proceeds of the policies. The Insurance Companies submitted to bring in the amounts due upon the policies which, on account of the conflicting claims, had not been paid. Held, that they were bound also to pay interest on the sums assured, but they were allowed their costs.

Some of the respondents had filed a bill in England for the purpose of enforcing their claims to the fund. On their application they were directed to stay proceedings in England, and to have their costs in that suit in the same priority with their demand in this suit.—French v. R. Ex. Insurance Co., 6 I. C. R. 523. (C.)

2. Trustees of policies of assurance filed a bill to ascertain the rights of the different claimants of the proceeds of the policies. The Assurance Companies had been unable to pay the amount due, on account of those conflicting claims, and submitted to bring their accounts in. Held, varying the order, 6 I. C. R. 523, that they ought not to be charged with interest.—French v. Royal Exchange Insurance Company, 7 I. C. R. 523. (C.A.)

3. A mere letter written to the solicitor of tenants by one of two parties claiming the rent in opposition to each other, saying:—"If your clients pay me the rent now due, I will receive the same, and indemnify them from any further demand thereof," is not a sufficient offer of indemnity to deprive the tenant of his costs of an interpleader suit instituted by him.—Toohy v. Stoney, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 429. (R.)

XXX. 10. aa.* Intervenients.

4. As a general rule, intervenients do not get their costs; but the Att.-Gen., when he intervenes as a necessary party, will be allowed his costs.—Daly v. Burke, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (P.)

XXX. 10. bb. Irregularity of Process.

5. As cause against an attachment for disobeying an injunction, a deft. showed that the affidavit of service was false. The process-server was convicted of perjury, contrary to the Judge's charge. Held, that deft. was entitled to all costs occasioned by the false affidavit, except those of the prosecution.—Cosgrave v. M'Donnell, 2 I. E. R. 77, note. (R.)

XXX. 10. cc. Issue at Law.

6. When a case has been sent to a Court of Law, and this Court gives a decree with costs, including the law costs, and the decree is reversed "with costs of the suit in the Court below," deft. is entitled as of course to the costs at law.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344; 2 Con. & L. 160. (C.)

7. Issues were directed in a foreclosure suit, to try the validity of a release and receipt for a legacy which the Master had found to be not duly executed. The issues were tried twice, but the jury, being unable to agree, were discharged by the Judge. The issues were sent down a third time for trial, when the legatee died. His personal representative declined to proceed with the trial, and allowed the issues to be taken as confessed against him. The Court refused to direct the costs of the issues to be paid out of the legatee's assets; but gave the petitioner his costs, along with his demand in the foreclosure suit.—Campbell v. Young, 4 I. C. R. 394. (R.)

XXX. 10. cc.* Landed Estates Court. See PRACTICE, LIV. a. LANDED ESTATES COURT.

XXX. 10. cc. Landlord and Tenant.

8. A renewal decreed, notwithstanding a delay of four months after service of the notice to renew under the Tenantry Act. The notice, however, had insisted on a term to which the landlord was not entitled; and he, after promising to answer the tenant's enquiries respecting the title, delayed.

The renewal was decreed, however, with costs to be paid by the ptf.—Moore v. Sayers, Beat. Rep. 530. (C.)

9. A tenant's litigious conduct in defending an ejectment for non-payment of rent does not disentitle him to relief upon a bill for redemption; nor to the costs of that suit, if he be otherwise entitled to them.—Newenham v. Mahon, 3 I. E. R. 304; Long. & T. 34. (E.E.)

10. The Court has jurisdiction in a redemption suit to make the landlord pay the costs of the suit.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. War. 239; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.) —[Affd.: 1 H. L. Cas. 81.]

11. Costs cannot be given to a deft. who sets up a defence that fails; but from the conduct of the tenant in this case, and the bill containing an unproved imputation against the landlord, the specific performance of the covenant (to renew) was decreed without costs.

Where a suit for renewal is rendered necessary by the conduct of the ptf., he will not get his costs, even if he succeed; although, as a general rule, the ptf. who succeeds in a contest for renewal is entitled to his costs.—Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 I. E. R. 455; 1 Jon. & L. 134. (C.)

12. When the landlord insists on his right to have liberty to eject, unless all his rent be paid, he will not get the costs of a motion that the receiver pay him so much rent; or for liberty to proceed for non-payment of rent.

But if he waive any of his rights, he will be entitled to the costs.—Harris v. Shea, 8 I. E. R. 571. (R.)

1. Practice as to costs on a motion by a landlord for leave to proceed for non-payment of rent.—Clendinning v. Knox, 12 I. E. R. 309. (R.)

2. A head landlord cannot obtain costs, incurred in an ejectment, out of a fund in Court standing to the credit of a cause in which his immediate lessee is respondent, if his claims are opposed by an unpaid incumbrancer.—Haines v. Purcell, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 250. (R.)

XXX. 10. cc. Legatee.

3. A legatee under a will disputed the due execution of a later will, of which the watermark showed that it had been antedated. He was allowed his costs.—Cowan v. Rankin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (P.)

4. A legatee, who is next-of-kin, impeaching as legatee a later will, because of want of capacity or undue influence, and failing, is in general liable to costs.—Doyle v. Leary, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (P.)

XXX. 10. dd. Lunacy.

5. S. presented a petition alleging C. to be of unsound mind, and praying that a commission, in the nature of a writ de lunatico inquirendo might issue. S. was not a relative of C. The petition was opposed by H., C.'s sister. The commission, however, issued, and the carriage of the proceedings was given to H. The jury found that C. was of sound mind. H. presented a second petition. Another commission issued, and C. was declared a lunatic. H. obtained an order for payment of the costs of appearing upon the original petition, and of proceeding under the order made thereon. Held, upon an application by S., that he was entitled to the costs of presenting the original petition, and of obtaining the order made thereon.—In re Clegg, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 218. (C.)

XXX. 10. ee. Misconduct; Proceedings, Vexatious, or Unnecessary.

6. Deft. in a suit for renewal may have so misconducted himself as to be made to pay the costs; but, not having acted dishonestly, he was held entitled to the usual terms.—Wallace v. Patten, 1 I. E. R. 338. (C.)

7. The bill prayed a sale, and account and payment of prior and contemporaneous incumbrances. A prior elegit creditor had put in an answer of unreasonable length. The Court directed that the Remembrancer should, in taxing the costs, have regard to the length of the answer.—O'Brien v. O'B., Jon. & Ca. 198. (E.E.)

8. In a suit for tithe composition, all the defts. appeared by the same attorney, and such of them as were tenants from year to year answered the bill separately at length. The Court, upon motion, permitted the ptf. to dismiss his bill against those defts. upon payment of costs; and directed the officer, in taxing the costs, to disallow the costs of any answer, or part of any answer, which should appear to have been improperly and unnecessarily filed.—Armstrong v. Bannon, 2 Jones, 538. (E.E.)

9. If lands have been sold under a decree, and judgment creditors, knowing that there is not any chance of the fund reaching them, necessitate the filing of a bill against them, they will not get their costs in that suit.

Semble—They will be compelled to pay the costs occasioned by such vexatious conduct.—Barrett v. Bermingham, S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

10. When a transaction, of a nature suspicious in its commencement, can be sustained only by subsequent confirmatory acts, the party so sustaining it must pay has own costs of investigating the circumstances.—De Montmorency v. Devereux, 2 Dr. & Wal. 410; 7 Cl. & F. 188; West, 64.—[Aff. 1 Dr. & Wal. 119. (C.)]

11. If the solicitor, upon whom the subpoena to hear judgment is served, refuses to endorse an admission of the service, he must pay the costs which that refusal necessitates.—Ross v. Wood, 2 Dr. & Wal. 490. (C.)

12. When, consequent upon the defts.' refusal to execute the conveyance to the purchaser under the decree, it becomes necessary to apply that the Master may execute in their names, the estate is not to bear the costs of such application.

The defts. whose improper refusal to execute made necessary the application, must pay the costs.—Clarke v. De Burgh, 2 I. E. R. 19. (R.)

13. A. filed a bill praying relief which he might have obtained by petition. Held, that he should be allowed only those costs which he would have been entitled to had he proceeded by petition.—Tyrrell v. Hassard, Fl. & K. 625. (R.)

14. When a matter is within ptf.'s knowledge, and great expense ensues from his having stated it incorrectly, ptf. must pay all the costs occasioned thereby.—Field v. Lord Donoughmore, 1 Dr. & War. 227; 2 Dr. & Wal. 630. (C.)

15. Costs were given to the ptf. in this case, in which, under other circumstances, the deft. would be entitled to costs, because of the misconduct of the latter in the progress of the suit.—Scott v. Roose, 3 I. E. R. 170; Long. & T. 54. (E.E.)

16. When, in a redemption cause, the conduct of the landlord has been oppressive and vexatious, he will be made to pay the costs from after the filing of the bill.

There is no inflexible rule that the landlord in all redemption cases is to have his costs. Generally the landlord is entitled to his costs, but the rule has its exceptions.

The costs, of the suit, from the filing of the bill and the lodging of the money in Court, were given in a redemption suit to the tenants; the defence relied on by the landlord being unfounded, and his conduct inequitable and oppressive.—Newenham v. Mahon, 3 I. E. R. 304; Long. & T. 34. (E.E.)

1. It is discretionary with the Commissioner to give any costs or charges to a summoned party suspected of having bankrupt's property, or supposed to be indebted to the bankrupt.—In re O'Connor, 3 I. E. R. 363-64. (C.)

2. A party in possession under a title derived under a tenant for life, and equitable incumbrancer, having set up (amongst others) the Statute of Limitations, as a defence against a devise claiming the reversion, was decreed to pay so much of the costs of the cause as was incurred by that defence, and to abide his own costs of the remainder of the suit up to the hearing.—Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 4 I. E. R. 177; 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58. (C.)

3. Decree for redemption without costs, the landlord having, within the six months, refused a tender of the rent and costs of the ejectment.—Fitzgerald v. Hussey, 3 I. E. R. 319. (E.E.)

4. As a general rule, it is improper to introduce into counsel's briefs both the original and amended bills.—Higgins v. Bateman, 2 Dr. & War. 70. (C.)

5. When an order is moved for which might and ought to have been procured to be made as part of another order obtained on a previous motion, the party will not get his costs of the second motion, although he succeed.—Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86. (C.)

6. This Court adheres to the principles laid down in Newenham v. Mahon (3 I. E. R. 304). At the same time it must be recollected that the general rule is, that the landlord having acquired the legal estate by legal proceedings, and in due course of law, and acting fairly and properly, shall be indemnified against the costs of any proceedings taken by the tenant to recover the property. That is the general rule in redemption and renewal suits; the contrary is an exception to the rules, and one which the Court will adopt in any case calling for it: for it would be monstrous to hold that the landlord might in all events rely upon his legal possession, and, no matter how illegal or false, or untenable his defence and possession, he should nevertheless be entitled to the costs of the suit.—Reade v. De Montmorency, 5 I. E. R. 48. (E.E.)

7. If through carelessness, or by design, an unfounded claim is put forward, it is undoubtedly reasonable that the costs which it occasions shall be borne by the person making it, and that he shall not be permitted to proceed further against the defts., until he has paid the costs which he has improperly obliged them to incur.—Hughes v. Maitland, 5 I. E. R. 169. (R.)

8. In general the landlord is entitled to his costs in a redemption suit; but if the conduct of the landlord has rendered the bill necessary, he may be made to pay the costs of all parties.—Malone v. Geraghty, 2 Con. & L. 242; 3 Dr. & War. 273; 5 I. E. R. 549. (C.)

9. Costs cannot be given to a deft. who sets up a defence that fails: but from the conduct of the tenant in this case, and the bill containing an unproved imputation against the landlord, the specific performance of the covenant (to renew) was decreed without costs.

When a suit for renewal is rendered necessary by the conduct of the ptf., he will not get his costs even if he succeed; although, as a general rule, the ptf. who succeeds in a contest for renewal is entitled to his costs.—Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 I. E. R. 455; 1 Jon. & L. 134. (C.)

10. Defts. (trustees) who have severally filed similar demurrers, instead of joining in one demurrer, not allowed the costs of the demurrers, although successful.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

11. The costs of the suit incurred previous to a recent period, refused to a plaintiff who succeeded, on the ground of the laches with which the case was conducted.—Reilly v. Fitzgerald, 6 I. E. R. 335, 353. (R.)

12. A mortgagee, who, after the mortgagor's bankruptcy, unnecessarily files a bill to foreclose, will not get more costs than he would have been entitled to by proceeding in the bankruptcy matter.—Hogan v. Baird, 4 Dr. & War. 296. (C.)

13. Held, that under the circumstances, neither ptf. nor the assignee was entitled to the costs of appearing on a receiver's motion to attach a tenant.—Colthurst v. C., 7 I. E. R. 305. (E.E.)

14. Costs given to a trustee up to the decree to account only, when his account had been much reduced in the office.—Fozier v. Andrews, 7 I. E. R. 595; 2 Jon. & L. 199. (C.)

15. The costs of unnecessarily re-docketing judgments are not to be allowed.—Macken v. Newcomen, 7 I. E. R. 114; 2 Jon. & L. 16. (C.)

16. A party unnecessarily serving notices in a cause shall pay the costs occasioned thereby.—Hogan v. M'Namara, 2 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

17. A. lodged money of B.'s at a bank; took a deposit receipt in the name of B.; and afterwards lodged a small sum additional, and took a deposit receipt for the whole, by B.'s authority, in the name of B.'s daughter,

X., stating it was a provision for her. After B.'s death, A. refused to give the deposit receipt to X., and set up a claim to the money as B.'s administrator. The bank refusing to pay X. without the receipt, X. and A. brought actions against it. Held, that the effect of the dealing was conclusively to constitute the bank the debtor of X. only, and that they could not sustain an interpleader suit. A bill of interpleader cannot be sustained, if the claim of one debt. is not at least colourable.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 8 I. E. R. 241; 2 Jon. & L. 380. (C.)

1. A judgment creditor's bill was filed in 1829. The answers were filed in 1830; but no further steps were taken until 1843, when leave to file an original bill, in the nature of a bill of revivor, was obtained under the 58th Rule, the ptf. having accounted for the delay between 1830 and 1839. The Court gave him no more costs than he would have been entitled to if the original bill had been filed in 1843, but gave him interest.—Fairtlough v. Ackland, 9 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

2. Costs of a redemption suit against a mortgagee in possession, given to him up to answer, and against him for the rest of the suit, when the sum due at the filing of the bill was only £10, and the balance afterwards was against him; and his conduct had been vexatious.—Snagg v. Frith, 9 I. E. R. 285; 3 Jon. & L. 383. (C.)

3. When a cause is set down for a dismiss, the debt. setting it down is alone entitled to costs, and any other debts. appearing will not get costs.—Purcell v. P., 11 I. E. R. 516. (C.)

4. A demand being assigned, for which a suit is being prosecuted, if the assignee file a new bill, the pendency of the former suit is no defence or objection, at least unless pleaded; but if both causes be brought on, the Court will prevent the double costs.—O'Brien v. Villiers, 12 I. E. R. 21. (C.)

5. While a case was pending in the H. L., the debt. in a similar case made an offer to the ptf. to be bound by the decision of the House in the pending case. The ptf. took no notice of the offer, but compelled debt. to proceed with his defence. Judgment was given against debt., who appealed to this House, and prosecuted the appeal to a hearing after an adverse decision in the previously pending case. Judgment being given against him in his own case, he was ordered to pay respondent's costs.—Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

6. A creditor's suit to administer real and personal estate of a deceased testator was in the list for hearing at the time of the institution of a suit by a legatee, who could have obtained substantial relief in the creditor's suit, in which, shortly after, a decree to account was pronounced. Subsequently, on the petition of a creditor, the greater part of the real estate of the testator was ordered by the I. E. Court to be sold. This Court, being of opinion that the legatee's suit was oppressively and wantonly instituted, refused, with costs, a motion under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, on behalf of the legatee to stay his own suit; and ordered that, if he did not file a replication within a short specified period, his bill should stand dismissed, as against one of the principal debts., with costs, including the costs of a contemporaneous motion made on her behalf, for its dismissal for want of prosecution.

The construction of the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, adhered to, as laid down in Bernard v. Bond (1 I. C. R. 198), in reference to staying proceedings in this Court, when lands, the subject of litigation here, have been ordered by the I. E. Court to be sold.—Money Penny v. Gibbings, 1 I. C. R. 201. (C.)

7. A Ry. Co., instead of obtaining the finding of a jury respecting the amount of compensation due to the owner of land required for the railway, acting on some oral consent by the owner's solicitor, took possession, and commenced the works. Their answer, to a bill filed to restrain them by injunction, was verified by their solicitor; relied on the consent; and detailed conversations between the solicitors. A replying affidavit, filed by the ptf.'s solicitor, denied that consent was given. On motion for the injunction—Held, that the debt.'s solicitor having, though unnecessarily, filed an answering affidavit, the ptf.'s solicitor was entitled to reply, and that his replying affidavit might be used; but no costs of either should be allowed on taxation.—Hare v. C. & B. Ry. Co., 3 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

8. A. made in his bill charges affecting the character of the debt., to answer which the debt. was compelled to make a lengthy answer, and to examine a witness de bene esse. A., after answer, amended her bill by striking out the charges, thereby rendering useless the proceedings taken by the debt. relative to them. Held, that the debt. was entitled to the costs of them. That the Court would entertain an application for them at the hearing, there being a notice served by the debt. that he would then apply for them.—Courtenay v. C., 3 I. Jur. 161. (C.)

9. Costs refused when the bill was drawn at unnecessary length.—Fitzgibbon v. Blake, 3 I. C. R. 328. (C.)

XXX. 10. ff. Parties improperly joined, or served with Notice of Motion, &c.

10. A party served with a notice of motion, though not interested in the subject matter of the motion, is nevertheless entitled to the costs of appearing.—Tabuteau v. Warburton, 4 Dr. & War. 267. (C.)

11. Construction of the rule as to judgment creditors. In a suit instituted before the G. Rule of June 1842, the ptf. having served judgment creditors, debts. not in possession by receivers, with subpoena to hear judgment, were decreed to pay the costs of their appearing, and not to have them over.

If they appeared without subpoena they should bear their own costs.

Such of the judgment creditors as had answered since that rule, decreed to pay their own costs unless they had been served with a notice to press, in which case the ptf's. were decreed to pay them.

Judgment creditors, having receivers, entitled to answer and appear, and to have their costs.—The Governor, &c., of the Bank of Ireland v. O'Malley, 7 I. E. R. 121. (C.)

1. When some of several persons have been made ptf's. without their authority, their names will be struck out of the suit, upon motion and before the hearing. If the defts. shall be awarded costs, they will be ordered them against the solicitor filing the bill, he to have them over against the ptf. who employed him.—Beddy v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 667. (R.)

2. A party unnecessarily serving notices in a cause shall pay the costs occasioned thereby.—Hogan v. M'Namara, 2 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

3. In a partition suit each party bears his own costs of suit—that is to say, the costs up to the first hearing. The costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the second hearing and of the mutual conveyances, are borne by the parties in the proportion of their interests.

After obtaining the first decree, and the partial execution of the writ of partition and commission of perambulation in the original suit, it became necessary to file a supplemental bill. Held, that the costs of the supplemental suit should follow the same rule as the costs of the original suit; and that each party should bear his own costs up to the first hearing of the supplemental suit.

The costs of suit of a bond creditor of one undivided share borne by the debtor, his counsel so agreeing, the Court doubting whether they should not be borne by the ptf.

The owner of an undivided share made leases of undivided portions of his share. Both lessor and lessees were made defts. to a partition suit, but no commissioners were nominated on behalf of the lessees, nor did they take any part in the subsequent proceedings. Held, that they ought not to contribute to the costs of the commission.

That these lessees were not entitled to their costs of suit as against the lessor.

Cornish v. Gest (2 Cox, 27) observed upon.—Herbert v. Hedges, 10 I. E. R. 479. (E.E.)

4. A receiver who had passed his final account and paid in the balance found against him, and who had been acting for thirty years, discharged without paying the costs of his removal, or of the appointment of a new receiver.—Cox v. M'Namara, 11 I. E. R. 356. (R.)

XXX. 10. ff.* Partition.

5. One tenant in common leased his undivided share, subject to partition being made. The lessee was made a party, to a bill for a partition. Held, that he was not entitled to his costs as against his lessor.

Cornish v. Gest (2 Cox, 27) observed upon.—Herbert v. Eyre, 2 Jon. 803. (E.E.)

6. A moiety of an estate was devised, subject to legacies, to A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. Held, that the tenant for life, tenant in tail, and legatees, were to bear their own costs of a partition suit; and that the tenant for life had no equity to call on the tenant in tail to contribute to the costs of the suit.—Greer v. Mercer, 4 I. E. R. 705. (E.E.)

7. Costs of a partition suit must be borne by the parties according to the interests allotted to them respectively.—M'Bride v. Malcolmson. 2 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

8. In a partition suit each party bears his own costs of suit—that is to say, the costs up to the first hearing. The costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the second hearing, and of the mutual conveyances, are borne by the parties in the proportion of their interests.

After obtaining the first decree and the partial execution of the writ of partition and commission of perambulation in the original suit, it became necessary to file a supplemental bill. Held, that the costs of the supplemental suit should follow the same rule as the costs of the original suit; and that each party should bear his own costs up to the first hearing of the supplemental suit.

The costs of suit of a bond creditor having a charge on one undivided share borne by the debtor, his counsel so agreeing, the Court doubting whether they should not be borne by the ptf.

Where the owner of an undivided share made leases of undivided portions of his share, and both lessor and lessees were made defts. to a partition suit, but no commissioners on behalf of the lessees were nominated, nor did they take any part in the subsequent proceedings—Held, that they ought not to contribute to the costs of the commission.

That those lessees were not entitled, as against the lessor, to their costs of suit.—Herbert v. Hedges, 10 I. E. R. 479. (E.E.)

9. Commissioners of perambulation applied that the ptf. should pay their fees and expenses, the fees being at the rate of £3. 3s. per day for each commissioner.

No precedent of a similar application could be found.

The Court required the ptf. to state what was the proper sum, in his opinion; and would then refer it to the Master to enquire what would be the proper amount; the defeated party to pay the costs of the reference.—[The case was compromised.]—Browne v. Coots, 2 I. Jur. 99. (R.)

10. In partition suits, the costs of issuing and executing the commission, and the final decree and hearing, should be borne by the parties in proportion to their respective interests.

The several parties respectively abide their own costs of all subsequent proceedings.

The costs of mutual deeds of partition, and of having them settled by the Master, are subsequent costs, and are to be borne by the parties respectively.

The fact of one of the parties being a minor does not vary the rule.

The ptf. will not be allowed the costs of a deed of disclaimer by the trustees of a deft. who were necessary, but had not been made, parties to the suit, nor the costs of a case to counsel advising such deed.—Balfe v. Redington, 2 I. C. R. 324. (R.)

1. An order was made in a partition suit, in December 1856, to bind persons, not parties under the 32nd G. O. of 1851. The order was not entered in the final decree, which directed that the parties should respectively bear their own costs up to and including the first hearing of the cause in June 1856, and that the parties should respectively bear and pay the costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the final hearing, rateably and in proportion to the value of the estates allotted to them. Held, that the petitioners were not entitled to a rateable proportion of the costs of the order of Dec. 1856.—O'Gorman v. Pratt, 9 I. C. R. 343. (R.)

2. The respondent in a partition suit alleging that the petitioner was not seized of any portion of the lands, resisted the petitioner's claim. Considerable expense was thus imposed on the petitioner; but was entirely incurred before, and at the first hearing, at which a decree for partition was made, and further directions and costs reserved. At the hearing on the return to the writ of partition and further directions—Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to be paid by the respondent any portion of his costs up to and including the first hearing.—Knorr v. Mayo, 11 I. C. R. 265. (C.)

3. When a petition is filed to sell an undivided moiety of any land, which is afterwards partitioned by order of the Court, the lien, given by the partition order on the unsold portion for its proportion of the partition costs, is a charge bearing interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum from the order's date.—Fox v. Wybrants, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (L.E.C.)

4. The final decree in a partition suit directed that the several parties should bear their own costs, incurred up to and including the first hearing; and that the costs incurred after the first decree, including copies of deeds, &c., be borne rateably, and in the following proportions:—One-third by petitioner; one-third by respondent, B.; and one-third by the respondents, C., V., and D.; and that D. should be allowed his costs out of the third part of the lands and funds coming to C. and V., who were trustees of the will of D.'s father. It was referred to a Taxing Master to tax the costs. He refused to tax the costs of C. and V., because they had not been specifically by name given costs by the above decree; and that to do so would therefore be inconsistent with the practice in partition suits. Held, that C. and V. were entitled under the decree to their costs properly and necessarily incurred after the first hearing, and including the final hearing.

In partition suits, the costs, up to and including the first hearing, are borne by the parties to the suit respectively; and the costs of all parties when properly and necessarily incurred after the first hearing, and up to and including the second hearing, should be taxed, and their total amount borne rateably by the parties according to their respective interests.

The practice as to costs in partition suits investigated and determined.—Leslie v. Duggannon, 12 I. C. R. 205. (R.)

XXX. 10. ff. Partnership.

5. Upon partnership enquiries, bona fide on both sides, it is fair that there should be no costs on either side. In this case there was some negotiation for an arbitration; and had the case been clear that the ptf. had wantonly refused to arbitrate, and had got no more by the decree of the Court than was offered to him out of Court, he might have had to pay the expenses of the suit.—Hutcherson v. Smith, 5 I. E. R. 123. (E.E.)

XXX. 10. gg. Pauper.

6. Quere—If costs can be given against a pauper ptf., or how he can be punished when his bill is dismissed?—Flattery v. Anderdon, 12 I. E. R. 219. (C.)

7. When a party sues successfully in forma pauperis, he is entitled to dives costs against the deft.; and the solicitor may have his costs taxed as dives costs, though there are no special directions in the decree, and though the fund produced by the sale decreed is insufficient to pay the ptf.'s demand, without costs.—Woodroffe v. Murphy, 6 I. Jur. 1. (R.)

XXX. 10. hh. Perpetuating Testimony: Commission to Examine.

8. By consent of ptf. and deft., a commission was issued to M. to examine witnesses residing more than thirty miles from Dublin. Under it the ptf. examined on the direct, and the deft. merely cross-examined. On a motion by M. against the deft., for one-half of his fees and expenses as commissioner—Held, that he was to be considered as having undertaken, and been appointed to the office, on the joint retainer of the parties, and his motion was granted with costs. The question, who is immediately liable to pay the commissioner, has nothing to do with the question as to the costs in the cause to be decided at the hearing.—Milner v. Joseph, 5 I. E. R. 214. (R.)

9. Where a commission examiner is appointed on consent, the consenting parties

Such of the judgment creditors as had answered since that rule, decreed to pay their own costs unless they had been served with a notice to press, in which case the ptf. were decreed to pay them.

Judgment creditors, having receivers, entitled to answer and appear, and to have their costs.—The Governor, &c., of the Bank of Ireland v. O'Malley, 7 I. E. R. 121. (C.)

1. When some of several persons have been made ptf. without their authority, their names will be struck out of the suit, upon motion and before the hearing. If the defts. shall be awarded costs, they will be ordered them against the solicitor filing the bill, he to have them over against the ptf. who employed him.—Beddy v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 667. (R.)

2. A party unnecessarily serving notices in a cause shall pay the costs occasioned thereby.—Hogan v. M'Namara, 2 Jon. & L. 242. (C.)

3. In a partition suit each party bears his own costs of suit—that is to say, the costs up to the first hearing. The costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the second hearing and of the mutual conveyances, are borne by the parties in the proportion of their interests.

After obtaining the first decree, and the partial execution of the writ of partition and commission of perambulation in the original suit, it became necessary to file a supplemental bill. Held, that the costs of the supplemental suit should follow the same rule as the costs of the original suit; and that each party should bear his own costs up to the first hearing of the supplemental suit.

The costs of suit of a bond creditor of one undivided share borne by the debtor, his counsel so agreeing, the Court doubting whether they should not be borne by the ptf.

The owner of an undivided share made leases of undivided portions of his share. Both lessor and lessees were made defts. to a partition suit, but no commissioners were nominated on behalf of the lessees, nor did they take any part in the subsequent proceedings. Held, that they ought not to contribute to the costs of the commission.

That these lessees were not entitled to their costs of suit as against the lessor.

Cornish v. Gest (2 Cox, 27) observed upon.—Herbert v. Hedges, 10 I. E. R. 479. (E.E.)

4. A receiver who had passed his final account and paid in the balance found against him, and who had been acting for thirty years, discharged without paying the costs of his removal, or of the appointment of a new receiver.—Cox v. M'Namara, 11 I. E. R. 356. (R.)

XXX. 10. ff.* Partition.

5. One tenant in common leased his undivided share, subject to partition being made. The lessee was made a party, to a bill for a partition. Held, that he was not entitled to his costs as against his lessor.

Cornish v. Gest (2 Cox, 27) observed upon.—Herbert v. Eyre, 2 Jon. 803. (E.E.)

6. A moiety of an estate was devised, subject to legacies, to A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. Held, that the tenant for life, tenant in tail, and legatees, were to bear their own costs of a partition suit; and that the tenant for life had no equity to call on the tenant in tail to contribute to the costs of the suit.—Greer v. Mercer, 4 I. E. R. 705. (E.E.)

7. Costs of a partition suit must be borne by the parties according to the interests allotted to them respectively.—M'Bride v. Malcolmson, 2 Dr. & Wal. 700. (C.)

8. In a partition suit each party bears his own costs of suit—that is to say, the costs up to the first hearing. The costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the second hearing, and of the mutual conveyances, are borne by the parties in the proportion of their interests.

After obtaining the first decree and the partial execution of the writ of partition and commission of perambulation in the original suit, it became necessary to file a supplemental bill. Held, that the costs of the supplemental suit should follow the same rule as the costs of the original suit; and that each party should bear his own costs up to the first hearing of the supplemental suit.

The costs of suit of a bond creditor having a charge on one undivided share borne by the debtor, his counsel so agreeing, the Court doubting whether they should not be borne by the ptf.

Where the owner of an undivided share made leases of undivided portions of his share, and both lessor and lessees were made defts. to a partition suit, but no commissioners on behalf of the lessees were nominated, nor did they take any part in the subsequent proceedings—Held, that they ought not to contribute to the costs of the commission.

That those lessees were not entitled, as against the lessor, to their costs of suit.—Herbert v. Hedges, 10 I. E. R. 479. (E.E.)

9. Commissioners of perambulation applied that the ptf. should pay their fees and expenses, the fees being at the rate of £3. 3s. per day for each commissioner.

No precedent of a similar application could be found.

The Court required the ptf. to state what was the proper sum, in his opinion; and would then refer it to the Master to enquire what would be the proper amount; the defeated party to pay the costs of the reference.—[The case was compromised.]—Browne v. Coote, 2 I. Jur. 99. (R.)

10. In partition suits, the costs of issuing and executing the commission, and the final decree and hearing, should be borne by the parties in proportion to their respective interests.

The several parties respectively abide their own costs of all subsequent proceedings.

The costs of mutual deeds of partition, and of having them settled by the Master, are subsequent costs, and are to be borne by the parties respectively.

The fact of one of the parties being a minor does not vary the rule.

The ptf. will not be allowed the costs of a deed of disclaimer by the trustees of a deft. who were necessary, but had not been made, parties to the suit, nor the costs of a case to counsel advising such deed.—Bulfe v. Redington, 2 I. C. R. 324. (R.)

1. An order was made in a partition suit, in December 1856, to bind persons, not parties under the 32nd G. O. of 1851. The order was not entered in the final decree, which directed that the parties should respectively bear their own costs up to and including the first hearing of the cause in June 1856, and that the parties should respectively bear and pay the costs of issuing, executing, and confirming the commission, including the costs of the final hearing, rateably and in proportion to the value of the estates allotted to them. Held, that the petitioners were not entitled to a rateable proportion of the costs of the order of Dec. 1856.—O'Gorman v. Pratt, 9 I. C. R. 343. (R.)

2. The respondent in a partition suit alleging that the petitioner was not seized of any portion of the lands, resisted the petitioner's claim. Considerable expense was thus imposed on the petitioner; but was entirely incurred before, and at the first hearing, at which a decree for partition was made, and further directions and costs reserved. At the hearing on the return to the writ of partition and further directions—Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to be paid by the respondent any portion of his costs up to and including the first hearing.—Knox v. Mayo, 11 I. C. R. 265. (C.)

3. When a petition is filed to sell an undivided moiety of any land, which is afterwards partitioned by order of the Court, the lien, given by the partition order on the unsold portion for its proportion of the partition costs, is a charge bearing interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum from the order's date.—Fox v. Wybrants, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (L.E.C.)

4. The final decree in a partition suit directed that the several parties should bear their own costs, incurred up to and including the first hearing; and that the costs incurred after the first decree, including copies of deeds, &c., be borne rateably, and in the following proportions:—One-third by petitioner; one-third by respondent, B.; and one-third by the respondents, C., V., and D.; and that D. should be allowed his costs out of the third part of the lands and funds coming to C. and V., who were trustees of the will of D.'s father. It was referred to a Taxing Master to tax the costs. He refused to tax the costs of C. and V., because they had not been specifically by name given costs by the above decree; and that to do so would therefore be inconsistent with the practice in partition suits. Held, that C. and V. were entitled under the decree to their costs properly and necessarily incurred after the first hearing, and including the final hearing.

In partition suits, the costs, up to and including the first hearing, are borne by the parties to the suit respectively; and the costs of all parties when properly and necessarily incurred after the first hearing, and up to and including the second hearing, should be taxed, and their total amount borne rateably by the parties according to their respective interests.

The practice as to costs in partition suits investigated and determined.—Leslie v. Duggannon, 12 I. C. R. 205. (R.)

XXX. 10. ff. Partnership.

5. Upon partnership enquiries, bona fide on both sides, it is fair that there should be no costs on either side. In this case there was some negotiation for an arbitration; and had the case been clear that the ptf. had wantonly refused to arbitrate, and had got no more by the decree of the Court than was offered to him out of Court, he might have had to pay the expenses of the suit.—Hutcherson v. Smith, 5 I. E. R. 123. (E.E.)

XXX. 10. gg. Pauper.

6. Quere—If costs can be given against a pauper ptf., or how he can be punished when his bill is dismissed?—Flattery v. Anderdon, 12 I. E. R. 219. (C.)

7. When a party sues successfully in forma pauperis, he is entitled to dives costs against the deft.; and the solicitor may have his costs taxed as dives costs, though there are no special directions in the decree, and though the fund produced by the sale decreed is insufficient to pay the ptf.'s demand, without costs.—Woodroffe v. Murphy, 6 I. Jur. 1. (R.)

XXX. 10. hh. Perpetuating Testimony: Commission to Examine.

8. By consent of ptf. and deft., a commission was issued to M. to examine witnesses residing more than thirty miles from Dublin. Under it the ptf. examined on the direct, and the deft. merely cross-examined. On a motion by M. against the deft., for one-half of his fees and expenses as commissioner—Held, that he was to be considered as having undertaken, and been appointed to the office, on the joint retainer of the parties, and his motion was granted with costs. The question, who is immediately liable to pay the commissioner, has nothing to do with the question as to the costs in the cause to be decided at the hearing.—Millner v. Joseph, 5 I. E. R. 214. (R.)

9. Where a commission examiner is appointed on consent, the consenting parties must equally bear the costs of the commission, though only one of them has, under it, examined on the direct.—Stafford v. S., 5 I. E. R. 215, note. (R.)

1. The deft. assented to the appointment of the person nominated commission examiner by the ptf. He cross-examined one of the ptf.'s witnesses, but did not examine any witness on the direct. Held, that he was bound to pay the costs and expenses incurred by reason of his cross-examination—viz., for the attendance of the commissioner during the time occupied by the cross-examination, and for engrossing the depositions to the cross interrogatories; but not to contribute to the commissioner's travelling expenses.

Where the other party examines on the direct, he must bear his proportion of the commissioner's travelling expenses; but where he merely cross-examines the witness of the party suing out the commission, he ought only to pay the costs necessarily incident to his cross-examination.—Rogers v. Aylmer, 5 I. E. R. 586. (E.E.)

2. One party in a cause, who sues out a commission to examine witnesses without the concurrence of the other, is bound to pay the entire expense of the commission examiner, unless the latter has examined on the direct, in which case he is bound to pay the commissioner for the examination and cross-examination of his own witnesses.—Lord Lucan v. O'Malley, 8 I. E. R. 712; 2 Jon. & L. 681. (C.)

3. The costs of a commission to examine witnesses out of the jurisdiction, are, in the first instance, costs in the cause, but remain subject to the future order of the Court.—Potts v. Batty, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 46. (P.)

XXX. 10. hh.* Probate.

[See also PRACTICE XXX, 10. c., ADMINISTRATION SUITS.]

4. The executor of an administrator, who died in England, proved his will in Ireland, in order to take out administration de bonis non to the intestate, but did not take it out. Held, that the costs of the probate were not chargeable against the intestate's estate.—Lady Langford v. Mahony, 5 I. E. R. 569; 4 Dr. & War. 81; 2 Con. & L. 317. (C.)

XXX. 10. ii. Costs of Proving Debts before Master.

[See also PRACTICE, MASTER.]

5. A mortgagee's infant heir is entitled to the costs incurred on the reference under 1 W. 4. c. 60.—Earl of Miltown v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 338. (R.)

6. The Court will not, under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 58, order the Poor-law Commissioners to pay costs relating to the re-purchase of lands to be settled to uses the same as those to which the sold lands were subject.—In re Lord Mountsantford, Fl. & K. 368. (R.)

XXX. 10. ii.* Railway Company.

7. The costs of preparing and verifying the execution of a power of attorney from parties residing in Jersey, to draw out of Court purchase-money lodged under the provisions of a Railway Act, are chargeable against the Company as costs incident to the drawing out of the money.—In re Godley, 10 I. E. R. 222. (R.)

8. An application to draw out of Court a sum lodged there by a railway company could have been avoided had the company, on bringing in the money, obtained a continuing order to pay it out. The company were held liable for the costs of the motion.—Ex parte Cremen v. Gt. S. & W. Ry. Co., 4 I. Jur. 182. (R.)

9. Under the Lands Cl. Consol. Act, 1845, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 18, s. 80, Ry. Cos. are liable to the cost of orders obtained by successive tenants for life for payment to them of the dividends accruing on stock purchased with the price of land taken by them, and by them paid into Court; but not to any costs incurred consequent on the order.—Ex parte Gordon v. Belfast & Co. Down Ry. Co., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (R.)

XXX. 10. jj. Receiver.

10. The receiver over a derivative or other leasehold estate should pay the head rent regularly. If the landlord is obliged to apply for leave to proceed, the Court will make the receiver, if he had funds to pay the rent, pay the costs of the application; or otherwise give the landlord his costs of his application against the funds in the causes.

Semble—In such a case the landlord might proceed for his rent without asking the Court's leave.—Walsh v. W., 1 I. E. R. 209. (R.)

11. When a receiver, appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, has been extended to the matter of a second petition under the same statute, in which second petition the judgment is prior to that of the first petitioner, the first petitioner is entitled to the entire rents received before the extension; and also to be paid out of the rents to be subsequently received, and in priority to the demand of the petitioner in the second matter, the costs of appointing the receiver. But the costs of orders and references, obtained by the petitioner in the first matter for his own benefit, are to be paid in equal priority with the residue of his demand.—Keough v. Waring, Jo. & Car. 189. (E.E.)

12. When a receiver has been appointed under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, but not extended to any other matter, the Court will not, at petitioner's instance, make the order for him merely to pay petitioner the costs of his appointment, unless the petitioner takes the order at his own expense.—Anon., 3 I. E. R. 504. (E.E.)

1. A receiver bringing an ejectment under the order of the Court is entitled to all the costs, as between attorney and client, of that proceeding.—Fitzgerald v. F., 5 I. E. R. 525. (E.E.)

2. A receiver, by leave of the Court, brought an ejectment. The deft. filed a bill in equity to restrain the proceedings in the ejectment action. To that suit the receiver took defence without having obtained the leave of the Court. Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of defending the suit without leave.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 6 I. E. R. 657. (E.E.)

3. When an ignorant person has been induced by the misrepresentations of the ptf. to consent to act as receiver, and been appointed; but afterwards, on discovering the nature of the office, refuses to enter into the recognizance, the Court will not make him pay the costs of his removal and the new order of reference.—Hunter v. Pring, 8 I. E. R. 102. (R.)

4. A receiver, not having passed his account, was attached, but subsequently discharged, and a new receiver appointed. Held, that the first receiver's sureties were liable, under the recognizance, to the costs of the attachment, and to all costs of discharging the defaulting receiver, and appointing the new one.—Maunsell v. Egan, 8 I. E. R. 372. (R.)—[Affd.: 9 I. E. R. 283. (C.)]

5. Costs of letting refused to a receiver, with costs.—Payne v. Lamb, 8 I. E. R. 517. (E.E.)

6. The sureties for a receiver are liable under the recognizance for the costs of an attachment against the receiver for not passing his account, and for all costs incurred in discharging him and appointing a new receiver.—Maunsell v. Egan, 9 I. E. R. 283; 3 Jon. & L. 251. (C.)

7. A receiver's sureties are not liable beyond the amount of the recognizance. The sureties having paid the amount of the recognizance into Court—Held, that they were not liable to the costs of removing the receiver who was in default, and of appointing a new receiver, nor to the costs of a sci. fa. against themselves or their principal.—Watters v. W., 11 I. E. R. 335. (R.)

8. In a mortgage matter a petition for an attachment was presented by a receiver, and a conditional order granted. The receiver presented a second petition, to make the conditional order absolute. The costs of this petition were not allowed, it being unnecessary.—Delacherois v. Wrixon, 2 I. Jur. 67. (R.)

9. A receiver having no funds, is not entitled to the costs of appearing on a motion by the head landlord for liberty to bring an ejectment.—Adams v. Horne, 2 I. Jur. 122. (R.)

10. A receiver who has acted meritoriously, and is no longer, from ill health, capable of discharging his duties, will be discharged without being compelled to pay the costs of his removal.—Constable v. C., 2 I. Jur. 141. (R.)

11. The ptf. in a stayed suit, who has paid the costs of a deft. according to the rule in Loflie v. Forbes (2 I. E. R. 443), is not entitled to them out of the funds in the receiver's hands, unless the estate is clearly sufficient to pay them according to their priority.

In Loflie v. Forbes there was a fund sufficient to pay all the creditors.—O'Keeffe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 116. (R.)

12. The petitioner is entitled to be paid the costs of the appointment of a receiver out of a fund realised by him, in priority to the landlord's claim for rent. — Read v. Corcoran, 1 I. C. R. 235. (R.)

13. A receiver is not entitled to the costs of taking out the order appointing him, it being the duty of the party at whose instance the receiver is appointed to do so.

Nor will he be allowed the costs of his solicitor attending the passing of a former receiver's account, unless the Master certifies that such attendance was proper.

Nor the costs of notice and service thereof on the sheriff, requiring him to pay rent due, before levying an execution on the goods of a tenant.

He will be allowed the costs of one draft and copy of a notice to quit, by way of precedent only, and not the costs of preparing a notice to quit served on the tenants, unless under special circumstances.

The costs of an attested copy of a memorial of a lease, and of a clerk to prove the same at the trial of an ejectment, will be allowed, on taxation, to the receiver, if necessarily incurred.—Woodroffe v. Greene, 2 I. C. R. 330. (R.)

14. A receiver over the landlord's interest is entitled to have the costs of obtaining leave to proceed at law against a tenant over whose interest there is also a receiver, taxed as against the fund in Court.—Thompson v. Magill, 4 I. Jur. 90. (R.)

15. The costs of the appointment of a receiver on a judgment on a receiver's recognizance under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 55, and 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, are chargeable beyond the penalty of the recognizance against the receiver, and Semle—against his securities, those costs not being costs at the Petty-bag side of the Court.—The Queen v. Dillon, 3 I. C. R. 564. (R.)—[Affd.: 4 I. C. R. 545. (C.)]

16. A tenant held premises under the Court on a six months' lease, ending in March 1850, at £45 for rent. When applied to by the receiver at the end of the term, she refused possession; and, in May 1852, when the rent was demanded, by letter, denied tenancy except for six months. She still continued in possession, and in March 1855 the receiver's clerk filed for her a proposal for the premises at £50 per annum; which proposal was sent in, but there was no new letting. In Jan. 1853, the receiver distrained for two and a-half years' rent, at £90 per annum, and the tenant replevied. On application of the receiver, the proceedings were directed to be stayed, and a reference was given to the Master to fix what rent should be paid from the end of the six months, and to allow credit thereout for the damages by distress, and for the costs at law. Each party was directed to abide his own costs of this motion; the order to be without prejudice to the liability of the receiver for his neglect in not having let the lands in 1850.—Barron v. O'Brien, 6 I. Jur. 250. (R.)

1. A receiver having neglected to lodge his balance pursuant to the Master's order, an attachment was issued against him, directed to the sheriff, who made a return of non est inventus. It was afterwards renewed and a similar return made. It was then directed to the coroner, who made an improper return. An attachment was then issued against the coroner, which was also renewed from time to time. On taxation, the Master refused to allow the ptf. the costs of those proceedings which he had taken against the receiver and against the coroner. The Court refused, in the first instance, to allow those costs out of the estate, as it did not appear that the receiver or his sureties were insolvent, but directed the recognizance to be put in suit, and the motion to stand over.

The payment of the amount for which the attachment was issued against the receiver would not discharge the contempt, but he would still be liable to the costs of the proceedings against him, and if he could be identified with the coroner, perhaps also for the costs of the proceedings against the coroner.—Ersine v. Baker, 7 I. Jur. 25. (R.)

2. The report of the Master in a cause had found that it would be for the benefit of the estate to take proceedings against certain tenants, and the receiver had proceeded by attachment, on which a return of non est inventus was made by the sheriff. The receiver was entitled to his costs of such proceedings.—Kelly v. K., 7 I. Jur. 161. (R.)

3. C. having been found lunatic, by inquisition, obtained leave to traverse. The Lord Chancellor directed one of the Masters of the Court to act as committee, and to oppose the traverse. The Master did so by the Solicitor for Minors and Lunatics. The traverse succeeded. Held, that C., was not entitled to have the receiver discharged, without providing for the costs of the Solicitor for Minors and Lunatics.—In re Crosbie, 11 I. C. R. 432. (C.)

XXX. 10. kk. Review.

[See also PLEADING, II. 6.]

4. Costs of a bill of review and reversal given to the ptf., who succeeded in the suit.—Talbot v. Minnett, 6 I. E. R. 83. (E.E.)

5. The notice of a motion to review the taxation of costs should specify the items of costs objected to.

"Late of Montague-street," is an insufficient description of residence.—Mowles v. Murray, 3 I. Jur. 375. (C.)

XXX. 10. ll. Separate Costs.

6. If defts. in a suit for renewal, file separate answers when their defence is identical, the Court will not make the usual decree giving them their costs, but will disallow the costs of the separate proceedings.—Hamilton v. Patten, 1 I. E. R. 341. (C.)

7. When, apparently to accumulate costs, several similar answers of vexatious length were filed on behalf of a number of formal defts., who appeared to have acted on an understanding with ptf., and under the same solicitor's directions; on the principal deft.'s motion, that proceedings be stayed, &c., it was referred to the Master to ascertain the amount due to ptf.s, and to tax their costs of proceeding against the principal deft. only, but not the costs of proceeding against the others. It was further ordered that the principal deft. should pay, &c., he so undertaking, within ten days after the report; that the cause should meantime be stayed; and that ptf.s. should not be allowed their costs of appearing on this motion.—Bateman v. B., 2 I. E. R. 296. (R.)

8. Trustees in the same interest will be allowed the costs of separate answers, if the Master finds that the circumstances justified them in so answering.—Dudgeon v. Corley, 4 Dr. & War. 158; 2 Con. & L. 422. (C.)

9. Defts. (trustees) severally filed similar demurrers, instead of joining in one demurrer. Held, that they, though successful, should not be allowed the costs of the demurrers.—Cooke v. Lord Courtown, 6 I. E. R. 279. (R.)

10. The separate appointees of portions of an entire charge (and not those claiming partial or sub-interests in portions of it) are entitled to separate costs as defts. in a suit relating to the estate charged.—Hoops v. Lord Kingston, 11 I. E. R. 471. (C.)

XXX. 10. mm. Solicitor, personally, to pay.

11. If the ptf.'s attorney wilfully in the bill describe the ptf. as resident within the jurisdiction, when, in fact, he is resident out of the jurisdiction, he will be ordered to pay the costs of the motion to stay the proceedings, until security for costs be given.—Knox v. O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 62. (E.E.)

12. When, in a minor matter, upon a reference to the Master to ascertain what lien the solicitor of the father of the minor had upon the several documents in his possession, for costs incurred in the lifetime of the father, the costs claimed were reduced, upon taxation, by more than one-sixth—Held, that the solicitor should pay his own costs of taxation, as well as those incurred by the guardians of the minor in reducing the amount of the costs claimed.

The solicitor must pay the costs of taxation when more than a sixth has been taken off the bill, although there has been no undertaking to pay, bringing the case within the 7 G. 2, c. 14; the Court having and exercising an inherent jurisdiction on the subject.—In re Lawlers, 3 I. E. R. 102; Fl. & K. 73. (R.)

1. When, under an order referring it to the Master to tax bills of costs furnished by the solicitor, in pursuance of the statute, and staying an action brought by him at law for the recovery of the same, the client undertaking to pay what should be found due on taxation, and more than one-sixth had been struck off each bill—Held, that the solicitor should pay his own and the client's costs of taxation.

A solicitor furnished his bill to his client, and, after the expiration of the month allowed by the statute, commenced an action for the amount, the client having taken no step in the meantime. Afterwards, upon the client's petition, the action was stayed, and the costs were referred for taxation, the client undertaking to pay whatever should be the sum certified as due. Upon the taxation, more than one-sixth having been taken off, the Court ordered that the solicitor's costs of taxation should be disallowed; and, also, that the client's costs of taxation, and of the application upon the return of the report, should be deducted from the amount of taxed costs.—Power v. Nagle, 3 I. E. R. 105; Fl. & K. 78. (R.)

2. A ptf.'s solicitor held personally liable to the costs of a reference to the Master to enquire and report whether a purchaser was entitled to any, and what compensation, by reason of a misdescription in the rental, caused by his neglect, in not examining the leases lodged in the Master's office.—Taylor v. Gorman, Fl. & K. 567; 4 I. E. R. 550. (R.)

3. If the solicitor, upon whom has been served the subpoena to hear judgment, refuses to endorse on the original an admission of service thereof, he will be ordered to pay the costs rendered necessary by his refusal.—Ross v. Wood, 2 Dr. & Wal. 490. (C.)

4. Ptf.'s solicitor ordered to pay the costs of the day, in consequence of his non-attendance in Court when the cause was called on.—Courtney v. Stock, 2 Dr. & War. 251; 1 Con. & L. 366. (C.)

5. An attorney, who had received a sum of money on account of costs, contended that a balance was still due, and threatened to file a bill for its recovery. Upon a reference obtained by the client, on a petition praying, among other things, that the sum received by the attorney should be ascertained, and his costs taxed as between party and party; although the client was wrong as to the principle of taxation, and also in praying repayment of the entire amount received by the attorney, and not merely of the balance overpaid, yet—Held, that the attorney should pay all the costs of the reference and other proceedings in the matter, except the costs of so much of the petition and answering affidavit as were incidental to the principle of taxation.—Armstrong v. Pollock, 6 I. E. R. 663. (E.E.)

6. When there was a decree with costs in this Court, which was subsequently reversed by the Lords, who directed that the bill below should be dismissed with costs; but before the appeal the ptf.'s solicitor had compelled the deft. to pay the costs below, upon receiving the ptf.'s receipt therefor; and the ptf. had directed his solicitor to retain those costs in his possession to defend the appeal—Held, that the deft. could not, upon the decree of the Lords, compel the solicitor of ptf. to refund the costs so paid.—Smith v. Clarke, 2 Con. & L. 160; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)

7. The costs of a suit to set aside a deed for fraud will not be given against a solicitor, who was a party to the fraud, and is a party to the suit in respect of other liabilities, unless the bill prays them against him.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

8. A conditional order to appoint a receiver under the Sheriffs Act having been obtained in the Court of Exchequer, the solicitor for another judgment creditor, who had knowledge of the Exchequer order, presented a petition for a receiver to the Lord Chancellor, suppressing the fact of the Exchequer order. The Court dismissed the petition, and directed that the solicitor should not have the costs of the petition against his client.—Daly v. D., 9 I. E. R. 461. (R.)

9. The Court directed a solicitor to attend the taxation of his costs. As the taxation could not proceed in consequence of his non-attendance, he was made to pay the costs of the motion.—In re Kelly, 1 I. Jur. 329. (R.)

10. It is the duty of solicitors not to take office copies unauthenticated.

A copy of depositions proved very incorrect, but had been taken and paid for before it was compared or attested, the solicitor was ordered to pay the costs of the day.—Morgan v. Roe, 12 I. E. R. 21. (C.)

11. By consent, made a rule of Court, defts. undertook to pay costs to two ptf.s, one of whom died before payment. The suit having abated, a motion for an attachment for non-payment of those costs was refused; the personal representative of the deceased ptf. not being before the Court. The solicitor, having made the application without consent of the surviving plaintiff, was directed to pay the costs of the motion.—Maher v. Loughnane, 2 I. Jur. 58. (R.)

1. If a married woman, having separate property, petition under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 38, as a femme sole, her attorney will be personally responsible for the costs of the proceedings.—In re Knox, 2 I. Jur. 147. (I. E.C.)

2. A petition for sale, presented by one who has sought the benefit of the Acts for the Relief of Ins. Debtors in England, will be dismissed with costs, to be paid personally by the solicitor presenting it, when the facts connected with the insolvency are suppressed from the petition, although the petitioner has not been finally discharged under those Acts.—In re Nesbitt, 2 I. Jur. 252. (I.E.C.)

3. When, in a suit against a minor, the omission, by the petitioner's solicitor, to name a guardian, precludes the petitioner from naming one under the Ch. Reg. Act (I.) 1850, s. 21, and a motion for that purpose is thereby necessitated, the petitioner's solicitor should be charged with the costs of that motion.—O'Dell v. Massy, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 272. (R.)

4. A solicitor, who receives the proceeds of an insolvent estate, and undertakes to administer it, will be treated, not merely as solicitor, but as if he had been actually appointed assignee; and will be directed to pay, personally, the costs of creditors who bring the matter before the Court.—In re Connery, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 23. (B.)

5. The owner's solicitor, not having the carriage of the proceedings, without the Court's leave, filed an objection impeaching leases, and served notice of a motion to allow the objection, and to set aside the leases. The objection was overruled on the merits, and the owners were unable to pay the tenants' costs. The proceeding being clearly contrary to the practice of the Court, the solicitor was held personally liable for the costs.

The solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings is the only person who can take any active steps towards the sale in a matter, unless the Court in any particular matter directs otherwise.—In re Frewen's Assignees, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (L.E.C.)

6. If solicitors file pleadings in the Probate Court in cases within the jurisdiction of the Q. Sessions, and without having informed their clients of such jurisdiction, and without their express directions to proceed thus, no costs will be allowed them, either out of the estate or against their own clients.—Hennessey v. H., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 390. (P.)

XXX. 10. nn. Specific Performance; between Vendor and Vendee, and other Persons; in Sales Judicial; Searches, &c.

7. A discharged purchaser is not entitled, as against a bidder opening the sale, to the costs of investigating the title, when he proceeded to do so before the order to confirm the sale was made absolute.—Digby v. Brown, 1 I. E. R. 377. (R.)

8. In consequence of debt's refusal to execute the conveyance to the purchaser under the decree, it became necessary to apply that the Master might execute in their names. Held, that the estate should not bear the costs of that application, but that they should be borne by the debt's, whose improper refusal necessitated them.—Clarke v. De Burgh, 2 I. E. R. 19. (R.)

9. Under a decree to sell lands, a trustee for the inheritor was declared purchaser. There was a report of bad title. Held, that the trustee was entitled to his costs out of the fund in Court, it appearing that the inheritor was ignorant of his own title; that he never had the means of knowing it; and that he acted bona fide.—Kirby v. O'Shee, 1 Jon. 164. (E.E.)

10. A purchaser, discharged because of bad title, is entitled to the costs of counsel's opinion on it, and of preparing a case for counsel.—Barton v. Downes, 4 I. E. R. 607; Fl. & K. 633. (R.)

11. In the case of purchases from a bankrupt's assignees, the rule respecting the costs of investigating the title resembles that which governs sales under decrees of Courts of Equity.—Re Page, 1 Dr. & Wal. 31. (C.)

12. Under the words, "and to make such other order in the premises as to the Court shall seem just and reasonable" (6 G. 4, c. 193, s. 29), the Court will give the costs of attending the inquisition to ascertain the value of the lands required for the company's purposes.—In re Ulster Canal Co., Fl. & K. 16, note. (R.)

13. Under the words "reasonable costs, charges, and expenses," in the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 61, s. 29, the Court will award all costs necessarily incurred by parties in obtaining payment out of Court of the purchase money of the lands required for the purposes of the commission, or of having it invested upon trusts similar to those to which those lands were subject.—In re Commrs. of the Shannon, 3 I. E. R. 355; Fl. & K. 13. (R.)

14. A party, who obtained possession of estates by conveyance from a tenant for life and equitable incumbrancer, devised the estates as his own. Part was sold in a suit to administer his estates. In a subsequent suit by one claiming the estates as devisee of the former owner, the purchaser was directed to pay his own costs.—Incorporated Society for Protestant Schools v. Richards, 4 I. E. R. 177; 1 Dr. & War. 258; 1 Con. & L. 58. (C.)

15. A purchaser, who, having lodged only one-fourth of his purchase money, was discharged upon a report of bad title—Held, entitled to his costs incurred in investigating the title, but not to interest on the one-fourth. —Feeley v. Kilkenny, Fl. & K. 456. (R.)

1. A purchaser, discharged upon a re-sale under an order opening the biddings, is not entitled, against the ptf. or his solicitor, to the costs which he may have incurred in investigating the title, there not having been any reference to the Master to report as to title. —Sullivan v. Bayley, Fl. & K. 460. (R.)

2. A purchaser under the decree took several objections to the title. Some objections he failed to sustain, but succeeded in others. He was held entitled to the costs properly and necessarily incurred in investigating the title, the costs occasioned by the unsustained objections having been first deducted. —Brown v. Lynch, 4 I. E. R. 59. (E.E.)

3. The rules respecting the costs of the surrender or assignment of a trust term, when, upon the sale of an estate, it appears that such term is outstanding, are the following:—First, if the term is to be simply surrendered and merged, this must be done at the expense of the vendor; for this is in fact no more than making out the title which the vendor is bound to establish. Again, if the term be so circumstanced that, although the trusts have been fulfilled, it has never been assigned; in that case, the purchaser is entitled to have it assigned to attend the inheritance; and this assignment must be at the expense of the vendor. But there is a third case, and here the rule is different; if the term has already been assigned to attend the inheritance, and the purchaser requires it to be further assigned to a trustee nominated by himself, he must be at the expense of such further assignment. —Keatings v. K., 6 I. E. R. 48. (R.)

4. Under the 5 & 6 Vic., c. 62, the Commissioners of Woods and Forests are bound to pay the costs of a reference to ascertain parties' rights to the purchase money of premises bought under the Act, as expenses incidental to the purchase. —In re Commrs. of W. & F., 7 I. E. R. 487. (R.)

5. One who opened a sale with the parties' assent to prevent the property being sacrificed, but, being outbid, was not the purchaser, allowed costs of opening the sale, because he had benefited the estate. —Cuffe v. Young, 9 I. E. R. 475. (R.)

6. In the rental under which the lands were sold a part was thus described:—"Term for which demised; under an article of agreement for lease for four lives, bearing date 1804, and one year." The sale took place in Jan. 1845. On the 9th of April the purchaser's solicitor received a copy of the article, and then first discovered that the agreement was for a lease to commence after the expiration of a then subsisting lease which did not expire until 1843. On the 24th of Oct. he lodged objections to the title, and subsequently swore that he was misled by the statement in the rental. Held, affirming the report, that the mls-statement was ground for discharging the purchaser, not for compensation. That the delay in lodging the objection disentitled the purchaser to his costs. —Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 44. (R.)—[Affd.: 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)]

7. Specific execution of a written agreement for a lease decreed at the suit of the tenant, with several additions contemporaneously agreed on by parol, set up by the answer, but omitted in the bill, the ptf. paying the costs of the suit. —Warren v. Thunder, 9 I. E. R. 371. (C.)

8. Several objections to title were taken by a purchaser. Some were allowed; others disallowed. On motion to discharge the purchaser—Held, that the costs of the successful should be set off against those of the unsuccessful objections. —Ruskell v. Church, 1 I. Jur. 250. (R.)

9. When a suit has been stayed, the Court will not direct that the ptf. pay only the costs of such deeds, as cannot prove. —Fawcett v. Biggs; Lofie v. Forbes; Hare v. Forbes, 1 I. Jur. 352. (R.)

10. When the abstract of title to a petition stated a jointure to be secured by a trust term, the contrary being the fact, and the petition stated that a greater sum was due for the arrears of the jointure than was really so, the petitioner was declared disentitled to costs as against the fund. —In re Purcell, 2 I. Jur. 100. (I.E.C.)

11. A purchaser under a decree objected to the title; but did not appear on the summons to consider the objections. A report of good title was made. He took several objections; they were overruled. Reference to enquire whether he had been put into possession of all the lands. Report—that he was entitled to £60 compensation, which he moved should be allocated to him, with costs of the motion and reference.

Cross-motion: that he should pay ptf.'s costs of the reference on which his objections had been overruled.

The Master certified that there were not grounds to justify those objections.

Order: that the compensation be allocated to the purchaser; but that he should pay the ptf.'s costs.

The Court declared that the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, gave the Masters jurisdiction to decide such questions of costs. —Beddy v. Smith, 2 I. Jur. 266. (R.)

12. D. contracted for the sale of lands, but died before the execution of the conveyance, having by will, antecedent to that contract, devised all his real estate to trustees (who took the legal estate) upon trust for A. for life; remainder to B. for life; remainder to C., an infant, in tail. A suit to complete the contract having been rendered necessary by reason of the infancy of B., the Court decreed specific performance, with costs of the suit.—Heard v. Cuthbert, 1 I. C. R. 369. (C.)

1. In proceeding under the 188th G. Rule of 1843, the practice is to require common, and not negative, searches, to be taken out for the purpose of being laid before counsel, with the abstract of title, before it is laid before, and approved of by the Master. Costs of negative searches for that purpose will be disallowed on taxation. The ptf.'s solicitor will not in the first instance, i. e., prior to the sale, be allowed to charge for copies of deeds, &c., appearing in the abstract.—Hutton v. Foster, 2 I. C. R. 440. (R.)

2. A discharged purchaser is prima facie entitled to all the costs incurred by him in investigating the title. The Court therefore refused to give a special direction to the Taxing Master to disallow costs which had been incurred in consequence of the purchaser not objecting earlier to the title.—Weir v. Chamley, 2 I. C. R. 566. (R.)

3. A decree declared the ptf. and others, specialty and simple contract creditors, entitled to a charge on lands. There was an appeal to the House of Lords, which was defended by the ptf. at his own expense. The decree was affirmed, without costs; but before the appeal was decided, a final decree was pronounced, directing a sale, and giving the ptf. his costs in priority with his demand. Held, that he was not entitled to the costs of defending the appeal, as costs in the cause; but, that as the other creditors had an interest and had derived a benefit from the defence of the appeal, they were bound to contribute to the costs out of the funds reported to them, rateably, in proportion to the amount of their respective demands.—Hamilton v. Syngue, 4 I. C. R. 182; 7 I. Jur. 121. (R.)—[Affirmed by the Lord Chancellor, on appeal, 4 I. C. R. 551.]

4. A purchaser, discharged because of the misrepresentation in the rental of the value of the property, was given his costs; but was refused interest, only one-fourth of the price having been lodged.—Porter v. Vesey, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 48. (R.)

XXX. 10. nn.* Trustees.

[See supra, XXX. 10. t.]

5. The rule, prohibiting a trustee, who is a solicitor, from charging costs against his c. q. t. considered. Securities, containing such charges, set aside, when the trust deed did not clearly authorise them, notwithstanding letters recognising the right to charge them, and a petition for taxation presented by the c. q. t., the letters having been written, and the securities given under influence, and the securities being improvident.

The securities were set aside as against a purchaser for value (with notice), from the solicitor.—Gomley v. Wood, 9 I. E. R. 418; 3 Jon. & L. 678. (C.)

6. A devised real estate in trust for her husband for his life, and directed the trustees to sell and convey the property absolutely to him for a named sum, applicable to the purposes of her will, provided that he declared, within one year after her death, that he accepted the proposal.

Semble—The right of pre-emption to him was a gift. The trustees, therefore, were not bound to make out title to him, nor were they entitled to receive, out of A.'s assets and to the prejudice of the persons entitled to the residue, the costs of making out title.

Solicitors having been employed by the trustees to make out the title, the costs were allowed on taxation against the trustees, personally, under the Solicitors Act (12 & 13 Vic., c. 53), ss. 3, 4.—In re Davison & Torrens, 17 I. C. R. 7. (R.)

XXX. 10. oo. Witness.

[Under the Ct. of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1860; Gen. Orders of May 1857, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15: Gam. Ch. Or.—See also 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44. s. 93.]

7. A party examining, by means of an interpreter, a witness ignorant of the English language, must bear the expense of the interpreter's services on the cross, as well as the direct examination.—Phunkett v. Williams, 6 I. E. R. 80. (R.)

8. A medical man is obliged to attend without compensation to prove the execution of deed.—Kelly v. Jackson, 2 I. Jur. 181. (R.)

9. When a commission to examine witnesses issues at the instance of one party to a suit, the other not concurring, the issuing party must pay all the commissioner's expenses, even though the other party cross-examines his witnesses. If, however, he examines on the direct, he must pay the commissioner for the examination and cross-examination of his own witnesses.—Earl of Lucan v. O'Malley, 8 I. E. R. 712; 2 Jon. & L. 681. (C.)

XXX. 10. pp. In Cases not before specified.

10. A cause will not be heard for costs alone.—Blackwood v. Gregg, H. & J. 310. (E.E.)

11. Costs of ptf., and of several parties to the cause, having been ordered to be paid out of the fund, and a puisne creditor, not a party, but whose demand had been decreed to be paid, having obtained leave to attend the taxation of the costs,—Held, that he was entitled to the costs of reading over the bills of costs of the several parties to the cause.—Phillips v. Page, H. & Jon. 819. (E.E.)

12. A supplemental bill was filed merely to bring before the Court a tenant in tail who had come into being since the decree in the original cause was pronounced. All the defts. therein appeared again at the hearing of the supplemental suit, in consequence of a notice served by ptf. Held, that therefore they were entitled to their costs of the hearing against ptf., who should have them over.—Wallace v. Blake, 1 Dr. & Wal. 378. (C.)

1. If lands have been sold under a decree, and judgment creditors, knowing that the fund cannot reach them, necessitate the filing of a supplemental bill against them, they will not get their costs in that suit.

Semble—They will be compelled to pay the costs occasioned by their vexatious conduct.—Barrett v. Birmingham, 1 I. E. R. 417; S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

2. A judgment creditor filed a bill against three persons, as devisees of lands liable to his debt. Held, that one deft. who, before bill filed, had paid his portion of the debt, was entitled to his costs as against his co-defts., whose default necessitated the suit.—Hales v. Kirby, 1 I. E. R. 116. (E.E.)

3. B., having been arrested under a ne exeat regno, which was afterwards discharged for irregularity, commenced an action for false imprisonment against C., at whose instance the writ had issued. On C.'s application the Court restrained the legal proceedings, and refused to give B. any compensation; but gave him costs of the motion, since the restraining order should have been made part of the order setting aside the writ.—Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

4. A plaintiff's solicitor held personally liable to the costs of a reference to the Master to enquire and report whether a purchaser was entitled to any and what compensation by reason of a misdescription in the rental, caused by his neglect in not examining the tenants' leases lodged in the Master's office.—Taylor v. Gorman, Fl. & K. 567. (R.)

5. Under the 201st G. O. the Master has jurisdiction to tax mere conveyancing costs between solicitor and client.—In re Smith's Trustees, Fl. & K. 627. (R.)

6. A moiety of an estate was devised, subject to legacies, to A. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. Held, that the tenant for life and the legatees were to bear their own costs of a partition suit; and that the tenant for life had no equity to call on the tenant in tail to contribute to the costs of the suit.—Greer v. Mercer, 4 I. E. R. 705. (E.E.)

7. The Court will not review a Master's taxation of costs, unless he has erred in principle.—Darley v. Nicholson, 1 Con. & L. 391. (C.)

8. The trustees in this case were allowed their costs out of the fund.

The Court refused to direct the costs of the relators to be taxed as between solicitor and client.

Form of decree in such a case.—The Att-Gen. v. Drummond, 3 Dr. & War. 162. (C.) [The case is reported in 1 Dr. & War. 353. (C.); Affid., 2 H. L. Cas. 837.]

9. When, at the time of a motion, no order is made regarding the costs of it, they follow the costs in the cause, especially in the case of injunction bills.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

10. After a decree against defts. with costs to be paid by them, one of the defts., who was liable to part of the costs solely, and to part jointly with other defts., died, the decree having been then fully performed in all respects, except the payment of the costs, which were untaxed. A bill of revivor having been filed against the personal representative of the deceased deft. for payment of the costs—Held, upon plea, that the suit could not be revived for the costs alone.—Bowyer v. Beamish, 7 I. E. R. 7. (R.)—[Affid.: 8 I. E. R. 63; 2 Jon. & L. 228. (C.)]

11. A decree having been pronounced to pay the ptf. a sum and costs, the costs do not bear interest under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27, from the date of the decree, but from the date of the certificate of their taxation.—Lidwell v. L., 7 I. E. R. 91. (R.)

12. On motion for payment out of Court of part of a party's demand, the costs of the application refused.—Massy v. O'Dell, 8 I. E. R. 509. (E.E.)

13. As a general rule, there can be no revivor for untaxed costs, whether the abatement is occasioned by the death of the party who is to pay the costs, or by the death of the party who is to receive them.

That rule is not affected by the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27.

Cases of Morgan v. Scudamore, 2 Ves. jun. 313; 3 Ves. 195; and Barry v. Stawell, 3 I. E. R. 18, 146, considered and commented on.—Bowyer v. Beamish, 8 I. E. R. 63; 2 Jon. & L. 228. (C.)

14. When the bill prays an injunction or receiver, the defts. who are interested in resisting the motion are entitled to costs of two briefs on filing their answers. Ptf. is not entitled to the costs of briefs unless he has moved, or served a b. f. notice of motion, or unless a deft. did some act after the briefs were b. f. made, which rendered notice of motion unnecessary.

The bill prayed an injunction. On the answer coming in, the solicitor prepared two briefs for the injunction motion. Before they were given out, or notice of motion served, the suit was compromised. Held, that ptf. was not entitled against deft. to costs of the briefs.—Broadbent v. Hughes, 10 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

15. The costs of a suit in the nature of an ejectment bill to recover devised property on a construction of a will, though doubtful, are not within the rule in administration suits, that they come out of the estate.—Johnson v. Brady, 11 I. E. R. 386. (C.)

16. A notice party entered a special appearance (19th G. O. 1843), and in consequence obtained a priority she would not have otherwise had. Held, that she was entitled to her costs at the hearing as a deft.—Callaghan v. C., 1 I. Jur. 350. (C.)

1. In a suit between claimants under a will, and a deed inconsistent therewith, executed by the testator, the costs are not to be paid out of the assets, on the ground that the testator created the difficulty, but are subject to the ordinary rule in adverse suits.

Costs given against a trustee under the trust deed which was held revoked, when he had also a beneficial interest under it, and insisted that it was valid.—Irwin v. Rogers, 12 I. E. R. 159. (C.)

2. Practice respecting costs on a motion by the landlord for leave to proceed for non-payment of rent.—Clendinning v. Knox, 12 I. E. R. 809. (R.)

3. Where the ptf. in a stayed suit is liable to pay a deft. costs, he is bound to pay them though no funds for the purpose have been realised.—Tangney v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 114. (R.)

4. Ptf. in a stayed suit, who has paid a deft.'s costs according to the rule in Loflie v. Forbes, 2 I. E. R. 443, is not entitled to them out of the funds in the receiver's hands unless the estate clearly suffices to pay them according to their priority. In Loflie v. Forbes, the fund sufficed to pay all the creditors.—O'Keeffe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 116. (R.)

5. In Jan. 1846, proceedings were stayed by consent order in a cause wherein were two ptf.s., a trustee and c. g. t.; and ptf.'s costs were directed to be taxed and ascertained, defts. undertaking to pay them. They were not taxed until after the principal deft.'s (c. g. t.) death in Dec. 1848. On motion to compel defts. to pay the costs thus taxed—Held, that it should be refused with costs.—[Barry v. Stawell, 3 I. E. R. 18, 146; Fl. & K. 1, considered.] Upton v. M'Garry, 13 I. E. R. 164. (C.)

6. The ptf. in a stayed suit, who is liable to pay a deft. costs, is bound to pay them though no funds for that purpose have been realised.—Tangney v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

7. A deft. who by answer sets up a breach of covenant by the lessee as a defence to a bill for renewal, and fails to prove it, must pay the costs occasioned by that defence.—Vance v. Ranfurley, 1 I. C. R. 321. (C.)

8. A. bequeathed £20,000, in trust, for the building and endowment of a college for clerical students connected with the General Assembly of Irish Presbyterians; to be built where the trustees should decide, and to be under such rules, &c., as they should determine, subject to the advice and directions of the Assembly. The suit was to administer A.'s assets, and to carry into execution the trusts of her will. Held, that the costs incurred by the trustees in the settlement of a scheme for the due application of the £20,000, were to be borne by that bequest, and not by the general residuary fund.

The General Assembly (who were not parties to the cause) presented a petition for leave to intervene in the office, as if they had been joined, and that their costs of doing so might be allowed to them out of the £20,000. The order made on the petition merely provided that they should be at liberty to intervene if they thought fit; and reserved until the final hearing all questions as to any claim for costs by them. Under this order they proceeded before the Master. Held (at the final hearing), that they were not entitled to their costs as against any fund, since they were not parties to the cause so as to be liable to costs; and the order permitting them to intervene did not provide for their costs, as prayed by the petition.—Dill v. Brown, 3 I. C. R. 127; 4 I. Jur. 355. (C.)

9. Costs refused when a bill was drawn at unnecessary length.—FitzGibbon v. Blake, 3 I. C. R. 328. (C.)

10. As a general rule, the costs of an attendance on a third party, to borrow a necessary document, are not allowed. If expense is thereby saved, the Taxing Master may, at his discretion, allow such costs.—Abbott v. Geraghty, 7 I. Jur. 373. (R.)

11. When, in a petition matter under the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, a party seeks the costs given by its 82nd sec., the order made should specify those costs; it is not sufficient that it states generally that the party is entitled to the costs properly payable under the provisions of that Act.—Macrory v. The Belfast Commissioners of Customs, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 41. (R.)

12. Semble—When newly acquired evidence supports the deft.'s case, the Court will not, after verdict, take it into consideration in deciding the question of costs.—Crozier v. Philpott, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 292. (P.)

13. The costs of proving a will in the common form are always paid out of the residue, and should not be charged on a legatee.—Nugent v. N., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 52. (P.)

14. Costs given to a respondent in a decree for renewal of a lease, under the circumstances of the case.—Colclough v. Smith, 14 I. C. R. 127. (R.)

Interest beyond the penalty of a judgment was claimed in a creditor's suit; because the conuzor had assigned his property in trust to pay scheduled creditors, of whom the conuzee was one; because there had been, before the arrears reached the penalty, a decree to account under which the creditor might have been prevented suing at law: because interest might be recovered at law in an action of debt on the judgment. But, the claim was disallowed.—Elliott v. Tynte, Beat. Rep. 478. (C.)

8. At a sale under a decree in a creditor's suit, the lands are set up subject to the leases (if any) made pendente lite. If the produce proves insufficient to pay the debts, the lands will then be sold discharged of those leases.—Nunn v. Mahon, Hayes, 71. (E.E.)

9. A simple contract creditor who institutes an administration suit of personality, and seeks to have his costs as against judgment and specialty creditors, who may come in under the decree, should make a case for it by his bill, and show that a suit was necessary to duly administer the assets, and pay his debts; or else that, by his exertions, he has made available a fund which would otherwise have been lost.—Drake v. Ford, 3 I. E. R. 56. (E.E.)

10. A creditor coming in under a decree cannot rely upon a will as creating a trust in his favour, unless it has been put sufficiently in issue by the pleadings in the cause; or by the charge or discharge in the office.

If the frame and prayer be essentially those of a creditor's bill, the omission of the usual introductory statement, that it is filed on behalf of the ptf. and the other creditors who should come in and contribute, &c., is immaterial, such averment being matter of form merely.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 2 I. E. R. 361. (E.E.)

11. A creditor who, after final decree in a creditor's suit, applies for leave to file a charge under the decree to account, should state by affidavit that he had no notice of the pendency of the suit; or, if he had, should account for not having filed his charge at the proper time, under the decree.

After final decree in a creditor's suit, the Court will not permit a person having a judgment affecting part of the estate decreed to be sold, to file a charge on foot of it under the decree to account, unless it appears necessary for the object of the suit that an account should be taken on foot of that judgment; or the suit is so constituted that the same relief may be given in it as in an original suit instituted by the applicant. After final decree, A. applied for leave to prove a judgment affecting part of the lands decreed to be sold under that portion of the interlocutory decree which directed an account to be taken of all charges and incumbrances affecting the real and freehold estates of the deceased. It did not appear necessary for the purpose of the suit that those lands should be sold, and the personal representative of the conuzor was not a party to the suit. The Court refused the application.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 3 I. E. R. 506. (E.E.)

12. When the heir-at-law was an infant, the Court, in a suit by a simple contract creditor of the ancestor, to protect the infant's interests, abstained from giving the usual directions for a sale, until the cause came back for further directions. Such is not the usual or regular course of the Court.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 849. (C.)

13. Hearing for further directions. The premises, upon which the former decree had declared the ptf.'s demand to be well charged, had, in the interval, become greatly dilapidated. Liberty to apply had been reserved to all parties. Upon the deft. declining to undertake to put the premises into repair, a decree for an immediate sale was pronounced. See 3 Dr. & War. 446.—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden. 89. (C.)

14. The decree declared the ptf.'s demand a charge upon lands, and gave liberty to all parties to apply, as occasion might require. Subsequently, the Court upon motion directed a sale.—Watson v. Pim, Dr. Rep., temp. Sugden, 90. (C.)

15. A renewable freehold was settled on R. in quasi tail; remainder (in default of R.'s issue) to W., his next brother. R., having confessed a judgment, died without issue, and without opening the estate. W. was his heir. A sci. fa., to revive the judgment against the heir and terretenants, having issued, W., summoned simply as heir, allowed judgment to go. Then the judgment creditor presented a petition for a receiver. W. showed as cause that he was in by title paramount, not as R.'s heir. The M. R. refused to entertain the question of title, because W. should have pleaded specially to the sci. fa., and because, on that petition, the Court could not look behind the judgment in sci. fa., whereby the petitioner appeared clearly to be entitled to sue out an elegit, and extend the lands.—Fletcher v. Steele, 6 I. E. R. 376. (R.)

1. The Court will not marshal assets for payment of a simple contract debt out of real estate, when the bill has not been filed on behalf of all the creditors of the deceased.

Liberty to amend the bill at the hearing, by including all the creditors, refused.—Connolly v. M'Dermot, 3 Jon. & L. 260. (C.)

2. In a creditor's suit it appeared that the defts., the persons beneficially entitled to the property subject to the debts, were also entitled to the second charge thereon. At their instance, the Court referred it to enquire whether it would benefit any creditor that the property should be sold or conveyed to defts. in satisfaction of their debt; and that, if the Master found that the property was not in value nearly equal to the debt due to defts., and that it would not be for the creditors' interest to sell it, then, on deft.'s paying ptf. (the first creditor) the sum reported due to him, with costs, all parties should convey the property to defts.—Lynch v. Kelly, 9 I. E. R. 342; 3 Jon. & L. 628. (C.)

3. After the report and final decree in the cause, the Court will permit, at the instance of the party having the carriage of the cause, judgment creditors concurring in the sale to come in and prove their demands, with liberty to surcharge and falsify the accounts already taken in the cause; this course being for the advantage of all parties, and to save the expense and delay of a supplemental suit.—Clarke v. Jessop, 10 I. E. R. 40. (R.)

4. Form of enquiry in an incumbrancer's suit, when the deeds are in possession of a solicitor, a deft., who claims a lien for costs, which lien is disputed.—Walcott v. Graves, 11 I. E. R. 396. (C.)

5. On consent, a case, wherein the testator's creditor propounded a litigated will, was sent to the Sessions.

Quare—Can a creditor be allowed, except upon consent, to propound and litigate a will?—Devlin v. M'Carthy, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 159. (P.)

XXXII. 2. Effect of.

ADMINISTRATION OF ASSETS. See Court of Ch. Reg. Ireland Act 1850, 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89.

6. Several puisne judgment creditors were made parties by supplemental bill, in order that their demands might be bound by decree. The bill stated that one of them was out of the jurisdiction, and that his residence could not be ascertained. At the hearing it appeared that he had been served with process. Held, that no decree against him should be made; but that his presence at the hearing was unnecessary, since the several defts. stood in distinct rights, so that a decree as to one would not affect the others' rights.—Barrett v. Birmingham, 1 I. E. R. 417; S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

7. In a creditor's suit, one deft., a creditor, allowed the bill to be taken as confessed against him, and did not file a charge, under the decree to account, in the Master's office. Held, that he was bound by the final decree's declaration respecting priorities.—Murtagh v. Tisdall, 3 I. E. R. 85; Fl. & K. 20. (R.)

8. After final decree in a creditor's suit, the Court will not allow a person having a judgment affecting part of the estate decreed to be sold to file a charge on foot thereof under the decree to account, unless it appears necessary for the suit's object that an account should be taken on foot of that judgment; or the suit is constituted so that the same relief may be given therein as in an original suit instituted by the applicant. After final decree, a party applied for leave to prove such a judgment under that part of the interlocutory decree which directed an account to be taken of all charges and incumbrances affecting the real and freehold estates of the deceased. It did not appear to be necessary for attaining the suit's object, that those lands should be sold. The conuzor's personal representative was not a party to the suit. Held, that the application should be refused.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 3 I. E. R. 596. (E.E.)

9. After decree to account in an administration suit, the Court will not restrain a creditor from proceeding in a suit instituted by himself, unless the executor has, in his answer, or in some other manner, given an account of the assets, and brought the amount into Court.—Hoops v. Earl of Kingston, Fl. & K. 246. (R.)

10. The 15th and 23rd G. O. of March 1843 have a prospective, not a retrospective operation. Their meaning is to bind, by the future adjudication of rights in the cause, a party who, having been duly served with the prescribed notice, has had the option of becoming a deft., or having notice of the proceedings, with the right of interfering, if necessary, to protect his interests. After decree in a mortgage cause, judgment creditors were, by supplemental bill, made parties in the mode prescribed by the 15th G. O. of March 1843.

Being served with the notice under that order, some of them entered special appearances, the others did not appear. The Court refused the ptf.'s motion for an order binding them by the proceedings in the original cause; holding that they could not be bound by those proceedings otherwise than by a decree in the supplemental cause. — O'Brien v. Creagh, 6 I. E. R. 129. (R.)

1. The Court refused to stay a mortgagee's suit after decree in another creditor's suit in which ptf. was a puisne judgment creditor, who filed his bill within a year of the entry of his judgment, and whose right to a sale of the estate depended on setting aside a settlement, puisne to the mortgage, under which no tenant in tail was in esse. — Foster v. Ker, 12 I. E. R. 51. (C.)

2. Ptf. in a creditor's suit, having got a decree, may move to stay other causes instituted for the same purpose. — O'Keefe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

3. As long as a fund applicable to the payments of debts remains in Court, a creditor may obtain an order to prove his demand, though a final decree has been made in the cause.

Leave given to a creditor to prove after final decree, under circumstances of great neglect on his part. — Graves v. Davies, 15 I. C. R. 204. (R.)

XXXII. 3. Costs, Expenses, and Charges.

4. Ptf. in a creditor's suit is entitled, in priority to the demands of the other creditors, to costs incurred bona fide, for all parties' benefit, and with their assent in making out title to the premises decreed to be sold.

Semble — He is entitled to his costs, in the cause in equal priority with his demand; but, if his exertions realise a fund for all the creditors' benefit, he is entitled to his costs as the first charge on that fund. — Maquire v. Dundass, 1 I. E. R. 25; Jon. & C. 2. (E.E.)

5. By this Court's settled practice, ptf. in a creditor's suit is entitled to costs only according to the priority of his demand.

Rent paid by ptf. to the head landlord of the premises mentioned in the pleadings, in order to preserve them from eviction, is the first charge on the produce of their sale. — Gray v. Crawford, 1 I. E. R. 274; Jon. & C. 174. (E.E.)

6. In a creditor's suit, after final decree, J. obtained its carriage, and was ordered to proceed to sell without delay. Held, that he was entitled in priority to the costs of making out title, though the funds realised did not reach his demand. — Kelly v. K., 1 I. E. R. 317. (R.)

7. When a bill is taken pro confesso the Court hears the pleadings, and pronounces the decree. It appearing that the suit had been necessitated by deft.'s unreasonable refusal to comply with a plainly equitable request, the Court decreed that they should pay the costs of the suit.

Respecting the form of notice that may be served in such a case on a puisne judgment creditor, before filing the bill against him, see 1 I. E. R. 418, n. — Barrett v. Birmingham, 1 I. E. R. 417; S. & Sc. 419. (R.)

8. A deft. made a party as an elegit creditor in possession, and answering the bill seriatim and at length, is disentitled to the costs of such an answer.

The final hearing is not the proper occasion on which to make that objection. — O'Brien v. O'B., Jon. & C. 193. (E.E.)

9. On distributing funds in a creditor's suit, there not being any specific incumbrancer, the several defts. and creditors were directed to pay ptf. their proportions of the difference of the costs between party and party, and attorney and client, in proportion to their demands, though the bill did not pray, nor did the decree direct that they should be so paid. — Bracken v. Drought, 2 Jones, 114. (E.E.)

10. Costs of the suit given to the ptf., a simple contract creditor, in priority to the demands of judgment and specialty creditors; the suit being necessary, and having been properly conducted. — Jameson v. Farrer, 3 I. E. R. 346. (E.E.)

11. A judgment creditor's executors filed a bill to raise the amount of the judgment. A decree to account was pronounced. On taking the account it was found that ptfs. had been overpaid. Held, that ptfs. were not entitled to costs of the suit, and that they must pay all the costs of taking the account.

That the Court had jurisdiction to order ptfs. to bring in the sum overpaid to them. — Graves v. Wright, 2 Dr. & War. 77; 1 Con. & L. 267. (C.)

12. When a legatee is admittedly entitled to a certain fund under a will, but claims a sum larger than that to which his title is admitted, and threatens to sue for payment, the executors are entitled to retain the fund to which his title is admitted, to meet the costs of the suit. — Ridge v. Newton, 4 I. E. R. 389; 2 Dr. & War. 239; 1 Con. & L. 381. (C.)

13. Judgment creditors made notice parties, who put in an answer relying on a point which might have dismissed the bill, but who afterwards availed themselves of the decree, and proved their demands under it — Held, entitled only to such costs as they would have had without answering. — Vincent v. Going, 7 I. E. R. 463; 1 Jon. & L. 697. (C.)

14. A creditor instituted a suit against the real and personal representatives of a principal debtor, and against one of the sureties; but omitted the other surety. A decree to account was pronounced.

The creditor afterwards filed a supplemental bill against the representatives of the other surety. Inasmuch, however, as they derived no benefit from the proceedings in the original suit; and as the creditor might have framed his original suit so as to have had in it the relief sought by the supplemental bill—Held, that, as against the representatives of the second surety, the ptf. was not entitled to costs of the original suit.—Cuffe v. Young, 2 Jon. & L. 17. (C.)

1. In a judgment creditor's suit, answers were filed in 1830. No further step was taken until 1843, when he obtained leave to file an original bill in the nature of a bill of revivor, the delay having been accounted for. The Court gave the ptf. no more costs than he would have been entitled to if the original bill had been filed in 1843, but gave him interest. Fairlough v. Ackland, 9 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

2. The practice of giving priority to costs of resisting claims in creditors' suits observed on.—Carroll v. Darcy, 10 I. E. R. 321. (C.)

XXXII. 4. Distribution of Assets in.

3. In a creditor's suit the Court will not direct the personal representative how to act with reference to the debtor's outstanding personality.—Jameson v. Farrer, 2 Jones, 634. (E.E.)

4. B., by bond and several judgment of 1807, became surety for S., who, in 1814, by bond, became B.'s surety for nearly the same amount. A judgment creditor of 1816 instituted a suit to administer B.'s assets. In 1822 were pronounced decrees for an account and sale. In 1821, S. was obliged to pay the debt for which he had been B.'s surety. He procured the creditors of 1807 to prove their debts under the decree. Held, that they were entitled to be paid the sum reported due to them, but must assign their judgment against S. to a trustee for B.'s creditors.—Peoples v. Stewart, Hayes, 90. (E.E.)

5. Under a decree to account a creditor filed a charge on foot of a judgment. The charge was disallowed because barred by the Statute of Limitations. The creditor then issued a sci. fa. against the inheritor, the conuzor's heir. The fund being deficient, no defence was taken. The judgment was revived. The creditor then applied for leave to file a charge, and obtain a report at her own expense. Held, that she might do so; but the officer was directed, when considering the question of the Statute of Limitations, not to act on the judgment of revivor so far as regarded the rights of other creditors who had proved under the decree.—Brown v. Lynch, Jon. & Ca. 195. (E.E.)

6. A judgment creditor, having obtained in the Court of Ch. a decree to sell lands sold under a prior decree in the Exch., was allowed to file a charge under the decree to account in the Exch. on foot of his demand, as decreed in Ch. The Remembrancer and Registrar were directed to amend the report and final decree by inserting his demand, when proved.—Pidgeon v. D'Alton, Jon. & Ca. 276. (E.E.)

7. Testator, by will in 1805, gave R. an annuity of £300, and by a subsequent will in 1812, revoking the former, gave her an annuity of £600. The will of 1805 was admitted to be valid. The will of 1812 being impeached, a suit was instituted to establish it. Held, that the annuitant, although in any event entitled to £300 per annum, was not entitled to an order that the receiver in the cause should pay her £300 a year out of the rents.

It is not the course of the Court to pay annuities charged upon incumbered property pending the litigation.—D'Alton v. Lord Trimleston, 2 Dr. & War. 531. (C.)

8. When a second incumbrancer's demand would exhaust the whole fund in a creditor's suit, the Court refused to allow him to pay the first incumbrance, and take a conveyance without the expense of a sale; but, on consent, referred it to the Master to ascertain the value of the debt and of the estate, and directed that, if it would not be beneficial to have a sale, the conveyance should be made as asked.—Lynch v. Kelly, 9 I. E. R. 342; 3 Jon. & L. 628. (C.)

9. When a judgment creditor has obtained a charging order on funds reported to a creditor in a cause, the Court, unless there is a controversy touching the right to the fund charged, will, without bill, direct that it shall be paid to the petitioner.—Fulton v. Farrant; Blake v. French, 1 I. Jur. 66. (R.)

10. In a judgment creditor's suit there was a final decree for a sale of a chattel interest; and, if necessary, of real estate of the deceased debtor, to pay the sum due on the judgment, and the costs. After enrolment of the decree, the ptf. applied that the real estate might be sold in the first instance. That application being unopposed, and it appearing that the value of the chattel interest bore a small proportion to the sum due to ptf. under the decree, and that there should be much delay and expense in making out title to it, the Court ordered that the real estate should be sold in the first instance; and reserved the right of the deft. (entitled to the real estate subject to the judgment) to compensation, out of the chattel interest, for any injury he might sustain by reason of the sale of the real estate.—Wilton v. Ferguson, 6 I. E. R. 33. (R.)

XXXIII. CROSS BILL AND CAUSE. See PRACTICE, ANSWER — PRACTICE, COSTS. [See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 72.]

[See also PLEADING, II. 9.]

11. A deft. in a cross cause to discover evidence cannot resist a discovery of matter touching which he might himself have enforced a discovery in the original suit.—O'Connor v. Malone, S. & Sc. 516. (R.)—[See s. c., ibid, 551. (R.)]

1. Ptf. in a foreclosure suit insisted by amended bill that he should be charged for the premises (into possession whereof he had entered) according to an agreement made by him with deft. after bill filed. Deft. insisted by his answer that that agreement had been obtained by duress. Held, that it could not be impeached without a cross-bill.—O'Boy v. Warner, Hayes, 571. (E.E.)

2. When an answer sets up the defence, that the original grant, respecting which ptf. has come into Court, ought not to have been executed, he will not generally be allowed to impeach the grant in that manner; but must file a cross-bill. In this case, a cross-bill was deemed unnecessary.—Ker v. Lord Dungannon, 4 I. E. R. 343; 1 Dr. & War. 509; 1 Con. & L. 335. (C.)

3. A cross-bill is a defence to the original suit. If its object be to obtain relief in a matter which does not affect ptf.'s right in the original suit to the relief prayed for, it will, as against ptf., be dismissed, with costs.

Semle—It will be dismissed as against all parties to it.

In a foreclosure suit, a prayer that the surplus produce of the sale of the mortgaged premises might, after paying the mortgage, be invested on the trusts of a voluntary settlement, does not authorise the assignee of a settlor, an insolvent, a party to the suit, to file a cross-bill impeaching that settlement as void against creditors.—Manders v. M., 4 I. E. R. 434. (E.E.)

4. In a suit by the purchaser of a charge upon an estate to enforce his right, it is not competent to the deft. (owner of the estate) to attempt to reduce the claim because ptf., being incompetent to buy the charge, is entitled only to the amount actually paid for it by him. For that purpose deft. must file a cross-bill.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 657; 1 Bli. N. S. 897.—[See 1 I. E. R. 289; 1 Dr. & Wal. 722.]

5. To enforce a deft.'s equity by impeaching securities, a cross-bill is necessary, according to the English practice.

Semle—In Ireland, it may be done by answer.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 668, note.

6. When there are a cause and a cross-cause, and the decree in the cause only is appealed from, the cross-cause is not in any respect before the H. L.—Callaghan v. C., 8 Cl. & F. 374.

7. The omission in the prayer of a bill, that it may be taken as a cross-bill, is not material; nor a test to try the question whether it be a cross-bill or not, when the pleading is substantially that of a cross-bill.

If a bill have the properties of a cross-bill, though not professing to be such, it should not be filed without the affidavit and certificate required by the 60th G. O.—Mahony v. M., 7 I. E. R. 629. (C.)

8. A demurrer for want of equity will lie to a cross-bill.—Kirwan v. Gorman, 9 I. E. R. 154. (R.)

9. When matter of defence arises subsequently to a decree in a cause which afterwards becomes abated, it may be pleaded to the bill of revivor. It is not necessary to file a cross-bill to get the advantage of it.—Daly v. Kirwan, 10 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

10. By marriage settlement the lands of A. were settled on B. for life, with power of appointment amongst the children of the marriage. By deed, purporting to exercise the power, R., one of the children, was given a rentcharge, which was immediately afterwards assigned to the ptf. Bill filed to raise the rentcharge. Answer; that the assignment was invalid, as the consideration went to the father alone, and R. received no benefit. In order properly to raise the question touching the validity of the deed, a cross-bill is necessary.—Kane v. Delany, 2 I. Jur. 165. (R.)

1. At the hearing, an incumbrancer set up a claim to priority inconsistent with the Master's finding. Held, that though if the right claimed would necessarily follow from the facts found by the report, the Court would act upon it without any exception having been taken, it would not do so if the right would have been liable to be encountered before the Master by evidence, if claimed before him.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 I. E. R. 383; 2 Dr. & Wal. 674. (C.)

2. A decree, not being a personal one, is not within Sir Richard Bolton's 26th Rule; and a bill of review and reversal may be filed without the decree being first performed.—Kelly v. Lennon, Fl. & K. 90. (R.)

3. When by a decree all proper parties are directed to execute; and some, who are within the jurisdiction, refuse to do so, the Court will not, in the first instance, direct the Master to execute under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78; but will issue an attachment against them.

But when such depts. reside out of the jurisdiction, the Court will, in the first instance, direct an execution under the statute.—Usher v. Scanlan, Fl. & K. 243; 3 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

4. The minutes of a decree cannot be made use of (on motions) in this Court: the decree itself must be produced.—Hall v. Hill, Fl. & K. 619. (R.)

5. The deft. not appearing at the hearing, the ptf. is to take such decree as he can abide by.—Meskill v. Dunworth, 4 I. E. R. 681. (E.E.)

6. When the heir-at-law was an infant, the Court, in a suit by a simple contract creditor of the ancestor, in order to protect the infant's interest, abstained from giving the usual direction for a sale until the cause came back for further directions. This was contrary to the established practice.

When a co-deft. has been examined as a witness, there may, he consenting, be a general decree against him.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 349. (C.)

7. Upon a sale of lands under a decree in a cause wherein judgment creditors, prior to the ptf., had not been made parties to the original suit, and a supplemental bill had been filed making them parties, but no decree had been obtained in the supplemental suit; the Remembrancer was ordered to execute the deed of sale, upon the consent of the parties in the supplemental suit.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 7 I. E. R. 338. (E.E.)

8. A judgment creditor's bill, to have the benefit of a renewal to A., and to set aside a sub-lease to B., who sold to deft., H., stated circumstances of express notice to A. and B. The bill was taken as confessed against them. H. denied notice, which was not proved. Held, that there could not be a decree against him.—Kelly v. Magee, 11 I. E. R. 383. (C.)

9. A decree to pay costs is joint and several, when made against several. There must be contribution between the parties.—Archbp. of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 13 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

10. A judgment of the H. L. is conclusive, and cannot be reversed or corrected, except by an Act of Parliament.—Tomney v. White, 3 H. L. Cas. 49.

11. The Court will not order a receiver to pay the several parties appointing and extending him according to the priorities generally.

The proper course is to prepare an affidavit and a schedule, setting out the priorities of the parties, and then to move for an order to pay according to the priorities therein stated.—Wilson v. Hoare, 6 I. Jur. 174. (R.)

12. Decree declaring the right of the petitioner under a deed which had remained in the grantor's possession, and had been destroyed by him, and granting an injunction to restrain his co-heirs from taking proceedings against the petitioner to recover the lands, they not resisting the decree, and making no claim to the lands.

Quære—Whether such a decree would have been made in invitis?

Construction of the 20th G. O. of May 1857.—Esmonde v. E., 9 I. C. R. 263. (R.)

13. When a ptf. claims the full amount of securities, and deft. alleging an equity against part, offers to pay the residue only, a decree, giving ptf. the option to accept the offer or have his bill dismissed, is irregular, since it does not declare whether ptf. is entitled to the whole sum, or only to part.

The proper course would be to make a decree giving effect to the securities to the extent of the whole sum due on foot of them, but without prejudice to deft.'s right to file a cross-bill to assert his equity.—Carter v. Palmer, 8 Cl. & F. 668, note.—[See 1 I. E. R. 289; 1 Dr. & Wal. 722. (C.)]

14. When a bill is filed to raise the amount of a legacy given to a child of the testator, interest for maintenance will be decreed (if the case be a proper one therefor) although it is not specifically prayed for.—Russell v. Dickson, 1 Con. & L. 284; 2 Dr. & War. 133; 4 I. E. R. 339. (C.)

15. A petition having been filed before the period for redemption arrived, the prayer for redemption of the mortgage could not be sustained.—Staunton v. Donohoe, 4 I. C. R. 554; 7 I. Jur. 37. (C.)

1. It is a sufficient compliance with the 6th G. O. of 1851, to name the respondent in the petition with the description of "respondent," and to refer to him in the prayer as "the said respondent."—Nowlan v. Evans, 5 I. C. R. 856. (C.)

2. On the authority of Lindsay v. Lynch (2 Sch. & Lef. 1), a petition should be dismissed which prays for relief in the alternative under two inconsistent agreements. The Court gave leave to amend the petition by abandoning the relief prayed by the original petition. Power v. College of Physicians, 7 I. C. R. 104. (C.)

3. After an absolute order for the sale of lands in the I. E. Court, a petition was presented in the Court of Chancery, praying a sale of the same lands, and in the meantime a receiver. Held, that the receiver was ancillary only to the sale, and that the prayer for the sale being bad under 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 42, the petition must be amended by praying the receiver only; and this without prejudice to any question as to costs incurred in the Master's office on the petition before amendment.—O'Beirne v. Reade, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (R.)

4. C., tenant for life of lands charged with a sum of money by a decree, was directed to pay the sum due, or in default that the lands would be sold after the decree. C. died. Bill by the assignee of the decree to carry same into execution. Held, on demurrer, that the personal representative of C. was not a necessary party, as the direction in the decree did not render C. personally liable.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 2 I. Jur. 107. (R.)

5. An appeal from a decree for ptf. was argued in the H. L., but, before judgment, ptf. died. Deft., the appellant, revived the cause against ptf.'s executors. The H. L. reversed the decree, and dismissed the bill "with costs of the suit in the Court below." Held, that the decree made on this order in the Court below should have been in the same words; but it, containing additional words, which gave costs payable by the executors, was varied on a re-hearing.

When a party dies after argument, but before judgment, the decree should be made nunc pro tunc, as if pronounced at the date of the argument. A revivor is not necessary.—Eyre v. Hollier, 12 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

6. The decree to account ought to state the period from which the account is to be taken. Semble—Cummins v. Adams, 2 I. E. R. 393. (E.E.)

7. In pursuance of an order that ptf. "should give security by recognizance in the sum of £827, being the sum stated in" deft.'s answer "to be due for rent," a recognizance, reciting the order, was entered into. By mistake it was conditioned to pay such sum as should be decreed for mesne rates. To enable the defts. to put it in suit against the sureties, the Court ordered ptf. to pay the sum of £827, as and for the mesne rates of the lands mentioned in the pleadings.—O'Leary v. Purcell, 3 I. E. R. 329; Fl. & K. 126. (R.)

8. In remitting a cause for enquiry on a main question, the H. L. will, to save expense and delay, direct enquiries on other questions consequential on the probable finding on the main question.—Jackson v. J., 7 Cl. & F., 977; West, 755.

9. Matter not printed in the papers cannot be made the subject of an argument before the H. L.; which, when remitting a cause to the Court below to carry its directions into effect, will, if necessary, declare not merely the principle of its order, but state those directions fully on its face.—M'Cann v. O'Ferrall, 8 Cl. & F. 80; West, 593.

10. A decree, declaring that all the shareholders in a company are bound to pay what may be found due to ptf., does not make them personally liable.—Vigors v. Pike, 8 Cl. & F. 562.—[See 2 Dr. & Wal. 1. (C.)]

11. Deft. not appearing at the hearing, ptf. is to take such decree as he can abide by.—Meskill v. Dunworth, 4 I. E. R. 681. (E.E.)

12. Form of decree on bill of revivor and supplement in a suit for partition, where, after the former decree, some of the parties interested in the estate die, and devise their interest therein; and when, after proceedings taken under the former commission, but before its return, some of the commissioners of perambulation die.—Herbert v. Beerhaven, 5 I. E. R. 23. (E.E.)

13. Form of a decree to account in a judgment creditor's suit, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 22, to sell the conuzor's lands in his lifetime.—O'Brien v. Fitzgerald, 5 I. E. R. 593. (E.E.)

14. Form of decree in an information praying the establishment of a charity according to the true construction of the deed creating it, and the parties' intent.—The Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 8 Dr. & War. 162; 2 Con. & L. 98. (C.)

1. Before the New Rules, when a decree of this Court was reversed by the H. of L., and the cause sent back to this Court, and a further decree pronounced, the party, in making up that decree, had a right to embody all the former decrees in it.—Bourne v. Farran, 6 I. E. R. 659. (E.E.)

2. Upon the death of a respondent, a receiver over whose lands has been extended to the matters of several judgment creditors' petitions, the proper order under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 32, is, to continue the proceedings in all the matters.—Brady v. Fitzgibbon, 7 I. E. R. 1. (R.)

3. K. devised a fee-simple estate to his eldest son F. in tail male, with a power to charge £200 each for his daughters; remainder to W., his second son, in tail male; and left legacies of £100 each to his ten younger children, but did not charge them on the estate. On the marriage of F., a portion of his lady's fortune was applied in discharge of those legacies. F. died without issue male, but leaving two daughters, who entered into possession, claiming under a prior will, which made F. tenant in fee. W. brought an ejectment. There was a reference to arbitration, a bill and cross-bill, and a decree in 1816 establishing the latter will; and declaring that whatever the Master should find had been paid by F. in exoneration of the estate should be charged on it. This decree was not enrolled. In 1820, the Master found that sums had been advanced by F. in payment of the legacies to his brothers, and in exoneration of the lands, and among others a sum of £100 paid to W., as one of the younger children. There was a final decree in 1831, which confirmed the report, and ordered a sale to pay the sums. In 1840, a bill was filed to reverse the proceedings in the cause, and the decrees of 1816 and 1831. Held, that, as the decrees did not declare the legacies a charge on the lands, and as it did not appear on what the Master's report was founded, there was no error apparent on the face of the record; and that as to W.'s £100, the decree was right.—Kelly v. Lennon, 7 I. E. R. 98; 1 Jon. & L. 305. (C.)

4. Form of decree directing the transfer of Neapolitan stock.—Roche v. R., 7 I. E. R. 436. (C.)—[See Jon. & L. 561. (C.)]

5. By marriage settlement, lands of the husband were, by mistake, and contrary to the parties' intention, settled upon the issue of the marriage.

Form of decree to rectify the settlement; the contingent limitations to the unborn issue being incapable of destruction.—Hamill v. White, 2 Jon. & L. 695. (C.)

6. The decree declared the ptf. entitled to a sum for principal and interest on a judgment, with interest on the principal until paid. Held, that he was entitled to interest beyond the penalty, the decree not containing, as it should, a direction to limit the interest to the penalty.—Wilson v. Poe, 9 I. E. R. 114; 2 Jon. & L. 765. (C.)—[Affg. 8 I. E. R. 189. (R.)]

7. The bill stated that the executors and others answered the bill filed in 1808, but the devisees of the real estate "stood out process of contempt, and thereupon a decree on sequestration was obtained against them." The nature of the decree was not stated. After that decree, C., the party against whom it had been obtained, died. A bill of revivor, and three amended bills were filed against W., who derived under C., but the suit was not brought to a hearing against any of the defts. who answered. By the practice of the Court, an absolute decree on sequestration could not, pending the former suit, be obtained against a party until the suit had been heard against the answering defts. Held, that the statement in the bill that "there was a decree on sequestration" must therefore be taken to mean a conditional decree; that it fell to the ground by C.'s death, and the subsequent proceedings against W.; and that that statement did not preclude W., who demurred to the present bill, from relying on the Statute of Limitations.

That the conditional decree did not prevent the operation of the 81st G. O.; and that, by its operation, the suit of 1808 was dismissed before the present suit was instituted.

That the statement "that there had been a decree on sequestration," without stating what that decree was, which might have consisted with the relief now prayed, was vague and uncertain, even though considered to mean an absolute decree.

That the defence of the former Statute of Limitations (8 G. 1, c. 4) might have been relied on by demurrer to the bill of 1808; and that, that statute having been repealed, and there not being anything on the bill's face to show that the judgment of 1781 was not barred when the bill of 1808 was filed, ptf. could not derive any benefit from the suit.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 10. (R.)—[Affd., 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)]

8. A declaration in a decree that a bond should be paid, with interest from the 21st August 1828—Held, insufficient to exclude the general rule that the interest shall not exceed the penalty.—Purcell v. Blennerhassett, 10 I. E. R. 470. (C.)

9. Form of decree in a suit by a puisne creditor for redemption and sale.

Form of order on a petition of a first incumbrancer under the Act.—Ex p. Hutton, 11 I. E. R. 160. (R.)

10. Form of decree to remove a trustee who may still be entitled to a control as to the objects of the charity.—Commissioners of Ch. Donations v. Archbold, 11 I. E. R. 187. (C.) [Reversed: 2 H. L. Cas. 440.]

11. Form of a decree setting aside a sale at suit of an incumbrancer on the estate sold, on an equity existing between him and the purchaser.—Atkins v. Delmege, 12 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

1. Lands were subject, by settlement, to £800, secured by a term of 100 years, and by a subsequent will to £4200, secured by another term of 99 years, as portions for younger children, of whom the ptf. H. and A. were two. The will, after prior limitations, devised the lands, subject to the two terms, to A. for life; remainder to his first and other sons in tail. A. being in possession, a bill was filed to raise the two sums. A minor tenant in tail, born afterwards, was made a party to it by supplemental bill. The Master reported interest accrued on the two charges during the possession of A. The final decree confirmed the report, and declared the sums reported charges on the terms: and, in default of payment, directed the Master to sell the lands comprised in those terms, to pay the demands decreed charges thereon. The lands were sold for the residue of the two terms. On exceptions to the Master's report of good title—Held, that, as the minor tenant in tail was a party to the cause, the decree was not erroneous, though it directed a sale to pay interest accrued during the possession of A.; nor because it omitted to set off the interest which A. ought to have paid against his share of the portion, and a sum which was reported to A. charged on other lands directed to be sold by the decree. But the Court directed the Master to allocate to the minor, out of the sum reported to A., the amount of interest which he was liable to pay.

That, although the two charges affected the terms separately, and were not distinguished in the report or decree, as it was clearly for the benefit of the minor that the terms should be sold together, the title was not objectionable on that ground.

That, as the minor's estate was puerne to the terms, the omission to give him a day to show cause would not affect the purchaser.—Edgeworth v. E., 12 I. E. R. 81. (R.)

2. An appeal from a decree for the ptf. was argued in Dom. Proc. Before judgment the ptf. died. The cause was revived against his executors by the deft., the appellant. The Lords reversed the decree, and dismissed the bill "with costs of the suit in the Court below." Held, that the decree made on this order in the Court below should be couched in the same words. It was varied on re-hearing, because to it had been added words giving costs payable by the executors.

When a party dies after argument of a cause, and before judgment, the decree should be made nunc pro tunc, as if pronounced at the date of the argument; no revivor is necessary.—Eyre v. Hollier, 12 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

3. Where, upon a cause petition, under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act, presented by a legatee, and containing a charge that the respondent, the executor, has assets in his hands sufficient for the payment of all the debts and legacies of the testator, an order of reference has been made under the 15th sec. of the Act, of which order the executor has been served with notice, but has not appeared in the Master's office, a personal decree may be pronounced against the executor. The effect of such a decree will be to prevent another legatee from filing a charge under the order of reference, and will thus render necessary the presentation of a petition by him in order to enforce his demand.—O'Brien v. Westropp, 1 I. C. R. 371. (C.)

4. When a sole petitioner dies, the matter cannot be revived by suggestion under the 29th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act. An order must be obtained, authorising the petitioner to file a petition in the nature of a petition of revivor.

Form of order in such case. — Wray v. Pol-lard, 2 I. C. R. 78. (R.)

5. A cause petition, properly falling within the operation of the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, had been set down and heard as an ordinary cause petition. The Court refused at the final hearing (not having been called on before to do so) to make any order as to the extra costs occasioned by the petitioner's not having availed himself of the provisions of that section, the question not having been raised at the original hearing of the petition.

Form of decree made when, pending the proceedings in this Court, an order for sale of the lands of the respondent was made in the I. E. Court.—Eyre v. Little, 4 I. C. R. 604; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 6. (C.)

6. The word "insolvent," in a decree or deed, is to be construed in the ordinary sense of a person who is unable to pay his debts; not in the technical sense of one discharged as an insolvent debtor.—Caulfield v. Maguire, 5 I. C. R. 78. (R.)

7. H., a judgment creditor, made a deft. in a suit, permitted a report and decree to be made in 1828, which omitted all mention of his claims. In 1855, he obtained an order permitting him to file a charge and obtain at his own expense a separate report in respect to his claims; but reserving to the persons who had proved in the cause a right to rely on the decree against his claims. The Master found that his incumbrance was subject to the rights and priorities established by the decree of 1828. Held, that, on the true construction of the order of 1855, the Master was right in so finding.

Quere—Whether the order of 1855 was right in permitting H. to file a charge in respect of a claim omitted in a decree to which he was a party?—Knox v. Waters, 5 I. C. R. 430. (C.)

8. Two suits were instituted, one in the Court of Ch. in England, and the other in the Court of Ch. in Ireland, to administer a testator's assets. The former suit was by the executor who resided in England, the latter by residuary legatees who were not served with a copy of the English bill. The usual order of reference under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act was made in the Irish suit on the 19th Dec. 1856. The executor entered an appearance on the 26th of Jan. 1857. He obtained a decree to account in the English suit on the 7th of March 1857. An order in the Irish suit, on the 18th April 1857, directed the petition to stand as a charge; and the executor to file a discharge setting forth accounts. That order was amended on the 7th Dec. 1857 by directing an account of debts and legacies. The executor filed a supplemental bill in England to bind the petitioners in the Irish suit by the proceedings in the original suit; and on the 8th March 1858, the Master in the Irish suit, by order, restrained the executor from proceeding with the supplemental suit in England. On appeal from the last order—Held, following Stokes v. Coltsman, 1 I. C. R. 44, that the order of the 19th Dec. 1856 was a decree to account, this Court being bound by that decision.

That the Court of Ch. in Ireland had jurisdiction to restrain the executor from proceeding with the English suit.

That the executor, being resident in England, had a right to a protection from the Court of Ch. there, against the demands of creditors, which the order of the Court of Ch. in Ireland could not give him.

The Court therefore varied the order of the 8th March 1858, and made an order restraining the executor from proceeding in the English suit without the leave of the M. R. in England.

Semble—The order of the 18th of April 1857 was not a decree to account.—Parnell v. P., 7 I. C. R. 322; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 382. (R.)

XXXIV. 2. b. On what Evidence made.

8. In a suit by children to enforce payment of their portions, the ptf.'s legitimacy was questioned by the next tenant for life, a deft. Held, that a marriage de facto having been once established, the party impeaching the marriage must then show that it was illegal or void; and that, sufficient evidence of a marriage de facto having been given, the Court was competent to decide the question of marriage for the purposes of the suit, without directing an issue.—Piers v. Tuite, 1 Dr. & Wal. 279. (C.)

4. When a deft., by answer, insisted that he was a purchaser for value, and without notice, proof of payment of the purchase-money is an essential part of the defence. If at the hearing, deft. fails to prove this, the Court will not allow the cause to stand over to enable him to supply that defect.—Molony v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31. (C.)

5. A mistake in a deed, proved by parol evidence corroborating written evidence, may be rectified.

Semble—Otherwise, when the whole evidence is parol, and deft. denies that the mistake exists.

The mistake must be proved to the Court's clear satisfaction.

Proof of a mistake on the parties' part, on one side only of a contract, will not suffice to justify altering the parties' rights under the contract, though it may suffice to rescind the contract altogether.

Deft.'s account of the transaction is to receive great attention. He is entitled to an enquiry touching the existence and nature of all documents bearing upon the question, and sworn to exist, though not produced.—Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. & War. 863; 1 Con. & L. 417. (C.)

6. A ptf. claimed as heir male of R., stating in his bill that he was R.'s eldest son, born after R.'s marriage with ptf.'s mother, and specifically naming a date for the marriage. Held, that though a marriage of that date proved by depositions would disprove ptf.'s title, and marriage of a different date establishing his legitimacy was proved by the same witnesses at the trial of the issue, those were not sufficient grounds for dismissing the bill without further investigation; it appearing that, on both occasions, the witnesses deposed correctly to the main facts, but misapprehended the dates.—Malone v. M., 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637; 3 I. E. R. 536.—[Affirming Malone v. O'Connor, 2 Dr. & Wal. 491. (C.)]

XXXIV. 3. Effect of Decrees.

- a. Generally.

XXXIV. 3. a. General Effect of Decrees.

7. Quare—Can a motion to stay the ptf.'s proceedings until he gives security for costs be sustained after a decree to account has been pronounced?—Murphy v. Archdall, S. & Sc. 630. (R.)

8. The suit having abated by ptf.'s death, it is too late for deft. to file a demurrer to a bill of revivor, after he has ruled the new ptf. to argue exceptions to his answer to the original bill, and has contested a motion for a receiver.—Cathcart v. Hewson, Hayes, 447. (E.E.)

9. Deft. having been arrested under a ne exeat, the Court will, at his instance, after a final decree, issue an attachment against him for non-payment of the sum decreed, in order that he may get relief under the Insolvent Acts. The attachment order will not be made until the final decree has been made up.—Comms. Ch. D. & B. v. Harri, Hayes & J. 211. (E.E.)

10. A decree in a suit instituted against an executor by a simple contract creditor of the testator, to pay his own debt merely, directing the executor to pay out of testator's assets, does not give any priority over outstanding specialty creditors of whose debts the executor has notice. Such a decree is analogous to a judgment at law of assets quando acciderint.—Sandford v. Seymour, 3 I. E. R. 212. (C.)

1. It is contrary to the Exchequer practice to appoint a receiver after a final decree.

Semble—The Chancery practice is different. —Barber v. Roe, 4 I. E. R. 692; Long. & T. 662. (E.E.)

2. From the authorities it manifestly appears that Lord Eldon, upon great consideration, has laid down the rule, that so far is it from being a matter ex debito justitiæ, to let in a party to answer after a decree on sequestration, that it is a matter of the greatest difficulty: for the decree is obtained under the sanction of the legislature; and if a ptf. obtains a decree under the sanction of an Act of Parliament, which authorises the bill to be taken pro confesso, he has legislative authority to say that his right is established, and that he is not to be deprived of that benefit unless under very peculiar circumstances.—M^cCartney v. O'Neil, 5 I. E. R. 160. (E.E.)

3. When a creditor had several grounds of priority, and at the hearing waived all priority, and a declaration to that effect was inserted in the decree, he will not be permitted to say that he meant to waive only a particular ground of priority, the decree being conclusive until reversed on rehearing or appeal.

Semble—That decrees are to be construed according to their words, and not according to the alleged intention of the parties.—Drought v. Jones, 2 Con. & L. 378; 4 Dr. & War. 174. (C.)

4. Administration was granted by the sentence of the Ecclesiastical Court to A., as only next-of-kin of the intestate, in a suit in which B. also claimed to be the only next-of-kin. That sentence was affirmed by the Court of Delegates. B. filed a bill impeaching the pedigree of A., and to establish his own. This Court would not grant an injunction until answer, to prevent the administrator possessing himself of the assets, he being, by the decree of the Ecclesiastical Court, legally and equitably entitled thereto.—Maher v. Gorman, 6 I. E. R. 304. (R.)

5. By his answer, a deft. insisted that a former tenant in tail had paid off legacies, which he alleged were charges on the real estate out of the specified fund; and that the sums so paid off were still charges on the real estate. The interlocutory decree referred it to the Master, to take an account of the sums advanced on foot of the specified fund, in exoneration of the lands, and whatever should appear to be so advanced was thereby declared to be a charge on the lands. Held, that this amounted to a declaration, that the legacies were a charge on the lands.—Kelly v. Lennon, 1 Jon. & L. 305; 7 I. E. R. 98. (C.)

6. A suit was instituted in 1797 to administer real and personal assets. X., a creditor, filed in 1804 a bill to establish an unliquidated demand by specialty against the realty, and in 1822 obtained a decree and a judgment ascertaining his demand. There were various proceedings in the suit of 1797, in which demands similar to X.'s were recognised as binding the estates; and there was a sale in 1816. To protect the purchaser, a portion of the proceeds was invested till X.'s suit should be determined. X. died in 1822. Administration to him was obtained in 1841, in which year the administrator came in under an advertisement for creditors in the first suit to prove X.'s demand against the fund invested. Held, that the principle of Sterndale v. Hankinson, 1 Sim. 393; 8 Russ. 130, applied, and that the demand was not barred by the Statute of Limitations.—Birmingham v. Burke, 9 I. E. R. 86; 2 Jon. & L. 699. (C.)

7. A decree on sequestration is only a conditional decree, and will not prevent the operation of the Statute of Limitations or of the 81st G. O.—Young v. Wilton, 10 I. E. R. 265. (C.)—[Affg. 10 I. E. R. 10. (R.)]

8. A declaration in a decree that a bond should be paid with interest from the 21st of August 1828—Held, insufficient to exclude the general rule, that the interest should not exceed the penalty.—Purcell v. Blennerhassett, 10 I. E. R. 470. (C.)

9. Although a suit be totally abated by a sole ptf. assigning away his interest or becoming insolvent, it is capable of being continued so as to allow the benefit of it under this doctrine to creditors proving charges under a decree made in a suit seeking the continuance and benefit of the abated suit. When the original ptf. made an assignment by deed for the benefit of creditors, one trust of which was to continue the abated suit; and original bills in the nature of bills of revivor and supplement were filed by the trustee and c. q. t. of this deed, stating it, and praying the benefit of the abated suit; the receiver appointed in which was continued; a decree made and entitled in the new suits only, without referring to the abated one, but reciting among the evidence the proceedings in it—Held, such a decree as entitled creditors proving charges under it to the benefit of the abated suit for this purpose.—Bennett v. Bernard, 10 I. E. R. 584. (C.)

10. A former decree dismissing a bill, if not enrolled and pleaded, does not absolutely bar another suit for the same demand. If it is relied on by the answer, and appears not to have been a dismissal on the merits, it is no defence.—Joly v. Swift, 11 I. E. R. 410. (C.)

11. After the report and final decree the Court will not, at the ptf.'s instance, grant judgment creditors liberty to come in and prove their demands, with permission to object to the accounts and proceedings already had, unless all the creditors consent.—Hort v. Bloomfield, 1 I. Jur. 68. (E.E.)

12. After a decree to account in a suit for the administration of assets, a judgment creditor of the testator, having notice of the decree, sued out a sci. fa. against the executor; obtained judgment by default; and issued a fi. fa. de bonis testatoris. The Court, on the application of the executor, restrained the creditor from proceeding on the fi. fa., and gave the costs of the motion against him.—Belmore v. B., 12 I. E. R. 493. (R.)

1. A creditor who has brought an action at law against an administrator, and has notice of a decree for the administration of the assets, is not in general entitled to his costs of appearing on a motion to enjoin him from proceeding with the action.

A civil-bill decree against an administrator, being in the nature of a judgment de bonis propriis; the Court, though it will enjoin a creditor from enforcing such a decree against the assets, when there has been a decree to administer them, will not restrain him from enforcing it against the administrator personally.

Semble—A decree to administer assets is a defence to a civil-bill against the administrator, if prior to the hearing of the civil-bill. Secus—If subsequent to the hearing, but prior to an appeal to the Judge of Assize.—Powell v. P., 12 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

2. A decree against several for payment of costs is joint and several; and a receiver may be appointed over the lands of one of them under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105. without making the others parties to the petition. The costs given by such a decree are in the nature of a debt; therefore there must be contribution between the parties liable.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 18 I. E. R. 98; 1 I. Jur. 49. (R.)

3. The ptf. in a creditor's cause, who has got a decree, may move to stay other causes for the same purpose.—O'Keefe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

4. A civil-bill decree binds the deft.'s goods from the delivery of the warrant to special bailiffs, not from the delivery of the decree to the sheriff (unless it be delivered to him to be executed), or his signature of the warrant.—Delacour v. Freeman, 1 I. C. R. 612. (R.)—[See s. c., 2 I. C. R. 633. (R.)]

5. B., wife of A., claimed lands, as devisee under a will, which the decree in a suit instituted by the heir against A. and B. declared to be null and void. The decree further directed an account of all sums received by A. and B., or either of them, on account of the lands; and ordered the defts. to pay the sum to be found due on taking such account. A. died before the Master's report was made up. The suit was revived against his personal representative. The Master found the sum received by A. and B. Held, that B. was personally responsible for the entire amount by the Master's report found to be due.

A decree, directing a husband and wife to pay a sum of money in respect of the rents and profits of lands received by the wife, or by the husband, in her right, may be enforced against the wife after the husband's death.—

Rossborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 629. (C.)—[Reversing the Rolls decision: ibid, 540.]

6. A decree in a suit to administer the trusts of a will is, if unobjected to and unreviewed, decisive of the testator's seizure in fee of the devised lands.—Spread v. Morgan, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 45. (C.A.)

7. A decree dismissing a bill for want of ptf.'s appearance at the hearing does not bar another suit for the same demand.—Phibbs v. O'Donel, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (C.)

8. In a suit by the representative of B., to be recouped out of the personal estates, for payment of incumbrances—Held, that the inheritor, who was a party and made a similar claim, could not have credit for the sums overpaid to B., by way of maintenance, against the petitioner.

Decrees of the Court, though erroneous, are binding, until set aside on re-hearing, or in a suit for the purpose.—Clanmorris v. C., 14 I. C. R. 420. (R.)

9. So long as a fund, applicable to the payment of debts, remains in Court a creditor may obtain an order to prove his demand, though a final decree has been made in the cause.

Leave given to a creditor to prove after final decree, under circumstances of great neglect on his part.—Graves v. Davies, 15 I. C. R. 204. (R.)

10. By a decree to account made by the Court of Equity Exchequer in 1786, in a suit in which the inheritance was represented by the first tenant in tail, a sum was declared to be a charge on lands. The tenant in tail afterwards died without issue. The next tenant in tail in remainder was made a party by a bill of revivor; and there was a report of the sum due, and a final decree for a sale in 1793. In a suit to raise the charge by sale of the lands. Held, that the decree to account gave a good title to a charge on the lands, though there was error in the subsequent proceedings, the suit being continued by bill of revivor only.—Bolton v. Fairtlough, 15 I. C. R. 229. (R.)

XXXIV. 3. b. Effect of Decree on Summary Order under the Ct. of Ch. Reg. (Ir.) Act 1850.

[Such decree or order stays all proceedings against the executor or administrator, 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 22.]

11. When a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, presented by a legatee, and charging that the respondent, the executor, has assets in his hands sufficient to pay all the debts and legacies of the testator, has been referred to the Master; and the executor having been served with notice of the order has not appeared in the Master's office, a personal decree may be pronounced against him. Its effect will be to prevent another legatee filing a charge under the order of reference; and to necessitate the presentation of a petition by him in order to enforce his demand.—O'Brien v. Westropp, 1 I. C. R. 371; 8 I. Jur. 367. (C.)

1. The summary order on petitions presented as within the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, merely decides that the subject matter of the suit is within that sec.—Graham v. M'Dermot, 3 I. C. R. 488. (C.)

XXXIV. 4. Decree to Account.

2. Quere—Can a motion, to stay the ptf.'s proceedings until he gives security for costs, be sustained after a decree to account has been pronounced?—Murphy v. Archdall, S. & Sc. 630. (R.)

3. A judgment creditor filed against the conuzor and a prior mortgagee a bill praying liberty to redeem the mortgage, and for a sale of the mortgaged premises. Held, that the Court would not direct an account of the incumbrances, prior to the judgment, which affected those premises.—Crofts v. Poe, 1 Jon. 540. (E.E.)

4. Under a decree to take an account of A.'s assets, and to administer them, a demand for unliquidated damages may be proved and reported. The preferable mode of ascertaining its amount is by an issue directed for that purpose; but those damages may be ascertained by the officer by examining witnesses on interrogatories.—England v. Donnellan, Jon. & C. 270. (E.E.)

5. A judgment creditor filed a bill against the conuzor's heir and assignee (the conuzor having been discharged as an insolvent shortly before his death), and against an elegit creditor of his, who had been many years in possession. Held, that ptf. was only entitled to an account for wilful default against the elegit creditor from the time of filing the bill.—M'Donnell v. Walshe, 2 Dr. & War. 252; 1 Con. & L. 388. (C.)

6. Though the general rule is, that when, in a foreclosure suit, the tenant for life is a party, and the accounts are fairly taken, those accounts bind remaindermen, who can only be permitted to surcharge and falsify, yet, since all the decrees in this case were upon sequestration, and the accounts had been taken in the absence of every person interested in having them fairly taken, and since doubts were thrown upon the case, touching the existence of any debt, the remainderman was entitled to have a general account directed.—Wrixon v. Vize, 4 I. E. R. 463; 2 Dr. & War. 192; 1 Con. & L. 298. (C.) —[Affid.: 5 I. E. R. 173; 3 Dr. & War. 104; 2 Con. & L. 138. (C.)]

7. An elegit creditor in possession must account as for wilful default, upon the debtor's application.—O'Brien v. Mahon, 2 Dr. & War. 306; 1 Con. & L. 390, note. (C.)

8. Ptf. is not entitled, as of course, to a decree for an account when deft. does not appear; but must make out his case.—Hayes v. Brierley, 3 Dr. & War. 274; 2 Con. & L. 153. (C.)

9. The operation of a decree to account is not to determine a suit, but rather to keep it alive, and continue it.—Higgins v. Shaw, 2 Dr. & War. 357; 1 Con. & L. 400. (C.)

10. When a stated and settled account is set up by the answer, but not proved at the hearing, the proper decree is to enquire, whether such account exists, and if it does, to give the deft. the benefit thereof, leaving the ptf. to surcharge and falsify.—Fitzpatrick v. Mahony, 1 Jon. & L. 89. (C.)

11. A creditor on foot of a joint and several bond of B. and N. (having entered judgment against B. only) proved under a decree to account in a suit against the assets of B. He was also a party to the report under a decree to account in a supplemental suit affecting the assets of N.; but did not prove under it. The Court restrained the creditor from proceeding at law against the administrator of N.—Cuffs v. Young, 8 I. E. R. 37. (R.)—[See 9 I. E. R. 475. (R.); 2 Jon. & L. 17. (C.)]

12. The execution of a lost mortgage-deed was admitted by the answer in a foreclosure suit, but the deft. swore that certain payments were endorsed upon the deed. The memorial, executed by the mortgagor, and a counterpart in his possession were offered in evidence; but a sufficient search for the original was not proved. Held, that there should be a decree to account, with an enquiry respecting the original deed and the endorsement.—Coulson v. Williams, 9 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

13. Under the decree to account in a suit instituted by A., a creditor on the inheritance, B., having a puisne charge on a 500 years' term, proved it; it was reported. The decree directed the inheritance to be sold to pay A. and the other creditors. A.'s representatives, who were ultimately settled with, instituted supplemental suits; but no sale was had. B.'s representatives filed a bill praying the benefit of the former decree, and to have the term sold. A.'s representatives were made notice parties. Held, that since B. was not entitled to a decree such as was made in A.'s suit, it could not be carried out for the ptf., nor be cut down so as to be limited to the term, at least in the absence of A.'s representatives, who might still have rights under it.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 455. (C.)

14. In a decree for an account of old standing against an executor, a direction was inserted, allowing him to discharge himself by affidavit for items, though exceeding 40s.—Dooner v. D., 12 I. E. R. 580. (C.)

15. A decree to account was made in a suit in which the first tenant in tail, who represented the inheritance, was before the Court. He died without issue. The next tenant in tail was made party by a bill of revivor. A sum was reported due, and a sale was decreed. In a suit to raise the charge by a sale of the lands—Held, that the decree to account gave a good title to the charge on the lands, although in the subsequent proceedings the suit was erroneously continued by a bill of revivor only.—Faircloth v. Bolton, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 201. (C.A.)

1. If the decree in the original suit merely directs a common account against an agent, a decree charging him with what he might, without wilful default have received, cannot be made in a supplemental suit.—Connor v. Reeves, 16 I. C. R. 398. (R.)

XXXIV. 5. Decree to Administer, and Distribute Assets.

[Under the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, it stays all proceedings against executors and administrators.]

2. Demurrer allowed to be set down for argument when, through ptf.'s solicitor's ignorance of G. R. 19, it had not been set down within the time limited thereby.—Jefferys v. Goodwin, 3 I. E. R. 99; Fl. & K. 70. (R.)

3. A creditor who proves his demand under an administration decree will not, upon the final hearing, be heard to ask costs incurred in the office in reducing ptf.'s demand, the report not having made any special case for that purpose.—Loughny v. Dillon, 3 I. E. R. 55. (E.E.)

4. Under a decree to account in a judgment creditor's suit, the Master found that the assets consisted of real estates, and of an irrecoverable mortgage. Under the final decree the real estates were sold. The produce was distributed amongst the judgment creditors according to their priority. The funds reached the three first creditors; several remained unpaid. The sum secured by the mortgage was subsequently recovered. Held, that it should be distributed rateably amongst the unpaid judgment creditors.—Averell v. Wade, Fl. & K. 325; 3 I. E. R. 446. (R.)

5. In an administration suit of real and personal estate, an account of rents, &c., received since the death is not ever directed at the original hearing.

Such an account is directed only when, upon the cause coming back, its necessity appears.—Schomberg v. Humphrey, 1 Dr. & War. 411. (C.)

6. Ptf.s. in a creditor's suit had been overpaid. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction to order them to bring that overplus into Court—Graves v. Wright, 2 Dr. & War. 77; 1 Con. & L. 267. (C.)

7. A civil-bill decree against an administrator is in the nature of a judgment de bonis propriis.

When a decree to administer the assets has been pronounced, the Court will not enjoin a creditor from enforcing a civil-bill decree against the administrator personally, but will restrain him from enforcing it against the assets.

Semble—A decree to administer assets, if pronounced before the civil-bill is heard, affords a defence to a civil-bill against the administrator.

Secus—If the decree be pronounced after the hearing of the civil-bill, but before an appeal therefrom.—Powell v. P., 12 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

8. The general rule is, that though there be a decree to administer assets, a creditor of the testator or intestate will not be restrained by injunction from proceeding at law to make the personal representative liable de bonis propriis. But when a legatee, who has proved in the Master's office, under the decree, brings an action at law against the executor, for the legacy, the Court will enjoin him, though the judgment in the action should be de bonis propriis; because the Court, by its decree, has taken upon itself to decide upon the question of assets, without which the ptf. at law cannot recover, and will not permit that question to be tried at law.

To make an executor liable at law for a legacy de bonis propriis, there must be an express promise in writing, and assets, or some other consideration.

Semble—On a plaint for a legacy against the deft. as executor, and not averring that the deft. promised in writing to pay the legacy, the judgment should be de bonis testatoris.—Molynaux v. Scott, 3 I. C. R. 291. (R.)

9. The Masters have power, in cases referred to them under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, to order, in administration suits, that a personal representative shall file a discharge, setting forth an account of the assets; and to grant an attachment against him if he disobeys the order. The practice in this respect certified by the five Masters.—Glenny v. Woolsey, 4 I. C. R. 615. (R.)

XXXIV. 6. Decree to Foreclose, or Redeem Mortgages.

10. Whether a decree in a foreclosure cause against an infant deft. entitled to the equity of redemption, should give him a day to show cause? Quære.—Jones v. Ham, 3 I. E. R. 65.

11. When by the decree in a foreclosure suit, a day was given to an infant deft. to show cause against it—Held, that the Court still had jurisdiction to direct an immediate conveyance under 1 W. 4, c. 47, s. 11.—Flood v. Sutton, Fl. & K. 179; 3 I. E. R. 340. (R.)

12. In 1817, deft. confessed a judgment. In 1821 he mortgaged his estate as an additional security for the judgment debt. The mortgagee filed a bill, and obtained a decree to foreclose and sell; no incumbrances being proved under the decree to account. The purchaser objected to the title because judgments prior to the mortgage existed. The mortgagee, by notice, required the judgment creditors to prove their demands under the decree, or that he would file a supplemental bill against them, and seek to charge them with the costs. Several creditors proved. The fund was insufficient to pay their demands. Held, that ptf. was not entitled to costs up to the final decree in the priority of his judgment.

Semle—Since the conuzor was alive, he would have been entitled to costs in the priority of his judgment, had the judgment creditors come in voluntarily under the decree, and sought to have its benefit.—Cooke v. Campbell, 4 I. E. R. 431. (E.E.)

1. The G. O. of 22nd June 1841, is not to have the effect of involving ptf. in the account of the sums due on incumbrances puisne to their demands.—Davis v. Rowan, 3 Dr. & War. 478; 2 Con. & L. 154. (C.)

2. A decree of foreclosure and sale against the mortgagor, and against an infant entitled, under a settlement of the equity of redemption, to the first equitable estate tail in remainder, must give the infant a day to show cause.—Chibborn v. Forstall, 5 I. E. R. 531. (R.)

3. When a decree is made to foreclose and sell real estate of which the equity of redemption is vested in an infant, it is not necessary to give the infant a day to show cause.—Clin-ton v. Bernard, 6 I. E. R. 355. (C.)

4. In a decree for a sale in a mortgage cause, an infant owner of the equity of redemption is not entitled to a day to show cause.—Hutton v. Mayne, 9 I. E. R. 343; 3 Jon. & L. 586. (C.)

5. In taking accounts against mortgagees in possession, it is the settled practice to make half-yearly rests, and not to charge against the mortgagee interest on payments, exceeding the interest due to him, received at any intermediate periods, no matter how frequently the payments are made.—Graham v. Walker, 11 I. E. R. 415. (C.)

XXXIV. 7. Whom Decrees Bind.

- a. Generally.
- b. Infants.

XXXIV. 7. a. Whom Decrees Bind generally.

6. By decree in a suit to raise charges created by will, the legal estate in which was vested in an adult trustee for minors, they were directed to be sold. The trustee and the c. q. trusts were parties to the suit, and the latter were given a day to show cause.—Kirby v. O'Hea, 2 Jon. 635. (E.E.)

7. In 1808 T., by deed defectively registered, granted F. an annuity. In T. Term 1822, N. obtained a judgment against T. In M. Term 1822, D. obtained a judgment against T., who, in 1826, mortgaged to C., and in 1827 granted an annuity to W. by deeds duly registered. In 1831, J., entitled to one moiety of F.'s annuity, filed his bill. To it W., C., and D., but not N., were parties. J.'s cause was heard in 1838, on an order to take the bill as confessed against D.'s executors, and upon pleadings and proofs as to the other debts; and there was had a decree to account admitting the priorities of C. and W. over the demand of J. On the 11th Nov. 1839 the Master's report under this decree found that D. had not filed a charge on foot of his judgment, and that, since the judgment was pronounced, J. had purchased C.'s mortgage, and W.'s annuity, but had not made any claim on foot thereof. On the 26th Nov. 1839 a final decree was had in J.'s cause. Held, that it concluded D.'s executors, they having allowed a decree pro confesso to be taken against them, and not having filed a charge under the decree to account in that cause.—Murtagh v. Tisdall, 3 I. E. R. 85; Fl. & K. 20. (R.)

8. A creditor who has proved his charge under the decree is as much bound by it as if he was a party to the suit.—Usher v. Scanlan, Fl. & K. 243; 3 I. E. R. 474. (R.)

9. The time for filing a bill of review is regulated by analogy to the time limited by the 6 G. 1, c. 6, for bringing a writ of error, i. e., twenty years after the judgment, and five years after the disability, if any, of the ptf. in error, has been removed.—Kelly v. Lennon, 1 Jon. & L. 305; 7 I. E. R. 98. (C.)

10. A deft. who allows the bill to be taken as confessed against him, by so doing admits the statements therein to be true, and is as much bound by the decree as if the facts stated in the bill had been proved against him.—Massey v. Batwell, 4 Dr. & War. 65. (R.)

11. When a Court of Equity directs an issue in a cause wherein there are many parties, and selects some to conduct the trial, giving all leave to attend, the result binds all.—Malone v. M., 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637; 3 I. E. R. 536; 2 Dr. & Wal. 491.

12. If one deft.'s answer puts forward a case wholly destructive of ptf.'s title, and that case is established, the Court will give it effect, not merely as between ptf. and that deft.; it shall enure to the other defts.' benefit, though their answers did not make it.—Wilson v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 501. (E.E.)

13. Four tenants in common being entitled under a deed to the first estate tail in X., were before the Court in a suit instituted to establish a will, devising Y., the validity of which depended on the deed. In a cross-cause impeaching the deed only two of them were made parties. Both causes having been heard together, a decree was made by compromise setting aside the deed as to X., and directing a reconveyance by all proper parties. A person, who would have been entitled to a prior estate tail under the deed, was then born. Afterwards was executed the conveyance, in which the four tenants in common joined.

Held, that the inheritance having been imperfectly represented in the cross-cause, a good title, derived through the decree, could not be made.—Pasley v. Lord Clanmorris, 7 I. E. R. 442. (C.)

1. When lands (subject to a charge, to raise which the suit has been instituted), are set by the inheritor pendente lite, the Court will consider the lands as in his possession; and, under an order to let the lands in his possession, will permit them to be let discharged of the leases.—Kenny v. Jessop, 7 I. E. R. 494. (R.)

2. The owner of an equitable interest in lands decreed to be sold assigned that interest after decree. The assignee is bound by the decree and proceedings, and should not be made a party to a supplemental bill.—Osborne v. Casey, 7 I. E. R. 636. (R.)

8. In a suit to raise a charge affecting the inheritance, the tenant in tail consented to an interlocutory order of reference to take the accounts prayed; and died, after the report, but before objections taken to it by him had been disposed of. Held, that the proceedings under the consent order bound the issue in tail; but that he was entitled to be placed in the position which the tenant in tail occupied at his death. He was allowed to argue the objections.—Creagh v. C., 3 Jon. & L. 485. (C.)

4. A. devised lands on trust for B. (a minor) and his sons, in strict settlement, giving B. a power of charging the lands with £5000 for younger children, "to be raised by sale or mortgage of a competent part of said lands, or out of the rents and profits." A. then bequeathed legacies, amounting in all to £12,000, to his grand-daughters, and directed that his executors "should place these legacies in some of the most eligible public funds," and accumulate such portion of the annual interest of them as was not required for the maintenance, &c., of the legatees. He then, after giving some small legacies, declared that if his assets, not thereby specifically disposed of, should prove insufficient to pay his debts and legacies, "it was his will that such deficiency should be made good by his trustees, out of the annual rents arising out of his estates; which he thereby desired that his trustees might receive and apply until such deficiency should be made good thereby; allowing, however, to his grandson B. so much as the said trustees should deem expedient and fitting for his education and maintenance;" but if it should happen that there should be a surplus of his personal estate after payment of his debts and legacies, &c., he bequeathed such surplus among his several grandchildren above mentioned. The personal estate proved insufficient for the purposes contemplated. On A.'s death, B. and the other grandchildren were made wards of Court. One of the executors acted as guardian. In the accounts and dealings in the matter of the minors the legacies were treated as charged on the corpus of the estate, and B. paid interest on them until he died, leaving a son who refused to pay these charges.

Held, that only so much of the legacies as the personality was inadequate to pay was charged on the real estate; that the charge was only on so much of the rents of the real estate in the years immediately following A.'s death as would have made up the deficiency; and that B.'s son was not bound by the dealings in the minor matter.

It is desirable that questions of construction should be settled in the first instance, before the Master proceeds to take the accounts of an estate.—Scott v. Clements, 8 I. C. R. 1; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 91. (C.)

5. A. devised all his estate in a chattel leasehold interest in lands, and "all other my property and worldly estate whatever," upon trust, in the first place, to preserve the chattel interest by payment of head rent and renewal fines. He then bequeathed pecuniary legacies, and among others, £100 to the trustee: "and as to, for, and concerning all the residue of my interest in my said lands, and as to, for, and concerning the residue. Similarly of my other personal estate and effects, subject to the hereinbefore trusts. I hereby give, bequeath and devise all such residue of my interest in the said lands, as also all such the residue of my personal estate and effects, in trust, for my eldest son." He then charged the lands, and the residue of his personal estate, with sums for younger children. A. then declared that, if he died leaving no son, but leaving an eldest or only daughter, then he devised all his interest in the lands, and all the residue of his personal estate, in trust for such daughter, with remainders over; and directed "that all the intermediate rents and profits of my said lands, as well as of the residue of my said other personal estate and effects, which shall accrue, arise, or be made out of both said funds;" subject only to the provision made for A.'s wife by their marriage settlement, and to his debts and funeral expenses, "and to the several legacies hereinbefore enumerated," should go to the trustee. In 1846 the Master, by a report, afterwards confirmed by decree in Ch., found that the legacies were not charged upon A.'s interest in the lands. Held, that, upon the true construction of the will, the legacies were not charged upon the lands. That the legatees were bound by the Master's report.

The Judges of the L. E. Court are bound by a final decree of the Court of Ch.—In re Lanauze, 11 I. C. R. 19; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 30. (C.A.)

6. R., in 1776, upon his marriage, settled his real estate to the use of himself for life, remainder to trustees for 300 years, remainder to the first and other sons of R., successively in tail male, remainder to the first and other daughters of the marriage, successively in tail male, remainder to R.'s right heirs. The trusts of the term were to raise £3000 for the portion or portions of the daughter or daughters, and younger son or sons of the marriage, if more than one daughter or younger son, to be payable among such daughters or younger son, as R. should appoint; in default, equally;

but if only one daughter or younger son, who should not, at the time of the decease of R., be his eldest son, to raise a sum not exceeding £2000, as provision for such only daughter or younger son, as R. should appoint.

R. had issue two daughters only, M. and E.; and died in 1785. On the marriage of M. in 1802, the lands were put in settlement, giving estates tail to the first and other sons of M., remainder to the first and other daughters in tail.

In 1814, a bill was filed against M., her husband, and T. her eldest son, an infant, to raise charges affecting the settled lands. T. died, leaving H., the eldest daughter of M., the first tenant in tail of the settled lands, against whom the suit was revived.

In 1818, a report was made, finding that the estates were charged, under the settlement of 1776, with £3000 for E. In the same year, a decree was made, declaring that sum well charged on the lands, and directing a sale of the fee for payment of the charges. This decree did not reserve a day to show cause, though H. was an infant. The guardian ad litem of H. had an interest adverse to hers; interest on the £3000 was paid by M., down to her death; and, after her death, by the respondent W., down to 1858.

In 1860, a petition was presented by E. against W., a son of M., born after the decree of 1818, and the first tenant in tail under the settlement of 1802. This petition stated the decree of 1818, but did not rely on it as an estoppel, nor pray to have it carried into execution.

Held, that the word "daughter," in the settlement of 1776, meant "daughter not entitled to the estate." That the decree of 1818 was wrong in substance and form.

That W. was not, in the form of suit adopted, bound by this decree.

That he was not bound by the acquiescence evidenced by the payment of interest; and that only £2000 ought to be raised.—Stirum v. Richards, 12 I. C. R. 323; 7 I. Jur. N. S. 69. (C.A.)

1. G. was a joint and several simple contract creditor of H. and W. A suit was instituted to administer the real and personal estate of H., and W., in which suit G. proved his demand. In Jan. 1857, the Master reported that, the parties interested so desiring, he had not taken an account of the personal estate of H., and inserted G.'s claim only in the schedule of the debts of W.

In Feb. 1857 the cause was heard; the report confirmed; and the decree made accordingly. In Jan. 1862, G. filed a petition, in the nature of a bill of review, to vary this decree.

Held, that the Court of Appeal had jurisdiction to entertain this petition; that G., not being a party to the original suit, but having merely come in to prove his debt, was not bound by the consent of the parties interested; and that he had not lost the right to vary this decree by his delay.—Walsh v. W., 18 I. C. R. 496. (C.A.)

XXXIV. 7. b. Infants.

2. The Court will not, on motion, amend the minutes of a decree by striking out the day given to minor depts. to show cause.

Quere—Whether the old practice of giving that day is affected by the 11 G. 4, and 1 W. 4, c. 47?—Esmonde v. Cooke, 1 Dr. & Wal. 250. (C.)

3. Even after enrolment of a decree, the Court will, on application by a minor deft. who attained age after that enrolment, re-hear the cause respecting a particular matter appearing on the Master's report.—Jackson v. Walsh, 1 Dr. & Wal. 255. (C.)

4. Ptf. charged that B., named a deft., was out of the jurisdiction, but omitted to pray process against him on his coming within it. Nevertheless—Held, that ptf. was entitled to costs of a supplemental suit instituted to compel him to join as a conveying party in the deed to the purchaser under the decree.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 Dr. & Wal. 717. (C.)

5. An order directing an issue "with the consent of all parties in the cause," is erroneous so far as it purports to be made with the consent of an infant party.

Quere—If the infant consented, is he bound? But if the order for the issue was a right one to be made, if the infant had not consented, it is immaterial whether he ought to be bound by the consent or not; especially since he was relieved from its effect by being allowed, on coming of age, to make a new defence.

Quere—Is it clear, on the authorities, that an infant deft., in such a case, is entitled, after attaining age, to put in a new answer, and make a new defence?—Malone v. M., 3 I. E. R. 536; 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637; 2 Dr. & Wal. 491, 536.

6. Seem—The Court will not, on motion, amend a decree, by inserting, for a minor deft., a day to show cause.—Tilson v. Lawder, 2 Dr. & War. 286; 1 Con. & L. 392. (C.)

7. On motion, the Court refused to amend a decree by striking out the day to show cause, given to a minor deft., the first tenant in tail of the sold lands.—Mahon v. Dawson, 2 Dr. & War. 286, n. (C.)

XXXIV. 8. Obtaining Decree generally.

8. Children, on whom several estates are settled, may recover part thereof without showing title to the remainder of the settled property.

But when estates and other property, forming a mixed fund, are settled subject to a power of appointment, the Court, when many parties are entitled to the mixed fund, will not, as against a purchaser of part thereof (in which purchase one of its objects acquiesced) act, as against that purchaser, without knowing all the dispositions of that mixed fund.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

deft. a day to show cause?—Esmonde v. Cooke, 1 Dr. & Wal. 250. (C.)

1. The minutes of a decree cannot be used in this Court. The decree itself must be produced.—Hall v. Hill, Fl. & K. 619. (R.)

2. When counsel has relied upon some only of several grounds of defence, such selection does not amount to a waiver of the rest. When such had been the case, and an appeal was made to the H. L., a petition was allowed for a re-hearing to amend the notes of the decree, without withdrawing the appeal.—Galwey v. Barron, Long. & T. 76. (E.E.)

3. Semble—The Court will not, on motion, amend a decree in a suit for sale, when one of the debts is an infant, by inserting therein a direction for the infant deft. to have a day to show cause.—Tilson v. Lawder, 2 Dr. & War. 285. (C.); nom. Tisdall v. Lawler, 1 Con. & L. 892. (C.)

4. To amend the decree in any respect, save in case of a clerical mistake, or error arising from accidental slip or omission, there must be a re-hearing.—Mahon v. Dawson, 2 Dr. & War. 286, note. (C.)

5. The fact of a decree having been made upon consent, will not be a reason for permitting it to be amended.

If an addition have been made to a decree on a motion; Semble—That the decree, quoad such addition, may be amended on motion.—Peed v. Cussen, 4 Dr. & War. 199; 2 Con. & L. 384. (C.)

6. Quære—Can a decree of foreclosure be amended at the Rolls, on motion, by striking out a day to show cause given to an infant thereby?—Flood v. Sutton, Fl. & K. 179; 3 I. E. R. 340. (R.)

7. After a final decree pronounced, but not served, the Court permitted the ptf. to amend his charge, and proceed thereon before the Remembrancer; the Remembrancer to be at liberty to amend his report if he should think fit; and the Registrar to be at liberty to amend the decree, according to the amendment of the report; all to be done at ptf.'s expense.—Cather v. Murphy, Jones & Ca. 245. (E.E.)

8. The Court of Exch. will permit a final decree to be amended, when the object of the amendment is to provide for the rights of parties not before the Court at an earlier period of the suit.—Pidgeon v. D'Alton, Jones & Ca. 276. (E.E.)

9. Final decree, and all prior proceedings, amended, by changing the ptf.'s name from George to John.—Readin v. Lidwell, 4 I. E. R. 688. (E.E.)

10. After enrolment, the Court refused liberty to amend a decree for a sale, by inserting denominations of lands mentioned in the Master's report, but omitted by mistake from the final decree.—Mannix v. Drinan, 3 Dr. & War. 275. (C.)—[Such amendment may be now made under the 103rd G. O. of March 1843, q. v.]

11. It is a matter of course to dismiss with costs a petition of re-hearing presented while the decree remains in minutes.—Malone v. Geraghty, 3 Dr. & War. 252; 2 Con. & L. 235. (C.)

12. On a bill of review the decree was held erroneous in directing a sale of the fee to pay a sum which affected only the life estate, and the sale declared to be only for the life estate.—Talbott v. Minnett, 6 I. E. R. 83. (E.E.)

13. Amendment of the minutes of a decree in a matter for which the party should have been ready at the hearing, will not, in general, be allowed; but in this case an amendment as to costs was allowed under peculiar circumstances.—Boyd v. Belton, 8 I. E. R. 113; 1 Jon. & L. 730. (C.)

14. When decrees are manifestly erroneous, and prejudicial to the rights of a party who was, during all the proceedings, imbecile, the Court will set aside the erroneous decrees and proceedings, upon a re-hearing, the decrees not having been enrolled, although the first decree was pronounced over twenty years, and the second eighteen years, before the petition of re-hearing was presented.

Under the circumstances of the case, and the matter being between the Court and the imbecile person, the Court made an order, without a commission de lun. ing. of reference as to his state of mind, and the proper maintenance to be allowed him.—Knox v. Watters, 10 I. E. R. 353. (C.)

15. The enrolment of a final decree vacated, a decree pro confesso and report thereunder set aside, and the deft. allowed to answer; the bill having been taken pro confesso after an interview with the ptf.'s solicitor, at which the deft. swore he was deceived; and the decrees being plainly against his just rights.

Distinction between decrees on default and on the merits as to opening the enrolments of them.—Murray v. Byrne, 11 I. E. R. 125. (C.)

16. In a renewal suit against the deft., tenant for life, and his eldest son, the question was, whether denomination X. was included in the lease, or was part of an adjoining farm held by the ptf. for a determinable interest? A decree was made for a renewal, and referring it to the Master to enquire and ascertain the boundaries. The interest in the farm having afterwards expired, the deft. brought an ejectment for X., which the ptf. defended, and obtained a verdict. Deft.'s son having died, and his second son, a minor, become tenant in tail, a new bill was filed against the deft. and this son, which stated the ejectment, and that the question tried in it was identical with that involved in the reference, but not in the decree made in 1844, which accorded with the prayer, only directed the former decree to be carried out between the parties. In 1845, the son, being of age, barred the entail; and conveyed the fee to the deft. A bill was filed relying on the ejectment, and praying a declaration that it was unnecessary to carry on the reference, and that the former decrees might be in other respects carried out. Held, that such relief was a variation of the decree of 1844, which could not be given without re-hearing the cause.

Semle—This was a bill of review, which should not have been filed without leave of the Court.—Chute v. M'Gillicuddy, 11 I. E. R. 312. (C.)

1. When, by an error, the bill in the statement and prayer set forth the sum due to ptf. as less than he was entitled to under a deed, and the decree followed the prayer, the Court, on motion, altered the decree; deft.'s answer having admitted the larger sum, and none of the parties objecting.—Molloy v. Burke, 12 I. E. R. 18. (C.)

2. An appeal from a decree for ptf. having been argued in the H. L., ptf. died before judgment. The cause was revived against his executors by deft., who had appealed. The H. L. (9 Cl. & F. 1) reversed the decree, and dismissed the bill, "with costs of the suit in the Court below." Held, that the decrees should be in the same words; and, since it contained additional words, giving costs payable by the executors, it was varied on a re-hearing.—Eyre v. Hollier, 12 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

3. Lands having been sold under an erroneous decree, the purchaser excepted to the title. To avoid the errors in the decree, a deed of appointment was executed, vesting in adults estates previously in contingency. Held, that the Court can cure errors in its own decrees; that a valid appointment would cure the errors; that a vendor has time to validate the title until an order discharging the purchaser has been pronounced; that a deed of appointment is not invalid because executed for the purpose of making title.

That such a deed is invalid if, in consequence of its execution, a pecuniary benefit directly results to the donee of the power.—Wier v. Chamley, 4 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

4. An order was made, but the notes of the Registrar omitted to notice the costs, which were subsequently inserted in the decree signed by the Registrar. On motion to have the costs inserted—Held, that the Court would not, upon motion, amend an order in the nature of a decree, signed by the Registrar.—Blackledge v. Barry, 5 I. Jur. 14. (C.)

5. An order was made under the Trustee Act, 1850, appointing new trustees, and vesting the trust funds in them, and the order not having been got out of the office in time to be stamped, the Court allowed it to be re-issued, as of the date of the application.—In re Molloy's Trusts, 7 I. Jur. 50. (R.)

6. Under the Ren. Lease. Conv. Act was filed a petition wherein the petitioner alleged that no demand under the Tenantry Act had been made on him. The respondent, though served with notice, neglected to appear on the hearing. An order for a f.-f. grant was pronounced. On an affidavit by the respondent, showing that the petitioner had suppressed a letter addressed to him by the respondent, several years before and which might be held to be a demand under the Tenantry Act, the Court allowed the petition to be re-heard; and varied its order.

Waiver of such a demand, if the petitioner intends to rely upon it, should be put in issue by the petition; not by an affidavit in reply.—Ex parte Bull, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 332. (R.)

7. The 98th G. O. 1843, limiting the time for applying to amend a decree to six days after the decree has been pronounced, will be construed strictly; the only remedy is by petition to re-hear.—O'Neill v. Innes, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 208. (C.)

8. A Court of Equity's decree against an equitable tenant in tail for specific execution of a contract relating to the entailed lands, and founded upon a personal equity against the tenant in tail, does not bind the issue in tail, when the tenant in tail dies without having performed the decree.—Stoney v. Saunders, H. & J. 519. (E.E.)

9. A judgment of the H. of Lords will not be made a rule of this Court, without an affidavit verifying the signature of the Clerk of the Parliament.—Blakeney v. Annesley, H. & J., App. 47. (E.E.)

10. After enrolment of a decree, on application of a minor deft. who attained age after that enrolment, the Court re-heard a cause respecting a particular matter appearing on the face of the Master's report.—Jackson v. Welsh, 1 Dr. & Wal. 255. (C.)

11. An order dismissing a bill cannot be enrolled.

An order of the Court of Ch. dismissing a bill, may, although it cannot be enrolled, be relied upon by answer, as a defence to another bill filed in the Court of Exch. for the same object.—O'Brien v. Manders, Fl. & K. 628; 2 I. E. R. 39. (R.)

12. Any party desirous to enrol decree, shall within six months after it is pronounced, leave with the Dep. Keeper of the Rolls a docket, of his solicitor, countersigned by the Lord Chancellor's Secretary, naming the time when he shall attend his Lordship with the decree so deposited; and if his Lordship shall think it right, and shall sign it, such decree shall thereupon be deemed enrolled; and in case any party is desirous to enrol a decree after six months from the making thereof, he shall obtain an order for that purpose conditional, unless on notice, and absolute without further order, unless cause shown within time therein specified; and pleadings filed in Rolls office shall be deemed as enrolments for the purposes of assignment of errors. 103rd G. O., March 1843; G. O. 68.

The enrolment of a decree will be vacated when it has been irregularly entered, and by surprise on the opposite party.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 1 Dr. & War. 72. (C.) [S. p. Lambert v. Hill, ibid, 74; Heron v. Stokes, ibid, 76; Henn v. Bradshaw, ibid, 78.] 1 Con. & L. 187; 4 I. E. R. 278. (C.)

1. A decree to account cannot in general be enrolled; but has been when it contained a declaration of the rights of the parties, and merely directed accounts which were consequential upon those rights.—O'Brien v. Manders, Fl. & K. 628. (R.)

2. There is no ground for giving greater facility to the opening of enrolments here than in England.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 4 I. E. R. 276. (C.)

3. Enrolment of a decree obtained contrary to the terms of the Order of 31st of March 1817, opened on that ground. A party moving to set aside proceedings on the ground of irregularity is not bound to specify in his notice the particular irregularity of which he complains.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 277; 1 Dr. & War. 76. (C.)

4. An enrolment obtained after the period specified in the Order of March 1817, without a special order for the purpose, is irregular.

In acting upon that order for the future, the Court will only grant a rule nisi for enrolment.—Henn v. Bradshaw, 4 I. E. R. 278; 1 Dr. & War. 78; 1 Con. & L. 187. (C.)

5. It is not necessary to present a petition for an order for liberty to enrol a decree, when six months have elapsed from the time when the same was made. The application may be made by motion upon notice in the cause.—Lord Trimleston v. Farrell, 1 Jon. & L. 161. (C.)—[See 103rd G. O., Ch.; 95th G. O., E.E.]

6. The Court will not re-hear a cause in which the decree is not made up, but remains in minutes.—The Comms. of Ch. Don. & Beq. v. Hunter, 1 Dr. & War. 544. (C.)

7. Upon a re-hearing, the ptf., if the deft. does not appear, is to make up his decree as at an original hearing.—M'Cann v. O'Connor, 2 Dr. & War. 42. (C.)

8. After a decree has been enrolled the Court has not jurisdiction to correct a clerical error upon motion.—Mannix v. Drinan, 3 Dr. & War. 275. (C.)

9. An application by a party to vacate his own enrolment of a decree is made to the discretion of the Court, and not of right.

The practice in vacating enrolments is the same here as in England.—Battersby v. Rockfort, 9 I. E. R. 499. (C.)

10. The enrolment of a final decree vacated, a decree pro confesso and report thereunder set aside; and the deft. allowed to answer, the bill having been taken pro confesso after an interview with the ptf.'s solicitor, at which the deft. swore that he was deceived, and the decrees being plainly against his just rights.—Murray v. Byrne, 11 I. E. R. 125. (C.)

11. A former decree dismissing a bill if not enrolled and pleaded, is not an absolute bar to another suit for the same demand. If it is relied on by answer and appears not to have been on the merits it is no defence.—Joby v. Swift, 11 I. E. R. 410. (C.)

12. A caveat prevents the enrolment of a decree only for twenty-eight days after the caveat is entered.—Tilly v. Browne, 13 I. E. R. 245. (C.)

13. The application for leave to enrol a decree pronounced more than six months previously may be either by motion or petition.—Hamilton v. H., 1 I. C. R. 253. (C.)

14. A decree declared a will null and void, and directed an account of by-gone rents, and that the defts. A., and B. his wife, should, within one month after the date of the Master's report, pay to the ptf. the sum which the Master should report to be due on such account. A. died, and the suit was revived against his executor. After A.'s death, and before the revivor, B. filed a further discharge in the Master's office. Held, that the decree did not impose a several liability on B.; and the Court refused to order her to pay the sum found due by the report.

A decree, directing a husband and wife to pay a sum of money, imposes a joint liability on them, which may be enforced during the husband's life; but does not impose a several liability on the wife, nor can it be enforced against her after the husband's death.

If a decree directs a sum of money to be paid, ascertained by a report made or to be made, the report is, by reference, to be considered incorporated in the decree; and the report and decree may be enrolled under the 41 G. 3, c. 90, s. 36.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 540. (R.) [Reversed: ibid, 629. (C.)]

15. When an appeal to the House of Lords has been lodged on a decree against which decrees sought to be enrolled would be evidence, the Court of Ch. will not refuse permission to enrol them, or put under terms the party seeking to do so.—Spread v. Neue, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (C.)

16. Although a decree be made by the Court of Appeal in Ch. the application to enrol it must be made to the Court of Ch., when the appeal is from Ch. Otherwise, when the appeal is not from the Court of Ch.—Dolphin v. Aylward, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (C.A.)

1. The application to have an order of the Court of Appeal enrolled must be made to that Court, not to the Court of Ch. when the appeal is not from the Court of Ch.—In re Sadleir's Estates, 10 I. C. R. 461. (C.A.)

2. Semble—The Court, having made an erroneous decree to account, is not bound to continue the error by further proceedings in the suit taken on the return of the Master's report.—Roberts v. Hughes, Beat. 417. (C.)

3. When a decree directs all proper parties to execute, and some, who are within the jurisdiction refuse to do so, the Court will not, in the first instance, direct the Master to execute under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78; but will issue an attachment against them. In such a case, a creditor, who has proved his charge under the decree, is as much bound thereby as if he were a party.—Usher v. Scanlan, 3 I. E. R. 474; Fl. & K. 243. (R.)

4. An order, dismissing a bill with costs for want of prosecution, is within the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 27; and, after taxation of costs, the Court will, without further order, appoint a receiver under that section.—Madden v. Davis, Fl. & K. 475. (R.)

5. A decree, not being a personal one, is not within the 26th of Sir Richard Bolton's Rules; and a bill of review and reversal may be filed without the decree being first performed.—Kelly v. Lennon, Fl. & K. 90. (R.)

6. Practice as to issuing a fi. fa. upon a decree, against the goods of the debt., pursuant to the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 27, 29.—Ould v. Griffin, 3 I. E. R. 565. (E.E.)

7. Before an attachment for non-performance of a decree or order of the Court can issue, personal service of the decree or order must be effected.—Whistler v. Aylward, in re Fitton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 1. (C.)

8. On a bill to carry into execution a former decree grounded on a question of construction then discussed, the Court will not re-open the question, though of opinion that the decision was wrong. The original cause must be re-heard.—Persse v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 508. (C.)

9. Semble—The 41 G. 3, c. 90, s. 6, which provides for the exemplification of Irish decrees in the Court of Ch. in England, applies to decrees or orders which direct payment of costs generally, as well as to those in which a particular sum is named.—Stamer v. Nesbitt, 1 I. Jur. 298. (C.)

10. Bill by A., personal representative to his father, to carry a decree into execution. A. died, and administration c. t. a. was granted to his widow, who took out administration de b. n. to the father of A. Held, that the widow was entitled to carry on the proceedings by bill of revivor.—Hamilton v. H., 2 I. Jur. 153. (C.)

11. Husband seized of lands, in right of his wife, paid into Court the amount of a judgment, sought to be made a charge on the lands. Bill stating that the lands were exonerated from the judgment by deeds, and praying that the trusts of these deeds might be carried into execution, and the amount paid out of other lands. Decree directing an account. Report finding that the sum paid was due to husband and wife. Decree directing payment to husband and wife. Husband alone assigned the decree, and died, leaving the wife surviving. Bill by assignee of the decree to carry it into execution. Held, on demurrer for want of equity, that the right to the benefit of the decree survived to the wife.—Rowland v. McDonnell, 2 I. Jur. 107. (R.)

12. The owner of the legal fee of an estate was declared by decree of the House of Lords bound to convey that fee upon trusts. Afterwards he took a conveyance of an interest other than that which the decree was intended to affect. Held, no answer to those entitled to the benefit of the decree that he could not convey the property without parting with such other interest; but that his duty was to, first, obey the decree, and then set up any other right competent to him.—Persse v. P., 1 I. Jur. N. S. 395. (H.L.); 5 H. of Lords Cas. 682.

13. The Corporation of B., having a power to borrow money to a limited amount, and to purchase lands to improve their town, borrowed money exceeding the amount authorised by their Acts, with which the Lands Cl. Cons. Acts were incorporated. K., being served by the Corporation with notice to treat for the sale of lands in the borough, agreed to sell, and allowed the price to remain unpaid. On an information filed against the Corporation, to which K. was not a party, they were restrained from applying the borough funds to the payment of specified debts, of which the petitioner's claim was one. He obtained against the Corporation a decree for specific performance, and for payment of the sum due to him in respect of his lands. Held, that he was not entitled to enforce that decree against chattel property of the Corporation, purchased

2. Semble—A deft., who has answered the original bill, may demur to the whole of the amended bill, if the objection appears for the first time on the amended bill.—Bayly v. Cumming, 10 I. E. R. 405. (R.)

3. A notice party to a bill did not enter a common or a special appearance; and a memorandum of service on him was entered. At the hearing, the cause was ordered to stand over to amend by adding parties. The amended bill required the same party to answer. Held, that he might demur to it.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 13 I. E. R. 365. (R.)

A demurrer was allowed to be amended, by confining it to so much of a cross-bill (not in aid of a defence at law) as sought a discovery of the names and residences of the witnesses for the ptf. in the original suit, and of the evidence which they could give.—*O'Connor v. XXXVI. 8. Demurrer ore tenus.

[See G. O. (1867), 47.]

7. Demurrer, for a cause assigned, allowed ore tenus, without costs.—Rowland v. M'Donnell, 13 I. E. R. 365. (R.)

XXXVII. ELECTION TO SUE AT LAW OR IN EQUITY.

8. The side-bar rule to elect applies only when the proceedings at law appear upon the face of the pleadings. When the ptf. commenced an action at law, in which he could obtain part only of the relief prayed by the bill, the Court allowed him to proceed at law upon the terms that the bill, so far as it related to the relief sought at law, should be dismissed at the hearing with costs.—Donnellan v. Wallace, Fl. & K. 511. (R.)

9. The proper course to compel the ptf. to elect between a suit in Equity and one at Law, is, by entering a side-bar rule, and not by application to the Court.

The deft. is at liberty to enter the rule at any time after the filing of his answer, and by it to call on the ptf. to elect within eight days after service, notwithstanding that the ptf. has six weeks to except to the answer.—Hollier v. Hedges, 9 I. E. R. 37. (R.)

10. Any documents which could be used at Law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in Equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; but subject to enquiry, if deft. be taken by surprise. Such a method of proof may, however, affect the costs.—Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

11. If a ptf. proceed at Law and in Equity, the deft. cannot first give an evasive answer, and immediately enter a side-bar rule to elect. The rule is at the peril of the deft.; and if, upon exception, the answer be found not full, the rule is ineffectual.—Read v. D. and D. Railway Co., 1 I. Jur. 19. (R.)

12. The rule, in the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 107, s. 71, respecting election, still prevails. The creditor need not elect until he has an opportunity of seeing which fund is most productive.—In re Browne, 9 I. C. R. 271. (R.)

1. Deft., having examined ptf. on personal interrogatories, declined to use the examination. Held, that ptf. could not resort to it.—Cooper v. Madill, Hayes, 573. (E.E.)

2. A discovery of evidence is not confined to a disclosure of such facts only as will tend to establish affirmatively the case of a ptf. in possession.—O'Connor v. Malone, 8 & Sc. 516. (R.)—[See s. c., ibid, 551. (R.)]

3. If a party uses a document as evidence in a Court of Justice, the whole of it will be evidence against him on a future occasion.—Hamilton v. Patten, 1 I. E. R. 341. (C.)

1. An admission, which goes to the gist of the case, must be put in issue by the pleadings, otherwise, evidence thereof cannot be received.—Earl of Donoughmore v. Cataneo, Jon. & C. 250. (C.)

2. In a suit by children to enforce payment of their portions, their legitimacy was questioned by the next tenant for life, a deft. Held, that a marriage de facto having been once established, it lay on the party impeaching the marriage to show that it was illegal and void.

Sufficient evidence of a marriage de facto having been submitted to the Court—Held, that it was competent to decide the question of marriage for the purposes of the suit, without directing an issue.—Piers v. Tuile, 1 Dr. & Wal. 279. (C.)

3. Quære—Whether the evidence of a witness should be read, who had deposed to ptf.'s admission of his having abandoned the contract—the fact of that abandonment, but not the admission itself, having been put in issue by the answer?—Garrett v. Earl of Bessborough, 2 I. E. R. 180; 2 Dr. & Wal. 441. (C.)

4. In a bill to foreclose and sell, ptf. set forth so much of a mortgage deed as showed it to be in the nature of a Welsh mortgage, and at the hearing his counsel sought to read in aid of the bill the deed, which contained an express trust for sale. Held, that it should not be read.—O'Connell v. Cummins, 2 I. E. R. 251. (R.)

5. Evidence cannot be received of admissions made by a party, unless they are properly put in issue by the pleadings, so that he may have an opportunity of contradicting them.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[See 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 85.]

6. An admission in deft.'s answer; that his solicitor wrote a letter "to some such effect as that in bill stated; but for certainty as to the contents thereof, deft. begs leave to refer thereto, when produced and proved;" does not authorise ptf. to read the passage referred to in the bill, to show what were the contents of that letter.—Kent v. Roberts, 3 I. E. R. 279. (E.E.)

7. An objection to the ptf.'s title not noticed in the answer, but appearing from the ptf.'s own evidence, relied on at the hearing.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, 7 I. E. R. 596. (C.)

8. A deft. cannot read as against the ptf., depositions taken on behalf of a co-deft.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

9. Payment of a small annual sum, inadequate to the value of the demised premises, for a number of years, is not per se evidence from which a tenancy from year to year can be inferred.—Reynolds v. R., 12 I. E. R. 172. (R.)

10. Any document or evidence, that has been before the Court below, may, on appeal to the H. L., be properly brought under the notice of the House, but no others.—Geraghty v. Malone, 1 H. L. Cas. 89.

11. When a will purported to have been attested in presence of three witnesses, two of whom since died, and the third asserted that he had not signed it in presence of the other two, but it appearing from the affidavits that it probably was duly attested in their presence, the presumption is "omnia rite esse acta."—In the Goods of Gibbons, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

12. An Electric Telegraph Company cannot refuse to produce messages, because they are privileged communications, if they relate to the affairs of the bankrupt. Any privilege attaching to such messages is the privilege of the sender; not of the company.—In re Tobyn, 7 I. C. R. 81. (B.)

13. Counsel's opinion was admitted as evidence that a disentailing deed was executed for the purpose of a mortgage, the lender's counsel having required the mortgage deed to be enrolled, but the disentailing deed having been executed in lieu of the enrolment.—Power v. P., 7 I. C. R. 354. (R.)—[See s. c., 9 I. C. R. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Nap. 268; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 369. (C.A.)]

14. A will propounded, and impeached only by a plea alleging a later will, cannot be decreed for unless some evidence of execution be given; an affidavit will suffice.—Whitney v. W., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 392. (P.)

15. Unattested wills dated before the 1 Vic., c. 26, being impeached, cannot be established by evidence of the testator's handwriting only. Additional evidence, connecting the will somehow with the testator, must be supplied.—Little v. Comyn, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 413. (P.)

16. Under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 68, a will, or the contents of a lost will, may be proved by a single witness.—Daly v. Burke, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (P.)

17. Parties referred to a Court of Law for a writ of habeas corpus to bring up a prisoner to give evidence in the Court of Probate.—Ternan v. T., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 135. (P.)

18. Deft. on consent withdrew his pleas. The Court then made an order under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 65, in the nature of a decree, declaring the validity of the will proved, and without requiring further proof.—Berry v. B., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (P.)

19. Confidential letters, written before suit commenced, by one of the parties, to his solicitor, in reference to the subject matter in dispute, are privileged; and cannot be given in evidence at the hearing by the opposite party.—Phibbs v. O'Donel, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (C.)

1. One of the attesting witnesses to a will, having gone to America, had not been heard of for seven years. The other, being in England, refused to attend to be examined, unless on receipt of sixty guineas. The will was established, on evidence of its due execution given by a person who was present thereat; and upon evidence of the handwriting of the testatrix and of the two witnesses given by others.

A legatee under a will disputed the due execution of a later will of which the watermark showed that it had been antedated. He was allowed his costs.—Cowan v. Rankin, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (P.)

2. A testator produced an executed will to another person to whom he declared its contents. That production and declaration, held, admissible evidence to prove the will's contents.

Semble—Those declarations would not have been evidence if the will had not been at the same time produced, and shown to such person.—Hanks v. Tottenham, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (P.)

3. Quare—Whether proceedings for service as heir in Scotland, in which the ancestor's domicile is stated, are admissible as evidence thereof?—Lockhart's Trust; ex parte Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

4. A will prepared by a solicitor from instructions of the testator, the contents being deposed to by him, was allowed to be proved, though the original was lost, [having been thrown out, as was supposed, by the testator's widow in a bed wherein she had concealed it.

To show that the will was an equitable one, the Court required evidence of the provisions made by settlement for next-of-kin not substantially provided for by the will.—M'Cracken v. M'C., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 380. (P.)

XXXVIII. 2. What is sufficient Evidence.

5. When lands are decreed to be sold subject to an annuity, it is conclusive evidence that the annuity is prior to the claims of all claimants under the decree. A report, on a reference to ascertain priorities, found that the arrears of the annuity were posterior to some of those claims. Held, erroneous, and that it should be varied accordingly.—Sparrow v. Cooper, 1 Jones, 72. (E.E.)

6. Whether evidence of conversations with the parties, or with those under whom they claim, which are not put in issue specifically by the pleadings, will be received, is a question to be decided according to the circumstances of each case. There is not any inflexible rule upon the subject.—Incorporated Society v. Rose, 3 I. E. R. 257. (C.)

7. An inspeximus of a grant by an archbishop, contained in a grant of confirmation by a subsequent archbishop, which was enrolled, was produced from the Rolls Record

Office. Held, good secondary evidence.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp'n. of Cashel, 3 Dr. & War. 294; 2 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

8. A witness proved a letter to have been duly posted and properly directed. The receipt of it was positively denied in the answer. The copy tendered in evidence had a defective direction at the foot of it. Quare—How far admissible in evidence?—Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 I. E. R. 115; 1 Jon. & L. 491. (C.)

9. The entry of payment of the King's silver is sufficient evidence of a fine having been duly levied; the fine being complete on such payment.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 8 I. E. R. 317. (C.)

10. Ptf., claiming as assignee of F., sought an account of the real and personal estate of F., to which he was entitled under his father's will; and alleged by his bill that F., trading in Australia, was duly adjudged an insolvent, according to the meaning and effect of the laws there with respect to insolvent debtors; that all his estate, &c., there and in this kingdom thereupon became duly vested in H., and afterwards became duly vested in ptf. "in manner as appears by the petition of ptf. to C., Chief Justice; the fiat of C., the adjudication and vesting order signed by C., and the other orders in the matter, to which the ptf. refers," &c. F. was a minor at the time of the insolvency. His parents had previously resided and died in this country. Held, on demurrer, that the ptf.'s title, as assignee, was sufficiently stated, the profer of the proceedings in the foreign Insolvent Court being sufficient proof of the preceding allegations that F. was duly adjudged, &c.—Stephens v. M'Farland, 8 I. E. R. 444. (R.)

11. The Poor-law valuation is evidence, as a public document, of the value of land comprised in it.

A document not in issue by the bill, and a motion for the introduction of which by amendment has been refused, cannot be used as the hearing.—Swift v. M'Tiernan, 11 I. E. R. 602. (C.)

12. The Poor-law valuation is, as a public document, evidence of the value of the lands comprised in it.—Welland v. Lord Middleton, 11 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

13. The contributions of sub-tenants, under leases with t. q. covenants, to renewal fines, are to be calculated according to the proportion which the annual value of the lands comprised in each lease bears to the annual value of the entire lands comprised in the original lease at the time of the renewal.

Reference cannot be had to contemporaneous leases to ascertain how such contributions have been regulated on the estate.—Molony v. Scollard, 12 I. E. R. 93. (R.)

14. In a decree for an account of old standing against an executor, a direction was inserted allowing him to discharge himself by affidavit for items though exceeding forty shillings.—Dooner v. D., 12 I. E. R. 580. (C.)

1. A reference having been directed to enquire and report what was due for rent, fines, &c., and whether interest had been customarily paid on such fines, the report found that no evidence had been laid before the Master with respect to the interest having been customarily paid or not. The Master found a sum due for interest. The report having been excepted to on this ground was confirmed at the Rolls. On appeal—Held, that a lease set forth in the schedule to the report, showing that interest was payable, was evidence to sustain the finding; and that the M. R. was right in overruling the exception.—Brabazon v. Lord Lucan, 1 I. Jur. 116; on appeal, 2 I. Jur. 57. (C.)

2. By marriage articles of 1767, it was agreed that £1000, secured by bond of A., the intended husband, on which judgment was entered, should be divided among the younger children of the marriage. By deed of 1795, A. conveyed the lands of K., whereof he was seized in fee, to his own use, for life; remainder, subject to £500 secured by a term for his younger children, to J., his second son, for life; remainder to his third, &c., sons in tail. In 1798 A., by will, without noticing the deed of 1795, devised K., subject to £1000 for his younger children, to J. After A.'s death, bills were filed in 1803 and 1818, on behalf of some of the younger children, to raise the £2000 secured by the articles and the will; but not noticing or relying on the deed, which was afterwards put in issue by one of the answers. In 1818, G., the fourth son, entitled to an estate tail in remainder under the deed, became insolvent. He and his assignee were parties to the latter suit, but not in respect of that estate. A decree for sale of the fee was pronounced for the sum due under the articles, and for part of that due under the deed. The abstract of title stated C.'s insolvency; and that his assignee's heir would join in the conveyance. The assignment under the insolvency had been lost, but the deed of 1795 was referred to in the schedule. Held, that the abstract and schedule afforded sufficient evidence of an actual assignment of the estate tail in remainder under the Insolvent Act then in force.—Keogh v. K., 13 I. E. R. 284. (R.)

3. A. agreed to mortgage premises by depositing title deeds, with which he delivered a letter, setting out the premises intended to be mortgaged, and a rental which included the rents of premises not mentioned in the letter, and of which the title deeds had not been delivered. Held, that the rental was not sufficient evidence of the parties' intention to include the latter premises.—Stephenson v. Getty, 4 I. Jur. 334. (C.)

4. By marriage settlement lands were conveyed to A. and B., and the survivor of them and his heirs, on trust for the intended husband for life, and after his death, in trust "to convey at the request of the eldest son of the marriage" or of certain other persons. A. and B., having died, and a petition having been filed to carry into effect the trusts of the settlement—Held, that before giving secondary evidence of the settlement, proof should be given of an ineffectual search for it having been made among the papers of both trustees; and that proof of such search among the papers of the survivor was insufficient.—Abbott v. Geraghty, 6 I. Jur. 49. (C.)

5. In an action brought by D., claiming to be lessee of a several fishery in a public navigable river, against S., for disturbing D. in his fishery, S. pleaded not guilty; and that he was himself seized of a several fishery in the locus in quo. A verdict for D. was set aside upon exceptions; but eventually S. submitted to judgment against him.

Semble—That the verdict and depositions of the witnesses in that action were admissible in favour of a subsequent lessee of the fishery claiming under the lessor of D., against persons claiming to be entitled to fish, as of common right, in the locus in quo, it being a public navigable river, or arm of the sea. Held, that the admission of the verdict and depositions in evidence was not a ground for setting aside a verdict on an issue directed from Ch. to try whether the lessor of D. had the exclusive right which he claimed.

In a similar action, brought by a subsequent lessee of the fishery, the deft. pleaded a plea relying on the general public right. Held, that the verdict and depositions of witnesses in the former case were admissible as evidence of reputation.

An ancient grant of a several fishery in L., to I., was ambiguous with respect to the local limits of the fishery granted. On the trial of an issue "whether I. had an exclusive right of fishing in L., or any and what parts thereof," the deft. admitted I.'s right to all of the fishery of L., southward of C. I., however, gave evidence of the enjoyment of the fishery of L., southward of C. Held, that the Judge was not bound to have told the jury that evidence of enjoyment of the fishery by I., to the southward of C., was not evidence of a right to the fishery to the northward of C.—Allen v. Donnelly, 5 I. C. R. 452; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (C.)

6. A deaf and dumb testator's will must be established by the clearest evidence of his perfect capacity, due instructions for, and proper execution of it.

When a deft., the heir-at-law, is of unsound mind, though not so found by inquisition, and no appearance has been had for him, though the citation and notice of hearing have, pursuant to order, been served on his mother and on the proprietor of the asylum, the Court will, on a hearing to prove the will, require the evidence to be taken down by a shorthand writer, and to be verified by him; his copy of the verified evidence to be lodged in the Registry, together with all documents given in evidence, to be preserved there, and not given out.

Semble—The Court has power to bind the rights of insane persons, though not so found by inquisition.—Massey v. Pennefather, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 268. (P.)

1. Degree of proof necessary to establish a will, when the case is suspicious.—Moloney v. Casey, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (P.)

2. An affirmation, taken under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 82, stated that affirmant was a member of a religious sect called "Separatists," but did not in terms follow the form of affirmation required by the Act. Held, that it must be assumed to have been properly made.—Wolseley v. Worthington, 14 I. C. R. 369. (C. A.)—[Affirming Rolls decision, 13 I. C. R. 841.]

3. A. and B., brothers, were entitled as tenants in common to mill premises worth £7500, one-third only of which belonged to B., who owed A. many thousands of pounds.

B., by deed, assigned his share to A., in consideration of £50, in cash, and the release of a debt of £300. By deed, dated one month later, A., in consideration of love and affection to B., his wife and children, assigned all the mill premises in trust to pay an annuity of £150 a-year, for the benefit of B. and his wife and children. These deeds were prepared by the trustee, as solicitor, who deposed that they were one transaction, and that part of the consideration for the first deed (executed only two days before the date of the second) was the annuity granted by the second deed.

Semble—The evidence was not sufficient to prove a valuable consideration for the second deed.

To support, against creditors, a deed voluntary on its face, the proof of valuable consideration must be clear, and free from suspicion.—Graham v. O'Keefe, 16 I. C. R. 1. (R.)

4. In a possessory suit the petitioner is entitled to an injunction on proof of possession uninterrupted, save by the act complained of, during three years preceding the date of filing the petition.

A possessory petition should not rely on any title other than the triennial possession.

A possessory petition cannot be amended.

In a possessory suit issues may be directed.

The Crown, by letters patent of 19 Jac. 1, and 13 Car. 2, granted a several fishery within certain limits of the river Bann, which, within those limits, is divided into two branches by a channel, called the New Cut. The Court directed an issue. Upon the trial, the verdict found that the New Cut was, at the time of the trial, part of the river; but that there was no evidence to show whether it existed at the date of the grant, or whether it was a natural or an artificial channel. Held, that the letters patent did not give the right to a several fishery in the New Cut, unless it was, at the date of the grant, a branch of the river.—O'Neill v. M'Erlaine, 16 I. C. R. 280. (R.)

5. The Court refused to decree the cancellation of a bond, for which, at the time of its execution, no money passed, on the petitioner's sole evidence against the respondent's answering affidavit, stating that the bond was the petitioner's free and voluntary act, done for past services, and advances of money.—Wyse v. Lambert, 16 I. C. R. 378. (R.)

6. An incumbrancer on the final schedule noticed a prior incumbrancer, claiming under a judgment mortgage, that, on the final hearing of the schedule, he would be required to produce proof of his judgment mortgage, and that it was duly registered, so as to be a charge upon the lands.

The judgment mortgagee produced a certified copy of the affidavit made to register the judgment as a mortgage. The affidavit was right in point of form. No objection was filed. Held, sufficient proof of the validity of the judgment mortgage.—In re Flood's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 116. (C.A.)

7. Semble—A Scotch Advocate's opinion on a question of Scotch law, is not receivable in evidence unless expressed in the form of an affidavit, and in general terms, not pointed at the circumstances of the particular case.—Lockhart's Trusts, ex parte Lockhart, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (R.)

XXXVIII. 3. a. Of what Facts generally Evidence is Necessary or Admissible: Statements in Pleadings.

[See also PLEADING, II. 2. a.—PRESUMPTION.]

8. Semble—That the general rule of the Courts of Equity, that nothing is admissible in evidence which is not put in issue by the pleadings, ought not to be considered as a stringent unyielding rule, but ought to be modified according to the circumstances of each case.

Quere—Is the admission of a party to the suit admissible in evidence when the fact of which it is an admission is put in issue, but not the admission itself?—Garrett v. The Earl of Bessborough, 2 Dr. & Wal. 457. (C.)

9. Semble—It is not necessary for a deft. to put forward by his answer all the legal and equitable points of his defence; it is sufficient if he state fully the facts upon which they may be raised.—Steele v. Mitchell, 2 Dr. & Wal. 568; 8 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

10. Semble—The statement in a bill, that one co-ptf. had purchased in trust for another, without any evidence thereof—Held, sufficient.

Thus, at the hearing, the bill was not open to objection on the ground of misjoinder.—

Butler v. Lord Portarlington, 4 I. E. R. 1; 1 Dr. & War. 20; 1 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

1. When a deft. by answer insists that he is a purchaser for value, without notice, proof of payment of the purchase-money is an essential part of his defence. If he fails to prove this, the Court will not allow the cause to stand over to enable him to do so.—Moloney v. Kernan, 2 Dr. & War. 31. (C.)
2. When the bill prayed an account of what, without wilful default, might have been received, and the case was opened as if a simple account only was sought, evidence of wilful default was admitted, although the general rule is, that evidence cannot be entered to support a case which has not been opened.—Crawford v. O'Sullivan, 2 Con. & L. 410. (C.)
3. An objection to the ptf.'s title, not noticed in the answer, but appearing from the ptf.'s own evidence, relied on at the hearing.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, 7 I. E. R. 596. (C.)
4. In a suit to carry into execution the trusts of a will, a receiver will not be appointed over the lands in the possession of the heir-at-law, unless he admits the will; or until it is proved against him.—Dobbin v. Adams, 8 I. E. R. 157. (R.)
5. An agreement to reduce rent presumed from the receipt of the reduced rent, which was consistent with the recital in a settlement, though during the greater part of the period a tenant for life received the rent; and the reduction was held to extend to the entire interest, which was an estate for lives and a term of years in remainder, and not to be confined to the estate for lives.—Enraght v. Haughton, 8 I. E. R. 274. (C.)
6. An issue was directed by this Court to try whether R. was a lunatic at the time of the execution of certain instruments? At the trial, a memorial of a deed, executed by R. was produced, as evidence of the acts of R. The deed itself was not produced, nor was the non-production of it accounted for. Held, on a motion for a new trial, that the memorial was properly received in evidence.
R., after the date of the deeds, was found a lunatic under a commission. Orders and a report in the lunacy matter, containing recitals and statements which were not evidence, and might influence the jury in finding their verdict, were sent to the jury, the Judge informing them that the recitals and statements were not evidence of the facts contained therein, and cautioning them not to regard them. The Court refused a new trial on that ground.—Creagh v. Blood, 8 I. E. R. 434; 2 Jon. & L. 509. (C.)
7. When a marriage settlement made by the husband's father was defective on its face, in omitting any limitation after the life estate of the husband and a jointure to the wife, whereby the reversion would extend to X., the elder brother of the husband—a correction of the settlement was refused as against a judgment creditor of X., though sought as soon as the omission was discovered, the evidence of the intended limitations consisting of a letter and memorandum from the lady's father, and conversations with the settlor after the date of the settlement, the draft being lost, and the solicitor who prepared it being unable to account for the omission.—Milner v. M., 8 I. E. R. 488. (C.)
8. A Court cannot, without proof, presume an agreement on the ground that, if there was not an agreement, there was fraud.—Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.
9. The answer admitted that a document was of the purport stated in the bill, but referred to it when produced and proved. Held, that ptf. was not entitled to read from the bill the statement of the contents of the document.—Dowling v. Legh, 9 I. E. R. 413; 3 Jon. & L. 716. (C.)
10. When the fact of bankruptcy is not put in issue by the bill, evidence thereof is not admissible at the hearing.—Archbold v. Comrs. of Ch. D. & B., 2 H. L. Cas. 440.—[Rev. 11 I. E. R. 187.]
11. The bill in an administration suit erroneously stated, in respect to dates and other particulars, agreements for leases to the testator, V. His heir-at-law, in his answer, admitted the agreements to be of the purport stated in the bill, but for greater certainty referred to the original agreements when produced. He died. The suit was revived as against his son and heir-at-law, T., a minor, who, in his answer (by his guardian) to the original and revived bill, also admitted the agreements to be of the nature set forth. A decree directed the Master to take an account of the real and personal estate of V., and to state whether the premises agreed to be demised to him formed part of his real or personal assets. The original agreements were not produced before the Master; but T., in his charge, filed in the Master's office, made an admission similar to that contained in his answer. The Master by his report found that the premises formed part of V.'s personal estate. To that report T. filed exceptions.
After the cause was set down for hearing, on the report, exceptions, and further directions, T.'s solicitor, who had been solicitor for T.'s father, for the first time obtained copies of the agreements. Counsel for T. mentioned at the hearing that the agreements differed from the description given of them in the bill, and tended to show that V. took a freehold estate in the premises. Other parties in the cause objected to the admission of the original agreements in evidence in opposition to the previous admission in the pleadings. The Court then yielded to that objection, and overruled the exceptions; but upon a special motion being afterwards made—Held, that the Master should be directed to review his report, and that T. should be permitted to file a supplemental charge in the office, putting in issue the original agreements; but should pay the costs of the motion, and the costs arising on the new reference to the Master.

That, before the decree to account, T. would have been permitted by supplemental answer to rectify the erroneous admissions; but that, after the decree, leave to file a supplemental answer could not be granted.—Carbery v. Cor, 2 I. C. R. 377; 2 I. Jur. 25. (C.)

1. Z. upon his marriage settled a sum upon the issue of the marriage, reserving a life use. There was issue A., B., C., D., and E. A. went abroad, and never was heard of after the 20th Oct. 1817. Z. by will left all his personal property to E., and died in 1824. E. then claimed two-fifths of the fund, that is, his own share and all A.'s share, which he claimed through Z. B., C., and D. claimed each one-fourth of the entire fund, that is, their own shares and a distributive portion of A.'s, the seven years from the time at which A. was last heard of, not having expired till after Z.'s death.

Upon petition for distribution of the fund, one-fifth was ordered to be paid to each of the four children. The remaining one-fifth share was left in Court until evidence could be had of the period of death.—Gore v. G., 5 I. Jur. 202. (R.)

2. V., by lease of July 1789, demised lands to P., for three lives. The lease contained the following covenant:—"And I, A. V., do bind myself, my heirs and assigns, on the decease of any of the above mentioned persons, to put in another person's life in said lease, the said P., his heirs or assigns, giving notice in twelve months of the decease of said life." The lease became vested in M., the last surviving c. q. vie. M. died in Feb. 1856, leaving the petitioner, then resident in America, and who had no communication with his family, his eldest son and heir-at-law. The petitioner's younger brother claimed as heir-at-law of M.; and, having nominated a life, filed a cause petition for specific performance of the above covenant. That petition was dismissed, the present petitioner being proved to be alive. The present petition was filed for the same purpose in July 1857. Held, that there were no equitable grounds for granting relief against the omission of the petitioner to give notice of the decease of the life within twelve months.

Semble—That the covenant to renew did not apply to the decease of the last surviving c. q. vie.—Murphy v. Jackson, 7 I. C. R. 502; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 288. (C.A.)—[Affg 7 I. C. R. 189; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 132. (R.)]

3. A cause petition, by way of information and bill, should state, and proof should be given of, the individual interest of the person named as relator.—The Attorney-General v. Le Hunte, 8 I. C. R. 437. (R.)

4. A., seized in tail of K., and other lands, suffered a recovery of them in 1834; and in 1832, devised them. In 1836, A. borrowed money on a mortgage of K., and on a collateral judgment. On that occasion a disentailing deed of all the lands was executed, and enrolled, by which A. conveyed all the lands to the use of himself and his heirs. Held, that the deed was a total revocation of the will.

On the occasion of the mortgage, the lender's counsel had objected to the recovery which had been suffered of K., and had advised that the mortgage should be enrolled. Quære—whether that opinion was admissible as evidence?—Power v. P., 9 I. C. R. 178. (C.A.) 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier 200. [Affirming Rolls decision: 7 I. C. R. 354.]

5. When, after a decree, material evidence is discovered, and a supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review, is filed to vary the decree, the supplemental petition ought to be set down to come on before the Court of Appeal along with the hearing of the appeal from the original decree.—Barton v. Sampson, 10 I. C. R. 161. (C.A.)

6. A petitioner is not entitled to read from his petition the statement of a document, to a copy of which the petition refers, although no affidavit has been filed by the respondent.—Talbot v. Hamilton, 14 I. C. R. 375. (C.)

XXXVIII. 3. b. Declarations, Admissions, &c.

7. The only evidence of notice (to B. a subsequent mortgagee) of a settlement was an affidavit by E., that he had apprised him thereof. The bill charged that, before the execution of the mortgage, B. was informed by the mortgagors of that settlement. Held, that the fact of notice was sufficiently put in issue to admit this evidence.—Stuart v. Ferguson, Hayes, 452. (E.E.)

8. Conversations in the nature of admissions cannot be read in evidence, unless they have been put distinctly in issue.—Browne v. Chambers, Hayes, 597. (E.E.)

9. Quære—Whether the evidence of a witness should be read, who deposed to an admission by ptf. that he had abandoned the contract; the fact of such abandonment, but not the admission itself, having been put in issue by the answer.

The principles upon which the Court acts respecting evidence of admissions considered.—Garrett v. Earl of Bessborough, 2 I. E. R. 180; 2 Dr. & Wal. 441. (C.)

10. An admission which goes to the gist of the case, must be put in issue by the pleadings, otherwise evidence of it cannot be received.—Earl of Donoughmore v. Cataneo, Jon. & Ca. 250. (E.E.)

11. Evidence cannot be received of admissions made by a party, unless those admissions are properly put in issue by the pleadings, so that he may have an opportunity of answering them.—Austin v. Chambers, 6 Cl. & F. 1.—[See 3 Dr. & War. 178; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 85. (C.)]

12. A bill of revivor against the executor of a deceased party, prayed that he should admit assets, or for an account. The executor admitted assets sufficient to answer ptf.'s demand, if any, he being advised that the ptf. had not any demand against the assets. Held, not a sufficient admission of assets, and that an account should be directed.—M'Tiernan v. Bell, 3 I. E. R. 193. (E.E.)

1. Whether evidence of conversations with the parties, or those under whom they claim, which are not specifically put in issue by the pleadings, will be received, is a question to be decided according to the circumstances of each case. There is no inflexible rule upon the subject.—The Incorporated Society v. Rose, 3 I. E. R. 257. (C.)

2. Declarations of the testator contemporaneous with the will cannot be given in evidence, to show that a legacy was intended to be a satisfaction of a judgment debt of the testator's.—Hall v. Hill, 4 I. E. R. 27; 1 Dr. & War. 94; 1 Con. & L. 120. (C.)

3. The bill stated a deed, which was admitted by answer. On a hearing on bill and answer, the ptf. offered to read a deed corresponding with that stated in the bill, but which had not been identified with it. Held, that it could not be read.—Hughes v. Cowley, 5 I. E. R. 588. (E.E.)

4. Upon the trial of an issue directed in the cause, to ascertain whether the child was born alive or not, evidence was given of declarations made by members of the family shortly after the child's death. Held, that this evidence was properly receivable; and that the period after which declarations respecting matters of pedigree cease to be admissible in evidence, is the arising of a controversy respecting those matters, not the existence of the state of facts out of which that controversy arises.—Reilly v. Fitzgerald, 6 I. E. R. 335; Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 122. (C.)

5. An account stated between a judgment debtor and his creditor, in which the latter admits payments on account, and a balance is struck of the sum due, cannot, after the death of the parties, be made use of in evidence, as an admission against interest, to prove these payments against third persons.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

6. Any documents which could be used at law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in evidence in equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; subject to enquiry if the deft. be taken by surprise. Such a mode of proving a case may affect the costs of the suit.—Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

7. A testator produced an executed will to another person to whom he declared its contents. That production and declaration, Held, admissible evidence to prove the contents of the will.

Semble—Those declarations would not have been evidence, if the will had not been at the same time produced and shown to such person.—Hanks v. Tottenham, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (P.)

8. A testator burned a will, and afterwards made declarations that he had revoked it by burning. At Nisi Prius—Held, that the declarations were inadmissible to prove revocation.—Mullarkey v. Mathews, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 218. (P.)

XXXVIII. 4. Parol Evidence, when admitted.

9. Lands being resettled, £2500 were charged for younger children, by a deed reciting that estates were charged with £1000 for them under a previous settlement, which really charged the lands with £2000. Those children claimed both sums. Held, that the real intention, if it had been to charge the £2500 in addition to only £1000, should have been proved by parol evidence.—Ruby v. Foot and Beamish, Beat. Rep. 581. (C.)

10. Parol evidence held not admissible to show that the consideration for a conveyance of unsettled property, by a father to his second son (an object of a power of appointment in the father's marriage settlement), was the son's relinquishment of his right as one of the male issue under that settlement.—Barron v. B., 2 Jones, 226. (E.E.)

11. The handwriting of a party to a bill of exchange cannot be proved viva voce at the hearing, by a witness who has been examined in the cause.—O'Hara v. Creagh, Long. & T. 65. (E.E.)

12. There is no objection to correct a deed by verbal evidence, when there is anything in writing beyond the verbal evidence to go by. But when there is nothing but the recollection of witnesses, and the deft. by answer denies the case set up by the ptf., the ptf. appears to be without remedy.

The cases of Booker v. Allen, Weall v. Rice, and Lloyd v. Harvey (2 Russ. & M. 251), introduce a new rule upon the subject of the admissibility of parol evidence, which is not consistent with the previous authorities, and ought not to be followed.—Hall v. Hill, 4 I. E. R. 27. (C.)

13. Admission by parol not admissible to rebut the defence of the Statute of Limitations.—Incorporated Society v. Richards, 1 Dr. & War. 267; 1 Con. & L. 58; 4 I. E. R. 177. (C.)

14. An agreement was entered into in 1786, for a lease of eleven twenty-one parts of lands for 999 years; and a lease was executed conformably to the agreement. After some litigation between the representatives of the lessor and those of the lessee, it appeared that the lessor had power to demise only six twenty-one parts of the lands. Articles of agreement were entered into by them in 1839, by which it was agreed, that a lease of the six twenty-one parts should be granted for the residue of the original term, and that a new lease of the five twenty-one parts should be granted for a similar term, "both rents to be paid over and above all charges and deductions except quit and crown rents." By the lease of the six twenty-one parts the tenant was made liable to the amount of the tithe rentcharge, in addition to the rent; but by lease of the five twenty-one parts, the rent was reserved in the words of the articles. There was no provision as to the rentcharge. The lessor filed his bill to have that latter lease corrected, by adding the amount of the rentcharge to the rent; and tendered parol evidence to show that such was the agreement, and that it had been omitted from the article in consequence of a mistake as to the tenant's liability under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 119. Held, that parol evidence could not be admitted to show what was the intention of the parties.—Davis v. Fitton, 4 I. E. R. 612; 2 Dr. & War. 225. (C.)

1. In 1836, J. effected upon his life two policies of insurance, which in that year he assigned by deed to V., the ptf., a practising physician, whose patient J. then was. That deed recited that J. stood indebted to V. in £20 for professional services rendered by him to J., who was unable to pay that sum; and stated the consideration to be "the said sum of £20, so due, &c., and also the further sum of 10s." In 1837, J. died. His widow, becoming his personal representative, declined to concur with V. in giving the company the necessary receipt. This suit was instituted against her, as J.'s widow and administratrix, for an account, and to compel her to give the company a proper receipt.

She, by her answer, denied that the consideration money mentioned in the assignment had ever been paid; and insisted that the transaction was invalid, and could not be supported, because the relation subsisting between the parties, and the exercise of undue influence, rendered it contrary to public policy.

The ptf. offered evidence to prove that £11 was in fact paid at the time of the execution of the deed; and that the residue of the consideration money had then been due for past services as a physician. The Court rejected the evidence, and dismissed the bill, with costs.—Ahearne v. Hogan, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 310. (C.)

2. A., B., and C. were tenants of lands. A. took a lease of the entire in the common form, describing them as in possession of A., B., and C. It was alleged that he took the lease upon trust for the benefit of B. and C. as to the portions in their possession. He subleased to B. his portion, subject to special covenants; and allowed C. and his representatives to continue in possession, paying him the same acreable rent he was himself subject to. They paid the tithe rentcharge. Parol acknowledgments were proved by A., that he would execute a lease to C. when called on; and that the original lease was as good for the occupiers as for himself. In his will he devised the profit rents of the other parts; but did not notice the part in possession of C.'s representatives, and they were evicted by his heir. Held, that there was no trust or contract to give C. an estate in the lands, which could be enforced in equity.—Donohoe v. Conrahy, 8 I. E. R. 679; 2 Jon. & L. 688. (C.)

3. B. a creditor, signed to S. a letter of license, which would suspend his debt; but verbally stipulated that he would not be bound unless all S.'s creditors signed. Several did not sign. A commission of bankruptcy having been sued out by B., an issue was directed to try:—Whether the letter bound him? The jury found, that it did not; but that the condition annexed to his signature had not been communicated to other creditors, who signed when and after B. signed. The Court refused to supersede the commission. Held, that without deciding whether the parol evidence had been properly received, the order was conclusive against another petition to supersede on the same grounds.

On a re-hearing—Held, that the order was correct.—In re Semple, 12 I. E. R. 338. (C.)

4. A. in 1838 devised his real estates at M. to his nephew, and bequeathed legacies amounting to £8000 to other persons. The legacies were primarily charged upon the moneys which might be in bank to A.'s credit at his death. In 1839 the nephew, in compliance with A.'s express desire, purchased real estates at C. A., out of moneys standing to his credit in the bank, lent the purchase-money to the nephew, who shortly afterwards repaid it in part; but a balance of £7700 still remained due to A. By a codicil in 1840, A. reciting that he had devised real estates to his nephew, charged them with £8000, with interest at the rate of £5 per cent. from his decease; and directed that £8000 and interest to be paid to his executors within six months from his decease, to pay off legacies named in his will. Held, that parol evidence was admissible of facts showing that A. stood in loco parentis to the nephew; and also to show the circumstances attendant upon the purchase of the estates at C.; that the nephew being unable to repay the balance of £7700, A. refused to accept a security from him for it, but instead thereof, directed his own solicitors to prepare a codicil, charging £8000 upon the estates at M., which sum was to be applied towards the purposes to which he had by will directed a similar sum formerly in cash at bank to be applied; in consequence of which direction the codicil executed by him in 1840 was prepared.

That these facts amounted in equity to a release by A. of the debt of £7700 due to him from the nephew, and that the charge of £8000 upon the estates at M. must be considered as substituted for that debt.

The Court admitted the parol evidence, not for the purpose of construing the will or codicil, but to ascertain whether or not the £7700 was a debt due to A. at his death.

Semle—The dictum of Wigram, V. C., in Cross v. Sprigg (6 Hare 552), that if a debt be not released at law it cannot be considered as released in equity, is not sustainable.—Hedges v. Aldworth, 13 I. E. R. 406. (C.)

1. When an agreement, to sell a leasehold, is silent respecting production of the lessor's title, parol testimony is admissible to prove facts constituting a waiver by the vendee of production thereof.—Wright v. Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695. (C.)

2. In a suit for specific performance of an agreement which was taken out of the Statute of Frauds by part performance, the petitioner having pleaded an agreement in writing which omitted to state the term of the lease to be made—Held, that parol evidence should not be received to supply the term.

Seem—A purchaser for valuable consideration without notice prior to his purchase, who afterwards receives express notice, is notwithstanding entitled to register his deed; and obtain all the benefits of the Registry Acts.—Riddick v. Glennon, 6 I. Jur. 89. (C.)

3. A. and B. became sureties for C., and were sued for his default. A. procured the amount sued for, on the security of a mortgage from A., and a judgment against B. The mortgage was paid off by A., who obtained an assignment of the judgment; registered it as a mortgage against lands of B.; and filed a petition for foreclosure and sale. B. by his discharge set up a defence that he became surety on A.'s promise to indemnify him from all loss. Held, that parol evidence was admissible to prove the contract to indemnify, as it was to rebut the equity on which the petition was founded.

Seem—Such a contract of indemnity is not within the Statute of Frauds, and need not be in writing.

Held, that the defence might be relied on without filing a cross petition.—Rae v. R., 6 I. C. R. 490. (R.)

4. A., by will left to F. M. F., "and to his sister, M. F., my grand-daughter, share and share alike. M. F. now living in France, with her uncle M., all his estates: M. F. was not then living, nor had ever lived; while her sister, C. F., was then living, and had lived for some time with the uncle, M. Held, that extrinsic evidence was admissible to explain the ambiguity in the will; that there was not such a perfect balance of probabilities, as to suspend the action of the Court.

That the name should control the description, and that M. F. was therefore entitled.—In re Plunket's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 361. (L.E.C.)

5. By an agreement in writing, A. agreed to let to B. a slip of ground, "bounded on the north by a road dividing said lot from Mr. T.'s holding." At the corner of the agreement, under the signature, was the following memorandum, signed with B.'s initials:—"The little angle at the road, opposite to T.'s, to be added to the road." The little angle was at the south side of T.'s road. The lease executed, in pursuance of the agreement, stated the lot to be bounded "on the north by a road dividing said lot from Mr. T.'s holding;" and referred to a map, which erroneously described T.'s road as a straight line, instead of a curve, and did not contain the memorandum at foot of the agreement. Held, that parol evidence was not admissible to show the intention that the angle should be excluded from the lease.—Gray v. Boswell, 13 I. C. R. 77. (R.)—[See s. c., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 81. (C.A.)]

6. In 1845, V., by will settled his estates on A., and his issue; then on B. and his issue. In 1854, V. made another will, settling the estates first on B. and his issue; then on A. and his issue; and in 1858, executed a codicil to the will of 1845, which he mistook for that of 1854, commencing thus: "This is a codicil to the above will." Held, that parol evidence was inadmissible to prove the mistake; that the will of 1845 was revived; and that it, together with the codicil, formed V.'s last will.—In the Goods of Stowell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 325. (P.)

7. In the West Indies, a testator executed a will attested by three witnesses; and thereby gave several legacies in blank sums; appointed K. residuary legatee; named four executors; and revoked all former wills. Held, that parol evidence was inadmissible to prove a plea that the will was only deliberative and imperfect. Demurrer to such plea allowed.

On this point the same rules apply to wills of real and of personal estate.

A testator described himself as of L. in Ireland, at present at St. D. in Grenada. He died at St. D. The Court assumed that Ireland was his domicile.

To raise the point, the question of domicile should be pleaded, as well as the law of Grenada, if different from that of Ireland.—Kennedy v. Kelly, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 326. (P.)

8. All the persons entitled to the lessee's interest should be made parties, in suits for renewal of the lease. One of the lives in the renewal was described as "B. C., the younger, son of B. C., of Sion, aged fifteen years, or thereabouts." There were two persons of the name of B. C.; one, the eldest son of H. C., of Sion, and who was fifteen years old; the other, the fourth son of B. C., of Kildalvin, who was nine years old. Held, on the evidence, that the latter was the c. q. vie.

The tenant having tendered the renewal fine and interest from the death of the former, without objection on that ground on the part of the landlord—Held, that the tender was sufficient to save a forfeiture under the Tenantry Act.

There is no general rule as to what shall be deemed reasonable time for payment of the renewal fines.

The Court granted a renewal when a tender had been made just within six months of the demand, there being no fraud on the part of the tenant, and no circumstance to establish default, except the lapse of time.

Advertisements in the Gazette, &c., under the 2nd sec. of the Tenantry Act, are not a sufficient demand, when the head rent is paid to the landlord by an agent for the tenants. Such agent ought to be served with notice, if the landlord shall find any difficulty in discovering his tenants or their assigns.

Semble—A demand of a renewal fine inserted in the Gazette, under the second sec. of the Tenantry Act, shall not be deemed to have been made on the day of the publication of the first advertisement.

Costs given to a respondent in a decree for renewal of a lease.—Colclough v. Smyth, 14 I. C. R. 127. (R.)

1. In an injunction suit to restrain respondent from destroying a hedge, parol evidence is not admissible to prove that the contract was, that the hedge should be maintained as an ornament.—Armstrong v. Courtenay, 15 I. C. R. 138. (R.)

2. One of the lives in a renewal of 1803 was described as "B. C. the younger, son of B. C. of Sion, aged fifteen years, or thereabouts." There were two persons of the name of B. C.; one, the eldest son of H. C. of Sion, who was proved by reputation to have been then fifteen years old; the other, the fourth son of B. C., of Kildalvin, who, as proved by the inscription on his tombstone, was then nine years old. Held, that neither reputation nor the inscription was admissible to prove the ages of the parties.

That, in the absence of evidence of mutual mistake of the executing parties to the renewal, B. C., the son of B. C., must be taken to have been the cestui que vie.—Colclough v. Smyth, 15 I. C. R. 347. (R.)—[Affd.: ibid, 396. (C.A.)]

XXXVIII. 5. Onus Probandi.

3. A rent, which was to cease upon payment of a sum of money, was charged upon and payable out of several denominations of land. Evidence showed that it had not been paid by, or demanded from the owners of one of those denominations for upwards of a century. There was not any evidence that the rent had not been regularly paid out of the other denominations. Held, that the Court would not presume, either that the redemption money was paid, or that that portion of the land had been released.—Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448. (R.)

4. In a suit by children to enforce payment of their portions, their legitimacy was questioned by the next tenant for life, a deft., but a marriage de facto was established. Held, that, a marriage de facto having been once established, it lay on the party impeaching the marriage to show that it was illegal and void.—Piers v. Tuite, 1 Dr. & Wal. 279. (C.)

5. Although the recital or receipt in a deed is prima facie evidence of the payment of the consideration, yet if the Court comes to the conclusion that the consideration has not been paid, and directs an enquiry upon the subject, the onus of proving the payment lies upon the party insisting that it has been paid.—Croly v. O'Callaghan, 5 I. E. R. 32. (E.E.)

6. An application of a third person that a receiver should pass his account, and applicant have liberty to attend in the office on the passing of it, refused; no special ground for such application having been shown.—Colburn v. Cooper, 8 I. E. R. 510. (E.E.)

7. If there be a contest between a party to a suit and a solicitor, as to the authority given to the latter, the Court will decide against the solicitor, unless he has a written authority.—Beddy v. Smith, 8 I. E. R. 667. (R.)

8. A. invested money in stock, in the joint names of himself and his daughter. After his death, a trust for the benefit of a third person was sought to be fastened on the stock. Held, that the onus was cast on that person to rebut, by clear evidence the legal presumption in favour of the child, and to show that A.'s intention was, at the period of the investment, to affix that trust upon the fund.—Snowe v. Darcy, 4 I. Jur. 165. (C.)

9. In interest cases, when legitimacy is disputed, the onus of proof lies on the party alleging legitimacy.—Corcoran v. Duggan, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 18. (P.)

10. Goods were shipped for conveyance, for a freight agreed upon, to a port. After the bills of lading had been signed, and before the ship sailed, the shippers became bankrupt. Held, that their assignees could not insist upon re-delivery of the goods, except upon paying the freight, and indemnifying the master of the ship against all claims respecting the bills of lading; and that the messenger's possession of the goods under the Court's search-warrant does not change the onus of proof, or entitle the assignees, when the Court has re-delivered the goods to the master of the ship, to cast upon him the duty of impeaching, at the port of destination, the title of the holders of the bills of lading.

Quære—Has the Court of Bankruptcy in Ireland jurisdiction to issue a search-warrant respecting goods which are on the premises of a third party in England?—In re Webster, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 17. (B.)

XXXVIII. 6. Entry of Evidence as Read.

11. In an undefended case the proofs shall be entered as read, and ptf. shall take such a decree as he can abide by.—Raymond v. Evans, Long. & T. 582. (E.E.)

12. The bill prayed an account of what might, without wilful default, have been received. The case was opened as if only a simple account was sought. Evidence of wilful default was admitted, notwithstanding the general rule, that evidence cannot be entered to support a case which has not been opened.—Crawford v. O'Sullivan, 2 Con. & L. 410. (C.)

13. Objections to the reading of documents, on the ground that they have not been proved as against the objecting party, must be made when the documents are tendered. This rule applies equally in the case of a minor and in that of an adult deft.—Stoughton v. Crosbie, 5 I. E. R. 451. (E.E.)

1. It is improper to examine in chief touching particular items of the account, the deft. being an accounting party; or to examine in chief touching particular acts of wilful default in not receiving rents, the deft. being bound to account for wilful default simply by reason of the nature of his relation to the ptf. Such evidence may, however, be entered as read; but the ptf. must pay the deft. its costs.—Hamilton v. M'Cormick, 3 Jon. & L. 183. (C.)

XXXVIII. 7. Further Evidence: when Admitted after Publication; or on Appeal, or Re-hearing.

[See also PRACTICE, IV. 5.]

2. Publication passed without the deft.'s having examined any witnesses. On the affidavit of the deft. that persons named were necessary and material witnesses to be examined; that he could not otherwise proceed to hearing; and that neither he nor his solicitor had read or had any knowledge of the evidence for the ptf.s; the Court permitted the deft. to examine under terms, being unwilling to exclude material evidence.—Buller v. Troy, 7 I. E. R. 70. (R.)

3. Reference to enquire what was due for rent, fines, &c., pursuant to the provisions of a bishop's lease; whether interest thereon had been customarily payable on the fines; and, if so, what amount was due?

The Master found a sum due for interest; but reported that no evidence had been laid before him with respect to the custom. The report was excepted to on this ground, but confirmed at the Rolls. On appeal—Held, that a lease set forth in the schedule, showing that interest was payable, was evidence to sustain the finding; and that the decision at the Rolls was right.—Brabazon v. The Earl of Lucan, 2 I. Jur. 57. (C.)

4. On appeal, this Court will allow affidavits to be used which were not used on the motion in the Court below. They are inadmissible, if made by the party who moved at the Rolls.—Stradbrook, Lord, v. Fitzpatrick, 3 I. Jur. 130. (C.)

5. The question, on a reference to enquire whether timber be essential to the possession and enjoyment of an estate, is one partly of fact, and partly of opinion and taste; the end of the enquiry being, to ascertain whether, though in respect of its intrinsic value, its loss may admit of pecuniary compensation, its adventitious value as an ornament to the estate be not so material as that it may reasonably be supposed that without it the purchaser would not have entered into the contract at all.

When the timber grew on a comparatively small portion of the estate, detached from the demesne, and not in view of the mansion-house, pleasure grounds, or avenues, and the Master reported that it was not essential to the possession and enjoyment of the estate, though there were conflicting affidavits as to whether it was ornamental or not, the Court (reversing the order of the M. R.) refused to send back the report to be re-considered on further evidence.

A motion to vary a Master's report was directed to stand over for further affidavits. Held, that a party who had filed an affidavit could not, on appeal from the order made on the further affidavits, object to the admission of them as irregular and contrary to the practice of the Court.—Stewart v. Conyngham, 3 I. C. R. 104. (C.)

6. The Court will not in general admit affidavits not used before the Masters on appeals from orders made by them in cases referred under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, especially when they refer to matters not put in issue by the petition or discharge.

In this case such affidavits were, by consent, admitted.—Tressilian v. Caniffe, 4 I. C. R. 399. (R.)

7. Upon an affidavit being made that it is necessary to file further affidavits for the hearing of a cause petition, the Court will give permission to file them, though the cause is in the list for hearing. This permission will be granted reluctantly, and if there be great delay, the parties will not get the costs.—Guinness v. G., 6 I. Jur. 85. (R.)

8. On a re-hearing, documentary evidence, not offered at the original hearing, may be received. Depositions for anything more than identifying such documentary evidence cannot be given.—Johnson v. Midland Gt. W. of Ireland Ry. Co., 5 I. C. R. 264. (C.)—[See s. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 798; 4 Jur. N. S. 648.]

9. On a question as to portions, settled subject to appointment by marriage settlement, articles entered into on the marriage of one of the objects of the appointment were read in evidence in the Court of Chancery, though they had not been mentioned in the schedule of evidence used before the Master, nor given in evidence at the Rolls.—Simpson v. Frew, 5 I. C. R. 517; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 222. (C.)

10. The Lord Chancellor has not jurisdiction to entertain an application for liberty to use new evidence upon a re-hearing of a cause before the Court of Appeal.

Such evidence must be put in issue by a supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review, and the application for liberty to file such petition must be made at the Rolls Court.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (C.)

11. A supplemental petition, in the nature of a bill of review, on newly discovered facts, cannot be maintained, when those facts would not, if previously known, have influenced the decree complained of; but would merely have induced the complainant to take a different course in the original suit.—Nason v. Peard, 10 I. C. R. 233. (C.)

XXXVIII. 8. Evidence before Master.

[See also PRACTICE, IV. 5, ON APPEAL.]

1. It is improper to examine in chief touching particular items of the account, the deft. being an accounting party; or to examine in chief touching particular acts of wilful default in not receiving rents; the deft. being bound to account for wilful default simply by reason of the nature of his relation to the ptf. Such evidence may, however, be entered as read; but the ptf. must pay the deft. the costs of it.—Hamilton v. M'Cormick, 3 Jon. & L. 183. (C.)

2. On a reference under a decretal order in a general cause petition, the Master, on a summons on charge and discharge, directed, amongst other things, that the parties respectively should prove their case by affidavit or otherwise; the last affidavit to be filed, and publication to pass on the day month from the date of the order: thereupon to re-enter the summons. Both parties filed affidavits within the time; but the respondent failed to prove his case at the hearing, which was adjourned to enable him to apply to give further evidence. On motion grounded on the proceedings in the cause, but not on affidavit—Held, that the respondent, his wife, and a third witness, should be examined viva voce before the Master, on the respondent's behalf; and that the petitioner should be cross-examined.—Corbett v. Hayes, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (M.O.)

8. Evidence, rejected by the Master in the early stages of a suit, cannot be used upon appeal, nor can its rejection be questioned, unless that rejection be a ground of appeal.—In re M'Kenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

4. On appeal the Court may admit documentary evidence which was not before the Master when he made the decretal order appealed against.

The Court has jurisdiction to review a Master's decision respecting what evidence is admissible under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 13.

The practice in the Masters' offices under that section is irregular. The Master should order books of account to be received as prima facie evidence: items capable of independent proof should be proved before the order is made.—Boag v. Bradford, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

XXXVIII. 9. At Law.

5. Form of order upon an application for liberty to read, on the trial of an issue, depositions taken in the cause, and made by a witness whom illness disabled from attending the trial.—Lynch v. L., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 538. (C.)

6. Any documents, which could be used at Law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in Equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; but, subject to enquiry, if deft. be taken by surprise. Such a method of proof may, however, affect the costs.—Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

XXXVIII. 10. Exhibits.

[As to what documents are receivable in evidence without proof—See 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99, ss. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12; 18 & 19 Vic., c. 42, ss. 1, 2, 3.]

7. Copies of the tithe certificate and applotment, compared and attested by the registrar of the diocese, are proveable as exhibits at the hearing.—Hawkins v. Curry, 2 Jones, 431. (E.E.)

8. When a minor is a party, the Court will not permit a witness to be examined viva voce, at the hearing, to prove a deed or exhibit. It must be proved in the office by examining the witness upon interrogatories.—White v. Baker, 1 I. E. R. 382. (E.E.)

9. Documents not under seal cannot be proved viva voce at the hearing of the cause, as exhibits. The practice in Chancery is otherwise.

In this Court the only documents which are permitted to be proved as exhibits at the hearing, are instruments under seal, which are unimpeached, and when nothing but handwriting is to be proved.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 3 I. E. R. 179; Long. & T. 65. (E.E.)

10. An objection to the reading of documents, because they have not been proved as against the objecting party, must be made when they are tendered. This rule applies equally to the case of a minor, and of an adult deft.—Stoughton v. Crosbie, 5 I. E. R. 451. (E.E.)

11. A party may prove an exhibit viva voce at hearing, upon bill and answer.—Neville v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 530. (C.)

12. When ptf.'s title depends on a deed impeached by the answer, the deed cannot be proved at the hearing, as an exhibit, by affidavit under G. R. 97.

In this case, there not being any other proof of the deed, the bill was dismissed with costs.—Joly v. Swift, 9 I. E. R. 195; 3 Jon. & L. 126. (C.)

13. The ptf. sought a renewal of a lease (not in his possession). The deft.'s answer denied his right to the renewal, "inasmuch as he is convinced from documents in his possession, to which he will hereafter more particularly refer, that no such lease was executed;" and then stated "that it appears by a certain deed and schedule, which he admitted to be in his possession, that a lease for a different term and rent had been executed, and that 'it is manifest' from the schedule that a renewal, if obtained, was fraudulent." Held, that the deft. had referred to the deed and schedule in such a way as to make it part of his answer; and was bound to produce it. — Phelan v. Hamilton, 9 I. E. R. 264. (R.)

1. When documents are indorsed by a solicitor in compliance with a notice under the 164th Rule, the practice is to have a consent admitting the documents made a rule of Court by a side-bar rule. — Killikelly v. Molton, 10 I. E. R. 212. (R.)

2. Any documents which could be used at Law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in evidence in Equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; subject to enquiry if the deft. be taken by surprise. Such a mode of proving a case may affect the costs of the suit. — Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

XXXVIII. 11. Affidavits.

XXXVIII. 11. a. Of Affidavits generally: their Incidents.

[As to the practice under Court of Ch. Reg. Ir. Act 1850: See 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, and Gen. Orders of 1851, 1852 and 1857: Gam. G. O. p. 30, &c.]

See also 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 68, 74, 76–84, 89, 93, 104, 105, 108: G. O. (1867), 16, 92–95, 152–155, 162, 168–175, 216, 220, 225.]

3. The general rule—that an affidavit filed as cause, and notice thereof duly given, shall be cause against making absolute a conditional order—does not apply to conditional orders obtained as of course in the office. — Murphy v. Meade, H. & J. 720. (E.E.)

4. It is the right of the Attorney-General, on the part of the Crown, to have an affidavit taken off the file of the Court, in order that the deponent may be prosecuted for perjury. Though the case be such that the application would not be granted in the case of a private prosecution, it will be granted on the application of the Attorney-General. — Greene v. Hogan, 2 Jones, 573. (E.E.)

5. An application to take an affidavit off the file, in order to prosecute the deponent for perjury, is not to be granted ex debito justitiæ; before allowing it the Court will use circumspection. The applicant must make a case sufficient to induce the Court to exercise its discretion in his favour. — Davis v. Nolan, 7 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

6. An application to take an answer off the file to prosecute for perjury, though it be not ex debito justitiæ, approaches very closely to it. The Court will not scrutinise the grounds or merits of the prosecution, or the truth of the allegations on either side, but will give every facility to the application, provided it be satisfied that it is not made for vindictive or unjust purposes. — Madden v. Woods, 8 I. E. R. 48. (R.)

7. When the defence was, that the deed of assignment, under which the ptf. claimed, was executed after bill filed, and was made in trust for the assignor against whom the deft. filed a cross bill—Held, that the assignment could not be proved by affidavit at the hearing, under the 97th G. O.—Joly v. Swift, 9 I. E. R. 195; 8 Jon. & L. 126. (C.)

8. At the hearing of cause petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act, the affidavits of strangers to the cause may be used to support the case either of the ptf. or deft. The previous permission or direction of the Court is not necessary for this purpose.

To a cause petition for foreclosure or sale the defence set up by the answering affidavit consisted of articles of settlement of a date prior to the mortgage, but not registered until after it, of which articles the respondents alleged that the mortgagee had notice. Affidavits filed on behalf of the petitioner, and made by the solicitors engaged on both sides in the mortgage transaction, denying that the mortgagee had notice of the articles, were allowed to be read at the hearing.

The Court, at the instance of the deft., made an order allowing both parties to examine witnesses on interrogatories generally, as they might be advised.

When a person entitled jure mariti to chattels real mortgages them, the wife has not any equity to settlement thereout as against the mortgagee seeking a foreclosure and sale. — Hatchell v. Eggleso, 1 I. C. R. 215. (C.)

9. Statements in affidavits of alleged conversations of a deponent in a cause will not be admitted to impeach his credit; he must be cross-examined as to the conversations. — Crofts v. C., 6 I. Jur. 249. (C.)

1. Affidavits, in answer to a cause petition, filed on the day on which the cause was set down for hearing, but after it had been set down, were held irregular. Affidavits subsequently filed in reply thereto, as well as the answering affidavits, were permitted to remain on the file, as if the leave of the Court had been obtained for filing them. On a motion by the respondent, and cross-motion by petitioner, to take the affidavits off the file, no rule was made. There having been delay on the part of the respondent, the costs were made costs in the cause.—Graham v. McDermott, 6 I. Jur. 381. (R.)

2. The Court will not in general admit affidavits (not used before the Masters) on appeals from orders made by them in cases under the 15th sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act; especially when they refer to matters not put in issue by the petition or discharge. In this case such affidavits were admitted by consent.—Tressilian v. Caniffe, 4 I. C. R. 399. (R.)

3. A cause petition having been set down for hearing, the petitioner and respondent consented that each should file further affidavits. The respondent filed affidavits. The petition was struck out of the list by consent. The cause was, on the 2nd Nov., set down again by the petitioner, who filed his affidavit in reply on the 14th Nov. without leave of the Court. The respondent having refused to allow this affidavit to be used, the petitioner on motion obtained leave to use it; the respondent to have leave to file affidavits in reply, and to be paid £4 for the costs of the motion, without prejudice to respondent applying to the Lord Chancellor for the costs of the day if it should be necessary to postpone the hearing by reason of the petitioner's delay.—Crooke v. Edwards, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 44. (R.)

4. A., one of two bankrupt partners, in a Chancery suit, made an affidavit in which he admitted a debt, which was barred by the Statute of Limitations. A., when he made the affidavit, was so ill that he could not read or sign it. The British Consul at B. read it to A., who thereupon affixed his mark. Held, that the affidavit was not admissible in evidence in the bankruptcy proceedings.—In re Clendinning, 9 I. C. R. 284. (B.)

XXXVIII. 11. b. Filing and Swearing Affidavits.

5. The affidavit verifying the execution of a power of attorney executed at Brussels (where there is no commissioner of this Court for taking affidavits), was sworn by one of the witnesses to the execution of the power, before the Secretary of the British Legation at Brussels; and when produced, appeared to be under the seal of the Legation. There was no affidavit verifying the signature of the Secretary of Legation to the affidavit taken by him, but an attorney stated in open Court, that he knew the signature to be that of the Secretary—Held, that the affidavit should be acted upon as properly taken.—O'Connor v. Bernard, 4 I. E. R. 689. (E.E.)

6. The affidavit to verify a petition for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, and 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, may be sworn and filed before the petition is presented.—Clendinning v. O'Malley, 2 Dr. & War. 210; 1 Con. & L. 363. (C.)

7. The affidavit verifying a petition under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 60 (Tithes Rentcharge Act) may, in a proper case, be made by the petitioner's agent; e. g., when that agent has peculiar knowledge of the facts.—Kellett v. Sturgeon, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

8. When an affidavit is made by a marksman, the jurat should state that the commissioner read and explained it to the deponent before he swore it. A statement in the margin of the affidavit, that it was read and explained to the deponent by a third person, is insufficient.—Bredin v. B., 7 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

9. A motion cannot be grounded on an affidavit not filed.—Reeves v. Nagle, 8 I. E. R. 521. (E.E.)

10. Upon an affidavit being made that it is necessary to file further affidavits for the hearing of a cause petition, the Court will give permission to file them, though the cause is in the list for hearing. This permission will be granted reluctantly; and, if there be great delay, the party will not get the costs.—Guinness v. G., 6 I. Jur. 85. (R.)

11. Before a cause petition was set down for hearing, the respondent's solicitor informed petitioner's solicitor that respondent was ill, and could not file affidavits. Petitioner's solicitor misunderstood him, and set down the cause for hearing. The Court granted liberty to the respondent to file his affidavit notwithstanding.

When a party wishes to amend a cause petition, he must serve notice; and set out the amendments in full.—Boyle v. Guinness, 6 I. Jur. 161. (R.)

12. Liberty to file answering affidavits will now be given almost at any time before the cause is heard; costs to be costs in the cause.—Wills v. Corcoran, 6 I. Jur. 341. (R.)

13. Affidavits in answer to a cause petition were filed on the same day that the cause was set down for hearing, but after the cause had been set down. Held, irregular. Affidavits subsequently filed in reply, as well as the answering affidavits, were permitted to remain on the file, as if the leave of the Court had been obtained for filing them. On a motion by the respondent, and cross-motion by petitioner to take them off the file, no rule was made; and there having been delay on the part of the respondent, the costs were made costs in the cause.—Graham v. M'Dermott, 6 I. Jur. 381. (R.)

1. In granting leave to file affidavits after a cause petition has been set down for hearing, the Court does not require an affidavit of merits.—Knox v. Mahon, 4 I. C. R. 34. (R.)

2. A motion for permission to file additional affidavits, notwithstanding the expiration of the time limited by the G. O., is made to the judicial discretion of the Court; and is not to be granted as of course, though it is to be favourably considered.—Millet v. Mansergh, 5 I. C. R. 48; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 147. (C.)

3. In analogy to the old practice respecting decrees pro confesso, leave will, on a proper affidavit of merits, and on proper terms as to costs, &c., be given to a respondent, who has not filed any answering affidavit, to file one after the proper time for answering has elapsed.—Tuthill v. Latouche, 5 I. C. R. 53; 1 I. Jur. N. S. 297. (C.)

4. A cause petition was set down for hearing on the 5th Feb. without respondent having filed any affidavit in reply. A motion by respondent for leave to file affidavits in answer to the petition in April, when the cause was in the Chancellor's list of the day, was refused with costs.—Tuthill v. Latouche, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 273. (R.)

5. On motion to obtain leave to file affidavits after the time for filing them had expired, Held, that, under the orders of June 1856, such leave could not be granted without evidence of facts to sustain the motion.—Long v. Wolfe, 6 I. C. R. 288. (C.)

6. An application for the enlargement of the time for filing answering affidavits before the time expires, is not within the 7th G. O. of May 1857.—Kinneen v. Persse, 6 I. C. R. 567. (C.)

7. Applications for liberty to file answering affidavits in a cause petition matter transferred to his Honor's list, in which no affidavit has been filed, should be made at the Rolls.—Barton v. Major, 8 I. C. R. 25. (R.)

8. An order extended, beyond the day upon which the petition would stand dismissed under the 27th G. O. of 1851, the petitioner's time to file affidavits in reply. Upon motion for liberty to set down the cause for hearing, although two Terms had elapsed since the answer was filed, and that, if necessary, the cause might be reinstated: the Court, without special ground, reinstated the petition.—Armstrong v. A., 17 I. C. R. 132. (R.)

9. In an affidavit verifying the petition for a receiver, under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, it suffices to state that a lump sum is due for principal and interest on foot of a judgment, and costs, when only the ordinary costs of entering it have been incurred.—Anon., 2 Jones, 349. (E.E.)

10. An affidavit to verify a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, which merely states in general terms that the contents of the petition are true, is insufficient.—Johnson v. J., 2 Jones, 430. (E.E.)

11. The affidavit in support of an application to discharge the solicitor from custody, should be instituted in the cause in respect of which the privilege is claimed.—Re Keane, S. & Sc. 81. (R.)

12. The affidavit upon which it is sought to obtain a receiver under the Sheriffs Act, must state expressly when the judgment has been revived; it is not sufficient to state that the petitioner is entitled to sue out an elegit.—In re —, 2 I. E. R. 418. (E.E.)

13. When an attorney applies to be paid his costs out of a fund allocated to his client, he ought to state in his affidavit that he distinctly informed the client of his intention to make the application.—Redmond v. Gormley, 4 I. E. R. 698. (E.E.)

14. The affidavit of a judgment creditor for a receiver in a petition matter under 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 55, was entitled as in a cause; the parties were styled ptf. and deft., and the petitioner was apprised of the irregularity. Held, that the affidavit was insufficient.—Fawcett v. F., 6 I. E. R. 388. (R.)

15. The consent of a creditor to a supersedeas in bankruptcy was signed by a person authorised under a power of attorney, executed by the creditor, then resident in New York. The verifying affidavit was sworn before the British Consul, and attested by his seal of office, and did not purport to have been sworn before a Justice of the Peace. Held, that the consent was sufficiently signed.—Ex parte Hutton, 6 I. E. R. 522. (C.)

16. When an affidavit is made by a marksman, the jurat should state that it was read and explained by the Commissioner to the party before it was sworn by him.

A statement in the margin that the affidavit was read and explained to the party by a third person, is insufficient.—Bredin v. B., 7 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

17. An omission having been made in the jurat of the affidavit to verify a cause petition, an order was made that the Dep. Keeper of the Rolls should be at liberty to re-swear the petitioner.—Porter v. Archbold, 2 I. C. R. 572. (R.)

18. The affidavits on which an application for a writ of prohibition is grounded ought to be entitled simply in the Court to which application is made.

The writ of prohibition may be issued to stay proceedings before Magistrates, even after conviction. The application to the Court of Ch. for a writ of prohibition is, to the Common Law side of that Court; and the conditional order, though issued from the Registrar's office, should not resemble an injunction order.—Rich v. Anderson, 3 I. C. R. 463. (C.)

1. An affirmation taken under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 82, stated that affirmant was a member of a religious sect called "Separatists." It did not follow in terms the form of affirmation required by the Act; but it purported to be supplemental to another affirmation which did, and to have been made before an officer authorised to administer it. Held, that it must be assumed to have been properly made.—Wolsley v. Worthington, 13 I. C. R. 341. (R.)—[Affid.: 14 I. C. R. 369. (C.A.)]

XXXVIII. 11. e. Affidavit to support Injunction Motion.

2. When irreparable waste has been committed, and is about to be repeated, the Court will, without a positive affidavit of the facts, grant a conditional order for an injunction, and restrain the party meanwhile, if there be danger that the waste will be committed before such affidavit can be procured.—Beere v. Head, 7 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

3. An affidavit, verifying a bill for an injunction to restrain waste by breaking up ancient meadows, should state deponent's knowledge of the land for a considerable period (Semble—twenty years), and that it was not in tillage during that time.—Creagh v. Carmichael, 7 I. E. R. 304. (E.E.)

4. Consideration of the rule touching using supplemental affidavits on showing cause against an injunction in a possessory suit.—Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

5. A Railway Company, instead of obtaining the finding of a jury as to the amount of compensation due to the owners of land required for the railway, took hold of some verbal consent by a solicitor for the owner; entered into possession; and proceeded with the works. Bill filed to restrain the company by injunction. The answer of the company, verified by the affidavit of their solicitor, relied on the consent, and detailed conversations between the solicitors. A replying affidavit by the solicitor of the ptf. was filed, denying that consent was given. On the injunction being moved for, Held, that the affidavit of the deft.'s solicitor being unnecessary, it was allowable for the solicitor of the ptf. to reply, and his affidavit might be used; but that neither should be allowed in taxation.—Hare v. Cork and Bandon Railway Company, 3 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

XXXVIII. 11. f. Affidavits in support of Interpleader Bills.

6. On motion for an injunction in an interpleader suit, ptf. need not file an affidavit verifying the statements in the bill. One denying collusion between him and the defts. will suffice.—Meredyth v. Molloy, Fl. & K. 195. (R.)

7. An affidavit, to ground an attachment for non-performance of a decree to pay money personally demanded from deft. under a power of attorney, must state that that power was produced and shown to deft. when the demand was made.—Fleury v. Murphy, 1 I. E. R. 117. (E.E.)

8. To support a motion for liberty to execute a sequestration on a decree, there must be an affidavit stating what was due on foot of the decree.—Rowan v. —, 2 Jones, 184. (E.E.)

9. By this Court's practice, a supplemental affidavit cannot be used on a motion to make absolute a conditional order.—Smithwick v. Bradshaw, 2 I. E. R. 94. (E.E.)

10. An affidavit to verify a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, made by the petitioner's agent will not suffice; the petitioner must make it.—Phelan v. P., Fl. & K. 177. (R.)

11. On motion for a receiver on bill and answer, an affidavit by ptf. may be read to explain a doubtful passage in an answer not disclosing the whole truth.—Bell v. M'Loughlin, Fl. & K. 272. (R.)

13. A motion cannot be made, if grounded on an affidavit to be filed.—Reeves v. Nagle, 8 I. E. R. 521. (E.E.)

14. A bill filed to raise a charge stated that something was due for interest, but did not interrogate the deft. on that subject. The answer did not admit any sum to be due. Upon motion for a receiver, the Court permitted an affidavit to be used, setting forth the sum due.—Martin v. O'Flaherty, 1 I. Jur. 345. (R.)

15. The Court will admit a supplemental affidavit, if, without it, the ends of justice would be frustrated.—In re Bodkin's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 101. (I.E.C.)

1. When an injunction, obtained on filing the bill, has, on the coming in of deft.'s answer, been continued until the hearing, and ptf., for the first time, seeks to amend his bill without prejudice to the injunction, the Court will grant a motion to that effect, if the proposed amendments be not inconsistent with the case previously made by the bill for the injunction. To sustain the motion there is not any necessity for an affidavit stating when the matter of the proposed amendments came to ptf.'s knowledge.—O'Beirne v. O'B., 1 I. C. R. 158. (C.)—[Rev. Rolls order: 1 I. C. R. 152.]

XXXVIII. 11. i. Of Service.

2. The process server's affidavit, made to ground a motion for liberty to enter process of contempt on the service of a subpoena in England, ought to recite the prayer of the bill.—Sheilds v. Ellis, Hay. & J. 302. (E.E.)

3. The affidavit of service of the conditional order to pay rent to a receiver ought to be filed before applying for a conditional order for an attachment for non-payment of rent.—Pope v. P., Hayes, 335. (E.E.)

4. The affidavit of service of the subpoena on a deft. residing out of the jurisdiction, by leaving a copy thereof with the landlord of his lodgings, should also state that deft. was residing there when the copy was left.—Ruttle v. Scanlan, 1 Jones, 554. (E.E.)

5. The affidavit of the service of the petition and order to divide bog, under the 5 G. 2, (Ir.) c. 3, must state that there were not any persons in possession of the premises other than those served.

Quære—Must service of the petition and order be personal?—Westropp v. M'Donnell, 1 Jones, 619. (E.E.)

6. The affidavit of service of the petition did not state that the persons served were the only persons in possession of lands, the boundaries of which were to be settled. Held, a fatal defect.—In re O'Brien, 3 I. E. R. 161. (C.)

XXXVIII. 11. j. Affidavit on Application for Leave to substitute Service.

7. The affidavit upon which a motion to substitute service of the subpoena to appear and answer in a tithe bill is founded, must state the names, additions, and residences of the defts. upon whom it is sought to substitute the service.—Clarke v. Fitzpatrick, 1 Jones, 251. (E.E.)—[See Porter v. Dawson, ibid, 253, note.]

XXXVIII. 11. l. In Support of Application for Commission to Examine Witnesses.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 74. See also PRACTICE, XXXVIII, 27—EVIDENCE, WITNESSES.]

10. A motion for liberty to examine witnesses upon interrogatories before the hearing of a cause petition, and that a commission for that purpose do issue, was grounded on the petitioner's solicitor's affidavit; stating that A. and other unnamed persons, when applied to, refused to volunteer evidence, by making affidavits in the case, but that deponent was persuaded that they would attend for examination upon interrogatories. It stated further that some unnamed witnesses resided in England; that a commission would therefore be requisite; and that deponent was advised that their evidence was material and necessary to the petitioner's case. Motion refused, with costs; the affidavit being vague and unsatisfactory.—[Glascok v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50, 57; Hatchell v. Eggleso, 1 I. C. R. 215, 222, followed.]—Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)

11. A party in the cause stated by affidavit that an intended witness was suffering from rheumatic pains, had lost the use of his limbs, and had refused to see a doctor, because it would be no use; and averred that there was not any chance that the witness would be able to attend the trial. Held, insufficient to obtain a commission.—Tierney v. Byrne, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 179. (P.)

XXXVIII. 11. m. Affidavit; when necessary in other matters.

12. Upon a motion to substitute one purchaser for another, there must be an affidavit, that no money has been paid for such substitution.—Vincent v. Going, Fl. & K. 428. (R.)

XXXVIII. 11. n. Affidavit; when read against Answer.

13. After answer, there cannot be an affidavit adding to the case made by the bill, there may be touching collateral matters.—Shew v. Weir, 1 I. E. R. 213. (R.)

XXXVIII. 11. o. When Affidavits will be received and read as Evidence generally.

14. The affidavit of a party, against whom process of sequestration has issued, will not be heard as cause against a conditional order obtained in the cause, unless it states some irregularity in the proceedings.—Creed v. C., Long. & T. 581. (E.E.)

1. If a party answer an affidavit not filed until after the notice of motion, it cures the irregularity, and he cannot object to its being used on the motion. — O'Brien v. Peebles, 7 I. E. R. 558. (R.)

2. When there are reported due to wives, and their husbands, funds to which those wives are entitled, partly as personal representatives, and partly in their own rights; and the Court has not a power to direct an account to ascertain how much is due in each right; it will receive affidavits to prove how much is due to each wife in her own right, and how much is required to pay debts, &c., in due course of administration. — Webber v. Jones, 7 I. E. R. 639. (R.)

3. At a hearing of cause petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850, the affidavits of strangers to the cause may be used to support the case either of the ptf. or deft. The previous permission or direction of the Court is not necessary for this purpose.

To a cause petition for foreclosure or sale the defence set up by the answering affidavit consisted of articles of settlement of a date prior to the mortgage, but not registered until after it, of which articles the respondents alleged that the mortgagee had notice. Affidavits filed on behalf of the petitioner, and made by the solicitors engaged on both sides in the mortgage transaction, denying that the mortgagee had notice of the articles, were allowed to be read at the hearing.

The Court, at the instance of the deft., made an order allowing both parties to examine witnesses on interrogatories generally, as they might be advised. — Hatchell v. Eggleston, 1 I. C. R. 215. (C.) — [Followed: Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)]

4. A petition was filed for payment of the principal and interest, or, in default, for sale of mortgaged premises. The answering affidavit charged that the mortgagor had notice of the articles. The petitioner filed affidavits denying such notice. Held, that such affidavits were admissible at the hearing without permission from the Court. — Hatchell v. Chancellor, 3 I. Jur. 164. (C.)

5. When the respondent, in a cause petition matter, has not himself filed an affidavit, by way of answer to the suit, affidavits filed on his behalf by other persons will not be permitted to be read. — Murphy v. Longfield, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 258. (C.)

6. A petitioner may read as his evidence a portion of a respondent's affidavit, without making the whole his evidence. — Archbold v. Scully, 8 I. C. R. 177. (C.) — [Affd.: 9 I. C. R. 152; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 380. (C.A.). Reversed: 9 H. Lds. Cas. 360.]

7. A., one of two bankrupt partners, after the bankruptcy, made in a Ch. suit an affidavit in which he admitted a debt, barred by the Statute of Limitations, to be due from him to E. The debt had originally been that of G.,

deceased, the former partner of A.; and the suit was instituted by G.'s executor. A., when he made the affidavit, was so infirm in health that he was unable to read or sign it. The British Consul at B. read it over to him, whereupon he affixed his mark. Held, that the affidavit was not admissible in evidence in the bankruptcy proceedings.

That, if admissible, the circumstances under which it was made, and the object of making it, deducible from circumstances, were sufficient to avoid it.

That, taking the acknowledgment in the affidavit to be equivalent to an admission in a bankrupt's schedule, such an admission does not take the debt out of the statute as against the bankrupt's assignees.

The assignees in bankruptcy, being trustees for the general body of creditors, are bound to set up the bar of the statute against an individual creditor. — In re Clendinning, 9 I. C. R. 284. (B.)

8. The affidavit of a party in a cause, so far as it states or charges facts merely for the purpose of eliciting a reply, is admissible as a part of the pleadings, although not as evidence. — Kernaghan v. Kells, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (C.)

XXXVIII. 11. p. Affidavits in Reply.

[See G. O. (1867), 94, 158.]

9. It is the practice of the I. E. Court to allow affidavits in reply to be used, unless the opposite party be thereby surprised. In that event the case will be allowed to stand for rebutting affidavits. — In re Wall, 2 I. Jur. 92. (I.E.C.)

10. An order gave leave to amend a cause petition before the following day; and to file an affidavit verifying the amendment; the respondent to have liberty within fourteen days to file affidavits in reply. The amendments were not filed for several days. An affidavit verifying the amendments in detail, but filed before the motion for leave to amend, was relied on as sufficiently complying with the order to amend and verify. The Court on motion refused to take the amendments off the file for irregularity, but allowed the respondent the further time of fourteen days from the date of the latter motion to file affidavits in reply. Costs to be costs in the cause. — Guinness v. Phelps, 6 I. Jur. 389. (R.)

11. Petitioner, having set down the cause for hearing, and when it was in the Chancellor's list of the day, applied for leave to file further affidavits. Leave was given to file them, petitioner to pay £4, costs of the motion, without prejudice to the respondent applying to the Chancellor for the costs of the day. — Martin v. Cooper, 7 I. Jur. 128. (R.)

12. When a cause petition is set down for hearing by the petitioner, who afterwards applies for liberty to file further affidavits in support of the petition, he must pay the costs of the motion; especially if he had any considerable time to file the affidavits, during which he neglected to do so.—Hickey v. Meath, 7 I. Jur. 212. (R.)

1. When petitioner files affidavits in reply to respondent's affidavits, and then sets down the cause for hearing, the respondent will be given liberty to use affidavits in reply filed after the cause had been set down, or such portion thereof as may be in answer to the new matter.—Browne v. Betty, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 273. (R.)

2. Matters not put in issue by the petition, or by amendment thereof, cannot be relied on at the hearing of a cause petition. To put them in issue by an affidavit in reply is not sufficient.—Murphy v. Jackson, 7 I. C. R. 189; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 132. (R.)—[S. c. 7 I. C. R. 502; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 288. (C.A.)]

4. A petition for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4. c. 55, should be verified by the affidavit of the person interested, whenever it is possible to procure such an affidavit.—Cloncurry v. Piers, S. & Sc. 669. (R.)

5. A judgment of the H. of L. will not be made a rule of this Court without an affidavit verifying the signature of the Clerk of the Parliament.—Blakeney v. Annesley, H. & J., App. 47. (E.E.)

6. The affidavit, verifying a petition by a judgment creditor for a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4. c. 55, need not state separately the sums due for principal, for interest, and for costs, on foot of the judgment.—Tredennick v. Graydon, 1 Dr. & Wal. 316. (C.)

7. An affidavit to verify a petition under 5 & 6 W. 4. c. 55, made by the agent of the petitioner, will not suffice, unless some special facts are stated. The affidavit must be made by the petitioner himself.—Phelan v. P., Fl. & K. 177. (R.)

8. An affidavit to verify a petition under 5 & 6 W. 4. c. 55, which merely states, in general terms, that the contents of the petition are true, is insufficient.—Johnson v. J., 2 Jon. 430. (E.E.)

9. A conditional order for a receiver will be discharged if there be no verifying affidavit by the attorney as to the service of the conditional order.—Keogh v. K., 2 I. E. R. 412. (E.E.)

10. Affidavit verifying bill for an injunction to restrain waste by breaking up ancient meadow, should state deponent's knowledge of the land for a considerable period (semble, twenty years), and that it had not been in tillage during that time.

Leave given to file an affidavit to that effect.—Creagh v. Carmichael, 7 I. E. R. 304. (E.E.)

12. An affidavit to register, entitled in the same words as the record of the judgment, stated that J., by the name and description of J., of 116 Grafton-street, Dublin, solicitor, obtained a judgment for, &c., dated, &c., against the deft. in this cause, by the name and description of P., of, &c., in the county of, &c., Esq." The affidavit then verified the place of abode and description of the ptf. and deft., and stated that "to the best of his" (deponent's) "knowledge and belief, P., the deft. in this suit, is at the time of swearing this affidavit, seized." Held, that, under the statute, the affidavit sufficiently verified the title of the cause; and that the deft. in the cause was the person whose lands it was sought to affect.—Power's Estate; ex parte Taylor, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 8. (C.A.)

13. The affidavit verifying a charge is not a sufficient affidavit to discharge an accounting party of items under forty shillings, mentioned in the charge.—Palmer v. Goodwin, 13 I. C. R. 171. (C.)

14. A power of attorney was witnessed by a notary public in Australia, and attested under his notarial seal. Held, that the handwriting of the person by whom the power purported to be signed should be verified by the affidavit of a resident in this country.—In re Mann, 8 I. XXXVIII. 12. Answer.

a. When Answer may be Read as Evidence.

b. What Evidence is good against Answer.

c. Effect of Reading Answer.

XXXVIII. 12. a. When Answer may be Read as Evidence.

15. Secondary evidence of a letter written by deft. having been given, she was allowed to read from her answer her account of the contents of the letter.—Earl of Donoughmore v. Cataneo, Jon. & Car. 250. (E.E.)

1. The answer of one co-defendant acknowledging the charge cannot be read against the other.—Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.)

2. The Court will not permit the answer of the guardian ad litem of a superannuated person to be read against him, nor make a decree against him thereon, but will require the case to be proved against him.—Freeman v. Grady, 8 I. E. R. 137. (R.)

3. A suit for an account against an elegit creditor in possession was heard on bill and answer. The only evidence before the Master to charge the debt, with the rent of lands was the admission in the answer, accompanied by a statement that the lands were erroneously included in the elegit, and belonged to a third person, with whom the debt had accounted. Held, that the Master was not bound to take the entire statement in the answer; but might, on the admission, charge the debt, with the rent received, and find that the property belonged to the debtor.—McDonnell v. Alcock, 8 I. E. R. 127. (C.)

4. The ptf. sought a renewal of a lease (not in his possession). The debt's answer denied his right to the renewal, "inasmuch as he is convinced from documents in his possession, to which he will hereafter more particularly refer, that no such lease was executed;" and stated "that it appears by a certain deed and schedule, which he admitted to be in his possession, that a lease for a different term and rent had been executed, and that 'it is manifest' from the schedule a renewal, if obtained, was fraudulent." Held, that the debt had referred to the deed and schedule in such a way as to make it part of his answer; and was bound to produce it.—Phelan v. Hamilton, 9 I. E. R. 264. (R.)

5. The debts, by their answer admitted that two deeds were in their possession, stated them partially, and referred to them, when produced, for greater certainty. Held, that they were bound to produce them for the inspection of the ptf. on motion.

On a bill filed to sell the inheritance, it appeared on the face of the answer of the tenant for life, that the parties entitled to the remainder immediately expectant on the life estate, were not before the Court. Held, that the Court could not compel the tenant for life to produce the deed under which the absent parties held their estate, although, as against the tenant for life, the right of the ptf. to inspection was complete.

That, to show that the bill is open to a demurrer for want of equity, is not a valid objection to ptf.'s motion to produce documents.—Dundas v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 640. (R.)

6. The bill in an administration suit erroneously stated, in respect to dates and other particulars, agreements for leases to the testator, V. His heir-at-law, in his answer, admitted the agreements to be of the purport stated in the bill, but for greater certainty referred to the original agreements when produced. He died. The suit was revived as against his son and heir-at-law, T., a minor, who, in his answer (by his guardian) to the original and revived bill, admitted the agreements to be of the nature set forth in the bill. A decree directed the Master to take an account of V.'s real and personal estate, and to state whether the premises agreed to be demised to him formed part of his real or personal assets. The original agreements were not produced before the Master, but T., in his charge, filed in the Master's office, made an admission similar to that contained in his answer. The Master by his report found that the premises formed part of V.'s personal estate. To that report T. filed exceptions.

After the cause was set down for hearing, on the report, exceptions, and further directions, T.'s solicitor, who had been solicitor for T.'s father, for the first time obtained copies of the agreements. Counsel for T. mentioned at the hearing that the agreements differed from the description given of them in the bill, and tended to show that V. took a freehold estate in the premises. Other parties in the cause objected to the admission of the original agreements in evidence in opposition to the previous admission in the pleadings. The Court yielded to that objection, and overruled the exceptions; but, upon a special motion afterwards made—Held, that the Master should be directed to review his report; and that T. should be permitted to file a supplemental charge in the office, putting in issue the original agreements, but should pay the costs of the motion, and the costs arising on the new reference to the Master.

That, before the decree to account, T. would have been permitted by supplemental answer to rectify the erroneous admissions; but that, after decree, leave to file a supplemental answer could not be granted.—Carbery v. Cox, 2 I. C. R. 377; 2 I. Jur. 25. (C.)

7. A petitioner may read as his evidence a portion of a respondent's affidavit, without making the whole his evidence.—Archbold v. Scully, 9 I. C. R. 152; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 330. (C.A.)—[See s. c., 9 H. L. Cas. 360.]

8. Though the petitioner may read a portion of the respondent's affidavit by way of answer without making the whole his own evidence, he cannot read any portion of any other affidavit filed on behalf of the respondent without making the whole his own evidence.—Farrer v. Mercer, 10 I. C. R. 502. (C.)

XXXVIII. 12. b. What Evidence is good against Answer.

9. When the answer of the debt, conflicts with the depositions of the sole witness for the ptf., if there are circumstances tending to give credit to the testimony of the witness, rather than to the debt's answer, the Court will grant a decree thereon upon the evidence of the former.—Shany v. Garty, 2 I. Jur. 187. (C.)

1. The Court refused to decree the cancellation of a bond, for which, at the time of its execution, no money passed; on the petitioner's sole evidence against the respondent's answering affidavit, stating that the bond was the petitioner's free and voluntary act, done for past services, and advances of money.—Wyse v. Lambert, 16 I. C. R. 378. (R.)

XXXVIII. 12. c. Effect of Reading Answer.

XXXVIII. 13. Bills generally: when taken Pro Confesso.

[See G. O. (1867), 65, 110–126.]

2. A bill in Chancery filed by tenant for life, though no decree was pronounced in the cause, may be read in evidence in a suit against the remainderman, partly relating to the same lands, but only as evidence of such a bill having been filed.—Nangle v. Smith, 1 I. E. R. 119. (C.)

XXXVIII. 14. Evidence taken on Bill to Perpetuate.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 98; G. O. (1867), 140.]

3. A commission to examine witnesses de bene esse, upon a bill to perpetuate testimony, granted, though deft. had not appeared, and was not in contempt.—Allen v. Earl of Amseley, 2 Jones, 260. (E.E.)

4. In a suit to perpetuate testimony of witnesses, the deft. not having answered, and having stood out process to a sequestration, to which there was a return of nulla bona, liberty was given to the ptf., under 13 G. 2, c. 9, to pass publication of depositions taken de bene esse in the cause. — Scantlan v. M'Coy, Fl. & K. 366. (R.)

5. After replication filed in a suit to perpetuate testimony, it is not necessary to obtain an order to examine witnesses. — Allen v. Hacket, 11 I. E. R. 355. (R.)

6. Liberty given to the ptf. to examine witnesses de bene esse, under a bill to perpetuate testimony, although the deft. had not answered, and was not in contempt.—Lindsay v. L., 2 I. Jur. 12. (R.)

7. In a cause petition suit to perpetuate testimony, the respondent filed no answering affidavit, and was in contempt for not answering interrogatories annexed to the petition. The petitioner, without an order for that purpose, examined witnesses, without complying with the requirements of the 13 G. 2, c. 9 (Ir.) s. 2. The Court allowed publication of those depositions to pass, saving all just exceptions touching their admissibility on the hearing of the matter wherein it was intended to use them; and reserving the right of the respondents therein to object at its hearing to the admissibility.—Kiernan v. K., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 149. (R.)

8. A petition to perpetuate testimony of the contents of a lost deed was filed by the claimant of a reversionary interest thereunder. Held, that under a commission, issued pursuant to its prayer, the respondents could not examine witnesses on their own behalf; and that the defence of purchase for valuable consideration without notice is no answer to a suit to perpetuate testimony.—Talbot v. Kennedy, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 50. (C.)

XXXVIII. 15. Copies.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 102, 109, 128, 152; G. O. (1867), 57, 59, 60, 62, 81, 170, 175, 177–190, 195, 197, 202, 218, 225, 244, 260, 270, 279.]

9. Secondary evidence of a letter written by the deft. having been given, she was allowed to read from her answer her account of the contents of the letter.—Earl of Donoughmore v. Cataneo, Jones & Ca. 250. (E.E.)

10. Copies of the tithe certificate and applotment, compared and attested by the registrar of the diocese, are evidence of the contents of the original document.—Hawkins v. Carry, 2 Jones, 431; Crowley v. Flood, ibid. 555. (E.E.)

11. By marriage settlement lands were limited to B., the settlor, for life; remainder to trustees for a term of years to secure a jointure and younger children's portions; remainder to B.'s sons in tail; remainder to B.'s heirs, to whom the estate descended, all the prior limitations having been spent. On a bill, filed by the representatives of the surviving younger child, an alleged copy of the settlement was produced, and an ineffectual search among her papers for the original proved, and also that this copy was found there. A witness believed that part of the document was in the handwriting of W., clerk to his father, the solicitor in the cause. W. had died twenty years ago. Witness had not ever seen W. write; but, by comparison, and by an endorsement, "Compared, W.," believed the writing to be W.'s, but did not know when it had been written. The original was registered, and a memorial thereof proved. Held, that the copy was not admissible in evidence, no search having been made among the papers of the trustees of the term, or of the inheritor, and W.'s handwriting not having been proved sufficiently. — Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.)

12. The Deputy Keeper of the Rolls was directed to furnish to a deft. an office copy of a bill, with those interrogatories only which the deft. was required to answer.—Daniel v. D., 2 I. Jur. 169. (R.)

13. Cause petitions under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act 1850 are not pleadings of which attested copies must be taken out of the Rolls office before answering affidavits will be received there.—Daly v. Wade, 1 I. C. R. 372. (C.)

14. A will lodged in the registry was impeached as a forgery. The Court refused to allow the propounder to get a photographic copy of the signatures of the testator and of the witnesses, without an affidavit explaining the circumstances; but, on consent, ordered that a copy of the body of the will might be taken.—Ternan v. T., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 51. (P.)

1. On special motion, the M. R. will permit an attested copy of amendments to a cause petition to be taken out by a respondent who has already been obliged to take out an attested copy of a common copy deposited in the Master's office.—Bennett v. Wolfe, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 189. (R.)

2. An incumbrancer on the final schedule noticed a prior incumbrancer, claiming under a judgment mortgage, that, on the final hearing of the schedule, he would be required to produce proof of his judgment mortgage, and that it was duly registered so as to be a charge upon the lands.

The judgment mortgagee produced a certified copy of the affidavit made to register the judgment as a mortgage. The affidavit was right in point of form. No objection was filed. Held, sufficient proof of the validity of the judgment mortgage.—In re Flood's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 116. (C.A.)

XXXVIII. 16. Taken in other Courts.

[See EVIDENCE ACT, 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99, s. 7.]

XXXVIII. 17. Decisions of other Courts.

[See 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99, s. 7.]

3. A verdict on an issue is not admissible evidence on a second trial of the same issue.—O'Connor v. Malone, 6 Cl. & F. 572.—[Rev. Malone v. O'Connor, 2 D. & Wal. 491. (C.)]

4. A decree of the Court of Claims under the 11 & 12 W. 3, sess. 2, c. 2 (Eng.), adjudicating on lands, vested in an innocent person, as charged with a rent, is not admissible in evidence, not having been within their jurisdiction; and although possession of the lands and the rent has ever since gone in accordance with the decree, the decree is not admissible, at least, without proving that it was known to the parties against whom it is produced, or to those through whom they claim.—Archbp. of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

XXXVIII. 18. Evidence of one Defendant read for or against another.

5. The answer of one co-deft., acknowledging the charge, cannot be read against the other.—Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.)

6. When the personal representative, and the infant heir-at-law of a deceased debtor, were co-defts. in a suit instituted by a simple contract creditor of the ancestor, and there was a consent order that the personal representative should be examined as a witness—Held, that the deposition so taken was admissible in evidence against the infant deft.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 849. (C.)

7. A deft. cannot read, as against ptf., depositions taken on behalf of a co-deft.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

XXXVIII. 19. Decree in former Cause.

XXXVIII. 20. Evidence taken in another Cause or Matter.

8. A bill was filed in the Court of Ch. impeaching a will. A suit to recal probate had been instituted in the Prerogative Court, and a witness, who was examined de bene esse in the Ch. suit, died after having been examined. The Court would not permit his depositions to be published for the purpose of using them in a suit in the Ecclesiastical Court, issue not having been joined in the suit in Ch., and publication therefore not having passed in such suit.—Shewell v. Hilliard, 9 I. E. R. 469. (R.)

9. A., tenant under a lease for lives renewable for ever, assigned his entire interest by way of mortgage; but remained in possession. His lessor served on him, but not on the mortgagee, a notice under the Tenantry Act. For a considerable period, A. omitted to renew the lease; and a petition for renewal, filed by him, was dismissed on the ground of laches. In the mortgagee's suit—Held, that the lessor's affidavit, filed in A.'s cause, could not be read as evidence of the facts stated therein.—Galbraith v. Cooper, 6 I. C. R. 518; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 69. (C.)

XXXVIII. 21. Deeds: Proof of: Loss of: other Documentary Evidence.

a. In general.

b. Secondary Evidence.

c. Registers and other Records; Books; Entries; Letters, &c.

[As to Production of Deeds, See PRACTICE, LXXV, PRODUCTION OF DEEDS.]

XXXVIII. 21. a. Deeds generally: their Proof and Loss: of other Documentary Evidence.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 71, 73, 109, 128: G. O. (1867), 162, 164-190.]

10. To warrant the reading of a document at the re-hearing, it must have been put in issue by the pleadings. That the fact intended to be proved by the document has been put in issue is insufficient.—Lysaght v. Cullinan, Hayes, 141. (E.E.)

11. The bill stated a deed which was admitted by answer. On hearing on bill and answer, the ptf. offered to read a deed corresponding with that stated in the bill, but which had not been identified with it. Held, that it could not be read.—Hughes v. Cowley, 5 I. E. R. 588. (E.E.)

12. There is not any objection to correct a deed by parol evidence, when there is anything in writing beyond the parol evidence to go by. Where, however, there is not anything save the recollection of witnesses, and the deft.'s answer denies the case set up by ptf., ptf. is without remedy.

In a suit to reform principally by parol evidence, a mistake in a lease, what deft. admits or denies is of the utmost importance.—Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. & War. 363; 1 Con. & L. 417. (C.)

1. To bring a case within the 21 G. 3, c. 11 (the Act for validating recoveries after twenty years, though the deed making the tenant to the præcipe be lost), s. 8, it is not necessary to give strict proof of the loss of the deed.—Townsend v. Earl of Kingston, 6 I. E. R. 118. (E.E.)

2. A mortgage deed having been lost, its execution was admitted in the answer to a foreclosure bill, but the deft. swore there was an endorsement of payments on it. The memorial, executed by the mortgagor, and a counterpart in his possession, were offered in evidence, but a sufficient search for the original was not proved. Held, that there should be a decree to account, with an enquiry as to the original deed and the endorsement on it.—Coulson v. Williams, 9 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

3. Bill filed in 1816, for specific execution of a covenant contained in marriage articles, alleged to have been executed in 1760, but lost or destroyed; in which the covenantor agreed to bequeath by will to his intended wife, if she survived him, one-third part of the fortune or substance which he should die possessed of or entitled unto. A decree of the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, holding that the memorial of registry of such alleged articles, bearing date the 1st of Feb. 1763, though not executed by the covenantor, was admissible in evidence against those claiming under him, not only of the execution, but contents of those articles; and that the words "fortune or substance," embraced and included within them as well the covenantor's real as personal property, was affirmed by the House of Lords.—Scully v. S., 10 I. E. R. 557. (H.L.)—[Affg. decree of Ld. Ch. of Ir.—See next case.]

4. A bill filed for a renewal set forth lost articles of demise of 1746, by V., then seized in fee, alleged to contain a covenant for perpetual renewal, also, in alleged conformity thereto, a lease executed in 1750 by V., who in the interim had become tenant for life, containing such a covenant, and reciting articles; also showing subsequent renewals successively by tenants for life. Held, that the memorial of the articles from the Registry-office, though not executed by V., was admissible in evidence against those claiming under him as purchasers, of the execution of such lost articles and of their contents.

That the successive renewals by subsequent tenants for life were evidence in support of the memorial, against the remainderman, of the execution of the articles.

That an agreement in a memorial to demise lands for three lives, "with a clause of renewal, provided the lessee, within six calendar months from the death of the last of the said three lives, should nominate such life or lives as he would have inserted in any lease to be made thereof, and paying, as well all rent due for the half year after the fall of such life, as the sum of £11. 7s. 6d. for renewing or adding such life or lives for ever," is a covenant for perpetual renewal.—Biggs v. Sadler, 10 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)—[See s. c. 4 H. L. Cas. 435, and Scully v. S., 10 I. E. R. 557. (H.L.)]

5. Any documents, which could be used at Law as admissions to prove an agreement pleaded, may be used in Equity for the same purpose, though not noticed in the bill; but subject to enquiry, if deft. be taken by surprise. Such a method of proof may, however, affect the costs.—Crosbie v. Thompson, 11 I. E. R. 404. (C.)

6. The Poor-law valuation is evidence, as a public document, of the value of land comprised in it.

A document not in issue by the bill, and a motion for the introduction of which by amendment has been refused, cannot be used at the hearing.—Swift v. M' Tiernan, 11 I. E. R. 602. (C.)

7. The Poor-law valuation is, as a public document, evidence of the value of the lands comprised in it.—Welland v. Lord Middleton, 11 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

8. In a suit by the assignee of an annuity, a mortgagee of the estate charged denied the assignment. Held, that it could not be proved viva voce at the hearing, though the existence of the annuity was not disputed, and though the bill was taken as confessed against the assignor.—Bagnall v. Horn, 12 I. E. R. 19. (C.)

9. The last previous lease of premises included in a renewal is not the only evidence receivable of what are usual clauses within the meaning of a power requiring the usual clauses to be inserted in renewals. The Court refused to set aside a renewal, impeached for varying from the previous lease, in a case in which the objection was not made by the bill so as to lead the deft. to explain it.—Marquis of Donegal v. Greg, 13 I. E. R. 12. (C.)

10. Where in a suit to raise an incumbrance a deft. omitted to put in issue by her answer a deed of a certain date, under which she claimed an annuity; upon motion founded upon an affidavit, stating that the omission arose from inadvertence, but not stating any of the circumstances under which the deed was executed, she obtained liberty to prove the deed, and rely on it at the hearing, although it had not been put in issue.—Held, that under that order, evidence that the deed was executed upon a day different from that on which it bore date was inadmissible at the hearing; and that evidence of its execution merely could be then received.

The Court, inserted in the decree a declaration that the deft. should be at liberty to rely before the Master on the deed in relation to such rights as she might claim.—Ramsay v. Huffington, 13 I. E. R. 185. (C.)

1. The Court will not allow a deed to be taken out of the Master's office, to prove it in the cause, without notice to the parties.—Wyse v. W., 4 I. Jur. 100. (R.)

2. Any document or evidence, that has been before the Court below, may, on appeal to the House of Lords, be properly brought under the notice of the House, but no others.—Geraghty v. Malone, 1 H. L. Cas. 89.—[See the case below: 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239. (C.)]

3. On a re-hearing, documentary evidence, not offered at the original hearing, may be received; but depositions cannot then be received, if offered for any purpose beyond that of identifying such documentary evidence.—Johanson v. Mid. Gt. W. of Ir. Ry. Co., 5 I. C. R. 264. (C.)—[See s. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 798; 4 Jur. N. S. 643.]

4. In 1805, C., entitled to a charge upon lands, died. It was alleged that she had made a will, and the petitioner claimed a portion of the charge under that will. No evidence of the existence or probate of that will was given, but for upwards of thirty years the parties interested in the charge, and in the lands on which it was a charge, had acted on the belief of its existence and probate. During a considerable portion of that time the owner of the lands was a lunatic under the protection of the Court of Ch., which had acted on the supposition of there being a will. Some of the respondents, who subsequently became owners of the lands, had in a former suit made verified statements mentioning and relying on the execution of C.'s will. Held, in a suit to raise the amount due on foot of the charge, that the existence and probate of the will, and the assent of the executor, might be presumed.—Toker v. Lanesborough, 7 I. C. R. 241; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 125. (C.)

5. A., seized in tail of K. and other lands, suffered a recovery of them in 1834, and had by will, in 1832, devised them. In 1836 A. borrowed money on a mortgage of K., and on a collateral judgment. On that occasion a disentailing deed of all the lands was executed and enrolled, by which A. conveyed all the lands to the use of himself and his heirs. Held, that the deed was a total revocation of the will.—[Affirming Rolls decision: 7 I. C. R. 354.]

On the occasion of the mortgage, the lender's counsel had objected to the recovery which had been suffered of K., and had advised that the mortgage should be enrolled. Quære, Whether that opinion was admissible as evidence?—Power v. P., 9 I. C. R. 178; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 268. (C.A.)

6. If the tenancy of lands, over which a receiver has been appointed, is disputed, the Court will not issue an attachment for non-payment of rent.

Semble—A stamped copy of a lost unstamped document, requiring a stamp, is admissible in evidence.—[Connor v. Cronin (7 I. C. L. R. 480) doubted.]—Herbert v. Rae, 18 I. C. R. 25. (R.)

XXXVIII. 21. b. Secondary Evidence of Deeds, &c.

7. An admission in the answer that the deft.'s solicitor wrote a letter "to some such effect as that in bill stated, but for certainty as to the contents thereof the deft. begs leave to refer thereto, when produced and proved," does not authorise the ptf. to read the passage in the bill referred to, in order to show what were the contents of that letter.—Kent v. Roberts, 8 I. E. R. 279. (E.E.)

8. A memorial of articles for a settlement—Held, good secondary evidence of those articles, possession being shown to have gone along with them; and that execution of the memorial by the grantee was sufficient to satisfy the statute.—Peyton v. M'Dermott, 1 Dr. & Wal. 198. (C.)

9. A memorial is 'good secondary evidence of a lost deed.—Allen v. A., 4 I. E. R. 472; 2 Dr. & War. 307; 1 Con. & L. 427. (C.)

10. An inspezimus of a grant by an archbishop, contained in a grant of confirmation by a subsequent archbishop, which was enrolled, was produced from the Rolls Record-office. Held, good secondary evidence.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp'n. of Cashel, 3 Dr. & War. 294; 2 Con. & L. 1. (C.)

11. The word "and," in the last sentence of the 21 G. 2, c. 11, (the Act for validating recoveries after twenty years, notwithstanding the deed making the tenant to the præcipe should be lost and not appear), s. 8, is to be read "or." It is not necessary, to bring a case within that statute, to give strict proof of the loss of the deed.—Townsend v. Earl of Kingston, 6 I. E. R. 118. (E.E.)

12. By marriage settlement, lands were limited to E. (the settlor), for life, remainder to trustees for years, to secure a jointure and younger children's portions, remainder to the sons of E. in tail, remainder to the heirs of E. The estate descended to the heirs of E., all the prior limitations being spent. On a bill filed by the representatives of the surviving younger child, an alleged copy of the settlement was produced, and an ineffectual search proved among her papers for the original, and that the copy was found there. A witness believed that part of the document was in the handwriting of W., who was clerk to his father, the solicitor in the cause, and had died twenty years before; he had never seen W. write, but believed the writing to be his, by comparison, and also an endorsement, "Compared, W.," but did not know when it had been made. The original deed was registered, and the memorial of it was proved. Held, that the copy was not admissible in evidence, no search having been made among the papers of the trustees of the term, or of the inheritor, and the handwriting of W. not having been sufficiently proved.

Semble—That if the endorsement had been proved to have been in the handwriting of W., and to have been made when it purported to have been made, and the document had been transmitted with the title deeds, and acted on, it would have been admissible.—Cruise v. Clancy, 6 I. E. R. 552. (C.)

1. In 1816, a bill was filed praying specific execution of a covenant contained in marriage articles which, it was alleged, were executed in 1760, but had since been lost or destroyed. The covenantor had thereby agreed to bequeath to his intended wife, if she survived him, one-third part of the fortune or substance which he should die possessed of or entitled to. Held, that the memorial of the registry of those alleged articles, which memorial bore date 1st Feb. 1763, was, though not executed by the covenantor, admissible in evidence, against claimants under him, not only of the execution, but of the contents of those articles.

That the words, "fortune or substance," included the covenantor's real as well as his personal property.—Scully v. S., 10 I. E. R. 557. (H.L.)—[Affg. decree of Ld. Ch. of Ir.—See next case.]

2. A bill for a renewal set forth lost articles of demise of 1746, by V., then seized in fee, and alleged that they contained a covenant for perpetual renewal. The bill also set forth, in conformity with those articles, a lease executed in 1750 by V., who, in the interval, had become tenant for life. This lease contained such a covenant, and recited the articles; and the bill further showed subsequent renewals by successive tenants for life. Held, that the memorial of the articles from the Registry-office was, though not executed by V., admissible in evidence, against claimants under him as purchasers, of the execution of such lost articles, and of their contents.

That the successive renewals were evidence, in support of the memorial, against the remaindermen, of the execution of the articles.—Biggs v. Sadler, 10 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)—[See s. c., 4 H. L. Cas. 435, and Scully v. S., 10 I. E. R. 557. (H.L.)]

3. By marriage settlement lands were conveyed to A. and B., and the survivor of them, and his heirs; on trust for the intended husband for life, and after his death in trust "to convey at the request of the eldest son of the marriage," or of certain other persons. A. and B. having died, and a petition having been filed to carry into effect the trusts of the settlement—Held, before giving secondary evidence of the settlement, proof should be given that an ineffectual search for it had been made among the papers of both trustees; and that proof of such search among the papers of the survivor was insufficient.—Abbott v. Geraghty, 6 I. Jur. 49. (C.)

4. An affidavit of a respondent put in issue marriage articles, and stated their contents, "as by the same when produced and proved will appear." The articles were lost, but their loss was not stated in the affidavit. Held, that secondary evidence of their contents was not admissible.

The articles had been executed in Genoa, and a copy of them had been registered at the British Consulate there, by an officer whose duty it was to compare the registered copy with the original. Held, that the copy of the registered copy was not admissible in evidence.

After the cause had been heard, the book containing the copy of the articles was, on the application of the respondent's solicitor, forwarded to the Judge; but he refused to admit it in evidence without a re-hearing.—Barron v. Constable, 7 I. C. R. 467; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 312. (R.)

5. In a suit for specific performance, a contemporaneous letter of a deceased agent, with whom the contract was made, was admitted in evidence to prove the terms of the contract, the tenant having relied on the acts of the agent to establish that he had authority to contract.

In a suit for specific performance of a contract entered into by an agent, his authority to contract should be stated in the petition.

Semble—If it be not, the petitioner cannot prove it at the hearing.

Observations on the practice of filing affidavits in reply.—Mortal v. Lyons, 8 I. C. R. 112. (R.)

6. A solicitor, on a s. d. t., brought into Court a deed under which the respondents claimed as purchasers for value, and on which he did not claim any lien; but, by his client's instructions, refused to produce it, because the principal respondent owed his client a large sum of money.

Semble—That secondary evidence of the contents of the deed was not admissible.—The Att.-Gen. v. Ashe, 10 I. C. R. 309. (R.)

7. A document over thirty years old, purporting to be a copy of a lost instrument, and coming out of the proper custody, is not made evidence by an endorsement in the handwriting of the deceased family solicitor of the person claiming under the lost instrument, that he has compared the copy with the instrument, and knows the handwriting of the witnesses to the original, and of one of the parties, to be genuine.—Kerin v. Davoren, 12 I. C. R. 352. (C.)

8. A document purporting to be an old copy of a lost deed, which created charges on land, is not admissible in evidence against the owner of the land unless it is proved, when it comes from the custody of the owner of one of the charges.

A term of years was vested in trustees to raise a charge, no part of which was raised, though interest on two-thirds of it was paid to the parties entitled to the whole. On the remaining one-third no interest had been paid for upwards of forty years.

Quære—Whether a claim on foot of this one-third was barred by the Statute of Limitations?—In re Coane, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 124. (C.A.)

XXXVIII. 21. c. Registers and other Records: Books, Entries, Letters, &c.

[See 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99, ss. 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12; 18 & 19 Vic., c. 42, s. 3.]

1. The receipt granted by the collector of quit-rent is evidence of the apportionment of rent.—Bowles v. Waller, Hayes, 439. (E.E.)

2. Entries made in the chapel books by R. C. clergymen, whose deaths and handwriting have been proved, are evidence of a marriage or baptism recorded thereby.—Malone v. L'Estrange, 2 I. E. R. 16. (C.)—[See Malone v. O'Connor, 6 Cl. & F. 572].

3. To an habere upon a judgment in ejectment for non-payment of rent, the sheriff returned that he had delivered possession upon a particular day. Held, in a redemption suit, that the return was not conclusive evidence, against the tenant, of the date of the execution of the habere.

If evidence be conclusive at Law, it must be equally conclusive in Equity. We will not establish a rule of evidence, sitting as a Court of Equity, which, sitting as a Court of Law we would reject. The rules of evidence are substantially the same at Law and in Equity. What do you say to the case of Gyfford v. Woodgate (11 East. 297)? Have you any case overruling or varying that case; or any case denying the principle, that on a collateral matter, not an essential part of the return, and which the sheriff is not by the writ commanded to return, the sheriff's return is only prima facie, and not conclusive evidence?—Fitzgerald v. Hussey, 3 I. E. R. 319. (E.E.)

4. The inspeximus of a grant contained in the enrolment of a subsequent grant of confirmation of the preceding grant, produced from the records of the Rolls office—Held, to be good evidence of the former grant.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp. of Cashel, 2 Con. & L. 9; 3 Dr. & War. 299. (C.)

5. In a bill by one partner for an account on foot of the dissolved partnership, letters written by the deft. to the ptf., after the dissolution, were set out as in ptf.'s possession, and forming the basis of the partnership agreement, but which the deft., in his answer, denied. A motion by the deft. for the production of the letters, refused.—Palmer v. Mahony, 6 I. E. R. 504. (R.)

6. A witness proved a letter to have been duly posted, and properly directed. The receipt of it was positively denied in the answer. The copy tendered in evidence had a defective direction at the foot of it.

Quære—How far admissible in evidence?—Sheridan v. Joyce, 7 I. E. R. 115; 1 Jon. & L. 401. (C.)

7. The entry of the payment of the King's silver is sufficient evidence of a fine having been duly levied, the fine being complete on such payment.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 8 I. E. R. 317. (C.)

8. The Poor-law valuation is evidence, as a public document, of the value of land comprised in it.—Swift v. M'Tiernan, 11 I. E. R. 602. (C.)—Welland v. Lord Middleton, 11 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

9. The Down Survey, though conclusive only as to the boundaries of the new and old interests defined by the statute of Car. 2, is, as a public document, admissible as evidence on questions between any persons of matters stated in it.

The Books of Distributions, being only abstracts of the survey, are not admissible as evidence of matters in them.

A decree of the Court of Claims under statute of 11 & 12 W. 3, sess. 2, c. 2 (Eng.), adjudicating upon lands vested in an innocent person, as charged with a rent, is not admissible in evidence, not being a matter within their jurisdiction; and although the possession of the lands and rent has ever since gone in accordance with the decree, it does not render it admissible, at least without proving that it was known to the parties against whom it is produced, or those through whom they claim.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

10. A return made by the Registrar of a diocese, in answer to the enquiry of a clergyman whose benefice was under sequestration, enumerating the writs lodged with him, with the dates of the delivery and the sums due, though not proved to be made in virtue of his office, is evidence against the bishop: so are letters of the Registrar of a similar character.

The applotment-book of a parish is not evidence to prove the value of the benefice in years preceding the establishment of tithe composition in the parish.—Hogg v. Garrett, 12 I. E. R. 559. (C.)

11. The minute-book, made evidence by the 8 Vic., c. 16, s. 98 (Companies Cl. Cons. Act), may be transcribed or made from rough minutes taken at time of the meeting.—In re Jennings, 1 I. C. R. 236. (B.)

12. In a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act, praying special performance of a contract—Held, that a letter referred to by an affidavit made by the petitioner in reply to the affidavit of the respondent, but not put in issue by the original or any amended or supplemental petition, was inadmissible on behalf of the petitioner as evidence of the contract.—Duffy v. Johnson, 1 I. C. R. 591; 4 I. Jur. 14. (C.)

1. I. obtained a Crown grant of 111 acres profitable land, in M., with all pasture, turbary, bogs, mountains, to the premises belonging or in any wise appertaining. K. and F. obtained similar grants of lands in M. B. obtained a subsequent grant of one-quarter of lands in M. containing 134 acres profitable land, and also a parcel of bog in common unto the above lands, called C. containing 236 acres.

In the Book of Distributions C. was described as bog common to M., 236 acres. The lands of C. had been from time immemorial used for pasture and turbary by the tenants of all portions of M. Held, on petition for partition, that the representatives of J., of K., of F., and of M., were tenants in common of C.

The Book of Distributions is admissible evidence in points relating to property derived from the Crown, under the Acts of Settlement and Explanation, at least when the original survey cannot be produced.

Decree for petition, with reference to the Master to ascertain shares.—Knox v. Mayo, 7 I. C. R. 563; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 225. (C.) —[Affid.: 9 I. C. R. 192. (C.A.)]

2. If a partnership be admitted, the books are admissible in evidence, in taking the account of the partnership transactions, but the books of A. are not admissible against B. to prove a partnership if it be denied.—Sim v. S., 11 I. C. R. 310. (R.)

3. A petitioner is not entitled to read from his petition the statement of a document, to a copy of which the petition refers, although no affidavit has been filed by the respondent.—Talbot v. Hamilton, 14 I. C. R. 375. (C.)

4. Letters of administration were insufficiently stamped. Held, that the Book of Acts was primary evidence of the title of the party to whom administration was granted.—McDonnell v. White, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 193. (C.)

5. A map made in 1609, by virtue of a commission issued by the Crown under the great seal of Ireland, in the 7th Jac. 1, and which map was preserved in the State Paper-office in London, was properly receivable in evidence.—Staples v. Harpur, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 121. (C.)

6. On appeal, the Court may admit documentary evidence which was not before the Master when he made the decretal order appealed against.

The Court has jurisdiction to review a Master's decision respecting what evidence is admissible under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 13.

The practice in the Masters' offices under that section is irregular. The Master should order books of account to be received as prima facie evidence. Items capable of independent proof should be proved before the order is made.—Boag v. Bradford, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

XXXVIII. 22. When Evidence is admitted to Expound Deeds.

[See also PRACTICE, XXXVIII. 4, PAROL EVIDENCE.]

7. Lands being re-settled, £2500 was charged for younger children by a deed reciting that estates were charged with £1000 for them under a previous settlement which really charged the lands with £2000. Those children claimed both sums. Held, not a case for election between the deeds, but a mere misrecital; and that the real intention, if it had been to charge £2500, besides only £1000, should have been proved by parol evidence.—Ruby v. Foot & Beamish, Beat. Rep. 581. (C.)

8. Semble—That evidence of a consideration, which is not inconsistent with the consideration set out on the face of the deed, is admissible to support the deed as one for value.—Nixon v. Hamilton, 1 I. E. R. 46; 2 Dr. & Wal. 364. (C.)

9. In 1710, Trinitarian Protestant Dissenters subscribed moneys for charitable purposes, and executed a trust deed for the management of the fund. It recited that the objects of the trust were: to support the Protestant Dissenting Interest against unreasonable prosecutions: to educate youth designed for the ministry amongst Protestant Dissenters: to assist poor Protestant Dissenting Congregations.

To aid in construing such a deed the Court will receive evidence of the acts of the founders, but not of their opinions.

Evidence is also admissible to explain the signification in which ambiguous words or expressions were generally understood when the deed was executed.—The Att.-Gen. v. Drummond, 1 Dr. & War. 353; 1 Con. & L. 210. (C.)—[Affid.: 2 H. Lds. Cas. 837.—For the form of decree in such a case, see 3 Dr. & War. 162. (C.)]

10. There is no objection to correct a deed by parol evidence when there is anything in writing, besides the parol evidence, to go by. But, when the sole evidence is the recollection of witnesses, and the deft., by his answer, denies the case set up by the ptf., the ptf. is without remedy.—Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. War. 363; Con. 1 & L. 417. (C.)

11. Before the 1 Vic., c. 26, a deed which revoked a will at Law, would also have revoked it in Equity, although the estate in Equity remained unaltered, unless the deed was executed for some partial or qualified purpose.

Intention is immaterial, if there was an alteration of the estate both at Law and Equity: but if there was no alteration of the estate in Equity evidence is admissible to rebut the inference of an intention to revoke, arising from the alteration of the estate at law. Held, therefore, that the opinion of counsel was admissible as evidence, that the disentailing deed was executed for the purpose of the mortgage.—Power v. P., 7 I. C. R. 354. (R.)—[Affid.: 9 I. C. R. 178; Dr. temp. Napier, 268; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 379. (C.A.)]

[Judicial signature admitted without proof; 8 & 9 Vic., c. 113, s. 2.]

Handwriting may now be proved by comparison with other handwriting proved to be genuine; 17 & 18 Vic., c. 125, ss. 27 & 103.]

1. A power of attorney was witnessed by a notary public in Australia, and attested under his notarial seal. Held, that the handwriting of the party by whom the power purported to be signed should be verified by the affidavit of a resident in this country. —In re Mann, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 361. (R.)

XXXVIII. 24. Evidence in Tithe Causes.

2. Ptf. in a tithe suit is not bound to prove his title by production of the certificate of his collation, presentation, or donation, when it is proved that he has been in receipt of the tithes for several years, and has been paid tithe by deft., unless deft. has distinctly denied ptf.'s title.—Jones v. Waller, 1 Jones, 300. (E.E.)

3. The ptf. sued as vicar for tithe composition. In his bill he set out the certificate in which he was named as vicar, and the applotment charging, as occupier, the deft., who in his answer stated his belief that the commissioners had made and signed such certificate, as was stated in the bill; but whether the same was duly prepared and signed, he referred to such proof as the ptf. should produce thereof. Upon the hearing on bill and answer, Held, that the certificate sufficiently proved the ptf.'s title.—Crawley v. Flood, 2 Jones, 555. (E.E.)

4. Under the 1 & 2 Vic., c. 109, s. 32, upon application by three or more persons in any parish, each charged with payment of £3 or upwards in respect of the tithe rentcharge, and who have given notice in the manner specified by the Act, the Court of Q. S. may vary the rentcharge according to the price of corn.

An order reducing the rentcharge recited that, whereas due notice having first by them been given, three owners and occupiers of land in the parish of F., &c., each charged with payment of £3 and upwards in respect of the rentcharge payable in lieu of the composition for tithes made by certificate of, &c., applied to the Justices of the Peace at Q. S., &c.; afterwards the incumbent proceeded by petitions under the 30th section of the Act to recover the rentcharge which accrued from the gale-day after the order of Sessions, as if no reduction had taken place. A rule nisi for a receiver was obtained. The respondent, relying on the order of the Q. S., came to show cause against the rule. Held, that the recitals in the order were not evidence of the facts therein stated.—Thompson v. Shiel, 3 I. E. R. 135. (R.)

5. An objection to the reading of documents, because they have not been proved as against the party objecting, must be made when they are tendered. This rule is equally applicable to the case of a minor as of an adult deft.—Stoughton v. Crosbie, 5 I. E. R. 451. (E.E.)

6. Semble—A certificate by the commissioners under the Tithe Composition Act (4 G. 4, c. 99, s. 25) is valid, though it only finds generally that tithes are payable to a lay impropriator, without giving his name.

Semble also—The title to the tithes is not concluded by the certificate.—Greville v. Fleming, 8 I. E. R. 201; 2 Jon. & L. 335. (C.)

7. The applotment-book of a parish is not evidence to prove the value of the benefice in years preceding the establishment of tithe composition in the parish.—Hogg v. Garrett, 12 I. E. R. 559. (C.)

8. The only evidence of the effecting of a composition in lieu of tithes is the original certificate of composition: the applotment-book is not sufficient.—Kent v. Burrowes, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 13. (C.)

9. The applotment of tithe rentcharge made by comms. under the 9 G. 4, c. 99, is not in every case conclusive evidence of the amount payable by the tithe payer.—Plunket v. Malley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 83. (M.O.)

XXXVIII. 25. Will, Proof of.

[See 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, ss. 68, 69.]

10. When it is sought to have a will, disposing of real property, declared well proved, it must be proved by three witnesses, or proof of their deaths and handwriting. For other purposes, not requiring such a decree, but merely to read it as a legal instrument, one witness to prove it suffices.—Brown v. Chambers, Hayes, 597. (E.E.)

11. Ptf. and deft. (the inheritor), a minor, both claiming under an ancient will, it may be proved at the hearing as an exhibit. Attested copies of records, when a minor is concerned, must be proved by interrogatories.—Pope v. P., Hay. & J. 77. (E.E.)

12. Proof of the factum of a will, and of the testator's capacity, are not sufficient to encounter suspicious circumstances which may raise a presumption of falsity or fraud, requiring for its removal clear and satisfactory evidence.

It is not necessary to prove the fraud or imposition, which may in such a case be presumed; the onus of proof lying on the party who propounds the will.—Von Stentz v. Comyn, 12 I. E. R. 622. (C.)

13. Since the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 68, a will, or the contents of a lost will, may be proved by a single witness.—Daly v. Burke, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 73. (P.)

XXXVIII. 26. When admitted to Expound Wills.

1. The general doctrine of the admissibility of parol evidence to explain a testator's intention, and the cases on the subject, considered.—Hall v. Hill, 4 I. E. R. 27; 1 Dr. & War. 94; 1 Con. & L. 120. (C.)

2. As to admitting evidence with respect to the construction of a will.—Kennedy v. Kelly, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 326. (P.)

XXXVIII. 27. Witness.

a. Generally: his Rights, Duties, and Liabilities: of a Subpœna ad Testificandum.

b. Competency.

c. Examination respecting Witness's Credit.

d. Demurrer to Interrogatories: who is examinable by, and on what matters.

e. Attesting Witness.

XXXVIII. 27. a. Generally: his Rights, &c.; Subpœna ad Testificandum.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 90, 91.]

3. The Court permitted a witness to read the interrogatories to which he was to be examined; it being sworn that he was deaf and could not be otherwise examined.—Nangle v. N., 1 I. Jur. 78. (R.)

XXXVIII. 27. b. Competency of Witness.

[Incapacity of person from crime or interest to be examined as a witness abolished.—6 & 7 Vic., c. 83, s. 1; 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99, ss. 1–3; 16 & 17 Vic., c. 83, s. 1.]

4. A widow is an admissible witness against the personal representative of her deceased husband, to charge his assets.—Harwood v. Bland, 2 I. E. R. 11. (C.)

5. The evidence of a witness was rejected at the hearing, on the ground of interest. Motion to permit him to be examined in aid of an enquiry directed by the decree, or to permit his depositions to be read before the Master, with liberty to examine him to show that the passage in his depositions showing his interest was introduced by mistake. The Court refused the motion, being of opinion that the passage had not originated in mistake.—Smith v. Harding, Fl. & K. 184; 3 I. E. R. 336. (R.)

6. The lessee of a lease for lives renewable for ever became insolvent, and died. A judgment creditor of his filed a bill, and obtained a decree for sale of the land, and, with the sanction of the Court in that suit, filed a bill for a renewal. Held, that a judgment creditor of the party entitled to the lease, is a competent witness for the ptf.—Smith v. Shannon, 3 I. E. R. 452. (C.)

7. A witness had, through inadvertence, omitted to include in a release a portion of his interest. Liberty was given to re-examine him to the interrogatories to which he had already been examined.

A witness, incompetent by interest at the time of his examination was, after a release, ordered to be re-examined before publication, it appearing to the Court that there was no intention of varying the evidence already given.—Gleeson v. Sandwich, 3 I. E. R. 359; Fl. & K. 240. (R.)

8. The 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has not altered the practice in relation to the examination of a deft. by the ptf., and the order cannot be obtained to examine a deft. whose answer has been replied to, unless the replication be withdrawn as against him.—Walker v. Tilly, 9 I. E. R. 261. (R.)

9. A ptf. may examine a notice party without previous leave to do so.—M'Carthy v. M'C., 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.)

10. A deft. whose interest in the suit so coincides with that of the ptf., that he might have been made a co-ptf., is, nevertheless, under the 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, a competent witness for the ptf.—Kelly v. Bennisson, 11 I. E. R. 605. (C.)

11. A solicitor prepared, on the day next but one before the testator's death, a draft will under which he took, as residuary legatee, a large pecuniary benefit. On the day on which the will was prepared the testator executed it in the presence of two witnesses brought by the solicitor to witness the testator's signature. The validity of the will having been questioned in a contested suit—Held, that the solicitor's evidence on his own behalf was admissible, but should be received with great jealousy and caution.

In such a case mere formal proof that the will was executed according to the forms prescribed by law, is not sufficient to establish the will: the evidence should satisfy the Court that the instrument so executed was the genuine will of a free and capable testator.

Review of the principles which govern the Court in estimating the capacity of a testator, and the testimony of witnesses, in contested testamentary cases.—Keogh v. Barrington, Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 1. (C.A.)

XXXVIII. 27. c. Examination touching Witness's Credit.

[By examination as to former inconsistent statements, see 19 & 20 Vic., c. 102, ss. 26, 27, 28.]

12. Statements in affidavits of alleged conversations of a deponent in a cause will not be admitted for the purpose of impeaching his credit; he must be cross-examined as to the conversations.—Crofts v. C., 6 I. Jur. 249. (C.)

XXXVIII. 27. d. Demurrer to Interrogatories: who, and on what matters examinable.

1. An attorney cannot, on the ground of professional confidence, refuse to answer an interrogatory touching his having seen a certain instrument; and, if so, when, and in whose hands?—O'Gorman v. M'Namara, Hayes, 174. (E.E.)

2. When a witness, who had been ptf.'s solicitor, declines to answer an interrogatory concerning documents in his possession, on the ground that he has a lien on them for costs, the Court (there not being in the case any danger of perjury) will permit a new interrogatory to the same intent as the former one to be exhibited to him, though publication has passed.—Bloss v. O'More, Hay. & J. 337. (E.E.)

3. In a renewal suit deft. examined a witness to prove service on ptf. of a notice requiring them to renew, and pay the renewal fines. Semle—It was not competent for ptf. to read the evidence of another witness examined by them in the same cause to prove an admission by deft.'s witness that he had not ever served that notice.

Semle—Articles should previously have been exhibited to the credit of defendant's witness by ptf., to enable them to impeach his testimony.—O'Keefe v. Allen, 1 I. E. R. 382. (E.E.)

XXXVIII. 27. e. Attesting Witness.

[Deed or agreement not necessary to be proved by attesting witness, when no attesting witness necessary to validity thereof. 19 & 20 Vic., c. 102, ss. 29, 98.]

4. It is enough to examine one of the witnesses to a will except when it is proved against the heir-at-law, when it is necessary to examine all the witnesses.—Brown v. Chambers, Hayes, 597. (E.E.)

5. When an infant deft. is of years so tender that she cannot write, the Court will order her execution of the purchase-deed, pursuant to the 11 G. 4, & 1 W. 4, c. 47, to be attested by a Commissioner of the Court for taking Affidavits.—Archbold v. Rice, 5 I. E. R. 33. (E.E.)

6. Deft. assented to the appointment of the person nominated commissioner examiner by ptf.; and cross-examined one of ptf.'s witnesses, but did not examine any witness on the direct. Held, that he must pay the costs and expenses incurred by reason of his cross-examination, viz., for the commissioner's attendance during the time occupied by the cross-examination, and for engrossing the depositions on the cross-interrogatories; but not to contribute to the commissioner's travelling expenses.—Rogers v. Aylmer, 5 I. E. R. 586. (E.E.)

7. A medical man, who is attesting witness to a deed, is bound to prove the execution of it without compensation for loss of time.—Kelly v. Jackson, 2 I. Jur. 181. (R.)

8. The day before she died, testatrix, V., bequeathed a legacy to her sister, B.. The will was then properly attested by two witnesses. Immediately after they had signed, B., at V.'s request, and, as she thought, for greater security, signed her name to the will. After V.'s death, B. cut her name off the will. Held, that she signed as an attesting witness, and must pay the costs incurred by her spoliating the will.—Toker v. Maguire, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 24. (P.)

See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 87-109: G. O. (1867), 158-161.]

9. It is no longer necessary to serve under the G. O. of the 20th May 1816, the twenty-one days' rule, to examine; the present practice being regulated by the 99th G. O. of 29th Nov. 1834.—Ogle v. O., S. & Sc. 679. (R.)

10. When publication passed without deft.'s having examined any witnesses, on deft.'s affidavit that named persons were witnesses necessary and material to be examined; that he could not otherwise proceed to hearing; and that neither he nor his solicitor had read, or had any knowledge of the evidence for the ptf.; the Court, being unwilling to exclude material evidence, allowed deft. to examine upon terms.—Butler v. Troy, 7 I. E. R. 70.

11. A ptf. may examine a notice party without obtaining an order for leave to do so.—M'Carthy v. M'C., 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.)

1. After replication filed in a suit to perpetuate testimony, it is not necessary to obtain an order to examine witnesses.—Allen v. Hackett, 11 I. E. R. 355. (R.)

2. A party examining on personal interrogatories in the Master's office, may use as many of the answers as he chooses, without making the remainder evidence.—Brabazon v. Teynham, 11 I. E. R. 475. (C.)

3. An order, for leave to examine a deft., is not necessary since the 14 & 15 Vic., c. 99.—Donnelly v. M'Clintock, 2 I. C. R. 558. (R.)

4. The motion for leave to examine a witness under the provision of the 11th G. O. of May 1857, may be made to the Lord Chancellor.—Ormsby v. Edgar, 6 I. C. R. 295. (C.)

5. An order for liberty to examine witnesses made by the Lord Chancellor.—Keegan v. Fenton, 6 I. C. R. 296. (C.)

XXXVIII. 28. b. When and how taken.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 88, 89.]

6. The 4 G. 4, c. 61, s. 43, applies as well when the witnesses reside abroad, as when they reside within the jurisdiction. Therefore the Court will not order a commission to issue to take the examination of witnesses residing abroad, with a direction, that the examiner shall not be required to qualify as directed by the statute.

When the parties will not consent that such a commission shall issue, the Court will respite publication until the witnesses can be examined before a duly qualified examiner.—D'Alton v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 663. (R.)

7. On a re-hearing, the petitioner applied for permission to examine the witnesses to the will. The application was refused.—French v. Copinger, 6 I. C. R. 568; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 21. (C.)

XXXVIII. 28. c. Examination viva voce.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 88, 89, 93-97, 99, 101, 102, 106; G. O. (1867), 158, 159, 164, 171, 172.]

8. The Masters have not jurisdiction to examine viva voce any of the parties to the cause.—Cashell v. Kelly, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 262. (C.)

9. A motion for leave to examine witnesses viva voce, supported only by an affidavit that counsel had advised that such examination was necessary, was ordered to stand over till the hearing.

It is not an answer to such a motion that the applicant had previously been refused permission to file additional affidavits made by the proposed witnesses.—Murphy v. Longfield, 6 I. C. R. 566. (C.)

10. On a reference under a decretal order in a general cause petition, the Master on a summons on charge and discharge, directed amongst other things, that the parties should respectively prove their case by affidavit or otherwise; the last affidavit to be filed, and publication to pass on the day month from the date of the order; and thereupon to re-enter the summons. Both parties filed affidavits within the time. On the case being heard, the respondent failed to prove his case. The Master having adjourned the hearing, to enable the respondent to apply to give further evidence—Held, on motion grounded on the proceedings in the cause, but not grounded on affidavit, that the respondent, his wife, and a third witness, should be examined viva voce before the Master, as witnesses for the respondent, and that the petitioner should be cross-examined.—Corbett v. Hayes, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (M.O.)

11. When there has not been at any stage of a cause petition an oral examination of witnesses, oral cross-examination will not be permitted on appeal.—Farran v. Mercer, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 26. (C.A.)

12. A party who has not filed any affidavit (other than her discharge) in the Master's office, and who has not presented herself for cross-examination, may, nevertheless, be examined viva voce at the hearing on exceptions, and on the merits.—O'Sullivan v. Edgeworth, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (R.)

XXXVIII. 28. d. Before Master.

[See ante, 8.]

13. At the hearing, a witness's evidence was rejected on the ground of interest. On motion, to permit him to be examined in aid of an enquiry directed by the decree, or to permit his depositions to be read before the Master, with liberty to re-examine him to show that the passage in his deposition, showing his interest, had been introduced by mistake; the Court was of opinion that it had not been introduced by mistake. Held, that, therefore, the motion should be refused.—Smith v. Harding, 3 I. E. R. 336; Fl. & K. 184.

14. The Masters have not jurisdiction to examine viva voce any of the parties to the cause.—Cashell v. Kelly, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 262. (C.)

15. In a suit, to carry into execution the trusts of a will, defts. submitted to a decree to account. Under those circumstances, ptf. was allowed to object before the Master to evidence of a particular witness, which had been entered as read on behalf of one deft.—Galway v. O'Driscoll, 3 Jon. & L. 696. (C.)

XXXVIII. 28. e. Before Examiner.

16. Through inadvertence, a witness omitted to include in a release a portion of his interest. Liberty was given to re-examine him to the interrogatories to which he had been already examined.—Gleeson v. Earl of Sandwich, 3 I. E. R. 359; Fl. & K. 240. (R.)

1. By consent of ptf. and deft., a commission was issued to J. to examine witnesses residing more than 30 miles from Dublin. Under it ptf. examined on the direct; deft. merely cross-examined. J. moved against deft. for one-half of his fees and expenses as commissioner. Held, that he was to be considered as having undertaken, and been appointed to the office, on the parties' joint retainer, and his motion was granted, with costs. The question—"Who is immediately liable to pay the Commissioner?"—has not anything to do with the question respecting the costs in the cause to be decided at the hearing.—Millner v. Joseph, 5 I. E. R. 214. (R.)

XXXVIII. 28. f. Examination de bene esse.

2. A commission to examine witnesses de bene esse, on a bill to perpetuate testimony, granted, though deft. had not appeared, and was not in contempt.—Allen v. Annesley, 2 Jones, 260. (E.E.)

3. In a suit to perpetuate testimony, ptf. was given liberty under the 13 G. 2, c. 9, to pass publication of depositions of witnesses examined de bene esse in the cause.—Scanlan v. McCoy, Fl. & K. 366. (R.)

4. The Court will make an order for an examination de bene esse, whenever the justice of the case may appear to require it.—Blackwood v. Burrowes, Fl. & K. 630; 4 I. E. R. 609. (R.)

5. An order for liberty to examine a witness de bene esse, will be made without notice, when the witness is of advanced age.—Scott v. S., 9 I. E. R. 261. (R.)

6. In a suit to perpetuate testimony liberty will be given to examine witnesses de bene esse, though the deft. has not answered, and was not in contempt.—Lindsay v. L., 2 I. Jur. 12. (R.)

XXXVIII. 28. h. Cross-examination.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 88, 93-97, 99, 101, 102, 105: G. O. (1867), 158-161, 163, 171, 172.]

7. A party will not, as a matter of indulgence, obtain leave to cross-examine a witness, who has been produced by the other side, merely for the purpose of proving a will of lands.—Moore v. M., 2 Jones, 445. (E.E.)

XXXVIII. 28. i. Further, or Re-examination.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 88, 93, 95-97, 99, 101, 102, 105: G. O. (1867), 163.]

8. If an interrogatory be properly framed, and the Examiner omits to examine to the whole of it, the witness may be re-examined.—Smithwick v. S., Hay. & J. 397. (E.E.)

9. Motion, for liberty to re-examine a witness, refused; the application being made before publication.—Knox v. K., 1 I. E. R. 107. (R.)

10. When it appears upon the deposition of a witness that he is incompetent by interest, the Court will not, except in a very clear case, permit him to be re-examined, to show that the allegation by which his interest appeared was by mistake.—Smith v. Harding, 3 I. E. R. 336; Fl. & K. 184. (R.)

11. Without an order of Court, a witness cannot be re-examined to the matter upon which he was originally examined.—Bevan v. White, 8 I. E. R. 160. (R.)

12. The Examiner, by mistake, omitted to examine the witness as to two interrogatories. Though publication had passed, and the cause was set down for hearing, the Court permitted a re-examination.—Molony v. O'Brien, 1 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

13. After publication in an examination in aid of an account, in the Master's office, liberty to examine further witnesses was refused, the party being aware, before publication, that material evidence was in the knowledge of these witnesses, and there being no surprise.—Nicholls v. Crooke, 2 I. Jur. 4. (R.)

14. On a reference under a decretal order in a general cause petition, the Master, on a summons on charge and discharge, directed (amongst other things) that the parties respectively should prove their case by affidavit, or otherwise; the last affidavit to be filed, and publication to pass on the day month from the date of the order; thereupon to re-enter the summons. Both parties filed affidavits within the time; but the respondent failed to prove his case at the hearing, which was adjourned to enable him to apply to give further evidence. On motion grounded on the proceedings in the cause, but not on affidavit—Held, that the respondent, his wife, and a third witness, should be examined viva voce before the Master, on the respondent's behalf; and that the petitioner should be cross-examined.—Corbett v. Hayes, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (M.O.)

XXXVIII. 28. j. Examination of Parties to the Cause.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 61, 63, 65, 72, 87, 138: G. O. (1867), 41-45, 62, 64-67.]

15. Although ptf.'s application, for leave to examine one deft. as a witness, is almost of course, yet it must be on notice. Ptf. takes the order, subject to all just exceptions at the hearing respecting the competency of the witness.—Blake v. B., 1 I. E. R. 198. (C.)

1. The side-bar rule for examination of a deft. applies only as between co-defts. Therefore, a third person, proving a charge or discharge in the Master's office, and desiring to examine a deft. in the cause, must apply by motion of course for liberty to do so.—Cramer v. Griffith, 1 I. E. R. 369. (R.)—[See Lord Duncannon v. Skinner, 1 Hog. 269.]

2. When a ptf. wishes to examine a deft. as a witness, an application must be made to the Court, the side-bar rule applying only between co-defts.—White v. Scott, Fl. & K. 69. (R.)—Vide new Side-bar Order of March 1843.

3. Examination of prochein amy of minor ptf. as a witness for the deft.—McNeice v. Agnew, 2 I. E. R. 445. (R.)

4. The ptf. is entitled, as of course, to examine a deft. as a witness, waiving all just exceptions. There is never a side-bar rule for the purpose.

Whether a ptf., examining a deft. as a witness, waives all relief as against him, or only that portion of relief to be given in respect of the matters to which the deft. is examined? Quere.—Watson v. Pim, 3 I. E. R. 344; Fl. & K. 192. (R.)

5. The personal representative, and the infant heir-at-law of a deceased debtor, were co-defts. to a suit instituted by a simple contract creditor of the ancestor. There was a consent order that the personal representative should be examined as a witness in the cause. Held, that the deposition so taken was admissible in evidence against the infant deft.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 349. (C.)

6. The Masters have not jurisdiction to examine viva voce any of the parties to the cause.—Cashel v. Kelly, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 262. (C.)

7. The statute of 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has not altered the practice in relation to the examination of a deft. by the ptf. The order cannot be obtained to examine a deft. whose answer has been replied to, unless the replication be withdrawn as against him.—Walker v. Tilly, 9 I. E. R. 261. (R.)

8. A ptf. may examine the opposite party without previously obtaining leave to do so.—McCarthy v. M'C., 9 I. E. R. 620. (C.)

9. The rule that a witness who had been examined in chief cannot be examined in aid without the leave of the Court applies only to an examination by the same party. A witness who had been examined in chief by the ptf., and not cross-examined, was examined in aid by the deft. without an order. The Court refused to suppress the depositions.—Bannatyne v. B., 11 I. E. R. 859. (R.)

10. A deft. claiming under a deed impeached by the bill, may be examined in support of that deed, on behalf of co-defts.—Irwin v. Rogers, 1 I. Jur. 17. (C.)

11. A deft., against whom an order has been made to take the bill pro confesso, may be examined as a witness for the ptf., as to the statements in the bill.—Kelly v. Fox, 1 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

12. The Court will not in general interfere with the discretion given by the 115 G. O. to the Remembrancer as to the examination of parties by interrogatories in the office.—Putland v. Evans, 1 I. Jur. 68. (E.E.)

13. The 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has not altered the practice in relation to the examination of a deft. by the ptf.; no order can be had to examine a deft., till the replication be withdrawn. Walker v. Tilly, 9 I. E. R. 261. (R.). And see also Dobbyn v. Adams, 9 I. E. R. 275; and this will be so, though the deft. contend that the replication shall stand over, and a decree be made thereon.—Thompson v. Beamish, 2 I. Jur. 141. (R.); 2 I. Jur. (C.) contra.

XXXVIII. 28. k. Examination of Defendant on Interrogatories.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 61, 63, 65, 72, 87, 138: G. O. (1867), 41-45, 62, 64-67.]

14. A party examining on personal interrogatories in the Master's office, may use as much of the answers as he chooses, without making the rest of them evidence.—Brabazon v. Teynham, 11 I. E. R. 475. (C.)

15. When interrogatories have been annexed to cause petitions, the respondents are, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 9, until the publication of G. O. under ss. 31, 32, to the contrary, entitled to two months time to file affidavits in answer to such interrogatories. Such cause petitions cannot be set down for hearing until the lapse of two months from the service of notice of filing the interrogatories.

When interrogatories had been annexed to a cause petition which was set down for hearing within two months after service of notice of filing the petition and interrogatories upon some of the respondents, and without any notice to the other respondents, a decretal order obtained on such hearing was set aside, with costs.

Semble—It is not a sufficient notice of setting down a cause petition for hearing to state that counsel will, on behalf of the petitioner, move on the petition "on the first opportunity."—Sheridan v. Cannon, 1 I. C. R. 245. (C.)

XXXVIII. 28. 1. 1. General Orders.

1. The selection of a Commissioner to take evidence is vested in the Master's discretion. The Court will not vary his appointment upon a charge that the Commissioner is interested in the success of the ptf., because of his friendship for ptf.'s solicitor, the payment of whose costs depends on his succeeding in the suit.

In limiting the Master's discretion, G. O. 105, applies to cases in which an examination of witnesses is to be held in one place only.—Malone v. O'Connor, Sc. & S. 429. (R.)

XXXVIII. 28. 1. 2. *Their Effect.*XXXVIII. 28. 1. 3. When Commission to Examine is granted: how obtained.

2. Commission Examiners to take the examination of witnesses residing abroad must qualify under the 4 G. 4, c. 61, s. 43.—Huggins v. Moffett, Fl. & K. 621. (R.)

3. The 43rd sec. of the 4 G. 4, c. 61, applies as well when the witnesses reside abroad, as when they reside within the jurisdiction of the Court. The Court will not order that a commission shall issue to take the examination of witnesses resident abroad, with a direction that the Examiner shall not be required to qualify as directed by that Act. When the parties will not consent that such a commission shall issue, the Court will direct publication to be respited.—D'Alton v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 663. (R.)

4. Commissioners to take affidavits and answers pursuant to 55 G. 3, c. 57, will be appointed on petition only.—In re Armitstead, 2 Dr. & War. 50. (C.)

5. Practice as to commissions to examine witnesses in foreign countries.—Anonymous, 2 I. C. R. 92. (R.)

6. The general rule with respect to cause petitions under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850 is, that examinations of witnesses by interrogatories, or viva voce, will not be permitted before the hearing. Very special grounds must be shown upon motion to induce the Court to vary this rule.

A motion for liberty to examine witnesses upon interrogatories before the hearing, and that a commission should issue for that purpose, which motion was grounded upon the affidavit of the petitioner's solicitor, stating that A., and other persons (not named), when applied to, declined to volunteer evidence by making affidavits in the case, but that the deponent was persuaded that they would attend for examination upon interrogatories; and also stating that some of the witnesses (not named) resided in England; that a commission would therefore be requisite, and that the deponent was advised that their evidence was material and necessary to the petitioner's case, was refused with costs.—Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)

7. In a cause petition matter, an order for the issuing of a commission to take depositions of witnesses abroad will not be granted in the first instance, having regard to the practice laid down in Glasscock v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 57.—Drewitt v. D., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 224. (R.)

8. The Court has jurisdiction to order a commission to issue to examine witnesses abroad, before the hearing, in cause petition matters under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850.

In general, the proper course is, to hear cause petitions on affidavit, in the first instance; but when there is no effectual mode of proof within the reach of the parties, the Court will issue a commission to examine witnesses before the hearing.—Druitt v. D., 6 I. C. R. 171; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 273. (C.A.)

9. A commission made for the viva voce examination and cross-examination of the witness by counsel; but a shorthand writer not allowed to attend.—Ratty v. Potts, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (P.)

10. An affidavit made by a party in the cause, stating that an intended witness was suffering from rheumatic pains, had lost the use of his limbs, and had refused to see a doctor, because it would be no use; and averring that there was not any chance of his being able to attend the trial—Held, insufficient to obtain a commission.—Tierney v. Byrne, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 179. (P.)

XXVXVIII. 28. 1. 4. *Second Commission.*XXXVIII. 28. 1. 5. *How discharged or abated.*XXXVIII. 28. 1. 6. Execution of Commission: respecting the Commissioners.

11. Commissioners, to take the examination of witnesses abroad, must qualify under the 4 G. 4, c. 61, s. 43.—Huggins v. Moffett, Fl. & K. 621. (R.)

12. When a Commission Examiner is appointed on consent, the consenting parties must equally bear the costs of the commission, though one only may have examined under it on the direct.—Stafford v. S., 5 I. E. R. 215, note. (R.)

13. The Court will compel a Commission Examiner to deliver, for the purposes of the suit, the documents lodged with him for the examination of witnesses, though he has not been paid his fees and expenses; the solicitor undertaking to return them to the Examiner after the termination of the suit.—Lord Lucan v. O'Malley, 8 I. E. R. 586. (R.)

14. One party in a cause, who sues out a commission to examine witnesses without the concurrence of the other, is bound to pay the entire expense of the Commission Examiner, unless the other party has examined on the direct, in which case he is bound to pay the Commissioner for the examination and cross-examination of his own witnesses.—Lord Lucan v. O'Malley, 8 I. E. R. 712; 2 Jon. & L. 681. (C.)

1. A Commission Examiner gave up the depositions without having been paid. Held, that he retained a lien upon them. The Court directed that they should not be used on behalf of a party who would not pay his share of the Commissioner's fees and expenses.—Murphy v. O'Connor, 2 I. Jur. 84. (E.E.)

2. Depositions wrongly entitled cannot be read. The party who seeks to use them will be allowed to have them re-sworn upon terms.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 2 I. E. R. 419. (E.E.)

3. When a witness deposed to facts to which he could not have been examined, the Court, on motion, suppressed the depositions.—Smith v. Harding, 3 I. E. R. 336; Fl. & K. 347. (R.)

4. The deft. interrogated a witness as to a conversation between the witness and the ptf.'s testator.

Quære—Can the ptf. read the deposition, the deft. declining to do so?—Long v. L., 5 I. E. R. 38. (E.E.)

5. The infant heir, and the personal representative of a debtor, were co-defts. to a suit by his simple contract creditor. It was ordered, on consent, that the personal representative should be examined as a witness. Held, that his deposition was admissible in evidence against the infant heir.—Lynch v. Joyce, 3 Dr. & War. 349. (C.)

6. Form of order upon an application for liberty to read, on the trial of an issue, depositions taken in the cause, and made by a witness whom illness disenabled from attending the trial.—Lynch v. L., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 538. (C.)

7. An application to take an affidavit off the file to prosecute for perjury, though it be not ex debito justitiæ, approaches very closely to it. The Court will not scrutinise the grounds or merits of the prosecution, or the truth of the allegations on either side, but will give every facility to the application, provided it be satisfied that it is not made for vindictive or unjust purposes.—Madden v. Woods, 8 I. E. R. 48. (R.)

8. Depositions of witnesses in a cause must be signed by them. If not, they will be suppressed for irregularity.

A witness cannot be re-examined as to the same matter as that upon which he was originally examined, without an order of Court.

Semble—It is sufficient to entitle the depositions "In the cause of A. B., ptf. against C. D. and others, defts."—Bevan v. White, 8 I. E. R. 160. (R.)

9. A deft. cannot read as against the ptf. depositions taken on behalf of a co-deft.—Roddy v. Williams, 3 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

10. On a re-hearing, documentary evidence, not offered at the original hearing, may be received; but depositions cannot then be received, if offered for any purpose beyond that of identifying such documentary evidence.—Johnson v. Mid. Gt. Westn. of Ir. Ry. Co., 5 I. C. R. 264. (C.)—[See s. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 798; 4 Jur. N. S. 643.]

XXXVIII. 29. b. Depositions taken de bene esse.

11. In a suit to perpetuate testimony of witnesses, the deft. not having answered, and having stood out process to sequestration, to which there was a return of nulla bona; the ptf. was allowed under the 13 G. 2, c. 9, to pass publication of depositions taken de bene esse in the cause.—Scanlan v. M'Coy, Fl. & K. 366. (R.)

XXXVIII. 29. c. Amendment of Depositions.

12. Depositions wrongly entitled cannot be read; but the party seeking to use them will be allowed to have them re-sworn upon terms.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 2 I. E. R. 419. (E.E.)

13. When a mistake has occurred in depositions through inadvertence, the Court will permit the witness to be re-examined to the interrogatory.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 10 I. E. R. 9. (R.)

XXXVIII. 29. d. Suppressing Depositions.

14. A motion to suppress interrogatories as leading, should be made as soon as possible after publication. Such a motion was refused, when on a previous motion to suppress interrogatories in the cause, the Court had permitted the ptf. to re-swear the witnesses to the same interrogatories.—O'Hara v. Creagh, Long & T. 65; 3 I. E. R. 179. (E.E.)

15. When a witness deposed to facts to which he could not have been examined, the Court, upon motion, suppressed the deposition.—Smith v. Harding, Fl. K. 184; 3 I. E. R. 336 (R.)

1. Depositions of witnesses in a cause must be signed by them; if not, they will be suppressed for irregularity.

A witness cannot be re-examined to the same matter as that upon which he was originally examined, without an order of Court.

Semble—It is sufficient to entitle the depositions "In the cause of A. B., ptfs., against C. D. and others, defts."—Bevan v. White, 8 I. E. R. 160. (R.)

2. A Commission Examiner having permitted a solicitor in the cause to come into the room during the examination of witnesses, and being also in communication and concert with the solicitor, the Court suppressed the depositions.

Witnesses were sworn upon a book that did not contain the Gospels. The Court suppressed their depositions, as nullities.

The Commission Examiner may, before accepting the office, stipulate for the security or the payment of his fees and expenses; but if he accepts the office, he cannot stop in the execution of his duty, or refuse to examine witnesses until his fees are paid or secured. His duty is, to examine all witnesses tendered to him unconditionally.—Doherty v. D., 8 I. E. R. 379. (R.)

3. The 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has made no alteration in the previously existing practice of Courts of Equity, which required a rule or order of Court to be had before the examination of a party in the cause.

The proper time to move to suppress depositions for irregularity is, after publication has passed.—Dobbyn v. Adams, 9 I. E. R. 275. (R.)

4. Under the 86th G. O., the ten-days' notice to be given of examining witnesses is exclusive of the day of serving the notice and of the day named for commencing the examination.

The Court is not bound to suppress depositions in every case of irregularity. When, from a misconception of the 86th Order, only nine days' notice of examining witnesses was given; but the examination was not commenced until after ten days, and no party was prejudiced thereby, and publication passed without objection, the Court refused to suppress the depositions.—Att.-Gen. v. Ball, 9 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

5. The rule that a witness who had been examined in chief cannot be examined in aid without leave of the Court, applies only to an examination by the same party. A witness who had been examined in chief by the ptf. and not cross-examined, was examined in aid by the deft. without an order. The Court refused to suppress the depositions.—Bannatyne v. B., 11 I. E. R. 359. (R.)

6. The Court will not make an order to suppress depositions on the ground that some of the interrogatories were leading; unless it be shown what part of the deposition is an answer to the leading interrogatory; then so much only will be suppressed.—Kirkwood v. Lloyd, 1 I. Jur. 225. (R.)

7. The Court will not suppress depositions for every irregularity. When nine instead of ten days' notice of examination was given, and publication passed without objection, the Court refused to suppress.—See Att.-Gen. v. Ball, 9 I. E. R. 463; Guirney v. Loughnane, 1 I. Jur. 283. (R.)

8. Semble—That the Court will, at the hearing, suppress the deposition to a leading interrogatory.

Where however only part of an interrogatory is leading, the Court will not suppress more of the deposition than replies to that part.—Wright v. Griffith, 1 I. C. R. 695; 3 I. Jur. 138. (C.)

XXXVIII. 30. Publication.

a. Generally.

b. Enlarging Publication.

XXXVIII. 30. a. Publication generally.

9. After publication had passed, it was discovered that, in the title of the interrogatories and depositions filed on ptf.'s behalf, the names of two defts. in the cause had, by mistake, been omitted. Leave was given to amend that title, with a direction that, after the amendments had been made, the witnesses should be severally re-sworn to the truth of the depositions thus altered.—Mitchell v. Roe, 1 I. E. R. 144. (R.)

10. An application, merely that a witness may be re-sworn to his depositions, may properly be made before publication. When it is sought that the witness shall be re-examined to contradict or vary his previous evidence, the application must be after publication, as in such case the Court must have the opportunity of looking into the depositions.—Gleeson v. Earl of Sandwich, 3 I. E. R. 359; Fl. & K. 240. (R.)

11. It is not any longer necessary to serve the twenty-one days' rule to examine under the G. O. of the 20th May 1816. The present practice is regulated by G. O. 99, of 29th Nov. 1834.—Ogle v. O., S. & Sc. 679. (R.)

12. In a suit to perpetuate testimony, ptf. was allowed under 13 G. 2, c. 9, to pass publication of depositions of witnesses examined de bene esse in the cause.—Scallan v. M'Coy, Fl. & K. 366. (R.)

13. The 6 & 7 Vic., c. 85, has made no alteration in the previously existing practice of Courts of Equity, which required a rule or order of Court to be had previously to the examination of a party in the cause.

The proper time to move to suppress depositions for irregularity is, after publication has passed.—Dobbyn v. Adams, 9 I. E. R. 276. (R.)

14. When a notice of motion to respite publication has been served, it is very improper for a solicitor to pass publication.—Kelson v. Lewis, 1 I. Jur. 226. (R.)

1. Publication respited, although improperly passed already, this course not delaying the opposite party.—Kelson v. Lewis, 1 I. Jur. 248. (R.)

2. Replication filed 1st March; amended 5th March. Rule for publication, entered 1st May, set aside for irregularity; and motion, that the rule might stand notwithstanding the irregularity, refused.—M'Dermott v. O'Connell, 1 I. Jur. 330. (R.)

3. On a reference under a decretal order in a general cause petition, the Master on a summons on charge and discharge, directed amongst other things, that the parties should respectively prove their case by affidavit or otherwise, the last affidavit to be filed, and publication to pass on the day month from the date of the order; thereupon to re-enter the summons. Both parties filed affidavits within the time. The respondent failed to prove his case at the hearing, which was adjourned to enable him to apply to give further evidence. Held, on motion grounded on the proceedings in the cause, but not on affidavit, that the respondent, his wife, and a third witness, should be examined viva voce before the Master as witnesses for the respondent; and that the petitioner should be cross-examined.—Corbett v. Hayes, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (M.O.)

4. In a cause petition suit to perpetuate testimony, the respondent filed no answering affidavit, and was in contempt for not answering interrogatories annexed to the petition. The petitioner examined witnesses, without an order for that purpose, and without complying with the requirements of the 13 G. 2, c. 9 (Ir.), s. 2. The Court allowed publication of the depositions so taken to pass, saving all just exceptions as to their admissibility on the hearing of the matter in which it was intended to use them; and reserving the right of the respondents in that matter to object at its hearing to their admissibility.

Observations touching the practice in suits to perpetuate testimony.

Semble—In such suits it may be more prudent to proceed by bill than by cause petition.—Kiernan v. K., 6 I. Jur. N. S. 149. (R.)

XXXVIII. 30. b. Enlarging Publication.

5. Publication will not be respited in order that a party may cross-examine a witness, who had been produced merely to prove the execution of a will of land.—Moore v. M., 2 Jones, 445. (E.E.)

6. When on the day of the examination of ptf.'s witnesses in this country, pursuant to notice to the deft., the deft.'s solicitor gave notice to the Examiner, and the ptf.'s solicitor, that he intended to cross-examine, but did not lodge the cross-interrogatories until the following morning; and it appeared that on the evening after the direct examination, the witnesses (having been told by the Examiner and the ptf.'s solicitor, that as cross-interrogatories had not been lodged before the direct examination closed, they were not bound to remain), sailed on their return to England, the Court ordered that publication should be respited; a new commission be issued to the former Commissioner; and that the ptf. should produce the witnesses for cross-examination at her own expense. Leave given to examine prochein amy of infant ptf. as witness for deft.—M'Neice v. Agnew, 2 I. E. R. 445. (R.)

7. If the ptf., in a cross-cause, have not been guilty of laches, it is almost of course to respite publication in the original cause, so that there may be but one examination, and that both causes may be heard together.

Publication, in the original cause respited until full answers put in by the defts. in the cross-cause; though the sole ptf. in the original cause was ready to file his answer at once, and could not compel the other defts. to answer: the ptf., in the cross-cause, undertaking to proceed with effect to enforce their answers.—Manders v. M., 3 I. E. R. 63. (E.E.)

8. The 4 G. 4, c. 61, s. 48, applies as well when the witnesses reside abroad, as when they reside within the jurisdiction. Therefore the Court will not order a commission to issue to take the examination of witnesses residing abroad, with a direction, that the Examiner shall not be required to qualify as directed by the Act. When the parties will not consent that such a commission shall issue, the Court will respite publication until the witnesses can be examined before a duly qualified Examiner.—D'Alton v. Lord Trimleston, Fl. & K. 663. (R.)

9. A bill, impeaching a will, was filed in the Court of Ch., a suit to recal probate having been instituted in the Prerogative Court. A witness, who was examined de bene esse in the Chancery suit, died. The Court refused to permit his depositions to be published for the purpose of being used in the Prerogative Court, issue not having been joined in the Ch. suit, and therefore publication therein not having passed.—Shewell v. Hilliard, 9 I. E. R. 469.

10. A ptf. served a notice to continue an injunction upon equity confessed, without reserving the right to except; and afterwards filed exceptions to the answer.—Held, that they were irregular, and must be taken off the file.—Crofts v. Lord Egmont, 3 I. E. R. 277; Fl. & K. 82. (R.)

1. Ptf., by moving for a receiver upon an answer, without reserving a right to except, is not thereby deprived of his right to except.—Irwin v. St. George, Fl. & K. 622. (R.)

2. Leave given to file exceptions to a report nunc pro tunc on payment of costs, under peculiar circumstances.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 8 I. E. R. 317. (C.)

3. When the Master, under G. O. 134, overrules an objection, no exception can be taken. If there be a fatality, a special application for liberty to object should be made. Exceptions by parties not interested in supporting them, though so taken to save expense, are objectionable.—Smith v. Chichester, 12 I. E. R. 519. (C.)

4. When on exceptions to the Master's report, an issue is directed, upon which a verdict favourable to the excepting party is given, the ordinary rule respecting the costs of exceptions applies; each party must bear his own costs of the issue.—Nixon v. Dane, 6 I. C. R. 226. (C.)

5. The person filing objections is bound to have an office copy of the exceptions in Court when they are to be argued.—Bohan v. Cambie, 10 I. C. R. 466. (C.)

6. Exceptions for insufficiency were signed by counsel, but no certificate was affixed to them pursuant to the 74th Rule. On a motion to take them off the file for irregularity, the Court allowed them to be amended by affixing the certificate, on the statement of counsel that the omission was accidental; and that the exceptions were tenable; the ptf. paying the costs of the motion.—Massy v. Graham, 10 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

8. The Court will not permit a deft.'s answer to be taken off the file in order to the institution of a prosecution for perjury, if it appears that the alleged perjury is in a part wholly immaterial to the merits of the case.—M'Gowan v. Hall, Hayes, 17. (E.E.)

9. In passing a receiver's account, the Remembrancer cannot report facts specially without the order of the Court.—Roberts v. Hendricksen, Hay, & J. 396. (E.E.)

10. This Court will not refer it to the Chief Remembrancer to report generally what proceedings should be taken respecting certain lands.—Cottingham v. Whyte, Hay, & J. 411. (E.E.)

11. In this Court, the decree for a sale does not direct the Remembrancer to settle the draft of the conveyance to the purchaser. For that purpose, a special application is necessary.—Hogg v. Waldron, 6 I. E. R. 218. (E.E.)

12. This Court ordered its officer to attend in the Court of Chancery at the hearing of a cause there, with an answer sworn in this Court, the signature to which was impeached in the Chancery cause as a forgery.—Grove v. Bowen, 6 I. E. R. 656. (E.E.)

13. On a sale of lands under a decree in a cause wherein judgment creditors, prior to ptf., had not been made parties to the original suit, and a supplemental bill making them parties had been filed, but no decree in the supplemental suit had been obtained, the Remembrancer was ordered to execute the deed of sale, on consent of the parties in the supplemental suit.—O'Kelly v. Bodkin, 7 I. E. R. 338. (E.E.)

14. In a judgment matter pending in this Court, deft. having filed a bill in Chancery against the petitioner for an account, and the petitioner having obtained an order here for a receiver, the respondent moved to discharge that order. Held, that the motion should have been made in the Chancery cause, and should, therefore, be refused with costs.—*Smith v. XLII. FUND IN COURT: ADVANCES THEREOUT TO A PARTY TO CARRY ON A SUIT, AND FOR OTHER PURPOSES.

[See Rolls Order, May 22, 1848; Gam. Ch. O. 182.]

1. The Court will not make an order ex directo, that an attorney's costs be paid out of a fund in Court upon which he has a lien. He must wait until his client applies to be paid the fund, and then insist upon his lien. The reason for not giving the costs on the attorney's own motion is, that there are not two litigants before the Court.—Crosbie v. Molloy, 2 Jones, 588. (E.E.)

2. W. died intestate, leaving E., C., and A., a minor, his next-of-kin. A. was also his heiress-at-law. E. and C., his administrators, entered also on his freeholds. A. filed against them a bill for an account, and obtained a decree against them, both as debtors to W.'s assets, and also as debtors to her in respect of the rents of the freeholds, and for the costs of this suit, pending which E. assigned for value her interest in the assets. In another cause, wherein E. and C., as administrators, were parties, they, together with A., were declared entitled to a fund in Court, as part of W.'s assets. A. applied to have the shares of E. and C. in this fund, in the second cause, transferred to her to pay the amount of the decree against them in the first cause. Held, that A.'s several demands under the decree in the first cause ought to be paid out of those shares in the fund in the second cause; and that E.'s assignees took, subject to those demands. A transfer was ordered accordingly.—Hodgens v. Wheeler, S. & Sc. 443. (R.)

3. Although the solicitor of a defaulting receiver cannot have the costs of his proceedings until the receiver's deficiency, with interest, has been paid in; yet when, at his own cost, and under the Court's order, the solicitor brought actions at law against defaulting tenants and their sureties, &c.; Held, that he was entitled to be paid the costs thereof out of the fund in Court.—M'Bride v. Clarke, 1 I. E. R. 203. (R.)

4. In a former suit L. filed a charge, claiming £1800, with interest at £6 per cent., from the 16th May 1818. The deft. T., the debtor, filed a discharge admitting the debt, and that it was due with interest at £6 per cent. from the 11th May 1818. By a mistake in the report it appeared that the interest was due only from the 24th April 1824. The account having been taken, and the report made without controversy, the mistake was not observed; and the final decree followed the report. L. received the £1800 with interest from the 24th April 1824. After several years, the residue of the fund in that cause having been transferred to the present administration suit of T.'s assets, L. discovered the mistake; and applied to be paid the balance of the interest out of that transferred fund. Held, that he should be so paid.—Hackett v. Donnelly, 1 I. E. R. 231. (R.)

5. When there was a clear surplus fund in Court, which had been produced by a sale under a decree in a foreclosure suit, the Court, on motion of the ptf., who was also a creditor, by judgment subsequent to the mortgage, referred it to the Remembrancer to enquire and report who was entitled to the surplus, and whether the applicant had any and what lien upon it?—and, if so, whether there was any, and, if any, what prior lien upon it?—Mackey Martins, 1 I. E. R. 331. (E.E.)

6. N. and P., incumbrancers, moved that their reported demand should be paid out of the rents paid in by the receiver, which, they insisted, should as to T., an incumbrancer, to whose cause the receiver had been extended, be deemed by-gone rents, having been collected by their diligence in causes to which T. was not a party, and long before he had obtained a decree for a receiver. Held, that the fund could not be paid out without regard to T.'s priority, and that it should accordingly be extended to all the causes; and that a fund in Court is never considered as by-gone rents, but in custodia legis for the persons entitled in priority.—Murtagh v. Tisdall, 2 I. E. R. 41. (R.)

7. When the surplus fund in Court was small, the Court would (before the G. O. of March 1843) allow it to be paid out, upon an affidavit that it was not incumbered; but when the surplus was considerable, there should have been a reference to the Master.—Seymour v. Surr, Fl. & K. 236. (R.)

1. A ptf. in a foreclosure suit obtained judgment against the mortgagor, who subsequently died. The suit was revived against his heir and personal representative. The Court refused an application by the ptf., under 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, to charge the surplus fund in Court with the amount due on foot of the judgment.

Even if the judgment debtor were living, such fund would not be within the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 25.

The Act does not extend to funds standing in the name of the personal representative of a deceased debtor.—Wallace v. M'Cann, Fl. & K. 570; 4 I. E. R. 522. (R.)

2. When an application is made to draw money out of Court, which has been the subject of a settlement, the settlement itself must be produced in Court.—Batt v. Cuthbertson, 3 Dr. & War. 58. (C.)

3. Dividends of small amount, which have accrued due on stock, ordered to be transferred to a party between the date of the order and the transfer of the stock, will be ordered to be paid to the attorney of the party who was authorised to accept the transfer. The application was made shortly after the transfer.—Pidgeon v. D'Alton, 3 I. E. R. 134. (E.E.)

4. In construing that section (the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, s. 38), we are called on by those who represent Coleman, to say, that the word "received" there used, should be construed, having regard to the entire of the Act, as meaning "due," although not actually received; and I think that that is the proper construction to be put upon that section. If we were to hold otherwise, we should incur every case with difficulties, in ascertaining what sums were actually received by the receiver, and the periods of time they were received at; and there would be great trouble and expense in administering the fund. Still, the trouble and expense, however great, would not be a reason for putting a construction on an Act of Parliament which its words do not warrant; but, considering the whole tenor of the Act, and the purposes for which it was passed, I think we are well warranted in holding, that the first person who applies to the Court is entitled to the rents which fall due before any order is obtained, at the suit of a prior creditor, to extend the receiver. I think we are at liberty to say, that rents so due, and which ought to have been received, were in fact received; that, in principle, there is no difference between the actual receipt of the rents, and their being in a condition entitling the party to receive them; and that the default of the tenants in not paying the rent at the day, or circumstances of that nature, cannot alter the rights of the parties.—Coleman v. Mason, 4 I. E. R. 425. (E.E.)

5. In a foreclosure suit, there being a surplus fund after payment of reported incumbrances, and the mortgagor being dead, a puisne judgment creditor sought an order, under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, to charge, with the amount of the judgment, the surplus fund, the residue of the purchase-money of real estate sold under the decree. Held, that the fund in question was to be considered either as real estate belonging to the heir-at-law of the deceased judgment debtor, or as personalty belonging to his personal representative; and that the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, does not give jurisdiction to attach by a charging order the property of a deceased debtor in the hands of his representative.

Semble—It is very questionable whether the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 23, extends to money.—Wallace v. M'Cann, 4 I. E. R. 522. (R.)

6. When the fund sought to be charged with the judgment is impounded in the Court of Ch. it would be more convenient if the petition for the charging order were presented to this Court in the first instance.—Gore v. G., 4 I. E. R. 166. (R.)

7. When a Court of Equity gets the possession of funds, it holds them for the benefit of the party who can show that he has an equitable title thereto, and any person is entitled to consider the Court is in possession, for his benefit, of so much of the fund as he can establish a claim to in right of his lien.—Kellett v. Kelly, 5 I. E. R. 36. (E.E.)

8. If a fund be given to one person for life, and after his death to his children, and there is any dispute, whether all the children are before the Court, it must be referred to the Master to ascertain who they are. That is the ordinary course, when there is any question before the Court, and a class of persons are interested in it. The Court never takes upon itself to decide who are the persons that constitute that class, but refers it to the Master to ascertain who they are, and acts upon his report.—Kimberley v. Tew, 5 I. E. R. 393. (C.)

9. The money brought into Court having been, on the motion of the ptf., invested in stock—Held, that he was entitled to the benefit of a rise in the price of stock.—Wynne v. Brady, 5 I. E. R. 239. (E.E.)

10. A person who was entitled to a life estate in lands, and had a policy of insurance on his life, conveyed his life estate to a trustee for parties, to whom he was indebted, upon trust, "out of the interest, proceeds, or annual rents thereof," to pay the head rent to which the lands were subject, and the premiums of insurance on the policy; and to pay to the creditors the amount due to them, with interest. The deed contained a provision that the debtor should be at liberty to make leases, but no covenant by the debtor to pay the money. By a separate deed, he assigned the policy of insurance to the trustee, to secure the debt—Held, that the creditors were not entitled to a sale of the debtor's life interest; but only to have a receiver appointed, and the trusts carried into execution under the direction of the Court.—Taylor v. Emerson, 6 I. E. R. 224. (C.)

1. A creditor, who had obtained a report and allocation order in the cause, died. The funds reported to him were allocated to his executor without any special order or variation of the allocation order.—Roberts v. Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 306. (R.)

2. The Court will, upon a diocesan probate, distribute a fund in Court which is payable to a personal representative, if the intestate had not bona notabilia.—Graves v. G., 8 I. E. R. 36. (R.)

3. The Common Law side of this Court has not, under the Common Law Procedure Act, any jurisdiction to make a charging order against stock, upon a judgment in sci. fa.—Reg. v. Uniacke, 4 I. C. R. 492. (C.)

4. Lands evicted for non-payment of rent. A fund, the produce of those lands, standing in Court to the credit of the cause. Motion, that it be applied in payment of arrears due to the head landlord, granted.—Sherlock v. Roe, 1 I. Jur. 177. (R.)

XLIII. FURTHER DIRECTIONS.

5. After a decree for an account of subsequent dealings only, the Court will not on further directions go into an item overcharged in a previous settled account, when no sufficient ground for so doing was shown at the original hearing.—D'Arcy v. Burke, 2 I. E. R. 1. (C.)

6. To have a cause set down to be heard for further directions in the Court of Exch., a petition must be presented for that purpose.—Cleary v. C., 3 I. E. R. 562. (E.E.)

7. Hearing for further directions. The premises, upon which the former decree had declared the pft.'s demand to be well charged, had in the interval become greatly dilapidated. Liberty to apply had been reserved to all parties. Upon the deft. declining to undertake to put the premises in repair, a decree for an immediate sale was pronounced. See 3 Dr. & War. 446.—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 89. (C.)

8. V. bequeathed to A., his executors, &c., an annuity charged on all her property. Under the decree a specific sum of £3½ per cent. stock was transferred to the separate credit of A. to pay the annuity. Subsequently the £3½ per cents. were reduced to £3¼, while other funds were still in Court, though appropriated to other purposes. Held, that A. was entitled to have a further sum invested in stock to make the dividends still sufficient to pay the annuity.

The decree had been made in confirmation of a report finding the sum which should be appropriated. The order was now made by setting down the cause for further directions. Sed quare, if that was the regular course.—Commissioners of Charitable Donations v. St. Lawrence, 9 I. E. R. 560; 3 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)

9. Executors, in passing their residuary account, erroneously stated the degrees of relationship of the legatees to the testator, in consequence of which a large sum was paid to the Crown for legacy duty in excess of that properly chargeable. The liability for the principal sum so paid being admitted—Held, that the executors were also chargeable with interest.

They, by their answer, submitted that they were not liable for interest. The decree at the first hearing was silent upon the subject. Held, that the charge for interest could properly be made on further directions.—Shaw v. Turbett, 13 I. C. R. 324. (C.)—[Affid: 14 I. C. R. 476; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (C.A.)]

The Court will overrule it at the hearing.—Balfe v. Lord, 4 I. E. R. 648; 2 Dr. & War. 480; 1 Con. & L. 519. (C.)

2. A creditor, a deft. in an administration suit, will not, on a re-hearing, be entitled to rely upon matters of which he might have had the benefit by taking objections and exceptions to the Master's report.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 Dr. & Wal. 674; 2 I. E. R. 883. (C.)

3. Upon a re-hearing, if the deft. does not appear, the ptf. is to make up his decree as at an original hearing. A cause cannot be twice re-heard.—Mc Cann v. O'Connor, 2 Dr. & War. 42. (C.)

4. It is a matter of course to dismiss with costs a petition of re-hearing presented while the decree is still in minutes.

It is not necessary that Counsel who certify for a re-hearing should have been engaged in the case at the former hearing.

When counsel at the original hearing abandon an objection as to parties, or as to proof of a document, the same objection cannot be made on the re-hearing.

On a re-hearing, no point not specified in the petition can be relied upon by the petitioners.—Malone v. Geraghty, 2 Con. & L. 235; 3 Dr. & War. 252. (C.)

5. Upon a hearing upon a special finding by the Master, the Court is confined to the alternatives thereby put.—Montgomery v. Southwell, 2 Con. & L. 263; 3 Dr. & War. 171. (C.)

6. The Court will not, upon a re-hearing, confirm an erroneous decree.—O'Connell v. Macnamara, 2 Con. & L. 266, note; 3 Dr. & War. 411. (C.)

7. When counsel has relied upon only some of several grounds of defence, that is not a waiver of the rest. That having been the case, and an appeal made to the H. L., a petition was allowed for a re-hearing, to amend the notes of the decree without withdrawing the appeal.—Galway v. Barron, Long. & T. 76. (E.E.)

8. In suits which have not been heard by the Court on the pleadings, although the original bill was filed ten years before the date of the 83rd G. O., i. e., 27th March 1843, the ptf. has, under that order, nine months from its date to bring the cause to a hearing. In such cases, applications for further time to bring the cause to a hearing are unnecessary, and the Court will not make any rule upon them until the time allowed by the G. O. is about to expire.—Brown v. M'Clintock, 5 I. E. R. 278. (R.)

9. The Master's Examiner will lodge with the Registrar of the Court, for the hearing of a cause, deeds deposited in the office for the purposes of the cause, upon receiving a requisition from any of the parties concerned. A motion that he shall be at liberty to do so is unnecessary.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 5 I. E. R. 404. (R.)

10. Before considering those questions, however, I am anxious that the form in which the case comes before the Court should be distinctly understood. A petition of re-hearing was presented; but when the cause came on, it appeared that the decree had not been drawn up, but still rested in minutes. It was a matter of course that the petition should have been dismissed with costs; but, in order to save expense, the ptf. consented that the case should be heard as if it was a discussion upon the minutes. I have got into this explanation lest it might be supposed that I was breaking in upon the established rule of the Court, that a cause cannot be re-heard upon minutes.—Malone v. Geraghty, 5 I. E. R. 561. (C.)

11. When the deft. does not appear when the cause is called on, the ptf. must go on and prove his case; and cannot, as was formerly the practice, take such decree as he can abide by.—Hayes v. Brierly, 3 Dr. & War. 274. (C.)

12. Hearing for further directions. The premises, upon which the former decree had declared the ptf.'s demand to be well charged, had in the interval become greatly dilapidated. Liberty to apply had been reserved to all parties. Upon the deft. declining to undertake to put the premises into repair, a decree for an immediate sale was pronounced.—[See 3 Dr. & War. 446.]—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 89. (C.)

13. Though it is generally true that an objection to a bill of revivor ought to be taken by plea or demurrer, yet when the ptf. in his bill of revivor misrepresents the character which he fills, the objection may be taken at the hearing.—Stuart v. Burrowes, Dr. Rep., temp. Sugden, 265. (C.)

14. An objection to the suit, for misjoinder of an insolvent and his assignee, cannot be taken at the hearing.—Cashel v. Kelly, 2 Dr. & War. 181; 1 Con. & L. 246. (C.)

15. A ground of suit, not put in issue by the bill, cannot be considered by the Court.—Wallace v. W., 2 Dr. & War. 452; 1 Con. & L. 491. (C.)

16. An objection by a prior mortgage that ptf., a puisne mortgagee has not offered any his bill to redeem him, if first taken at the hearing, cannot be maintained.—Balfe v. Lord, 4 I. E. R. 648; 2 Dr. & War. 480; 1 Con. & L. 519. (C.)

1. That a motion, if granted, will have the effect of postponing the hearing of a listed cause is no reason why it should not be heard at the Rolls. When the case is called on, this Court will not entertain such a motion.—Crawford v. Scott, 4 Dr. & War. 278; 2 Con. & L. 412. (C.)

2. When a cause is set down to be heard pro confesso, formal amendments having been made in the bill, the Court at the hearing will require the matter of the amendments to be stated.—Burrough v. Williamson, 6 I. E. R. 374. (R.)

3. Semble—If a demurrer for multifariousness cannot be taken to a bill, because it contains a charge of collusion between the defts., and the ptf. fails to prove the collusion, the objection may be taken at the hearing.—Nixon v. Robinson, 7 I. E. R. 520; 2 Jon. & L. 4. (C.)

4. Bill to establish an unregistered lease against a subsequent duly registered mortgage. Ptf. failed to prove notice; but, his case being meritorious, the Court, at the hearing, permitted the bill to be amended, by praying a redemption, and decreed accordingly.—Butler v. Sparrow, 3 Jon. & L. 694. (C.)

5. The Court will not postpone the hearing of a mortgage cause, to allow the deft. time to get money to pay off the ptf., though it will enlarge the time for redemption after decree.—Anonymous, 9 I. E. R. 377. (C.)

6. When the parties before decree entered into a consent to take accounts, which was made a rule of Court, and a Master's report obtained on it, upon which the cause was set down—Held, the cause could not be heard.—Hodnett v. Going, 11 I. E. R. 421. (C.)

7. All the parties to an original bill being dead, the cause was set down in the names of the parties to a supplemental bill only. Held, regular, and that parts of the answer to the original bill could be read as of an answer in the cause at hearing, and that it was not to be treated as an answer in another cause.—Anderson v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

8. When a ptf. has obtained, at the hearing, liberty to amend, he must either amend, or discharge the order to amend before the cause can be again set down.

Orders to amend, without prejudice to an order pro confesso, should be made only when the amendment cannot prejudice the deft.—Baker v. M'Dermott, 1 I. Jur. 162. (C.)

9. The Court has jurisdiction, at the hearing of the cause, to vary the report, if the error be apparent, though no exception be taken to it.—Barry v. Cronin, 1 I. Jur. 297. (C.)

10. A decree, obtained against a personal representative on a bill taken pro confesso was set aside, and the cause allowed to be re-heard; defence not having been taken in consequence of a fatality, and the defendant alleging that he was not liable to the debt. The deft. was directed to pay the costs of the hearing and of the motion.—Brooke v. Stewart, 2 I. Jur. 226. (C.)

11. When interrogatories have been annexed to cause petitions, the respondents are, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 9, until the publication of G. O., under ss. 31 and 32 to the contrary, entitled to two months' time to file affidavits in answer to such interrogatories. Such cause petitions cannot be set down for hearing until the lapse of two months from the service of notice of filing the interrogatories.

Interrogatories had been annexed to a cause petition which was set down for hearing within two months after service of notice of filing the petition and interrogatories upon some of the respondents, and without any notice to the other respondents. A decretal order obtained on such hearing was set aside, with costs.

Semble—It is not a sufficient notice of setting down a cause petition for hearing to state that counsel will, on behalf of the petitioner, move on the petition "on the first opportunity."—Sheridan v. Cannon, 1 I. C. R. 245; 3 I. Jur. 250. (C.)

12. Two counsel only are to be heard on each side in this Court.—Beniley v. Robinson, 10 I. C. R. 287; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 7. (C.A.)

13. Cause petitions under the Court of Ch. Reg. Act will be heard, in the first instance, on the petition and affidavits filed in support of, or in opposition to it, and on the answers to interrogatories (if any) filed. On that hearing the Court may direct that all or any of the matters, stated in the petition or affidavits, and touching which it is necessary to have further proof or enquiry, shall be so proved or enquired into by further affidavits, or by viva voce, or written examination, or by the trial of an issue at law, or otherwise, as may be deemed most suitable to the nature of the case; and appoint the time and modes of examination as may be most expedient; and reserve further order and directions thereon until after such proof and enquiry shall have been had.—Glasscock v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50. (C.)

14. When a petition for re-hearing has been presented, the cause is before the Court, as it would be, in the first instance, on exceptions; and, before the re-hearing, the Court will hear a motion for liberty to file a supplemental bill.—O'Keefe v. Holmes, 5 I. Jur. 153. (C.)

15. On a re-hearing, documentary evidence not offered at the original hearing may be received; but depositions for anything more than identifying such documentary evidence cannot then be given.—Johnson v. Mid. Gt. W. Ry. Co., 5 I. C. R. 264. (C.)

1. When a supplemental petition in the nature of a bill of review has been filed, this Court has jurisdiction under the 19 & 20 Vic. c. 92, to hear it along with the re-hearing of the decree in the original cause. The proper practice is to set down such supplemental petition for hearing, along with the re-hearing of the decree appealed against, in the Court of Appeal.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71. (C.A.)

2. A supplemental petition, in the nature of a petition of review on newly discovered matter, having been filed, the original cause must be re-heard before the Court of C. A., simultaneously with the supplemental petition.

For this purpose, the original petition should be set down in the Chancellor's list of causes, and the order for re-hearing should direct that the supplemental petition be heard together with it.—Barton v. Sampson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 71, followed.—Radcliff v. Orme, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 245. (C.A.)

3. A cause petition was not set down for hearing in proper time, because the petitioner was thrown off his guard by a pending negotiation for a settlement, and an understanding founded on an unauthorised arrangement between the solicitors as to the hearing. Motion to reinstate the petition granted.—Shanney v. O'Leary, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 12. (C.)

XLV. 2. Hearing an Objection for Want or Misjoinder of Parties, &c.

4. The deft. taking an objection for want of parties is entitled to begin.—Galway v. Graydon, 7 I. E. R. 368; 1 Jon. & L. 526. (C.)

5. When a cause is heard on an objection for want of parties, the party who took the objection begins.—Prim v. M'Kenny, 9 I. E. R. 115. (C.)

6. The bill having been dismissed against a deft. by the 64th Rule, a motion for leave to amend generally was refused with costs; but an amendment under the 49th Rule, by which the same deft. was made a party, was held regular; and an order to take the bill pro confesso against him was made.—Hornibrooke v. Ware, 12 I. E. R. 440. (R.)

XLV. 3. Before what Judge.

XLV.* HOUSE OF LORDS.

[For Costs of Proceedings in, see PRACTICE, XXX. 10. e., COSTS OF APPEAL.]

7. A judgment of the House of Lords will not be made a rule of this Court without an affidavit verifying the signature of the Clerk of the Parliament.—Blakenry v. Annesley, H. & J., App. 47. (E.E.)

8. The H. L. will not give relief to an appellant against an order of which he complains by petition, unless he has taken the proper course to obtain relief in the Court below.—Tommey v. White, 6 Cl. & F. 786.—[See s. c., 6 I. E. R. 803. (R.); 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 3 H. L. Cas. 49; 5 I. Jur. 821. (H.L.); 4 H. L. Cas. 318.]

9. The Court of Ch. in Ir. having directed an enquiry into the value of an estate at the time of its assignment, and touching the amount of interest therein of B. (a purchaser from the assignee), the H. L. reversed that order directing the enquiry; and, without making any order, remitted the case with a declaration of the nature and extent of B.'s rights, leaving it to the Court below to carry that declaration into effect.—Simpson v. O'Sullivan, 7 Cl. & F. 550.—[See the case afterwards at the hearing on the report and merits: 3 Dr. & War. 456. (C.)]

10. Matter not printed in the papers cannot be made the subject of argument before the H. L.

The H. L., in remitting a cause to the Court below to carry its directions into effect, will, if necessary, not merely declare the principle of its order, but state those directions fully on the face of its order.—M'Can v. O'Ferrall, 8 Cl. & F. 80.—[See 5 I. E. R. 105. (R.)]

11. When there are a cause and a cross-cause, and an appeal is taken against the decree in the cause only, the cross-cause is not in any respect before the House.—Callaghan v. C., 8 Cl. & F. 374.—[See 4 I. E. R. 441; 8 I. E. R. 572.]

12. The first decree in suits, which had been in existence for some years, was made in 1813. The litigation continued; and other decrees on the footing of that decree were made, between the parties and others who were interested in the same transactions. In 1838, there was made a decretal order to revive and execute all former decrees and orders. Those decrees and orders, as well as the decretal order of 1838, were appealed against. Held, that, after so great a delay, and under such circumstances, the H. L. would not set aside any of the original decrees or orders, upon technical objections, which did not affect the merits of the case.

A decretal order, not alleged to have been made on the appearance of all the proper parties, was therefore irregular to that extent. It directed the revival and execution of several decrees and orders, but the suit in which it was made was regular, for some purposes at least. Held, that the decretal order should be reversed with directions, and the case remitted to the Court below to deal with the suit so as to advance the justice of the case, regard being had to the decision of this House touching the earlier decrees and orders, which the House had sustained as valid.—Lawrence v. Blake, 8 Cl. & F. 504.

13. When no appellant appears to support an appeal, the only order that the H. L. can make is to dismiss the appeal for want of prosecution, with costs.—Scanlan v. Usher, 8 Cl. & F. 561.

1. When no person appeared on the appellant's behalf, when his appeal was called on, and the agent only of the respondent appeared, but alleged that he had retained counsel, and prayed that the appeal be dismissed with costs, it was dismissed with costs.—Murphy v. Conway, 9 Cl. & F. 78.

2. The Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced a decree against P., with costs. P. paid the costs, and appealed to the H. L., which gave judgment in his favour, and reversed the decree, with costs. P. thereupon applied for an order directing the repayment of the costs which he had already paid. The H. L. refused to make such an order, and left P. to apply to the Court below on the judgment now pronounced.—Clark v. Smith, 9 Cl. & F. 126.

[P., having originally paid those costs to the solicitor of the opposite party, subsequently applied to the Court of Ch. in Ir. for an order directing that solicitor to repay him the amount. The solicitor had, with his client's assent, applied the money in paying costs due to himself by the client. Held, that P.'s application should be refused.—Smith v. Clarke, 5 I. E. R. 423; 3 Dr. & War. 344. (C.)]

3. The H. L., in reversing a decree, which directed immaterial enquiries, and ordering the bill to be dismissed, as at the hearing, with costs, will not give the appellant relief from his costs of prosecuting the enquiries before he appealed.—Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.

4. While a case was pending in the H. L., the deft. in a similar case made an offer to the ptf. to be bound by the decision of the House in the pending case. Ptf. took no notice of the offer, but compelled deft. to proceed with his defence. Judgment was given against deft., who appealed to this House, and prosecuted the appeal to a hearing after an adverse decision in the previously pending case. Judgment being given against him in his own case, he was ordered to pay respondent's costs.—Farrell v. Gleeson, 11 Cl. & F. 702.

5. When the H. L. varies a decree, but only on a point which had not been raised in the Court below, nor made a ground of appeal, the appellant must pay the costs of the appeal.—Wallace v. Patten, 12 Cl. & F. 491.—[See Wallace v. Patten, 5 I. E. R. 309; Long. & T. 479. (E.E.)]

6. Any document or evidence, that has been before the Court below, may, on appeal to the H. L., be properly brought under the notice of the House, but no others.—Gerahty v. Malone, 1 H. L. Cas. 89.—[See the case below, 5 I. E. R. 549; 3 Dr. & War. 239. (C.)]

7. Semble—A decree appealed from, but not adjudicated on further than dismissing the appeal generally, may be included in a future appeal.

Semble—Decrees and orders, which have not been enrolled, may, after any length of time, on being enrolled, be brought under appeal with a recent order, made in the same cause, and duly enrolled.

A judgment of the H. L. is conclusive, and cannot be reversed or corrected, except by Act of Parliament.—Tomney v. White, 3 H. L. Cas. 49.—[See Tomney v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); 6 Cl. & F. 786; 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 8 H. L. Cas. 49; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.); 4 H. L. Cas. 313.]

8. On an appeal from a decree made by the Court of Ch. in Ir., no one appeared on behalf of the appellant; but counsel appeared on behalf of the respondent. Without respondent's counsel being [called on, the appeal was dismissed with costs.—Martin v. D'Arcy, 3 H. L. Cas. 698.

9. A judgment of the H. L., given on an appeal, cannot be reversed. But, if that appeal and judgment have been obtained by suppression and misrepresentation, the H. L. will afterwards discharge the order granting the leave to appeal, and also the order constituting the judgment thereon.

In Jan. 1835, the Court of Ch. in Ir. pronounced a decree, which was enrolled in the month of May in that year. The proper time for appealing having gone by, a petition, for leave to appeal against that decree, was presented in Feb. 1839; but its prayer was refused. In 1844, the party, who was dissatisfied with the decree, filed a bill of review. That bill was demurred to for want of equity, and the demurrer was allowed. In 1846, the order allowing the demurrer was appealed against; and, in this appeal, the original decree was expressly complained of. In July 1847, the appeal was dismissed generally by an order, which specially mentioned the order which had allowed the demurrer, but which did not mention the original decree. In 1848, there was presented a petition for leave to appeal against the original decree and against certain other orders, which had been made in the course of the proceedings, but which had not then been enrolled. That petition stated that "it appeared by the order of July 1847, that the decree of Jan. 1835, had not been complained of, and therefore that their Lordships had not made any declaration with respect to it." The petition further stated that "the said decree had never been adjudicated upon by their Lordships."

Other proceedings having been taken, leave was given, on this petition, to include in the appeal the decree of Jan. 1835. The appeal was heard ex parte; and, in June 1850, that decree was reversed. Held, that this reversal had been obtained by suppression and misrepresentation.

The parties, whom that reversal affected, having petitioned for relief, the H. L. discharged the order which gave leave to appeal against the decree of Jan. 1835, and also discharged the order which had reversed that decree, but without costs.—Ex p. White v. Tomney, 4 H. L. Cas. 313.—[See Tomney v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.); 6 Cl. & F. 786; 1 H. L. Cas. 160; 5 I. Jur. 321. (H.L.); 3 H. L. Cas. 49.]

1. Though an appellant comes to London so long before it is necessary to do so in order to attend the hearing of his cause, that he would not be discharged out of custody if then arrested, yet he will be discharged, if not arrested until his cause is actually in the paper.—Persse v. P., 5 H. L. Cas. 671.—[See Persse v. P., 7 Cl. & F. 279; 3 I. C. R. 196. (C.); 5 H. L. Cas. 682.]

2. Notwithstanding the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 89, s. 30, the time, for appealing to the H. L. against a decree or order of the Court of Ch. in Ir., is still to be calculated from the time of the enrolment of that decree or order, not from the day on which it was pronounced in Court.—Lambert v. Peyton, 7 H. L. Cas. 423.—[See Peyton v. Lambert, 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.); 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 1.]

3. There had been an objection made to the competency of an appeal to the H. L. The appeal committee directed that that objection should be heard before the House, which gave judgment in favour of the appellant. The appeal was then heard, and was dismissed on the merits, with costs. The House directed that the costs, incurred by reason of the objection to the competency of the appeal, should be deducted from the general costs.—Lambert v. Peyton, 8 H. L. Cas. 2.—[See s. c., 7 H. L. Cas. 423; 6 I. C. R. 31. (C.A.); 6 I. C. R. 9. (R.)]

4. A conveyance, made under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72, is, under sec. 85, "for all purposes conclusive evidence" that all previous proceedings, leading to such conveyance, have been regularly taken

Proceedings had been taken to sell estates, of which the sale and re-sale had been directed, in a manner which, when presented to the notice of the House, was declared to be marked with great irregularity. The complainant, however, had not brought that matter before the Court of Appeal until after the conveyances had been executed. Held, that the statute precluded this House from affording to the appellant relief against the consequences of such irregularities.

When the appellant went before the Court of Appeal, his petition was dismissed with costs. The H. L. reversed the order for costs, but affirmed the dismissal of the appeal.—Power v. Reeves, 10 H. L. Cas. 645.—[See In re Power's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 295. (C.A.)]

5. The Appeal Committee cannot decide what documents are, and what are not necessary to be printed in the appendix to a case. A question on this point, though known by the parties to exist, was not made the subject of discussion during the argument on the appeal. The H. L. would not hear it discussed afterwards, and refused to make any order touching the costs of the appendix.

The decision appealed against was reversed, and the cause remitted. The Court below was left to deal with the general question of costs.—Spread v. Morgan, 11 H. L. Cas. 588.—[See 9 I. C. R. 535; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 525. (C.)]

1. An injunction to put the purchaser into possession amounts to a discharge of the receiver.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

2. Injunction order in a possessory suit set aside, because the ptf. had not, in the first instance, fully and fairly stated his case.—Dease v. Plunkett, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 255. (C.)

3. Injunction, after revival of suit, continues without order.—Kennedy v. Lloyd, 8 I. E. R. 581. (R.)

4. Several statutes empowered the Corporation of D. to levy rates for supplying water to D., and to raise a sum by mortgage or debentures on the rates. They were directed to retain an annual sum, and the surplus of the rates, after what should be duly expended for the purposes of the Acts, to create a sinking fund to pay the loan. That money, directed to be retained to create a sinking fund, was not retained; and a decree ordered them to pay off a sum which they had borrowed. They paid it, by issuing new debentures on the surplus rates; the M. R. having expressed an opinion, and the decree having declared that they were the property of the Corporation. They also applied some of the rates in paying the salaries of retired officers, and interest on a sum borrowed, by which the interest on some of the debentures was decreased. Twelve years after that decree an information was filed to restrain them from applying the rates in paying the interest on the debentures, or the salaries of retired officers, or the interest on the further sum borrowed. The Court refused, with costs, to grant an injunction before answer, while expressing a doubt whether the rates had not been misapplied, and though the information charged that there would not be a surplus if the purposes of the Acts were properly effected.—Att.-Gen. v. Corpn. of Dublin, 12 I. E. R. 465; 1 I. Jur. 177. (R.)

5. In granting injunctions to prevent the infringement of trade-marks, the Court exercises its jurisdiction in aid of Courts of Law, i. e., in cases in which an action could be maintained at law; but does not exercise an independent jurisdiction.—Foot v. Lea, 13 I. E. R. 484. (R.)

6. Independently of the reasons which I have stated, the motion should be refused. It is made on the eve of the trial at law, and according to the case of Thorpe v. Hughes that is sufficient ground for refusing it.—Hendrie v. Thompson, 1 I. C. R. 283; 3 I. Jur. 87. (R.)

7. A motion for an injunction to restrain the infringement of a patent, was ordered to stand until the ptf. brought an action at law. There was a verdict for the ptf. The deft. tendered a bill of exceptions, pending which the motion was renewed. The Court granted an injunction; the ptf. undertaking to abide any order which the Court might make, by directing an issue, or otherwise, to ascertain the damage, if any, which the deft. should sustain by obeying the order, if the deft. obtained judgment in the action.

Principles which guide the Court in granting or withholding an injunction after verdict; but before the legal right has been finally determined.—Baxter v. Combe, 3 I. C. R. 245. (R.)—[Affd.: 3 I. C. R. 256. (C.)—See s. c., 1 I. C. R. 284. (R.)]

8. The conversion of lands into a cemetery is waste. Demise of lands for lives and years, with a covenant to yield them up in repair at the expiration of the lease. The lessee's assignee agreed with Poor-law Guardians, with the Poor-law Commissioners' assent, not under seal, to let a portion of the lands to the Guardians as a cemetery. The land was so used for many years. The reversion was sold in the L. E. Court; and conveyed, subject to the lease, to the petitioner, who, before the conveyance, had notice of the cemetery's existence. Held, that the agreement with the Guardians was not a "purchase or hiring" by the Commissioners, within the 10 Vic., c. 31, s. 20.

Semble—Such a "purchase or hiring" must be by deed; and from or with the concurrence of the owner of the fee.

The Court granted an injunction to restrain future burials, but refused to order the restoration of the surface to its condition at the date of the demise.—Cregan v. Cullen, 16 I. C. R. 339. (R.)

XLVI. 2. How and when Injunction may be obtained: Motion for.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 161, 170–174; G. O. (1867), 144–146.]

9. Notice of an application for an injunction should be given to a deft. when it can be conveniently given without producing any mischief to the ptf., and although a subpoena may have been served, to appear and answer the bill.—Home v. Thompson, S. & Sc. 615. (R.)

10. If an injunction bill prays for an account and answer from any deft., all defts. must be served before moving on the bill.—Newenham v. O'Sullivan, 1 I. E. R. 68. (R.)

11. Exceptions to a report of a short answer having been overruled, the Court will restrain ptf. from issuing process to enforce a full answer, pending an appeal from the order overruling the exceptions.—Att.-Gen. v. Conroy, 1 I. E. R. 77; Jon. & Car. 78. (E.E.)

12. The Court will, upon motion by the receiver, without a bill being filed, grant an order for an injunction to restrain tenants under the Court from committing waste.—Cronin v. McCarthy, Fl. & K. 49. (R.)

1. The Crown having obtained judgment in an information of intrusion, which was more than a year old, the Court granted a conditional order to issue an injunction to put the Crown into possession, serving the parties in possession of the lands.—The Att.-Gen. v. Riggs, 6 I. E. R. 7. (R.E.)

2. Injunction to restrain waste issued without bill filed, in a lunacy matter, on application of the receiver.—In re Chinnerys, 6 I. E. R. 469; 1 Jon. & L. 90. (C.)

3. Persons entitled, as executors, to a lease of ferries over the River Liffey, filed a bill, stating a patent by which the Crown had granted all the ferries on that river to the Corporation of Dublin, and that the Corporation had granted a lease of them to their testator: that one of the defts. having been in the habit of ferrying passengers over the river for hire, they brought an action against him, and obtained a verdict in 1841: but that he and two other persons continued to carry passengers across the river for hire; and prayed that the defts. might be restrained from ferrying passengers across the river for hire within the limits of their ferries. One of the defts., a party to the action, stated by affidavit that the right of the Corporation was reputed to be confined within limits, within which he had not infringed upon their right; and that neither the Corporation, nor anyone claiming under them, had, within the memory of living men, claimed or exercised any right outside those limits, or disturbed the ferries of other persons beyond them. He also stated that the ptf. had recently brought an action against him for the disturbance of their ferries, which was still pending. Held, that the ptf. were bound to show upon their bill an actual possession of the premises for three years at least before the filing of the bill; and that they had not done so in the present case.

Held also, that they should have stated their case fully in the first instance.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 6 I. E. R. 57; 3 Dr. & War. 183; 2 Con. & L. 158. (C.)

4. The Ecclesiastical Court by sentence granted administration to A., as the intestate's only next-of-kin. That sentence was affirmed on appeal. B. filed a bill impeaching A.'s pedigree, and to establish his own. The Court refused an injunction till answer, to prevent A. from possessing himself of the assets, since A. was, by the Ecclesiastical Court's decree, legally and equitably entitled to the assets.—Maher v. Gorman, 6 I. E. R. 304. (R.)

5. When irreparable waste has been committed, and is about being repeated, the Court will, without a positive affidavit of the facts, grant a conditional order for an injunction, and restrain the party in the meantime, if there be danger that the waste will be committed before such affidavit can be procured.

—Beere v. Head, 7 I. E. R. 60. (R.)—[See Jackson v. Cleary, 61, note.]

6. The Court will not grant an injunction, to restrain waste, against persons specifically who are not defts., but they may be restrained as the deft.'s workmen or servants, if they fill that character.—Freeman v. Burke, 7 I. E. R. 282. (R.)

7. The Master having executed the conveyance for the principal deft., does not preclude him from giving the usual certificate to enable the purchaser to obtain an injunction to be put into possession.—Lawlor v. Drew, 7 I. E. R. 637. (R.)

8. The 26 G. 3, c. 57, gave power to the Crown to grant letters patent to keep a theatre in Dublin, and prohibited all persons from performing plays in Dublin for hire, under a penalty of £300 for each offence, to be recovered by action of debt, &c. by any person suing. Letters patent were granted to W., authorising him to establish a theatre, and perform plays in Dublin, and containing a clause prohibiting all other persons from doing so, unless authorised. Held, that the patentee could not sustain a bill for an injunction to restrain unauthorised persons who opened a theatre and performed plays contrary to the statute and patent.

In such cases the right to bring an action on the case and a bill for an injunction are concurrent.—Calcraft v. West, 8 I. E. R. 74; 2 Jon. & L. 128. (C.)

9. An injunction against the Corporation of Dublin, to restrain the application of the Pipe-water Rate to payment of interest on their debentures, was refused, the majority of the debenture-holders not being before the Court.

The Court, upon such an application, will consider the balance of inconvenience, and, though the act complained of be improper, refuse the motion, if the granting it would be attended with inconvenience to third parties.—The Att.-Gen., at the relation of Jackson, v. The Corporation of Dublin, 1 I. Jur. 177. (R.)—[See 12 I. E. R. 465.]

10. The ptf. in a creditor's cause who has got a decree, may move to stay other causes instituted for the same purpose.—O'Keefe v. Holmes, 13 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

11. A Railway Co., instead of obtaining the finding of a jury respecting the amount of compensation due to the owner of land required for the railway, but acting on some oral consent by the owner's solicitor, took possession, and commenced the works. Held, that the ptf. was entitled to an injunction, and that his right to compensation was clear; but that, since great public injury would, without corresponding benefit to the ptf., result from stopping the works, and to prevent injury to the company, there should be no rule on the motion, the company proceeding at once to obtain the finding of a jury, and paying all costs properly incurred, because they had gone into possession without complying with the statute. — Hare v. C. & B. Ry. Co., 3 I. Jur. 1. (C.)

1. When Commissioners, appointed by an Act of Parliament, exceed the authority given them by the Act, and thereby infringe on, or violate private rights, the Court has jurisdiction to restrain them by injunction.

The expense of works under the Drainage Acts was estimated by the engineer of the Commissioners of Public Works at £8378. The works proceeded, with the assent of the proprietors, and were returned by the Commissioners to the House as completed according to the original design, at the expense of £11,110. 4s. 3d. Afterwards additional works became necessary, the lands having been flooded in consequence of works carried on by the Commissioners in a neighbouring district. They, without the assent of the proprietors, and without taking the proceeding required by Acts, completed the additional works, and signed an award, charging the entire expense of the work at £21,026. 14s. 1d. The Court granted an injunction against enrolling the award, which, under the Acts, would be binding and conclusive against all parties when enrolled.

The Act under which the Commissioners derived authority provided that it should not be lawful for any person whatever, in any manner, to question or appeal against, or in respect of, anything whatsoever done or omitted to be done by the Commissioners, under the provisions of recited Acts and that Act; nor should any proceeding to be had or taken by or on behalf of the Commissioners, for the purposes of the Acts, be removed or removable by certiorari into any of her Majesty's Courts of Record. Held, following the decision of the Court of Exchequer (in Sharply v. Hornsby, 4 I. Jur. 38), that the provision applied only to questions of procedure; and afforded no protection when the Commissioners exceeded their jurisdiction.

An objection for want of parties, though it would be ground of demurrer to a bill, will not be an answer to a motion for an injunction in a cause petition.

Semble—The Court has authority to allow an amendment in a cause petition, so as to get rid of the objection of misjoinder.—Foster v. Hornsby, 2 I. C. R. 426; 5 I. Jur. 279. (R.)

2. The Commissioners of Drainage, without exceeding their jurisdiction, carried on works in so negligent and expensive a manner, that the sum stated in their award very largely exceeded that stated in the estimate of their engineer, on the faith of which the proprietors of the lands assented to the works. Held, that (assuming that the facts stated in the petition were proved) an action for negligence would lie by the proprietors against the Commissioners; and that the Court had power, and was bound to grant an injunction to prevent the signing and enrolling of the award until the action was determined, which the petitioners by their petition undertook to bring.—Stubber v. Hornsby, 2 I. C. R. 449; 5 I. Jur. 281. (R.)

3. The M. G. W. R. Co. purchased, under the sanction of an Act, the R. Canal and all the property belonging to it; and afterwards entered into a contract with the G. Canal Co. to purchase the G. Canal and its property; and that until an Act of Parliament could be obtained for the purpose, a lease should be made by the G. Canal Co. to the M. G. W. R. Co. under the provisions of the Canal Carriers Act, 8 & 9 Vic., c. 42. The agreement was adopted at a meeting of the G. Canal Co., and a draft lease approved of, which comprised not only the tolls and duties of the canal, but also all the real estate and personal property belonging to the G. Canal Co. Held, on a petition filed by two shareholders of the G. Canal Co. to restrain the Co. from executing the lease, that although the lease per se was within the Canal Carriers Act, yet as it was part of the arrangement for the transfer of the canal and its property to the R. Co., it was illegal; and the Court granted an injunction to prevent the execution of it.

The R. Canal and the G. Canal run parallel to each other for a short distance, and then diverge and fall into the River Shannon, at some distance from each other.

Held, that as they communicate with each other by water, they are within the Canal Carriers Act, so as to enable the G. Canal Co., under that Act, to make a lease of their tolls and duties to the M. G. W. R. Co., who had become proprietors of the R. Canal.

The Court will not consider the quantum of interest of shareholders in a Company who seek for an injunction, nor whether their interest would entitle them to vote at a meeting of the Company; but when the petitioners had purchased two shares for a nominal consideration, after the agreement which they complained of had been entered into, and with full notice of it, and for the purpose of preventing its completion, the Court refused an injunction.—M'Donnell v. Gd. Canal Co., and M'Donnell v. Mid. Gt. W. Ry. Co., 3 I. C. R. 578; 5 I. Jur. 197, 198. (C.)

4. A. owned a life estate in lands over which a receiver had been appointed. B., a judgment creditor, had the receiver extended in Nov. 1849, to pay his judgment. C., D., and F., owners of a mortgage, the first charge on the life estate, had the receiver extended in Dec. 1849, to pay them. An order in Jan. 1854 permitted A., the owner, to remain in possession of the lands at an occupation rent to be fixed by the Master; otherwise the Master was to let the lands. A. at first agreed; but subsequently refused to give the usual security for the rent.

The Master then posted the lands for letting, but C., who appeared to be in collusion with A., issued an execution upon a judgment of 1843, seized the growing crops, and, by giving public notice thereof, prevented the lands being let. Under these circumstances B. obtained an order for an injunction to the sheriff, to put the receiver in possession of the house and lands which the Master was then directed to let; for an attachment against C. for contempt in seizing the crops; and that B. should be paid the costs of the order of Jan. 1854, and of this motion.—Reeves v. Cox, 6 I. Jur. 403. (R.)

1. Two suits were instituted: one in the Court of Ch. in England; the other in the Court of Ch. in Ireland, to administer a testator's assets. The former suit was by the executor, who resided in England; the latter by residuary legatees, who were not served with a copy of the English bill. The usual order of reference, under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850, s. 15, was made in the Irish suit, on the 19th Dec. 1856. The executor entered an appearance on the 26th Jan. 1857. He obtained a decree to account in the English suit on the 7th March 1857. An order was made in the Irish suit on the 18th April 1857, that the petition should stand for a charge, and directing the executor to file a discharge, setting forth accounts. This order was amended on the 7th Dec. 1857, by directing an account of debts and legacies. The executor filed a supplemental bill in England, to bind the petitioners in the Irish suit by the proceedings in the original suit; and, on the 8th March 1858, the Master in the Irish suit by order restrained the executor from proceeding with the supplemental suit in England. Held, on appeal from the last order:—following Stokes v. Coltsman (1 I. C. R. 44), that the order of the 19th Dec. 1856 was a decree to account; this Court being bound by that decision.

That the Court of Ch. in Ir. had jurisdiction to restrain the executor from proceeding with the English suit.

That the executor, residing in England, had a right to protection from the Court of Ch., there, against the demands of creditors, which the order of the Court of Ch. in Ir. could not give him.

The Court, therefore, varied the order of the 8th March 1858; and made an order restraining the executor from proceeding in the English suit without the leave of the M. R. in England.

Semble—The order of the 18th April 1857 was not a decree to account.—[Stokes v. Coltsman, 1 I. C. R. 44, observed upon.]—Parnell v. P., 7 I. C. R. 322; s. c., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 382. (R.)—[See s. c., 8 I. C. R. 556. (R.)]

XLVI. 4. Special.

XLVI. 5. Perpetual Injunction.

2. A., having power to raise, by sale or mortgage, or other disposition, of a reversionary term of 1000 years, the portions provided by settlement for his younger children, did, in 1815, on the marriage of a daughter with C., purport to charge, by appointment, this term with £4000 and interest. After C.'s death, his personal representatives, having been advised that that power to charge had not been duly exercised, proceeded at law against A., on the covenant for title. A. gave judgment at law; and filed his bill, stating that the sum would, in a Court of Equity, be decreed to be well charged, and praying a perpetual injunction against the proceedings at law, but offering to execute any instrument deemed necessary to charge the lands. Held, that A., with the trustees of the term, should execute to C.'s representative a mortgage of the lands and premises in the term for £4000, and interest; and that a perpetual injunction should be granted against any further proceedings at law.—Whaley v. Morgan, 2 Dr. & Wal. 330. (C.)

3. A., a shareholder in the A. and C. Bank of Ireland, sold, in 1837, his shares to the company, who paid him therefor, and entered the sale in their books. The printed deed of transfer required by law was filled up and executed by the ptf., but not by any of the trustees of the bank; and no memorial of transfer was executed. In the register, filed in Nov. 1837, A.'s name appeared as having ceased to be a partner. It was omitted in the annual register of shareholders filed in the years 1838, '39, '40, '41, and '42. In 1848 A.'s name was again replaced on the register of shareholders, in pursuance, as alleged by A., of a fraudulent arrangement between the bank and B., a creditor on foot of debentures issued subsequent to 1837, in order to make A. liable. B. having obtained judgment against the bank on a plea of confession in an action on the debentures, sued out a sci. fa. thereon, against A. as a shareholder. A perpetual injunction was granted to restrain B. from proceeding at law against A. upon the sci. fa., and to restrain the bank from placing A.'s name on the next ensuing annual register.

The Banking Act, 6 G. 4, c. 42, does not prevent a company from buying up the shares of an individual member; and although they dispense with the form of transfer directed by the Act, the sale will be binding as between them and the vendor.—Taylor v. Hughes, 7 I. E. R. 529. (C.)—[Affg. Rolls decision, 6 I. E. R. 480. (R.)]

4. Lands were vested upon trusts in strict settlement, with a leasing power to be exercised by two of the three trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life. A lease was executed in 1808 by one trustee, with the consent of the tenant for life. D., the first tenant in tail, attained age, and in 1819 the property was re-settled. In 1831, the tenant for life died, and D. received the rent reserved by the lease of 1808, up to 1843, when he purchased the lessee's interest, and took possession of the lands comprised in the lease; but did not take a conveyance. On an ejectment, brought by a judgment creditor of the lessee, judgment for the ptf. was given for one-third. Held, that D. was entitled to a perpetual injunction against the judgment creditor relying on the legal estate in the one-third derived by him from the trustee.—Denny v. Busted, 7 I. C. R. 201; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 377. (C.)—[Affd.: 8 I. C. R. 49. (C.A.)]

1. By letters patent of King Charles II, the fishery of the river of Galway from Lough Corrib to the sea was granted to P., under whom the petitioners claimed. The title of the Crown and its grantees to the fishery was deduced from the reign of King John. Acts of ownership, and convictions of persons who had trespassed on the fishery were given in evidence. The title of the petitioners had been established by the verdict of a jury in a prohibition suit at law to which some of the respondents were parties. The respondents admitted the right to a fishery in a part of the river, but contended that in other parts they and the public from time immemorial had exercised a right of angling; and they proved that for many years persons had been in the habit of angling in all parts of the river. The Court granted a perpetual injunction to restrain the respondents from fishing, without directing an issue or an action at law.—Ashworth v. Browne, 10 I. C. R. 421. (R.)

XLVI. 6. Extent and Effect of.

XLVI. 7. Service of, and of Order for.

XLVI. 8. Breach of: what constitutes Breach: Commitment for.

2. A deft., having been imprisoned eight months for breach of an injunction against breaking up ancient pasture lands, was discharged from custody, on undertaking to lay them down again.—Scully v. Skehane, 8 & Sc. 710. (R.)

3. Planting potatoes in land previously ploughed is not such a breach of an injunction to stay waste as will be punished by attachment.—Brophy v. Quarry, Hayes, 449. (E.E.)

4. A landlord obtained a civil-bill decree in an ejectment against an overholding tenant, who appealed, and filed a bill for specific performance of an agreement to grant a lease, and for an injunction. The common injunction was obtained. On an appeal, the civil-bill was dismissed without prejudice. The landlord brought a second civil-bill, and obtained a decree. An attachment for breach of injunction was refused, as the second civil-bill was only the continuation of the first.—M'Girr v. Servis, Hay, & J. 501. (E.E.)

XLVI. 9. Reviving, Continuing, and Extending Injunctions.

5. In an injunction cause, although ptf. excepts to deft.'s answer, whereby, under G. O. 92, the original injunction is continued until the exceptions are disposed of—Held, that ptf. may, nevertheless, move on the bill and answer to continue the injunction.—Lambert v. L., 1 I. E. R. 9. (R.)

6. A motion to continue an injunction upon equity confessed by the answer, without any saving of the right to except, is a waiver of all objections to the answer for insufficiency.—Crofts v. Lord Egmont, 3 I. E. R. 229; 3 I. E. R. 227. (R.)

7. An injunction obtained on the filing of the bill, continued to the hearing (the ptf. giving security and undertaking to speed his cause), it appearing that there was a serious question for the hearing, which, if decided in the ptf.'s favour, would entitle him to the relief sought.—Donnell v. Church, 4 I. E. R. 630. (R.)

8. When a demurrer to an injunction bill has been allowed by notice under the 64th G. O., and the bill amended, the 62nd G. Rule does not authorise the ptf. to move to continue the injunction already obtained, that injunction standing dissolved by the allowance of the demurrer.—Atkinson v. Wright, 6 I. E. R. 382. (R.)

9. When a deft. dies after injunction obtained against him, upon revival of the suit against his personal representative, the injunction stands continued without further order.—Kennedy v. Lloyd, 8 I. E. R. 581. (R.)

10. The answer was filed on the 31st March. Exceptions were taken on the 18th April, but abandoned. A motion to continue the injunction was held too late, not being within the time directed by the 62nd G. O.—Jordan v. Gray, 1 I. Jur. 315. (R.)

11. The ptf. married the deft., an alien; and afterwards, by deed of separation, not acknowledged, conveyed real and personal estate in trust to pay him an annuity. The trustee covenanted to pay the annuity, and the ptf. to indemnify the trustee. An action having been brought by the deft. against the trustee, the ptf. filed a bill in her own name for an injunction, and to set aside the deed, insisting that the deft. being an alien could take nothing under it; that the marriage was not legal according to the law of Guernsey, where it was celebrated; that the ptf. executed the deed under the impression that the deft. had by the marriage acquired legal rights over her property; and that the deed was not acknowledged by her. The Court refused to continue an injunction granted until answer on any of the grounds except the last.

Semble—The ptf., having by her bill denied the marriage, and having covenanted to indemnify the trustee, who at her instance incurred a legal liability, cannot rely on the deed not being properly acknowledged.—Dumoncel v. D., 13 I. E. R. 92. (R.)

12. An injunction against felling timber was obtained against the respondent; who by his affidavit in answer claimed the timber as his own property. On a motion, founded on that affidavit, to dissolve the injunction, the Court directed an action to be brought to try the legal right. An action having been brought, the respondent obtained the judgment of the Court of Exchequer Chamber, one Judge alone dissenting. The petitioner sued out and prosecuted a writ of error to the H. L. Held, reversing the order at the Rolls [3 I. C. R. 455], that the injunction ought to be continued.—Mountcashell v. O'Neill, 3 I. C. R. 619. (C.)

XLVI. 10. Dissolving Injunction: Cause against Dissolution.

1. In an interpleader suit the ptf. obtained an injunction against proceedings at law, upon the terms of paying into Court the rent claimed. One deft. answered; and before the other answered (there being process against him), entered a conditional rule to dissolve the injunction. Held, that the rule was irregular.—Swanston v. Simpson, Jo. & Car. 188. (E.E.)

2. If a ptf. applying ex parte for an injunction, suppress a material fact, it will be a ground for dissolving the injunction with costs.—Hemphill v. McKenna, 3 Dr. & War. 188; 2 Con. & L. 76; 6 I. E. R. 57. (C.)

3. Injunction order in a possessory suit set aside because the ptf. had not fully and fairly stated his case in the first instance.—Dease v. Plunkett, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 255. (C.)

4. When after notice of motion by the deft. to dissolve an injunction upon answer filed, the ptf., on the eve of the Vacation after H. Term, filed exceptions to the answer, the Court would not entertain such motion.

Quere—Whether in cases of waste the deft. may move to dissolve the injunction?—Persse v. Queely, 9 I. E. R. 151. (R.)

5. An order, on showing cause against an injunction obtained on a possessory bill, allowing the cause to stand over, with liberty to amend the bill by putting in issue matter not stated in, or exactly consistent with it, cannot be made, since such a motion would be analogous to the final hearing of an ordinary cause. The rule, respecting the use of supplemental affidavits on such motions, considered.—Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

6. An injunction against felling timber was obtained against the respondent. On a motion to dissolve it, the Court directed an action to be brought. An action having been brought, and the respondent having obtained judgment in the Exchequer Chamber, the Court dissolved the injunction, notwithstanding the pendency of a writ of error to the H. L.; it not appearing that irreparable mischief would be done to the petitioner by dissolving the injunction.—Mountcashell v. O'Neill, 3 I. C. R. 455. (R.)—[Reversed: 3 I. C. R. 619. (C.)]

7. A house, garden, and parcel of land were demised in 1810. The lands were situate in a large district of bog, where the inhabitants supported themselves by the turbary, and which had been used for upwards of forty years as turbary. A portion of the lands had been reclaimed and cultivated by the tenant. The Court restrained the tenant from cutting turf for sale on that portion of the lands which was demised as "garden," but dissolved the injunction as to the remainder of the lands.—Stevenson v. Moore, 7 I. C. R. 462. (R.)

XLVI. 11. Effect of Amendment: Obtaining Leave to Amend without Prejudice.

8. Leave to amend the bill without prejudice to an injunction will not be granted as of course. The motion must be made without delay, and be supported by an affidavit, stating the proposed amendments, and when the matter of them came to the ptf.'s knowledge.

Where the answer had been filed in April, an application made in August for leave to amend by introducing charges, and an interrogatory founded thereon in avoidance of a defence set up by the answer, was refused.

The practice in Ireland in this respect is correctly stated in Donegal v. Berry (1 Hog. 46), and differs from the practice in England, as stated in Ferrand v. Hamer (4 M. & Cr. 113).—O'Beirne v. O'B., 1 I. C. R. 152; 3 I. Jur. 65. (R.)—[Rev'd.: 1 I. C. R. 158. (C.)]

XLVI. 12. Injunctions against Proceedings at Law.

- a. Generally.
- b. Against Ejectment.
- c. To stay Trial: extending common Injunction.
- d. To stay Execution and Distress.
- e. To stay Proceedings in other Courts.
- f. When money will be ordered into Court on granting an Injunction.

- h. In cases of Interpleader.

XLVI. 12 a. Injunctions, generally, against Proceedings at Law.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 149.]

9. A vicar having granted an annuity charged on his benefice, and being entitled to compensation for tithe arrears under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 100, may be restrained from receiving them until answer has been filed to a bill filed against him to raise the arrears of the annuity.—Stannus v. Robinson, Hay, & J. 622. (E.E.)

10. In a creditor's suit, after a decree to account, obtained upon sequestration, against the owner of the estate, the Court will on ptf.'s application stating that the fund is insolvent, and that he alone is interested in avoiding unnecessary costs, restrain a prior creditor from prosecuting a Chancery suit instituted for a similar purpose, the owner of the estate having had notice of the motion, but not appearing.—Houston v. Barry, 1 Jones, 154. (E.E.)

11. The ptf. being resident out of the jurisdiction, and his bill having been reported prolix, the Court restrained him from proceeding in the cause until he paid the costs of the reference, and of the report of prolixity, though the deft. had neglected to compel him to give security for costs.—La Touche v. Lawlor, 2 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

XLVI. 12. b. Injunctions against Ejectment.

1. An injunction, to restrain proceedings in an ejectment until the hearing, will not be granted, except upon the terms of giving the deft. a complete judgment at law.

Therefore, when one of the defts. to the ejectment, who was not a party to the equity suit, refused to give judgment at law, the Court refused an application for an injunction until the hearing, upon the ptf. in equity giving judgment at law.—Redmond v. Goodall, 2 Jon. 812. (E.E.)

2. The ptf. by his bill prayed generally for an injunction to restrain the deft. from proceeding in an ejectment at law. Upon the motion for the injunction, the deft.'s counsel stated—that the deft. intended to rely at law upon forfeitures against which a Court of Equity cannot grant relief. The ptf.'s counsel then sought to confine the injunction to those forfeitures against which equity will relieve. Held, that that limited injunction should not be granted except upon the usual terms of confessing judgment at law; because the action at law was upon the eve of trial, the ptf. had suffered a considerable time to elapse before filing his bill, he had not required a particular of the forfeitures upon which the deft. intended to rely at law, and because the deft. would still be obliged to have a trial at law, even if the limited injunction were granted.

Notice of an application for an injunction should be given to a deft. when it can be conveniently given without producing any mischief to the ptf., and although a subpoena may have been served to appear and answer the bill.—Home v. Thompson, S. & Sc. 615. (R.)

8. Only in a strong case, if at all, will the Court grant an injunction to restrain proceedings for non-payment of rent.—Clancy v. Roberts, 1 L. E. R. 21. (R.)

4. The Court will not restrain a ptf. in an ejectment for non-payment of rent, from executing his habere, when the bill is filed after judgment in the ejectment.—Ivess v. Hunt, Fl. & K. 408. (R.)

5. A mortgagee in possession, who appears upon the pleadings to be paid off, and has given security to pay the rents into Court, will be restrained by injunction from ejecting the tenants in occupation of the lands, although the answer claims a sum to be still due.

Discussion of the powers of a mortgagee in possession.—Robinson v. Maguire, 9 L. E. R. 268. (R.)

6. A., tenant for life under a marriage settlement, with power to grant leases for three lives or thirty-one years, made a lease to a party under whom C. claimed, of the lands of X., for three lives and thirty-one years cumulatively, with a covenant for quiet enjoyment. Upon the marriage of B., eldest son of A., and remainderman under the settlement, A. and B. according to their respective estates, by deed in 1820, conveyed (amongst other settled estates) X. to trustees, "as fully and amply as the same had been enjoyed by A. and his undertenants." A likewise conveyed by that deed to the uses of the settlement other lands, and a f.-f. rent, of which he was seized in fee. The uses of the settlement were declared (subject to prior charges) to be, first, to pay an annuity to B. during the joint lives of himself and his father; and after a provision for pin-money for B.'s intended wife, and the maintenance of the children of B., if he died before his father, the estates were limited in strict settlement to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder, subject to a jointure for the intended wife of B., and a term for securing same and younger children's portions, to the first and other sons of B. in tail male, with an ultimate reversion to A. in fee. A. and B. jointly and severally covenanted, with the trustees, against incumbrances, "except as thereafter mentioned, and except the leases by which the premises then were held and enjoyed by the several tenants thereof, for the lives and at the rents therein expressed," &c.; and also "that the lands should be indemnified, &c., against all charges, claims, or incumbrances, except as before mentioned." After the expiration of the three lives, B. brought an ejectment to recover X. C. filed his bill to restrain those proceedings. Held, that according to the true construction of the exceptions in the covenants of the settlement of 1820, there existed a contract for valuable consideration between the father and son, that the son should confirm the defective lease in exoneration of the personal liability of the father under his covenant for quiet enjoyment; and that C. had an equity as against B. to restrain him from evicting the lease.—[Stoughton v. Crosbie, 5 L. E. R. 451, approved of.]—Malcolmson v. Medlycott, 4 L. Jur. 361. (C.)

7. A., having a title to property, acquiesced while B. dealt with it as his own. The Court restrained A. acquiescing from proceeding in an ejectment to recover the property from B.

Semble—A severance of a joint-tenancy may be presumed where the joint tenants have for several years enjoyed their respective shares in severalty, although no partition has actually been made.—Roche v. Sheridan, 2 L. Jur. N. S. 409. (R.)

8. Decree declaring the right of the petitioner under a deed which had remained in the grantor's possession, and had been destroyed by him; and granting an injunction to restrain his co-heirs from taking proceedings against the petitioner for the recovery of the lands, they not resisting the decree, and making no claim to the lands.

Quære—Whether such a decree would have been made in invitis?

Construction of the 20th G. Rule of May 1857.—Esmonde v. E., 9 I. C. R. 263. (R.)

1. A., rector of the parish of T., and proprietor of an adjoining estate, was seized in fee of the advowson and right of presentation to the living; and was also entitled to a rent of £28. 7s. 5d. per an., payable by the incumbent of T., for the time being, out of glebe lands. A.'s estate, including the advowson, having been put up for sale under an order of the I. E. Court, the printed rental stated among the particulars of the advowson, that there were attached to the living 19a. 1r. 7p. statute measure, of glebe, valued at £1. 10s. per acre (not mentioning that this land was subject to any rent).

In the same rental, in the lot which comprised the lands of T., a portion of them was described as "glebe lands not sold;" and in the annexed map the glebe land was left uncoloured, and marked as "not in the estate."

An advertisement subsequently published for the sale of the advowson, again stated that the 19a. 1r. 7p. of glebe land, valued at £30 a-year, were held with the living. A. was a party to all the proceedings in the I. E. Court. The Commissioners sold the advowson, and conveyed it to B., who sold it to a clergyman of the Established Church, who had previously visited the parish when A.'s son, X., showed him a copy of that advertisement, and represented that the particulars were correct. On A.'s death the purchaser presented himself to the living.

Shortly afterwards X., A.'s devisee, demanded from the new incumbent the rent of the glebe lands; and, when payment was refused, commenced an action of ejectment to recover the lands. The incumbent instituted an injunction suit to restrain the action, on the ground that A.'s acts had led him to suppose that the glebe lands were not subject to any rent. Held, that the relief sought should be granted since, during the proceedings in the I. E. Court, A. had lain by and not asserted his claim.

The glebe lands were held under a lease for lives renewable for ever, in which A.'s was the last life. The incumbent's petition prayed first, to have the glebe lands declared discharged from any lease or rent; secondly, that if subject to the lease, compensation should be made him for his loss as a purchaser; lastly, that, if necessary, a renewal of the lease should be executed to him by X. Held, that the frame of the petition was free from objection; and that the prayer for alternative relief was admissible.—Belcher v. Brady, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (C.)—[Affirmed, ibid, 291. (C.A.)]

XLVI. 12. c. To stay Trial: extending Common Injunction.

2. A., in consideration of being permitted to become an intestate's administrator, agreed to deposit the share of C., a minor, and one of the next-of-kin, in the hands of a trustee for C.; and accordingly deposited £180 with B. in trust for C., subject to the final settlement of the administrator's account. C.'s share was afterwards ascertained to be £156. A. having proceeded to recover the £180 at law from B., and having refused a tender of the difference between £180 and £156, B. was, on a bill filed by A., allowed to lodge in Court £180 to the credit of the cause; and A. was restrained from proceeding with the action.—Fleming v. F., 2 Jones, 810. (E.E.)

3. A., entitled for life, with remainder to her children as she should appoint, to the interest in a chattel lease, of which the legal estate was outstanding in a trustee for her, sub-demised to B. A. gave B. a bond conditioned to make out good title within three months after the first of her (A.'s) children attained age; but did not do so. The lease was evicted for non-payment of rent. A. sued B.'s assignee for the rent reserved by the under-lease. The Court, by injunction, restrained the action.—Murphy v. Stratton, 13 I. C. R. 423. (R.)

XLVI. 12. d. To stay Execution and Distress.

4. When a party desires to restrain proceedings at law upon a judgment after an execution has been issued, the amount marked on the writ, and the costs at law, must generally be lodged in Court, or satisfactorily secured.—Rogan v. Weir, S. & Sc. 677. (R.)

5. When before decree, a receiver was appointed over the assets of a company formed under 6 G. 4, c. 42, which had stopped payment, the Court refused to restrain a creditor from suing out execution, under the 18th sec. of that Act, against the shareholders, upon a judgment obtained against the company.

In the cases of creditors' and administration suits, an injunction against another creditor, instituting a separate suit, will not be granted unless there has been a decree, and unless all the assets have been accounted for and placed within the control and disposition of the Court.—Acheson v. Hodges, 3 I. E. R. 516; Fl. & K. 371. (R.)

6. Injunction to restrain proceedings on a verdict, the time for answering not having expired, refused with costs.—Connor v. C., 8 I. E. R. 510. (E.E.)

7. Injunction, against proceeding on a judgment, granted after pretermission of the opportunity of pleading at law, when the neglect of doing so was accounted for by the creditor's solicitor having said that he would not proceed any further if the lands were not subject to the judgment.—O'Neil v. Browne, 9 I. E. R. 131. (C.)

8. After a decree to account in a suit to administer assets, a judgment creditor of the testator, who had notice of the decree, sued out a sci. fa. against the executor; obtained judgment by default; and issued a fi. fa. de bonis testatoris. The Court, at the application of the executor, restrained the creditor from proceeding on the fi. fa., and gave the costs of the motion against him.—Belmore v. B., 12 I. E. R. 498. (R.)

1. On a bill filed to restrain execution for the full amount of a verdict and costs, and to get credit for money which was not available as a set-off at the trial below, wherein the present ptf. was deft., and the now deft. ptf.; Held, that the circumstance of the credit claimed not being capable of being established as a legal set off at the trial, and the amount being indisputably due, was a special equitable ground for relief, and warranted the interference of this Court; but should not prejudice the lien of the solicitor for costs.—Mahony v. M., 2 I. Jur. 129. (C.)

2. Pending a petition for, but before the allowance by the Lord Chancellor of, a certificate under the Bankers Acts (83 G. 2, c. 14, and 40 G. 3, c. 22, Ir.), a banker, not being entitled to be discharged from arrest at law, cannot obtain an injunction to restrain a creditor from issuing execution against him.

But a creditor who had appeared on the hearing of the petition, and opposed the allowance of the certificate, and had filed a discharge under the order of reference, and had thus made himself a party to the proceeding, was enjoined from issuing execution.—Guinness v. Fitzsimon, 13 I. E. R. 189. (R.)

3. A. devised lands, held for life, in trust, that his wife should reside upon the lands, and be maintained out of the proceeds; and that his executors should divide the estate between the respondent and his brothers. After A.'s decease, the lease having expired, a renewal was granted to the respondent alone, who was not one of the executors, with a proviso for the maintenance of his mother upon the lands. The family continued to reside upon the premises as under the former lease, but no division of the property had ever been made by the executors. The respondent for some time managed the farm. Having become paralytic, his brother (one of the petitioners) undertook the management of it for him. Subsequently, they having quarrelled, the respondent tried to remove his brother from the lands; and, having brought an action of ejectment on the title against him, obtained judgment in that suit, as also for mesne rates.

A motion for an injunction to restrain the respondent from executing the habere, or enforcing the judgment for mesne rates, until the hearing of a cause petition between the same parties, praying that the lease made to the respondent might be declared to be a graft upon the original lease, upon the grounds that there had been an understanding that the former lease was held in trust, was refused, the respondent being owner of the entire legal estate in the lands, and at least of a moiety of the beneficial estate; and the alleged trust not being established.—Keily v. K., 7 I. Jur. 269. (C.)

XLVI. 12. c. To Stay Proceedings in other Courts.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 149.]

4. After a decree to account in an administration suit, the Court will restrain a creditor from proceeding in a suit instituted by himself, only when the executor has in his answer, or in some other way, given an account of the assets, and brought the amount into Court.—Hoops v. Earl of Kingston, Fl. & K. 246. (R.)

5. It appearing to be for the benefit of the inheritor, who was a lunatic, the Court, on the application of the ptf. after decree, stayed the proceedings of another creditor in Chancery, and directed him to file a charge under the decree; the creditor consenting that if any thing should be found due to him, but not otherwise, the Chancery costs should be included in the report.—Lynch v. Skerrett, 2 Jones, 508. (E.E.)

6. Tenants will be restrained from proceeding at law, and a reference to the Master ordered to ascertain the damages which they have sustained in relation to their crops, &c., by reason of their having been put out of possession, and kept thereout until the writ of restitution was executed. The purchaser will be ordered to pay the amount of damages.—Trotter v. Ellis, S. & Sc. 149, note. (R.)

7. After a decree in an administration suit, and after the Court had taken the assets out of the executors' hands, a creditor was restrained from further proceedings at law, although the executors had given a plea of confession for judgment. The creditor, however, was allowed his costs.—Quin v. Bagnal, 1 I. E. R. 110. (R.)

8. A., having power to raise by sale, mortgage, or other disposition of a reversionary term of 1000 years, the portions provided by his marriage settlement for his younger children, did, in 1815, on the marriage of a daughter with C., purport to charge, by appointment, this term with £4000, and interest. After C.'s death, his personal representative, having been advised that the power to charge had not been duly executed, proceeded at law against A. on his covenant for title. A. gave judgment at law, and filed his bill stating that the sum would, in a Court of Equity, be decreed well charged; and praying a perpetual injunction against the proceedings at law; offering also to execute any instrument which should be deemed necessary for effectually charging the lands. Held, that A., with the trustees of the term, should execute to C.'s representative a mortgage of the lands and premises in the term, for £4000 and interest, and that a perpetual injunction should be granted against any further proceedings at law.—Whaley v. Morgan, 2 Dr. & Wal. 330. (C.)

1. An injunction will be granted to stay an action at law for damages for an arrest under an irregular writ of ne exeat regno issued from Chancery; and compensation for the injury done will be refused at the same time, or ordered to be given only on a proper case being made therefor. — Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

2. Trustees, by deed, having authority to advance the whole or any part of £2000 (assigned to them upon trusts) to M., upon his request, "provided the same should be with the consent of M.'s wife, in writing, under her hand and seal," &c., and "provided that M. should give to them, for and in lieu of the sum to be so advanced, such security for same as they should approve of, upon the same trusts as declared of the £2000," advanced the whole £2000 to M., without the consent in writing of his wife; and without obtaining any security for it. Afterwards M. lent this money to L. without security, but on L.'s promise to repay it to M. within a limited time. L. having broken his promise, M. commenced an action against him. One of the trustees, who was L.'s brother, thereupon filed a bill, stating that through ignorance he had been a party to a breach of trust, by advancing the £2000 to M.; praying that L. should be decreed to pay that sum back to the trustees; that M. should be restrained from proceeding in the action against L., and that L. should be restrained from paying M. On the motion for an injunction according to the prayer of the bill — Held, that it not appearing that there would be any greater risk of the money in the hands of M. than in the hands of L., and there being no offer by the ptf. or L. to bring in the money, the motion should be refused: that it was not competent to the ptf. to restrain the legal right which by his own act of misconduct M. had acquired; and that the fact of this being a trust fund made only this difference from the case of an ordinary loan, that all who took it with notice of the trust were constructive trustees; and that as soon as M. should recover it from L., he would be bound to apply it to its proper purposes; and the Court would compel him to do so. — Lambert v. L., 5 I. E. R. 339. (R.)

3. An injunction will be granted to stay an action at law for damages for an arrest under an irregular writ of ne exeat regno issued from Ch.; and compensation for the injury done will be ordered by the Court of Ch., on a proper case being made therefor. — Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 207. (C.)

4. H., having effected a policy of insurance on his own life, assigned it to the deft. T., in trust for J., a minor. The deed contained no exonerating clause or declaration that the trustee's receipt should be a good discharge. The insurance company had notice of the trust, and after the death of H. refused to pay T., who was the executor of H., on the grounds that there was no exonerating clause, or declaration that T.'s receipt should be a good discharge; and also that he had attempted to obtain the money to apply it to his own uses, in breach of the trust. On an injunction bill filed by the company against T. and J., to restrain proceedings at law by T., alleging those facts, and offering to bring the money into Court — Held, on the motion, that, though the bill might probably be dismissed, yet, as there was a question for the hearing, the Court would not anticipate the decision of the cause, but would grant the injunction.

Semble—The rule requiring purchasers of property to see to the application of the purchase-money, does not apply to the case of debtors, so as to implicate them in trusts created by their creditors. — Fernie v. Maguire, 6 I. E. R. 137. (R.)

5. Upon a motion by deft., administrator, after decree in a creditor's suit, to restrain creditors from proceeding in a suit at law; the administrator having, by his answer in the cause, stated what assets had come to his hands; and having given the ptf. at law notice, after they had served their writ, to come in and prove their demand under the decree — Held, that the deft. was entitled to the injunction, and that the ptf. at law were not entitled to any costs incurred by them after the notice.

That the fund being deficient, the payment of the costs was not a condition precedent to granting the injunction.

If the answer did not contain a sufficiently full statement of the assets received, the Court would allow the motion to stand over until the assets were accounted for. — Pepper v. Foster, 6 I. E. R. 384. (R.)

6. A., a shareholder in the A. and C. Bank of Ireland, sold, in 1837, his shares to the company, who paid him therefor, and entered the sale in their books. The printed deed of transfer required by law was filled up and executed by the ptf., but not by any of the trustees of the bank; and no memorial of transfer was executed. In the register filed in Nov. 1837, A.'s name appeared as having ceased to be a partner; and his name was omitted in the annual register of shareholders filed in the years 1838, '39, '40, '41, and '42. In 1843, A.'s name was replaced on the register of shareholders, in pursuance, as alleged by A., of a fraudulent arrangement between the bank and B., a creditor on foot of debentures issued subsequent to 1837, in order to make A. liable. B. having obtained judgment against the bank on plea of confession in an action on the debentures, sued out a sci. fa. thereon against A., as a shareholder. The Court granted an injunction until answer, to restrain B. from proceeding at law against A. upon the sci. fa., and to restrain the bank from placing A.'s name as a shareholder on the next ensuing annual register. — Taylor v. Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 480. (R.) — [Affid., 7 I. E. R. 529. (C.)]

7. When an action at law has been commenced against a party for irregularly issuing an attachment, and arresting the deft. under it, it is in the discretion of the Court to restrain the action.

The Court will not exercise this discretion, in restraining the action in a case in which serious and substantial damage has been sustained.—Mackinnon v. Palmer, 7 I. E. R. 496. (R.)

1. A creditor on foot of a joint and several bond of B. and N. (having entered judgment against B. only) proved under a decree to account in a suit against the assets of B. He was also a party to the report under a decree to account in a supplemental suit affecting the assets of N., but did not prove under it. The Court restrained the creditor from proceeding at law against the administrator of N.—Cuffe v. Young, 8 I. E. R. 37. (R.)

2. When, on a bill for discovery merely, an injunction is granted to restrain an action at law, the plaintiff will not be required to give judgment in the action at law.—Wilder v. Farrell, 8 I. E. R. 101. (R.)

3. When tenants have, without leave of the Court, replevied distresses for rent made by the receiver, the Court will restrain them from proceeding in the replevin suits, and direct a reference as to the rent due.—In re Persse, 8 I. E. R. 111. (R.)

4. Injunction, to restrain proceedings upon a verdict at law, the time for answering not having expired, refused with costs.—Connor v. C., 8 I. E. R. 510. (E.E.)

5. The proper course to compel the ptf. to elect between a suit in equity and one at law is, by entering a side-bar rule, not by application to the Court. The deft. is at liberty to enter the rule at any time after the filing of his answer, and by it to call on the ptf. to elect within eight days after service, notwithstanding that the ptf. has six weeks to except to the answer.—Hollier v. Hedges, 9 I. E. R. 37. (R.)

6. The receiver in the cause having distrained for rent due by a tenant (who really held for deft.), as deft. alleged, on lands in deft.'s possession, and not on those over which the receiver had been appointed, the Court restrained an action of trespass brought by deft., and granted the usual reference to the Master; there not being any good reason to suppose that the receiver acted maliciously or mala fide, or that deft. had sustained any substantial damage.—Parr v. Bell, 9 I. E. R. 55. (R.)

7. When a creditor's suit in the Court of Ch. has been stayed by reason of a prior decree to account in the Court of Exchequer, and the ptf. in the stayed suit had paid the costs of one deft., the Court refused to direct the receiver to pay the ptf. these costs, but restrained the defts. in the stayed suit from proceeding against the ptf. to recover them.—Levinge v. De Montmorency, 1 I. Jur. 251. (E.E.)

8. Injunction against proceedings on a judgment granted after premitting the opportunity of pleading at law; the neglect to plead being accounted for by the creditor's solicitor having said that he would not proceed any further if the lands were not subject to the judgment.—O'Neill v. Browne, 9 I. E. R. 131. (C.)

9. The ptf. filed his bill against his wife and her trustees to restrain them from proceeding at law upon a separation deed, which he alleged was void as against public policy, and by reason of a sentence for restitution of conjugal rights. Held, that the defence (if any) raised legal questions, and that the Court ought not to restrain the action.—Heath v. H., 9 I. E. R. 635. (R.)

10. Bill to administer assets. After a decree to account, one of the creditors, with notice of the decree, served a civil-bill upon the executrix for a debt due by the testator, alleging promises by the executrix. An injunction was granted; and the creditor was directed to pay the costs of the motion.—Irwin v. De Massey, 1 I. Jur. 243. (R.)

11. A bill by the directors of an Insurance Co. stated matters which amounted to a legal defence, and prayed a discovery thereof; that a policy of assurance might be delivered up to be cancelled, and an injunction to stay an action at law brought on it. The bill was against A., the administratrix of the assured, and B., the assignee of the policy, in concert with whom, and by whose directions the bill charged the policy to have been effected, but who was not a party to the action. The Court refused the injunction on the bill as a bill of relief, because it stated facts amounting to a defence at law; or as a bill of discovery, because it prayed relief which the ptf. could not waive.—Anderson v. Dowling, 11 I. E. R. 590. (R.)

12. A civil-bill decree against an administrator is in the nature of a judgment de bonis propriis. The Court, though it will enjoin a creditor from enforcing such a decree against the assets, when a decree to administer them has been pronounced, will not restrain him from enforcing it against the administrator personally.—Powell v. P., 12 I. E. R. 501. (R.)

13. When a tenant of the Court replevied a distress made by the receiver, and the receiver entered a rule to declare in the replevin suit, but subsequently offered the tenant the costs of the rule, which the latter declined to receive, the Court ordered the proceedings in the replevin suit to be stayed, and directed a reference to the Remembrancer to report what sum was due to the tenant: the order to be without prejudice to any question as to the liabilities of the sureties in the replevin suit, or the costs of that suit or of the motion.—Whitelaw v. Sandys, 12 I. E. R. 393. (E.E.)

14. By the custom of an Inferior Court, on an affidavit of debt an attachment issued against the goods of the debt. below, and unless he could procure bail to pay such debt, damages, &c., as should be awarded against him, the debt. below could not enter an appearance or have a trial of the action on the merits. A party so circumstanced filed a bill for an injunction, stating that he was not indebted to the debt. here, who had brought the action in the Inferior Court. Held, that the Court had no power to grant the injunction.

Semble—The proper course is a writ of error to the Court of Q. B. or C. P.

Quere—Whether such a custom be valid?—M'Anaspie v. Dickson, 13 I. E. R. 216; 2 I. Jur. 50. (R.)

1. A petition was filed against the public officer and several directors of a Joint-stock Bank, who all resided out of the jurisdiction, for a discovery in aid of a defence to an action at law by the public officer against the ptf., and for an injunction to restrain the action. The injunction was refused because the directors were not parties to the record at law, and an admission by them would not be evidence against the ptf. at law.

Semle—The residence of the directors abroad, and the want of power to compel a discovery from them, would be sufficient ground for refusing the injunction.—Hendrie v. Thompson, 1 I. C. R. 278. (R.)

2. The general rule is, that though there be a decree to administer assets, a creditor of the testator or intestate will not be restrained by injunction from proceeding at law to make the personal representative liable de bonis propriis. But when a legatee, who has proved in the Master's office under the decree, brings an action at law against the executor for the legacy, the Court will enjoin him, though the judgment in the action should be de bonis propriis; for the Court, by its decree, has taken upon itself to decide upon the question of assets, without which the ptf. at law cannot recover, and will not permit that question to be tried at law.

To make an executor liable at law for a legacy de bonis propriis, there must be an express promise in writing, and assets, or some other consideration.

Semle—On a plaint for a legacy, against the debt. as executor, and not averring that the debt. promised in writing to pay the legacy, the judgment should be de bonis testatoris.—Molyneux v. Scott, 3 I. C. R. 291. (R.)

3. A cause petition had been filed by A., the owner of lands, against B., his agent, praying an account of the moneys received by him. B. then brought an action at law against A. for bills and moneys handed to him, and for salary and receiver's fees. It appearing that these matters were all a part of the same transaction, the petitioner was allowed to amend his petition, setting out these facts, and praying an injunction to stay the proceedings at law. The petitioner giving a consent for judgment in the action, an injunction was granted to stay the proceedings in this action till the hearing of the cause petition.—White v. M'Carthy, 7 I. Jur. 353. (R.)

4. When the Court gave liberty to a party to bring an action at law, in order to try a legal right, and, to the defence pleaded, an equitable replication was by leave of the Court of Law put in, the Court refused to grant an injunction restraining the party from proceeding upon this equitable replication.—Gatchell v. Geoghegan, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 172. (R.)

5. R. was tenant for life of money secured by mortgage of property held for lives renewable. The c. q. trusts of that mortgage filed a bill to raise the amount due upon it. The mortgagor having died, his interest vested in his heir-at-law, an infant. The Master, in the foreclosure suit, directed a renewal to be obtained. It was arranged that the renewal should be made to R., in trust for the parties interested. A draft renewal was accordingly prepared, containing the usual lessee's covenants, and a recital that it was made to R., merely in pursuance of the Master's report, and in trust for the parties. This was amended by R.'s solicitor inserting a proviso that nothing therein should affect the real or personal estate of R. The evidence showing that both parties believed and intended that the proviso should exonerate R. from personal liability—Held, that C. was entitled to restrain an action brought against him upon the covenant in the lease for payment of rent.—Reade v. Armstrong, 7 I. C. R. 266. (C.)—[Affirmed: ibid, 375; 3 I. Jur. N. S. 305. (C.A.)]

6. A., being entitled for life, with remainder to her children as she should appoint, to the interest in a chattel lease, at a rent of £63, the legal estate being outstanding in a trustee for her, underleased to B., reserving a rent of £73. 10s., and executed a contemporaneous bond, reciting that A. and her trustee had a power to dispose of the interest in the lease; had entered into an agreement to sell and convey to B. all her interest, for a sum which had been paid; that A. was unable until one of her children should attain age, to make out title; that it had been agreed between A. and B., that A. should execute the under-lease, and that A. within three months after the first of her children attained age, should make out to B. a good title; and that in the meantime, and until such title was made out, A. should accept the rent of £63 in discharge of the rent of £73. 10s. The condition of the bond was, that A. should within three months after the first of her children should attain age, make out a good title to B. A. did not make out a good title, and the lease having been afterwards evicted for non-payment of the rent, A., brought an action for the rent reserved by the under-lease against B.'s assignee. The Court granted an injunction to restrain A. from proceeding in the action.—Murphy v. Stratton, 13 I. C. R. 423. (R.)

XLVI. 12. f. When Money will be ordered into Court on granting an Injunction.

1. An executor, who has obtained probate, will not be restrained, at the instance of the next-of-kin, from suing for and collecting the debts due to the deceased, though the will may have been impugned in the Ecclesiastical Court in a suit to recal probate. He will, however, be ordered to bring in the money recovered, on security for costs being given by the next-of-kin (a pauper).—Mullen v. Horner, Hay. & J. 398. (E.E.)

2. When a party desires to restrain proceedings at law upon a judgment after an execution has been issued, the amount marked on the writ, and the costs at law must generally be lodged in Court, or satisfactorily secured.—Rogan v. Weir, S. & Sc. 677. (R.)

3. A., in consideration of being permitted to become an intestate's administrator, agreed to deposit the share of C., a minor, one of the next-of-kin, in the hands of a trustee for him. A. deposited £180 with B. in trust for C., subject to the final settlement of the administration account. C.'s share was afterwards ascertained to be £156. A., proceeded at law to recover the £180 from B., and refused a tender of the difference between £180 and £156. The Court upon a bill filed by C. against A. and B., and before appearance by A., gave B. liberty to lodge the £180 in Court to the credit of the cause; and, upon his so doing restrained A. from proceeding further in his action.—Fleming v. F., 2 Jon. 810. (E.E.)

4. An assignee of a legatee filed a bill against the administrator, pending a suit to establish an alleged will for the preservation of the assets; a receiver, and an account of the personal estate, to compel the administrator to bring in the assets received by him, and to restrain him from further receiving them; and praying that the rights of the ptf. under the will might be ascertained. Held, on demurrer, that the relief must be limited to the preservation of the assets, to which an account was also incidental; that the ptf. was not entitled to a declaration of the rights under the will, or to have the assets administered; and that the demurrer having embraced as well the former relief as the latter, was bad, as covering too much.—Tom v. Deane, 8 I. E. R. 39. (R.)

5. In 1840 the petitioner contracted to purchase a leasehold interest from the respondent; went into possession, and paid a part of the purchase-money. The contract was not completed, because a recognizance was outstanding, which was to be vacated at the death of a lunatic. He died in 1850, when the petitioner at the respondent's instance, gave a promissory note for the balance of the purchase-money. A sum was found due on foot of the recognizance, for which judgment was entered. The lands were in the meantime evicted for non-payment of rent, but the time for redemption had not expired.

The Court refused an injunction against proceeding on the promissory note, except upon the terms of lodging the amount of it in Court.—Carter v. Uniacke, 4 I. C. R. 80. (R.)

XLVI. 12. g. In cases of Fraud: on grounds of Public Policy.

6. The owner of an embarrassed estate executed a bond and warrant of attorney, to confess judgment thereon, to his sister, with the intention of having judgment for a large sum entered in her name, and proceedings taken so as to secure to himself a portion of the rents of his estate, and protect them from creditors, who were proceeding to get into possession. Afterwards a judgment was entered by the attorney of the obligor, who retained the bond in his possession. No further proceedings were taken on the judgment, since the creditors succeeded in extending the portion of the property sought to be protected from their demands. The judgment was assigned. The assignee proceeded at law against the conuzor. An injunction for want of an answer was obtained. On a motion, after answer, to continue the injunction.—Held, that though the attempt had proved ineffectual, the transaction was a fraudulent contrivance to delay creditors, such as to prevent the Court from interfering; and any further injunction was refused.—Bateman v. Ramsay, S. & Sc. 459. (R.)

7. A person who, without consideration, confesses a judgment for the purpose of thereby withdrawing his property from the demands of his creditor, ex. gr., the creditors of a joint-stock company in which he was a shareholder, has no equity for an injunction to restrain the conuzee proceeding to levy the amount of the judgment, although it never was used for the purpose for which it was confessed.—M'Curdy v. Martin, 5 I. E. R. 515. (E.E.)

8. Injunction against proceedings on a judgment granted, after premitting the opportunity of pleading at law, when the neglect to do so was accounted for by the creditor's solicitor having said that he would proceed no further if the lands were not subject to the judgment.

Semble—It is good cause against the appointment of a receiver under the Judgment Acts, that the party against whom the judgment was obtained was only a trustee of the lands.—O'Neill v. Browne, 9 I. E. R. 131. (C.)

9. By an arrangement for winding up the affairs of a banking company, which had stopped payment, sums were subscribed by some shareholders, and the assets of the bank assigned to T., a shareholder, and to S., who undertook its liabilities. It was part of the arrangement that S., claiming to be a creditor of the bank, should obtain a judgment against the public officer, to be used only to compel non-subscribing shareholders to contribute. S. became bankrupt, and his assignee issued a sci. fa. against T. On a bill by T. to restrain him—Held, that the judgment being a contrivance to compel the non-subscribing shareholders indirectly to pay what they, if sued directly, might possibly have equities to resist, the Court would not relieve one party to this contrivance against the other, though suing in breach of faith.

Documents evidencing the arrangement contained an express saving of all of S.'s rights. Semble—The arrangement would, notwithstanding, prevent S. asserting his legal rights against T., if the equity depended on the construction only.—Taylor v. Campbell, 10 I. E. R. 249. (C.)

XLVI. 12. h. In Cases of Interpleader.

1. Upon a motion for an injunction in an interpleader suit, the ptf. need not, by affidavit, verify all the statements in the bill; but one, denying collusion between him and the deft., will suffice.—Meredyth v. Molloy, Fl. & K. 195. (R.)

2. A., having received from his father, a few days before his death, money to lodge in his (A.'s) name with bankers, lodged it in the name of his sister B., and received a deposit-receipt, which he retained. After the death of his father, A. took out administration to him, and, as administrator, claimed the money from the bankers. B. and her husband also claimed the money. The bankers, refusing to pay either, each commenced a suit. The bankers filed an injunction and interpleader bill; and the Court continued the injunction until the hearing, there being a question for the hearing of the cause.—Cochrane v. O'Brien, 6 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

3. Trustees of policies of assurance filed a bill to ascertain the rights of different claimants of the proceeds of the policies. The Insurance Companies submitted to bring in the amounts due upon the policies which, on account of the conflicting claims, had not been paid. Held, that they were bound also to pay interest on the sums assured, but they were allowed their costs.

Some of the respondents had filed a bill in England, for the purpose of enforcing their claims on the fund.

On their application, they were directed to stay proceedings in England, and to have their costs in that suit in the same priority with their demand in this suit.—French v. Royal Exchange Assurance Company, 6 I. C. R. 523. (C.)

4. When an interpleader issue has been tried, and the chattels seized have been found to be the property of the execution debtor, the Court will not interfere to restrain the sheriff from selling them.

The sheriff ought not to be made a party to a cause petition for such an injunction.—Jackson v. Rossiter, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 411. (R.)

5. Trustees of policies of assurance filed a bill to ascertain the rights of the different claimants to the proceeds of the policies.

The Assurance Company had been unable to pay the amount due, on account of those conflicting claims, and submitted to bring their accounts in. Held, varying the order supra, vol. 6, p. 523, that they ought not to be charged with interest.—French v. Royal Exchange Assurance Co., 7 I. C. R. 523. (C.A.)

6. L., agent at Belfast for the owner of a ship chartered to that port, had acquired equitable charges on the freight and cargo, and was also agent for the charterers and consignees. On the vessel's arrival he took possession of her, and in his name the cargo was landed and stored with the Harbour Commissioners, wharfingers. Afterwards, a company claiming to be assignees of the ship under a bill of sale, served on them a notice purporting to be under the 25 & 26 Vic., c. 63, s. 68, cautioning them against allowing the cargo to be removed from their wharves or warehouses until the company's lien for freight was discharged. The Commissioners thereupon refused to deliver any portion of the cargo to L., who brought against them an action of trover and detinue to recover it. The Commissioners applied for an order of interpleader; but no rule was made on the motion to show cause against their summoning order being made absolute. The Commissioners then commenced this interpleader suit, and moved for an injunction to stay the proceedings at law. Held, that notwithstanding the provisions of the above-mentioned Act, the case properly formed the subject of an interpleader suit; and that this Court's jurisdiction was not affected by the decision of the Court of Law.—Belfast Harbour Commrs. v. Lawther, 16 I. C. R. 34. (C.)—[See S. C. 17 I. C. R. 54. (C.)]

XLVI. 13. Against Darkening Ancient Lights.

7. Upon premises situated on one side of a street, their owner erected buildings which, when raised to the eave-stone, obstructed an ancient light in an opposite house. That obstruction prevented the owner of this last-mentioned house from using his ancient light in examining colours, &c., for which purpose that light was essential. The Court granted a mandatory injunction to take down the buildings. Held, that the Court itself would, without the intervention of a jury, assess the damages.—Carson v. McKenzie, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 337. (C.)

XLVI. 14. Against Breach of Contract, Covenant, or Trust.

8. A lessee covenanted not to burn any part of the demised premises, under a penalty of £10 an acre, to be recovered as an additional rent, for every acre so burned. Held, that he was not entitled to burn on paying the specified sum as liquidated damages; and that the jurisdiction of a Court of Equity to restrain the lessee from burning was not ousted by the imposition of this penalty.—French v. Macale, 4 I. E. R. 568; 2 Dr. & War. 269; 1 Con. & L. 459. (C.)

1. Semble—That when there is a penalty imposed upon the doing an act which the party has covenanted not to do, relief will not be granted in equity against an action brought for the penalty on a breach of the covenant, if the party persists in continuing the breach. —Gerrard v. O'Reilly, 2 Con. & L. 165; 3 Dr. & War. 414. (C.)

2. A Railway Company, having agreed to purchase lands, entered, and carried on their works without the leave of the vendor, or having paid or lodged the money in bank. The Court granted an injunction till the money should be paid. —Anderson v. N. & W. Ry. Co. 1 I. Jur. 11. (E.E.)

3. The Corporation of D. were empowered by statutes to levy rates to supply water to the city of D., and to raise a sum by mortgage or debentures on the rates; and they were directed to retain an annual sum and the surplus of the rates, after what should be duly expended for the purposes of the Acts, to create a sinking fund to pay off the sum borrowed. The money directed to be reserved as a sinking fund was not retained; and the Corporation were ordered, by a decree of this Court, to pay off a sum which had been borrowed, which they did, by issuing new debentures on the surplus rates; the M. R. having expressed an opinion, and it having been declared in the decree, that they were the property of the Corporation. They also applied some of the rates in payment of the salaries of retired officers, and interest on a sum borrowed, by which the interest on some of the debentures was decreased. Twelve years after the decree an information was filed to restrain the Corporation from applying the rates in payment of the interest on the debentures, or the salaries of retired officers, or the further sum borrowed. But the Court refused, with costs, an injunction before answer, though expressing a doubt whether there had not been a misapplication of the rates, and though the information charged that there would be no surplus if the purposes of the Acts were properly effected. —Attorney-General v. The Corporation of Dublin, 12 I. E. R. 465. (R.)

4. Mines were demised by the ptfs. for a term determinable upon three months' notice. The lease provided that at the end of the term the lessors might purchase all machinery to be erected in the mines, "they having given six months previous notice of their intention," at a fair valuation to be set thereon by two indifferent persons, one of whom should be named by the lessors and the other by the lessees; and if any difference arose between them, then by an umpire to be named by such referees. There was a covenant that if the above notice of surrender was given by the lessees, the machinery should not be removed for six months after notice given, to enable the lessors to find a purchaser for the machinery at a valuation to be fixed as aforesaid. On the 2nd April 1856, the assignees of the lessees served notice of their intention to surrender; and in Sept. 1856 were removing the machinery from the mines. On the 8th Sept. a petition was filed praying an injunction. Held, that the injunction should not be continued beyond the end of six months' from the 2nd April 1856, as the Court had no means of enforcing the sale of the machinery to the lessors, as provided by the lease. —Hamilton v. Dunsford, 6 I. C. R. 412. (C.)

5. A, seized in fee of lands situated on both sides of a road, demised those on the west side to J., his executors, &c., for a term of years; and covenanted thereby that he would not convert or permit to be converted any portion of the ground opposite the demised premises, or any part thereof, or any dwelling-house or building to be erected thereon, for any purpose whatsoever, save and except and other than as a private dwelling-house, to be erected and built in the manner in the lease provided.

A. subsequently demised the opposite lands to C., who forthwith built a dwelling-house thereon, and proceeded to build at one side thereof stables fronting J.'s premises. C. had notice of the covenants in the lease of J., who applied for an injunction to prevent the erection of the stables. Held, that the word "dwelling-house" included stables; and that the application must be refused, as the building of stables had not been provided against by the words of the instrument. —Smith v. Crowe, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 105. (C.)

6. Grant to one and his heirs, of lands in f.f., "excepting the use and benefit of all mines and minerals that might be found in and upon the granted premises." Fire-clay was found to exist on and under them. On petition for an injunction to restrain the lessees from taking the clay, the injunction was granted so far as regarded the clay taken from a depth by mining apparatus, because it was excepted by the reservation; but the injunction was refused with regard to the surface clay, which was not excepted by the reservation. Held, that a map, made in 1609 by virtue of a commission issued by the Crown under the great seal of Ireland in the 7 Jac. 1, and which map was preserved in the State Paper-office in London, was properly receivable in evidence. —Staples v. Harpur, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 121. (C.)

XLVI. 15. Against Infringing Copyright and Patent.

7. This Court will interfere by injunction to protect the copyright of the assignee of the author (a reporter of legal decisions), though, at the time of the alleged piracy, there was not any written assignment, and the assignee had a merely equitable title, and though some of the cases were reported, merely ex relatione. The Court will disregard a permission, given by the author, to infringe the copyright, but given after he had parted with his equitable title for value, and it had been stated on the title-page of his work, that it was printed for the equitable assignee of the copyright. —Hodges v. Welsh, 2 I. E. R. 266. (R.)

1. The 26 G. 3, c. 57, s. 1, authorised the Crown to grant letters patent for establishing and keeping a theatre in Dublin. Sec. 2 enacted that no person should, for hire, act any play in any theatre in Dublin, excepting such theatre as should be so established by letters patent, under the penalty of forfeiting £300 for every such offence, to be sued for by the common informer.

Under this statute the Crown granted to H. letters patent authorising him to keep, during a certain time, a theatre in Dublin. His Majesty prohibited and forbid all persons whomsoever to keep open, during that time, any theatre in Dublin, and therein to act any play, unless they should be thereunto authorised by his Majesty. Held, that the patentee could not maintain a bill for an injunction to restrain unauthorised persons from acting plays in a theatre in Dublin for the keeping of which a patent had not been granted. Such a bill can be sustained only upon the ground of interest in the ptf. The injunction cannot be supported unless the ptf. can maintain an action in the case.—Calcraft v. West, 8 I. E. R. 74; 2 Jon. & L. 123. (C.)

2. In granting injunctions to prevent the infringement of trade-marks, the Court exercises its jurisdiction in aid of Courts of Law, i. e., where an action could be maintained in a Court of Law. It does not exercise an independent jurisdiction.—Foot v. Lea, 13 I. E. R. 464. (R.)

3. The Court will not, in the first instance, interfere by injunction to restrain the infringement of a patent, unless there has been long and uninterrupted enjoyment under it; but will direct an action to be brought to try the legal right.

Delay in filing the bill is a ground for refusing the injunction.

A patent was obtained in 1846; the alleged infringement took place in 1847; the bill was not filed for more than two years afterwards. The injunction was refused.—Baxter v. Combe, 1 I. C. R. 284; 3 I. Jur. 27. (R.)—[See s. c., 3 I. C. R. 245. (R.)—Affd. on appeal, 3 I. C. R. 251. (C.)]

4. At common law a painter has, before publication of his picture, a right to prevent any person copying it.

The owner of the picture, who has purchased it from the painter, has the same right. But, after publication, that right is lost.

The sale of a picture is not a publication of it. The publication of a wood engraving in a magazine, with an article describing the picture, is not a publication of the picture itself.

The exhibition of a picture at a public exhibition or gallery, where copying it would not be permitted, is not a publication of the picture; nor is the exhibition of the picture, for the purpose of obtaining subscribers to an engraving of it.

A., the painter of a picture, sold it to B., who, for valuable consideration, agreed to sell to C. the sole right to make and publish an engraving of the picture, and to exhibit it, for short periods, at any of the principal towns in Great Britain or Ireland, in order that C. might obtain subscribers, and otherwise derive a full advantage in the publication and sale of the engraving. The picture having been exhibited for that purpose, the respondent arranged in his own studio a group which bore an exact resemblance to the picture, and took, for the stereoscope, photographs (coloured so as to correspond with the picture), which he published and sold. Held, that C. was entitled to an injunction to restrain the publication and sale of the photographs, if the picture had not previously been published.

It appearing that the picture had been previously exhibited at the Royal Academy, London, and at the Manchester Exhibition of 1857, the Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether there were rules, resolution, bye-laws, or regulations to prevent the taking of copies, sketches or drawings of paintings or works of art sent there for exhibition.—Turner v. Robinson, 10 I. C. R. 121. (R.)—[See, on appeal, 10 I. C. R. 510; s. c., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 385. (C.A.)]

5. At common law, the owner of a picture has a right, before publication, to prevent any copy being made of it.

When a picture is, with the consent of the owner, exhibited for the purpose of taking subscribers for an engraving to be made from the picture, and with the intimation that it must not be copied, the Court of Chancery may restrain the publication of copies of such picture made by a person whose knowledge of the picture is acquired from such exhibition.—Turner v. Robinson, 10 I. C. R. 510; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 385. (C.A.)

XLVI. 16. Against setting up Legal Bars and Defences.

6. The bill charged that the ptf.'s ancestor's alleged will was a forgery, and prayed an issue whether it was his will or not, and that the defts. might be restrained from setting up temporary bars. The cause was heard upon sequestration against the devisees named in the will. Held, that the Court could only decree the bill to be retained, with liberty to the ptf. to bring an ejectment; and that the defts. be restrained from setting up temporary bars.—Nelson v. Averell, 2 Jon. 782. (E.E.)

7. After a decree to account in an administration suit, the Court will restrain a creditor from proceeding in a suit instituted by himself only, when the executor has, in his answer or in some other way, given an account of the assets, and brought the amount into Court.—Hoops v. Earl of Kingston, Fl. & K. 246. (R.)

8. When a ptf. by bill states a legal title, and shows the existence of outstanding terms, it is almost of course that the Court will remove temporary bars to enable the ptf. to bring an ejectment.—Maturin v. Wilson, 1 I. Jur. 281. (C.)

into pasture land, and that the ground was improved by the waste.—White v. Walsh, 1 Jones. 626, n. (E.E.)

1. A lessee for lives renewable for ever will be restrained from committing waste by cutting turf, though it appears that the bog cut out was being converted into pasture land, and that the ground had been improved by the waste.—Anon., 1 Jones, 627, n. (E.E.)

2. A lessee for lives renewable for ever will be restrained from committing waste on the demised premises by cutting turf, though it appears that the tenants had immemorially cut turf.—Lord Waterpark v. Austen, 1 Jones, 627, n. (E.E.)

3. The lands of A., whereon there was an open limestone quarry at the date of the demise, were demised for three lives renewable for ever, reserving to the lessor and his heirs all royalties. On motion—Held, that the lessee should be restrained by injunction from raising the limestone for sale.—Purcell v. Nash, 2 Jones, 116. (E.E.)

4. The Court will not, upon a receiver's application, grant an injunction to restrain a contractor under the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 116, s. 162, from quarrying, on the lands over which the applicant is receiver, stones for the public works.—O'Kelly v. Gregg, Jon. & Car. 76. (E.E.)

5. A landlord filed against his immediate tenant a bill to restrain him from cutting turf for sale on a valuable bog appurtenant to the demised lands. The tenant's answer stated, that he had not ever by himself been in actual occupation of any part of the lands; that he had not by himself or any agent committed the waste charged; and that, if his sub-tenants had cut turf for sale or otherwise, he was unable to restrain them from so doing, as the practice had existed before the lands came into his possession. It did not appear whether these were tenants merely from year to year, or had any greater interest. Held, that the injunction could not issue, as the tenants were not before the Court.—Lord Norbury v. Alleyne, 1 Dr. & Wal. 337. (C.)

6. A., holding meadows and pasture lands under a lease for lives renewable for ever, demised part of the premises to B. for a similar term, with a covenant to keep and deliver up the premises in tenantable order, &c., and with a power of surrender at the end of every three years. B. assigned his interest. His assignees being about to convert the premises into a public cemetery, A.'s representatives obtained an injunction to prevent them.

Seemle—At common law, the proposed alteration would amount to waste.—Hunt v. Browne, 8. & Sc. 179. (R.)

7. The Court will not entertain a motion for an injunction, in the nature of a writ of estrepement, to restrain waste, unless the title is clear.—Lowe v. Lucey, 1 I. E. R. 98. (R.)

8. Ptf. filed a bill for an injunction to restrain deft., their tenant, from breaking up ancient meadows and pasture lands (waiving penalties), and praying compensation for the waste already done. It appeared that deft., when he proposed to take the lands, apprised ptf. that he wanted them for a tillage farm; and that the draft lease, prepared by ptf.'s attorney, when read in the presence of ptf. and deft., contained a clause restraining tillage within certain limits; that deft. refused to agree thereto; and that ptf. consented that it should be struck out. Accordingly, the lease did not contain any clause respecting tillage. Held, that the injunction should be refused; ptf. to proceed at law as they might be advised.—Shew v. Weir, 1 I. E. R. 218. (R.)

9. A lessee covenanted not to sub-let without consent "in writing, or that he should forfeit and pay the additional rent of £50 per annum;" and also not to cut more turf than should be sufficient for the consumption of himself, his executors, &c., on the demised premises, without the consent in writing, "or that he, &c., should forfeit and pay the additional rent of £10 for every acre which should be cut or made into turf." The lessee's representative sub-let without consent. Ever since then the additional rent of £50 had been regularly paid and received. The lessor's representatives lately filed a bill against the lessee's representatives and their under-tenants for an account, and for an injunction, in the nature of a writ of estrepement; and now moved that deft. be restrained from selling turf off the lands; from burning turf for manure; from cutting the reclaimed meadow-land into turf; and from cutting more turf than the original lease permitted, namely, only a sufficiency for the use of one family. Held, that an injunction should be granted until the hearing, to restrain the selling of turf, and burning turf for manure; and also the cutting the reclaimed meadow-land; but refused to restrain the under-tenants from cutting sufficient turf for their own consumption on the premises. The Court observed that there would be a serious question at the hearing.—Maxwell v. Mitchell, 1 I. E. R. 359. (R.)

10. When the relation of landlord and tenant exists between parties, the Court sometimes interferes by injunction to restrain waste, though the locus in quo, being the landlord's property, is not any part of the demised premises. Unless that relation exists, the Court will not interfere. Therefore, when waste on the demised premises was commenced during the tenancy, and continued, after the tenancy had determined, by persons claiming under the late tenant, the Court, after the determination of the tenancy, refused to grant an injunction.—Wrixon v. Condran, 1 I. E. R. 380. (R.)

11. A bill, by the person next in remainder, charged that the tenant for life, who was punishable of waste, and who had power to make leases not punishable of waste, had demised a part of the lands to a third person, and that such person, in collusion with the tenant for life, was committing waste, by turning up, tilling, and burning the land. The deft. admitted the turning up, &c., but stated it was land which the tenant for life had reclaimed and laid down in grass thirty years before. The Court refused to grant a motion for an injunction.

Semble—That such a pasture is not ancient meadow.—Davies v. D., 2 I. E. R. 414. (E.E.)

1. The Court will, upon motion by the receiver, without a bill being filed, grant an injunction to restrain tenants under the Court from committing waste.—Cronin v. M^cCarthy, Fl. & K. 49. (R.)

2. The Court may interfere at the suit of the Crown to restrain a bishop from wasting the property of the see, or at the suit of the patron of a living, to restrain the incumbent from wasting the glebe-house or lands.

Semble—As to the church and church-yard, the Ecclesiastical Court having, ratione loci, the proper jurisdiction, this Court has never interfered to restrain the acts of the incumbent with respect to them.—Earl of Fitzwilliam v. Moore, 3 I. E. R. 615; Fl. & K. 287. (R.)

3. A receiver was appointed over premises held under a lease containing a covenant declaring the lease void in events therein specified. A tenant held under a sub-lease containing a like covenant. Upon motion by the receiver—Held, that the tenant under the sub-lease should be restrained from doing an act whereby his lessor's title might be evicted.—Mason v. M., Fl. & K. 429. (R.)

4. A lessee covenanted not to burn any part of the demised premises, under a penalty of £10 per acre, to be recovered as the reserved rent, for every acre so burned. Held, that he was not entitled to burn upon payment of the penalty; and that the jurisdiction of equity to grant an injunction to restrain the lessee from burning, was not ousted by the imposition of the penalty.

The question in such cases is, whether the intention of the parties is, that the deft. should be at liberty to do the act upon payment of the penalty, or that he should not do it under any circumstances; and the imposition of the penalty is merely a measure of the punishment to be inflicted for doing it. In the former case equity will not grant an injunction, but in the latter it will.—French v. Macale, 2 Dr. & War. 269; 1 Con. & L. 459; 4 I. E. R. 568. (C.)

5. Injunction to restrain waste issued without bill filed, in a lunacy matter, on application of the receiver.—In re Chinnerys, 6 I. E. R. 469; 1 Jon. & L. 90. (C.)

6. When irreparable waste has been committed, and is about being repeated, the Court will, without a positive affidavit of the facts, grant a conditional order for an injunction; and restrain the party in the meantime, if there be danger that the waste will be committed before such affidavit can be procured.—Beere v. Head, 7 I. E. R. 60. (R.)

7. An affidavit verifying bill for an injunction to restrain waste by breaking up ancient meadow, should state deponent's knowledge of the land for a considerable period (semble, twenty years); and that it had not been in tillage during that time.

Leave given to file affidavit to that effect.—Creagh v. Carmichael, 7 I. E. R. 334. (E.E.)

8. The Court will not grant an injunction to restrain waste against persons specifically who are not parties defts. to the bill; but they may be restrained as workmen or servants of the defts., if they fill that character.—Freeman v. Burke, 7 I. E. R. 282. (R.)

9. Lessees for lives renewable for ever, without any special circumstances, will be restrained from waste.

A demise of bog, eo nomine, along with other lands, does not authorise the lessee to cut turf for sale. Secus, when the bog has been demised alone, or has been always cut for sale.

Waste will be restrained in Ch., although the act done may lead to the improvement of the land, if it immediately occasions any damage to the inheritance.

In execution of an arrangement to pay incumbrances, A., owner in fee, conveyed the fee-simple to B., who re-demised for lives renewable for ever to A., at a rent equal to £6 per cent. on his purchase-money, to hold in the same manner as A. then held and enjoyed the same. The lease contained the common covenants, including one to deliver up the premises in repair, except casualties by fire. Held, that A. did not retain the rights of an owner in fee subject to the rent, but was restrainable from committing waste.—Coppinger v. Gubbins, 9 I. E. R. 304; 3 Jon. & L. 397. (C.)

10. A tenant for lives renewable for ever, having demised for years part of the lands upon which there was at the time an open quarry (which he was in the habit of working for sale), without any reservation or exception in the sub-lease—Held, the sub-tenant was not entitled to work the quarry for sale, and that his landlord had the right to enjoin him. There is no analogy between open quarries and mines.—Mansfield v. Crawford, 9 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

11. A possessory bill was filed to restrain the deft. from cutting turf for sale, on the allegation that he was tenant to the ptf. of lands adjoining the bog, with a limited permission to cut turf for use in the bog which ptf. claimed as his. On the affidavits showing that, the tenancy of the lands was admitted; but it appeared that the deft. and his predecessors had long claimed the disputed right over the bog, the ptf.'s title to which was vaguely stated. In 1807 an injunction had been obtained in a similar suit, restraining the tenant from cutting turf at all. Held, that an injunction could not be obtained in this suit; as, if the tenant was a mere trespasser, it was not sustainable to establish a disputed right, there being no triennial possession, and the allegation of a limited permission could not be strengthened by the order of 1807, which set up a different claim.

An order, on showing cause against an injunction obtained on a possessory bill, allowing the cause to stand over with liberty to amend the bill by putting in issue matter not stated in or exactly consistent with it, cannot be made, such a motion being analogous to the final hearing of an ordinary cause.

The rule as to using supplemental affidavits on such motions considered. — Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

1. To break up a rabbit-warren, unless it be a warren by charter or prescription, is not waste at Common Law, and the Court will not grant an injunction to prevent it.

Quære—If the warren be demised as such? — Lurting v. Conn, 1 I. C. R. 273; 3 I. Jur. 99. (R.)

2. When lands are under the receiver of the Court of Ch., this Court is unwilling to grant an injunction against waste, except the matter appears to call for an immediate remedy. When such is not the case, the application for an injunction should be made to the Court of Ch. — In re Brabazon, 4 I. Jur. 100. (I.E.C.)

3. A tenant held under the Court by lease, with the usual covenant to cultivate in a husbandlike manner and not to commit waste. On a motion by the receiver a conditional order had been granted for an injunction to restrain the tenant from sowing a large quantity of flax, and from breaking up grass land. On motion to show cause, there being contradictory affidavits as to advantage or disadvantage of the mode of tillage, the motion was directed to stand over, with liberty to the receiver to bring an action at law on the covenant, serving notice on the parties interested in the estate; the tenant in the meantime to have liberty to go on with his tillage at his own peril.

A covenant to farm in a husbandlike manner means, according to good husbandry in that part of the country; and though the Court has a right to interfere by injunction, it will not do so in a doubtful case. — Savage v. O'Connor, 7 I. Jur. 161. (R.)

4. Demise of a part of the lands of L., together with the bog in the possession of the lessee, situate in the bogs of L. and R. The lessee was in possession of part of the bog of R., in which he had cut turf for his own consumption, but not for sale. Held, that the lease did not confer a right to cut turf for sale on the bog of R. — Fowler v. Blakely, 13 I. C. R. 58. (R.)

5. Suits for injunctions to restrain waste, when no answer is filed, and the account sought is waived, should not be brought to a hearing by the petitioner, merely for the purpose of getting his costs of suit. — Harvey v. Ferguson, 15 I. C. R. 277. (C.)

6. Suits for injunctions to restrain waste should not be brought to a hearing when no account is sought, or the account is waived, if an injunction has been obtained, and the right to continue it is not disputed. If, however, the respondent's conduct forces the case to a hearing, the petitioner will, if successful, be entitled to his costs of suit.

Semble—In such suits, when no account is sought, the petitioner should call by notice upon the respondent to state whether he disputes the right to have the injunction continued. — Dunsany v. Dunne, 15 I. C. R. 278. (C.)

XLVI. 24. In Partnership Matters.

7. When a covenant is, not to do a particular act, and a penalty or forfeiture is annexed to the doing of that act, that does not authorise the covenantor to commit the act. Before the act is done, the Court will restrain him by injunction from doing it. If the act has been done, the penalty must be paid, and the amount is unimportant. — French v. Macale, 4 I. E. R. 573; 2 Dr. & War. 269; 1 Con. & L. 459. (C.)

8. A., a shareholder in the A. and C. Bank of Ireland, sold, in 1837, his shares to the Company, who paid him therefor, and entered the sale in their books. The printed deed of transfer required by law was filled up and executed by the ptf., but not by any of the trustees of the bank, and no memorial of transfer was executed. In the register filed in Nov. 1837, A.'s name appeared as having ceased to be a partner, and his name was omitted in the annual register of shareholders filed in the years 1838, '39, '40, '41, and '42. In 1843 A.'s name was replaced on the register of shareholders, in pursuance, as alleged by A., of a fraudulent arrangement between the bank and B., a creditor on foot of debentures issued subsequent to 1837, in order to make A. liable. B. having obtained judgment against the bank on plea of confession, in an action on the debentures, sued out a sci. fa. thereon against A. as a shareholder. The Court granted an injunction until answer, to restrain B. from proceeding at law against A. upon the sci. fa., and to restrain the bank from placing A.'s name as a shareholder on the next ensuing annual register. — Taylor v. Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 480. (R.)

9. The managing partner of a concern is not entitled to an allowance for carrying on the partnership trade, when there is neither contract between the partners nor a custom of the trade to authorise such allowance.

A partner, who has received his share of the assets, has no equity to insist that the share belonging to his co-partner shall be impounded to answer outstanding demands against the firm, unless he brings his own share into Court for the same purpose.

The bill prayed an account of the partnership property, an injunction to restrain the deft., the managing partner, from interfering with the assets, and a receiver. The Court, upon motion, granted the injunction, and ordered a receiver to be appointed. This order was varied, so far as it restrained the deft. from collecting the assets, and as to the appointment of a receiver; upon the deft. entering into security by recognizance conditioned to abide the order of the Court touching the partnership property. The deft. having called in and converted into money a large portion of the partnership assets, the ptf. moved that the deft. should lodge the amount in bank. This motion was resisted by the deft., and was refused with costs. A similar motion having been made, founded upon the discharge of the deft., filed under the decree to account, the deft. made an affidavit to resist the motion, giving an uncandid statement of the assets. It afterwards appeared by the report, that, when the first motion was made, the deft. had in his hands money, the produce of the partnership assets, exceeding the amount of the ptf.'s share. The deft. was decreed to pay interest upon the amount of the ptf.'s share from the time he had it in his possession, until paid, at the rate of £5 per cent.—Hutcheson v. Smith, 5 I. E. R. 117. (E.E.)

1. A., B., C., and D. were owners of the ship E., and entered into a contract with R., that the owners of the E., so long as she or any vessel supplying her place, remained on the W. line, should pay him one-sixth of the net profits; and that R. should support the interest of the E. and her owners, and any vessel supplying her place on the W. line, and not connect himself with any opposing party.

The agreement provided for the withdrawal of the E., and concluded:—"In which case the interest of the station reverts to R.; and we pledge ourselves not to directly or indirectly connect ourselves with any party injuring his interest in the said line." The agreement was signed by A., B., C., D., and R.

D. retired from the firm, and I., G., and H. became members of it. The M. was substituted for the E.; and K. became a member of the firm, against the wish of R. Held, that that agreement could not be specifically enforced against R. by the new firm; and that R. could not be restrained, at suit of the new firm, from working an opposition on the line to the M.—Grantham v. Redmond, 8 I. C. R. 449. (C.)

XLVI. 25. Against Assuming, or Using the same Trade-marks, Names, &c.

2. In granting injunctions to prevent the infringement of trade-marks, the Court exercises its jurisdiction in aid of Courts of Law, i. e., when an action could be maintained in a Court of Law. It does not exercise an independent jurisdiction.—Foot v. Lea, 13 I. E. R. 484. (R.)

3. A firm, having adopted the letters "L.L." to denote a peculiar quality of whiskey sold by them, acquired an exclusive right to the use of those letters as a trade-mark, though they were always preceded by the name of the firm upon the labels issued by it.

In order to prove acquiescence by a firm in the piratical use of their trade-mark, knowledge of such use must be proved. That is not accomplished by proof of the publication of advertisements which would have been an invasion of the rights of the firm, if these advertisements have been issued not steadily or uniformly, but interchangeably with other advertisements in some respects similar, but not infringing the firm's rights.—Kinahan v. Bolton, 15 I. C. R. 75. (C.)

4. A partnership deed witnessed that the lands, mills, and machinery, which theretofore had belonged exclusively to M. (one partner) should remain his sole property, subject during the partnership to be used for all partnership purposes; and provided that the retiring partners should, at the end of the partnership, be paid, by M.'s promissory notes, the value of their respective shares in the partnership stock and capital. No mention was made therein of the good will, name of the firm, or trade-marks. After eight years the partnership was dissolved. The outgoing partners insisted that M. should pay them for the name, good will, and trade-marks, at a valuation. Held, that M. was entitled to the name, &c., upon paying the outgoing partners pursuant to the deed; but without their being separately valued.

The petition, praying an injunction to restrain M. from using the name, &c., was dismissed with costs.—Dickson v. M'Master & Co., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 202. (C.)—[Affirmed by the Court of C. A. with this variation, that in taking the account, the good will should be valued separately.]

XLVI. 26. In other Cases.

5. A vicar, having granted an annuity charged on his benefice, and being entitled to compensation for tithe arrears, under the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 100, may be restrained from receiving them until answer put in to a bill filed against him for raising the arrears of the annuity.—Stannus v. Robinson, H. & J. 622. (E.E.)

6. A mill-stream broke through the bank meaning of deft.'s ground. The stream was escaping into a new channel, and irreparable injury was apprehended. Before appearance, the Court made a conditional order to restrain deft. from preventing ptf., &c., from repairing the bank for the purpose of bringing the stream back into its proper channel; and also to restrain deft. from preventing ptf. from entering on that part of the lands in deft.'s possession which formed part of the bank of the stream, to repair the breach; and also to restrain deft. from cutting, &c., any channel for the water of the said stream on the lands in his possession, whereby the water-course might be diverted from ptf.'s mill, unless cause were shown within six days.—M'Swiney v. Haynes, 1 I. E. R. 322. (R.)

7. The solicitor of a deceased client, who acted as such for that client's executrix and devisee, was, at their instance, restrained from acting as solicitor for a creditor in whose name he had filed a bill to raise the amount of a judgment debt out of the estate of the deceased, though that creditor had been a client of the solicitor before he became concerned for the deceased; and though the solicitor contended that he had been discharged; and insisted that it was not in his power to communicate anything injurious to the estate, since all the material facts and documents had been, as the solicitor alleged, put in issue by a bill previously filed by another creditor of the deceased.—Biggs v. Head, 8. & Sc., 335. (R.)

1. Before decree a receiver was appointed over the assets of a company formed under the 6 G. 4, c. 42, which had stopped payment. The Court refused to restrain a creditor from suing out execution under sec. 18 of that Act against the shareholders, upon a judgment obtained against the company.—Acheson v. Hodges, Fl. & K. 371. (R.)

2. The Court deals with its tenants as tenants at will. When a tenant has been let into possession under the Court for seven years, or pending the cause, the Court will not grant an injunction to dispossess him, without an affidavit respecting the state of his crops.—O'Connell v. O'Callaghan, 3 I. E. R. 199; Long. & T. 157. (E.E.)

3. An injunction was granted to restrain an archbishop from collating, by way of lapse, to a deanery, pending a suit in the Consistorial Court, respecting the presentment by the Chapter.

The Ecclesiastical Court is the proper jurisdiction to apply to in case of injury done by the incumbent to the church; and as it supplies a complete remedy, this Court will not interfere.—Daly v. Archbp. of Dublin, Fl. & K. 263. (R.)

4. An application for an injunction to put out of possession a tenant under the Court, the cause having suddenly terminated, must be on notice to the tenant, who is in the nature of a tenant at will, and is entitled to emblements.—O'Connor v. O'Callaghan, 3 I. E. R. 199. (E.E.)

5. Injunction granted, upon the application of the receiver, to restrain one tenant of the estate from quarrying upon a private road, part of the premises, which was common to all the tenants.—Dorman v. D., 3 I. E. R. 385. (E.E.)

6. Application by a parishioner for an injunction to restrain a rector from encroaching upon the church-yard and parish burial-ground, without any faculty or license from the ordinary for that purpose, by building a schoolhouse thereon, refused; it appearing, that although no faculty had been formally obtained, the bishop was, in fact, a consenting party; and that from the condition of the proposed site, no irreparable injury could be done; the Ecclesiastical Court having the proper authority, ratione loci, to have the building removed, if unlawfully erected, and to punish the person guilty of erecting it.—Earl of Fitzwilliam v. Moore, 3 I. E. R. 615; Fl. & K. 287. (R.)

7. The Court would restrain the further prosecution of a suit instituted in the name of an infant, if not likely to be for his benefit. If the next friend be the mere nominee and creature of his solicitor, or have interests adverse to the infants, the Court will remove him and appoint a new one; or if the next friend's solicitor be so identified with adverse interests as to render it impossible or doubtful that he could consistently prosecute the infant's suit with zeal; the Court will restrain him from acting, and require a new solicitor to be appointed.—Morrison v. Bell, 5 I. E. R. 354. (R.)

8. A., having become tenant under the Court in trust for B., afterwards denied the trust. Motion, for an injunction to put the c. q. t. into possession, refused, with costs.—Conyers v. Crosbie, 8 I. E. R. 519. (E.E.)

9. When an injunction or receiver is prayed by the bill, the defts. who are interested in resisting the motion are entitled to the costs of two briefs on the filing of their answers; but the ptf. is not entitled to the costs of briefs unless he has moved or served a bona fide notice of motion, or unless some act had been done by the deft., after the briefs were bona fide made, which rendered the motion of service of notice unnecessary.

The bill prayed an injunction. Upon the coming in of the answer the solicitor prepared two briefs for the injunction motion. The suit was compromised before the briefs were given out or notice of motion served. Held, that the ptf. was not entitled to the costs of the briefs against the deft.—Broadbent v. Hughes, 10 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

10. An injunction was refused on a bill, as a bill of relief, because it stated facts amounting to a defence at law, or a bill of discovery, because it prayed relief which ptf. could not waive.—Anderson v. Dowling, 11 I. E. R. 590. (R.)

11. The costs of an injunction motion in a possessory suit were given to the ptfs., the cause being disallowed. The rule, that the ptf. in such suits is not entitled to costs, applying only to the costs of the suit.—Coppinger v. Carnegie, 1 I. Jur. 27. (R.)

12. When a person put into possession of a gate-house as caretaker, refused to give up possession, the Court, for the purpose of trying if such a bill could be sustained, granted a conditional order for an injunction.—Moore v. Marsh, 1 I. Jur. 42. (R.)

13. A possessory bill was filed to restrain the deft. from cutting turf for sale. The bill alleged that he was the ptf.'s tenant of lands adjoining the bog, which the ptf. claimed as his. The affidavits showing cause admitted the tenancy; but proved that the deft. and his predecessors had long claimed the disputed right over the bog; the ptf.'s title to which was vaguely stated. In a former like suit, there had been obtained an injunction restraining the tenant from cutting turf at all. Held, that the injunction could not be granted, since, if the tenant was a mere trespasser, this suit was not sustainable to establish a disputed right; there being no triennial possession, and because the allegation of a limited permission could not be strengthened by the order in the former suit, which set up a different claim.—Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

1. Leases were made by the Court for a term of seven years, pending a suit. Before its termination the receiver was discharged, and a large annuitant put into possession. The Court refused to break the leases, or grant an injunction to put out the tenants.—Walcott v. Condon, 5 I. Jur. 141. (C.)

2. The Court will grant an ad interim injunction to restrain a Ry. Co. from carrying out, without parliamentary sanction, a contract to purchase a Canal Company's property, when that purchase would create a monopoly.

An injunction will not be granted to restrain a company from applying to parliament for an Act to enlarge their powers, or to sanction an agreement with any other company; but will be granted to restrain them from using the company's funds to defray the expenses of prosecuting such an application, when a monopoly is likely to be thereby created.—M'Donnell v. M. Gt. W. Ry. Co.; M'Donnell v. Gd. Canal Co., 5 I. Jur. 185. (R.)

3. A party obtained a decree against a corporation. The decree not being obeyed, a sequestration issued, under which chattels were seized, which had been purchased with funds, raised under a local Act, for the purpose of carrying its provisions into effect. The Court refused to grant an injunction to compel the sequestrators to restore the chattels to the corporation; and to restrain them from proceeding to seize the rents of real property purchased under the same local Act.—Keyland v. The Corpn. of Belfast, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 150. (R.)

4. A tenant for seven years, pending a cause, cropped lands, after they were purchased, but before the purchaser got the injunction to put him into possession. The purchaser went into possession. The Court granted an injunction to restrain the purchaser from interfering with the tenant in saving the crops, upon the terms of the tenant undertaking to abide by any order to be made as to bringing into Court the amount of rent due up to the end of the current year of the tenancy, or the amount for which the crops might be sold, or as to the crops themselves.—Flanagan v. Seaver, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 429. (R.)

5. A principal made to his agent two leases, which the Court set aside. The agent sub-leased part of the lands to two tenants. One sub-lease was made before, and the other after the filing of the cause petition, impeaching the original leases; which was not registered as a lis pendens, nor was any notice of it served on the sub-tenants. The Court refused an injunction to dispossess them, and put the petitioner's representative into possession; but directed the motion to stand over to let a supplemental petition be filed against the sub-tenants.—Geoghegan v. Blackstock, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 28. (R.)

[See 31st G. O. of 1851; 4th G. O. of Nov. 1852; Ch. (Ir.) Act 1867, sec. 71.]

5. In Feb. 1836 was filed a bill for specific performance of an agreement for a lease. The answer, filed in the same year, insisted that the contract could not be performed, since it exceeded the leasing power. The answer also set out two settlements of the estate, to which, when produced, the deft. craved leave to refer; but did not admit that they were in his possession. No exception was taken to the answer. Issue having been joined, deft. served notice on ptf., in 1837, requiring him to admit one of the settlements, which then lay at his solicitor's office for inspection. After several witnesses had been examined, ptf. moved for liberty to inspect the two deeds relied on in the answer; or, if necessary, to amend his bill, in order to procure from deft. sufficient admissions that the deeds were in his possession. The motion was refused with costs. The ptf., if he wished to raise the question touching his right to inspect the deeds, should have excepted to the answer, because it did not admit that they were in deft.'s possession.—O'Connell Denny, 2 I. E. R. 246. (R.)

6. Purchasers of an estate, sold in several lots under a decree, required to compare with the original deeds lodged in the Master's office, for the purposes of the sale, the copies furnished to them, along with the abstract of title. The Court ordered that the deeds should be handed over to ptf.'s solicitor, he undertaking to re-lodge them after making the comparison; and that he should produce them in his office to the several purchasers' solicitors, and permit them to compare these deeds with the copies furnished, or to be furnished, to them.—Regnolds v. R., 6 I. E. R. 75. (R.)

7. Defts., by their answer, admitted that two deeds were in their possession; stated them partly; and referred to them, when produced, for greater certainty. On motion—Held, that defts. were bound to produce the deeds for ptf.'s inspection.—Dundas v. Blake, 9 I. E. R. 640. (R.); 10 I. E. R. 260. (C.)

XLIX. INSPECTION, ORDER FOR. See PRACTICE, PRODUCTION OF DEEDS.

1. A deft. set forth in his answer as matter of defence (it seemed at full length), two documents not alluded to in the bill, which documents would, if correctly stated, defeat the ptf.'s title; and referred to them thus:—"As by said respective articles or instruments, in the possession of this deft., and ready to be produced and proved, may more fully and at large appear." Held, that the ptf. was entitled to inspect them.—Plumtre v. O'Dell, 4 I. E. R. 602; Fl. & K. 589. (R.)

2. The Court will order the inspection of documents in the hands of the agent of the commission—if those documents had existence prior to the bankruptcy, and if the party applying shows that an injustice would be done to him if he were not permitted to examine them;—and will direct copies to be furnished by the agent of the Commission to the party requiring them, upon payment of reasonable fees.—In re Edmonds, 2 I. Jur. 280. (B.)

3. Semble—Where a bill is demurrable in substance, by reason of a total want of setting out of title to the relief prayed, the 36th and 79th G. O. enable a deft. to decline or omit answering any interrogatory relating to matters connected with the relief prayed, or the title to it.

C., in Tipping v. Clarke, 2 Hare, 883, and Drake v. D., 2 Hare, 647; Kaye v. Wall, 4 Hare, 127.—Russell v. Beakey, 8 I. E. R. 559. (R.)

4. Interrogatories having been annexed to a cause petition without the leave of the Court, an order was made that they should be allowed to stand, reserving the costs occasioned by them until the hearing of the cause. O'Malley v. Denny, 1 I. C. R. 118. (R.)

5. A motion for liberty to examine witnesses upon interrogatories, before the hearing of a cause petition, and that a commission should issue for that purpose, was grounded on the petitioner's solicitor's affidavit, stating that A. and other un-named persons, when applied to, declined to volunteer evidence by making affidavits in the case, but that deponent was persuaded that they would attend for examination upon interrogatories. It stated further that some un-named witnesses resided in England; that a commission would therefore be requisite; and that the deponent was advised that their evidence was material and necessary to the petitioner's case. Motion refused, with costs; the affidavit being vague and unsatisfactory.—[Glascok v. Ross, 1 I. C. R. 50, 57; Hatchell v. Eggesio, 1 I. C. R. 215, 222, followed.]—Kirwan v. Lindsay, 2 I. C. R. 23. (C.)

6. Applications for liberty to file interrogatories must be upon notice.—Nolan v. Drinan, 7 I. Jur. 267. (R.)

LII. INTITULING PLEADINGS.

7. Depositions wrongly intituled cannot be read: but the party who seeks to use them will be permitted to have them re-sworn, upon terms.—O'Hara v. Creagh, 2 I. E. R. 419. (E. E.)

8. A deft. cannot vary the title of the cause in a notice or affidavit used upon a motion in the cause.—M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 275. (R.)

9. When an application is made to extend a receiver from one cause to another, the notice of motion and affidavit should be intituled in both causes.—Tenant v. Watson, 4 I. E. R. 700. (E.E.)

10. It is not necessary to intitle a petition in the matter of the Act of Parliament under which it is presented. If the petition be intituled in the matter of a wrong Act of Parliament, and the Court can see, from the matter of the petition itself, that it has jurisdiction to make the order prayed, under the authority of a public statute, the reference to the Act in the title will be rejected as surplusage.—Hunter v. Edmonds, 6 I. E. R. 123. (E.E.)

11. It is not necessary that the petition or other proceedings under the Judgment Creditors Acts, should be intituled as of those Acts.—Nagle v. Creagh, 6 I. E. R. 265. (R.)

12. The Court will not make an order on a petition, presented under an Act of Parliament, unless the petition be intituled in the matter of the proper Act.—In re French, 8 I. E. R. 96; 2 Jon. & L. 248. (C.)

LII.* IRREGULARITY.

1. What constitutes it, generally.
2. Its Effect.
3. Waiver of.

LII.* 1. What constitutes Irregularity, generally.

1. If the bill be amended, and notice given that the ptf. does not require an answer to the amendments, the deft., if he desires to answer them, must do so within the time allowed for answering when an answer is required.

In such a case, the ptf. acts irregularly in filing a replication before he has returned to the deft. his copy of the bill amended. An answer filed after such a replication is irregular.

If the deft. is entitled to answer amendments made after his former answer, he may answer fully the case made by the original bill.—Cathcart v. Hewson, H. & J. 540. (E.E.)

2. In an interpleader suit, the ptf. obtained an injunction against proceedings at law, upon the terms of paying into Court the rent claimed. One deft. answered; and, before the other answered (there being process against him), entered a conditional rule to dissolve the injunction. Held, that the rule was irregular.—Swanston v. Simpson, Jo. & Car. 188. (E.E.)

3. Service of the month's notice to answer under the 25th G. O., is irregular, if no proceeding has been taken in the cause for more than twelve months.

A formal amendment of the bill is not a proceeding which will keep alive a cause which is out of Court until service of subpoena to elect.

A plaintiff seeking a decree pro confesso, under the 45th G. O., must be prepared to show that all his previous proceedings were perfectly regular.—Townsend v. Newenham, S. & Sc. 700. (R.)

4. On the 13th May, a report, finding that the answer to an injunction bill to stay proceedings at law was prolix in certain passages, was sent back to the office to be reviewed, with directions to include therein other passages also as prolix. On the 6th June, the amended report was confirmed, and on the same day was obtained an order to expunge the prolixities. On the 8th, deft. issued and served a conditional order to dissolve the injunction, on the ground of having answered the bill. On the 10th, ptf. served a notice cautioning deft. against proceeding under that order, and requiring him to vacate it. On the 12th, ptf. issued a summons to attend before the officer on the 17th, to have the prolixities expunged. Ptf. moved to set aside the conditional order to dissolve the injunction, as irregularly obtained before the prolix matter was actually expunged. Held, that the motion should be refused with costs.

Semble—When an answer is reported prolix, it is not necessary to have the prolix matter actually expunged before deft. obtains an order to dissolve the injunction upon the coming in of the answer.—Barry v. Harrison, 2 I. E. R. 64. (E.E.)

5. When objections have been taken in the office against the Remembrancer's report, it is irregular to set down the cause to be heard on report and merits, until the report is confirmed, unless the objections to the draft report have been allowed, and the report, as signed, varied accordingly.—Warren v. Power, 2 I. E. R. 107. (E.E.)

6. Costs were decreed to be paid by a ptf. to a deft., who died after the decree, but before taxation of the costs. The deft.'s administrator issued a summons to tax. The ptf.'s solicitor attended; and, protesting against the right to tax, reduced the items, but did not apply to the Court within a period fixed by the Master for that purpose. Held, that a subpoena, to compel payment of the taxed costs, was not irregular.

If one of several defts. dies after decree, and the cause remains in operation between the ptf. and the other defts., the right to costs decreed to him is not affected by that deft.'s death before taxation.—Barry v. Stowell, 8 I. E. R. 146. (C.)

7. When a necessary party is not before the Court, a report of good title, "the ptf. undertaking to file a supplemental bill, and obtain a decree against such party" is irregular.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 4 I. E. R. 602, note. (R.)

8. Husband and wife filed a bill respecting the wife's real estate. Husband died before decree. Thereupon, deft. entered a rule that the widow should revive or continue the cause within ten days, or in default, that the bill be dismissed with costs. Held, that that rule was irregular, and should be set aside with costs.—Johnson v. Biron, 5 I. E. R. 154. (E.E.)

9. The 12th and 14th G. O. apply to supplemental, as well as to original bills; and when any such bill is filed in violation of those rules, it will be taken off the file of the Court.—Tommey v. White, 6 I. E. R. 303. (R.)

10. In a cause in which a minor is concerned it is irregular and improper for the parties or their solicitors to enter into any consent, without disclosing on its face the fact, that one of the parties is a minor. A side-bar rule entered on such a consent, on which that fact does not appear, Held, irregular.—Gatchell v. G., 8 I. E. R. 391. (E.E.)

11. Amendments after answer, and new engrossment of the bill, without leave—Held, irregular.—Nolan v. Ball, 8 I. E. R. 573. (R.)

12. A report of good title, ptf.'s solicitor undertaking to procure a signature, is informal.—Magawley v. Brady, 9 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

13. The bill, by the note at foot, required one deft. to answer, though subpoenas to answer were prayed against others, and the interrogating part was not divided or numbered. Held, not irregular within G. O. 12.

If the bill be irregular because the interrogating part is not divided or numbered, the proper course is, to stay the proceedings; but not to move to take the bill off the file.—Burns v. B., 9 I. E. R. 205. (R.)

1. The extension of a receiver in an abated suit against a tenant for life, after his death, to a suit by a creditor on the inheritance, is not irregular.—Moore v. Marquis of Donegal, 11 I. E. R. 412. (C.)

2. A bill, filed in 1844, to raise a sum secured on a term created by a settlement of 1773, stated the proceedings in a suit of A. v. B. by a prior judgment creditor, and prayed the benefit of the decrees and accounts therein; that the decrees might be carried into execution, so far as necessary for the ptf.'s relief; and a sale of the term. The cause stood over at the hearing, to make two minors parties by supplemental bill. One of them, X., by answer, impeached the decrees in the suit of A. v. B., and both claimed as purchasers for value under a settlement of 1842, made by W. At the hearing of the supplemental cause in June 1847, ptf. contended that X. could not impeach the decrees, as he claimed under W., who had acquiesced in them; and an order was made that the further hearing of the cause should stand over, with liberty to the ptf. in the meantime to bring before the Court the parties beneficially interested in the decrees in A. v. B. The ptf. filed a supplemental bill, setting out the whole of the proceedings in A. v. B., and the suit of 1844; assignments of the judgment and sum decreed in A. v. B. for the benefit of W., charging that W. and X., and the parties claiming under the assignment in A.'s right, could not object to have the decrees carried into execution; and praying that they might be carried into execution against them, and that the ptf. might have the benefit thereof; or, if the Court should be of opinion that they could not be carried into execution, according to the terms thereof, with such modification as to the Court should seem meet; and that ptf.'s claim, and all prior and contemporaneous charges, might be raised by a sale of the term of 1773. The Court refused to take the bill off the file as irregular; but—Held, on demurrer, that the order of June 1847, though it authorised the filing of a supplemental bill to bring new parties before the Court, did not warrant the making of a new case; and that the case of estoppel, and the prayer that the decrees might be modified and altered, was a new case and not warranted by the order.

Semble—The frame of the suit and relief prayed being altered, all the necessary parties to the suit of 1844 should be parties, particularly the party representing the term of 1773.—M'Namara v. Blake, 11 I. E. R. 527. (R.)—[Affd.: 12 I. E. R. 362. (C.)]

3. A Court of Equity will not entertain the question of the irregularity of proceedings at law.—Nugent v. Waters, 1 I. Jur. 35. (R.)

4. Appearance on the 26th April. Order on the 8th May, staying proceedings until security, &c. Security given on the 4th Dec. Cause set down pro confesso on the 24th Jan.; the 23rd having been a Sunday. Held, irregular, the deft. having the whole of the 24th on which to file his answer.—White v. W., 12 I. E. R. 425. (R.)

5. All the parties to an original bill having died, the cause was set down in the names of the parties to a supplemental bill only. Held, regular; and that parts of the answer to the original bill could be read as of an answer in the cause at the hearing; and that it was not to be treated as an answer in another cause.—Anderson v. Pratt, 12 I. E. R. 603. (C.)

6. If a deft. moves to take a bill off the file for irregularities, which involve questions of pleading, and might have been taken advantage of by plea or demurrer, that is sufficient ground for refusing the motion.

A motion to take a bill off the file for irregularity in being contrary to the 56th G. O., the bill praying to be considered a supplemental bill, and being filed before issue joined, will not be granted if any part of the bill may be considered purely original, and in respect of which relief might be given at the hearing.

An order to dismiss a bill made in a suit abated by the death of a ptf., that circumstance not being properly before the Court, when it made the order, is not a nullity. There should be an order to set it aside.—Hayes v. Woodley, 2 I. Jur. 42. (R.)

7. It is irregular for some of several co-ptfs., without the consent of all, to change their solicitor by side-bar order. A special motion should be made.—Callaghan v. Blake, 2 I. Jur. 54. (R.)

8. One of several ptf.s., who sued in his wife's name, died before the taxation of costs which a decree had given the ptf.s. A subpoena for costs was served in the names of all the ptf.s., and an attachment issued thereon in the names of the surviving ptf.s. Held, irregular.—Wyse v. W., 4 I. Jur. 113. (R.)

9. In an administration suit the Court does not, before decree, order the executor or administrator to bring money into Court, unless on a distinct admission that he has assets in hands. In a case referred to the Master, under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, an executor de son tort, by his discharge, stated that he had not any sum whatever of assets in his hands; but was in advance beyond any sum which had been realised out of the assets. Held, that the Master's order, directing him to bring money into Court, was irregular.—Glenny v. Woolsey, 4 I. C. R. 636. (R.)

9. The ptf. propounded a will, and got an order that either party be at liberty to set the cause down for hearing; but did not pay the duty, and declined to act on the order. On that ground the deft. moved to dismiss the suit and condemn the will. Held, that the motion was irregular, and that the proper course was for the deft. himself to pay the duty, take out a copy of the order, and set down the cause.

The rule of the Prerogative Court, that proctors should not in any proceeding refer to private conversations had between them, is still in force, and applies to solicitors.—Goslin v. G., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 306. (P.)

1. Semble—A petition by way of peremptory execution in an interest suit is irregular. Having an erroneous title, the petition was dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

LII.* 2. Its Effect.

2. A conveyance, made under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 72, is, under sec. 85, "for all purposes conclusive evidence" that all previous proceedings, leading to such conveyance, have been regularly taken.

Proceedings had been taken to sell estates, of which the sale and re-sale had been directed, in a manner which, when presented to the notice of the H. L., was declared to be marked by great irregularity. The complainant, however, had not brought that matter before the Court of Appeal until after the conveyances had been executed. Held, that the statute precluded this House from affording to the appellant relief against the consequences of such irregularities.

When the appellant went before the Court of Appeal, his petition was dismissed with costs. The H. L. reversed the order for costs, but affirmed the dismissal of the appeal.—Power v. Reeves, 10 H. L. Cas. 645.—[See In re Power's Est., 11 I. C. R. 295. (C.A.)]

LII.* 3. Waiver of.

3. A motion, to stay proceedings until ptf. residing abroad gave security for costs, was refused, deft. having been aware of ptf.'s non-residence, but having delayed his application until a negotiation opened by him for an amicable settlement had terminated unsuccessfully. Several months had elapsed after the notice to press for his answer, and the further time, to file his answer, given by ptf. had nearly expired. Deft. had therefore waived his objection, since, if he meant to rely on it, he should have come immediately, or at least when he was served with the notice to press.

Ptf. residing abroad, but having an estate and residence at C., in the county of T., being described as "C. in the county of T.," without other addition, is not a mis-description.—Watson v. Pim, 2 I. E. R. 26. (R.)

4. If a party answers an affidavit not filed until after the notice of motion, the irregularity is cured, and he cannot object to its being used on the motion.—O'Brien v. Peebles, 7 I. E. R. 558. (R.)

5. Irregularity (if such it was) in not stating in an order for substituted service, where deft.

was to appear, was—Held, waived by the common appearance.

Semble—The proceedings were regular.—Johnston v. Tottenham, 11 I. E. R. 271. (R.)

6. An irregularity in the heading of a cause petition is waived by the filing of affidavits in reply.—Bell v. M'Carthy, 8 I. Jur. 190. (C.)

LIII. ISSUE AND ACTION AT LAW: CASE SENT FOR OPINION OF THE JUDGES. See PRACTICE, COSTS.

[See 21 & 22 Vic., c. 27.]

1. Form of Issue.
2. When directed.
3. Issue: Devisavit vel non.
4. Practice on, generally: Trial, Verdict: Proceedings on: its Effect.
5. Taking pro confesso.

LIII. 1. Form of Issue.

[By the Ch. Amendment Act 1858 (21 & 22 Vic., c. 27) power is given to the Ct. of Ch. in Ireland to award and ascertain damages with or without a jury, and to try any question of fact before a jury in the Ct. of Ch.]

7. Ptf. claimed as heir male of R., deceased, stating in his bill that he was R.'s eldest son, born after R.'s marriage with ptf.'s mother, and naming a specific date for the marriage. Held, that the question of ptf.'s legitimacy would be satisfactorily determined by an issue in terms, "to try whether he was the heir-at-law of R." &c.

When a Court of Equity directs an issue in a cause in which there are many parties, and selects some to have the conduct of the trial, giving all leave to attend, all are bound by the result.

An order directing an issue, "with the consent of all parties in the cause," is erroneous, so far as it purports to be with the consent of an infant party.

Quere—If the infant consents, is he bound?

But if the order for the issue was a right order to be made, if the infant had not consented, it is immaterial whether he ought to be bound by the consent or not, especially as he was relieved from the effect of the consent by being allowed, on coming of age, to make a new defence.—Malone v. M., 3 I. E. R. 536; 2 Dr. & Wal. 491, 536; 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637.

8. In referring it to the Master to settle a case for a Court of Law, the Court will not authorise him to issue a commission to examine witnesses, and to ascertain facts to be stated in the case.

Practice in settling a case involving a question of Ecclesiastical Law.—Hogg v. Garrett, 2 Dr. & War. 409; 2 Con. & L. 197. (C.)

9. Form of order on an application for liberty to read, on the trial of an issue, depositions, taken in the cause, of a witness whom illness incapacitated from attending the trial.—Lynch v. L., Dr. Rep., temp. Sug. 588. (C.)

1. In a suit in which an assignor and the assignees of an equitable interest are made ptf.s., an issue directed to try the validity of the deed of assignment is improper, as being an issue between co-ptfs., and not between them and the defts.—Fulham v. M'Carthy, 1 H. L. Cas. 703; 12 Jur. 757.—[Affg., on the ground of misjoinder of parties, the decision in 9 I. E. R. 620.]

2. Form of issue when the entire will is impeached, on the ground that the testator was not of sane mind; particular devises being also impeached on special grounds.—Lord Guilanore v. O'Grady, 2 Jon. & L. 210. (C.)

LIII. 2. When Directed.

3. In a renewal suit, when the question concerns the quantity of land demised by the original lease, the Court will order it to be tried by an ejectment, rather than direct an issue.—Douglas v. M'Causland, Hayes, 254. (E.E.)

4. The landlord's agent procured from a tenant a conveyance of his farm, under suspicious circumstances. The Court was not satisfied with the evidence given five years afterwards. Held, that there must be an issue to enquire whether the deed had been obtained by fraud, duress, imposition, or undue influence.—Smith v. Ward, Hay. & J. 705. (E.E.)

5. The bill charged that the ptf.'s ancestor's alleged will was a forgery, and prayed an issue: whether it was his will or not? and that the defts. might be restrained from setting up temporary bars. The cause was heard upon sequestration against the devisees named in the will. Held, that the Court could only decree the bill to be retained, with liberty to the ptf. to bring an ejectment; and that the defts. be restrained from setting up temporary bars.—Nelson v. Averell, 2 Jon. 782. (E.E.)

6. In a suit by children to enforce payment of their portions, their legitimacy was questioned by the next tenant for life, a deft. A marriage de facto was established. Held, that it then lay on the party impeaching the marriage to prove it illegal and void; and that the Court, sufficient evidence of a marriage de facto having been submitted to it, was competent to decide the question of the marriage for the purposes of the suit, without directing an issue.—Piers v. Tuite, 1 Dr. & Wal. 279. (C.)

7. On a bill to carry into effect the trusts of a will, two questions were raised—one of law, respecting the construction of the will, the other of fact, touching ptf.'s legitimacy, to be ascertained by the trial of an issue. The Judge directed the issue to be tried first. Held, that, in doing so, he exercised a sound discretion, by declining to decide the legal question until ptf. had established his right to ask for that decision, by showing that he filled the character which he assumed.

Quære—Whether Lord Eldon meant what is ascribed to him as approving the contrary practice in Gordon v. G., 3 Swanst. 468?

When a Court of Equity directs an issue in a cause in which there are many parties, and selects some to have the conduct of the trial, giving all leave to attend, all are bound by the result.—Malone v. M., 3 I. E. R. 536; 2 Dr. & Wal. 491; 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637.

8. A judgment, obtained by confession against an old corporation, after the 16th Feb. 1836, is not conclusive against the new corporation. When the Court doubted whether the demand, on which the judgment was obtained, came within the terms of the 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 100, two burgesses of the new corporation filed an information to stay the issuing of execution against the goods of the corporation upon that judgment. Held, that they were entitled to have an issue to try whether or not it was originally a demand such as came within that Act.—Att.-Gen. v. Corp'n. of Dublin, 1 Dr. & War. 545. (C.)

9. It being doubtful whether the grant of an annuity was an English or an Irish transaction; and it appearing that the transaction, if English, was void for want of enrolment, the question being a legal one, a case was sent to a Court of Law.—Ferguson v. Lomax, 2 Dr. & War. 120. (C.)—[See 3 Dr. & War. 238. (C.)—See the case at Law: 5 I. L. R. 81.]

10. On an information filed to impeach a lease made by a Corporation, of lands which were originally conveyed to them upon trusts for particular purposes, of which trusts the making of the lease was a breach—Held, that the lessee was entitled to an issue, to try whether the lands in the lease were the lands so granted in the trust or not.—Att.-Gen. v. The Corp'n. of Cashel, 2 Con. & L. 1; 3 Dr. & War. 294. (C.)

11. The Court, in referring it to a Master to settle a case for a Court of Law, will not authorise him to issue a commission to examine witnesses and to ascertain facts to be stated in the Court.

When the question depended upon a point of Ecclesiastical Law, the Lord Chancellor (Sir E. Sugden), directed a case to be submitted to four of the most eminent civilians, here and in England, with liberty for the Court of Law to adopt their opinion.

A Court of Law is confined strictly to the case sent for its opinion.

Semble—They are not, as a Court of Law, bound to take notice of what the Ecclesiastical Law on a matter is.—Hogg v. Garrett, 3 Dr. & War. 294; 2 Con. & L. 197. (C.)

12. Ptf. held entitled to a decree, without an issue at Law, after three trials, and an admission, in the last trial, of the principal disputed fact.—O'Sullivan v. M'Sweeney, 2 Con. & L. 486. (C.)

1. The Court will not direct an issue when the question to be tried is, whether a presumptio juris has been sufficiently repelled, particularly when there is not much parol evidence.—Piers v. P., 2 H. L. Cas. 383; 13 Jur. 569.—[Rev. 10 I. E. R. 340.]

2. In a suit to recover an ancient rent, the evidence not clearly defining the lands liable, an issue was directed to ascertain the precise lands chargeable with it.—Archbishop of Dublin v. Lord Trimleston, 12 I. E. R. 251. (C.)

3. Though the statute, under which proceedings are taken, does not empower the Court to direct an issue or an enquiry touching the facts—Semble, that the Court will, to satisfy itself, exercise by either of these methods its inherent jurisdiction.—Lahiffe v. Gregory, 4 I. Jur. 97. (C.)

4. Serious questions of fact cannot be satisfactorily determined by the Court in a proceeding by cause petition, without directing an issue.—Kelly v. Birch, 3 I. C. R. 478; 7 I. Jur. 78. (C.)

5. The Court will not direct an issue on an allegation by a deft. or respondent, that a person, when he executed a deed, was insane, without any evidence in support of it; as the presumption is in favour of sanity, more especially when there is prima facie evidence of sanity, e. g., acting on the deed for a number of years.

In 1822, a reversion and rent were assigned. The rent was paid to the assignee of the reversion until 1846. A cause petition was filed by the assignee of the reversion to administer the lessee's assets. By the discharge it was alleged that the assignor was insane when he made the assignment. Held, that the respondent could not require an issue unless evidence was given in support of the allegation.—Long v. L., 4 I. C. R. 106; 7 I. Jur. 81. (B.)

6. The conuzor of a judgment bequeathed all his personal estate specifically, and devised his lands to A. for life, remainder over, and appointed A. his executor, and charged the lands with payment of his debts. After the death of the conuzor, the judgment was assigned to a trustee for A., the assignment stating that it had been paid off out of the proper money of A. The trustee having filed a petition to raise the amount of the judgment out of the lands—Held, that the lands and the chattels specifically bequeathed were liable to contribute rateably to the payment of the judgment.

Sed quare—Whether the judgment, having been paid off by A., was a subsisting security at law, which could be assigned for his benefit?

Held, that the right to raise the judgment out of the lands depended on the legal right; and the Court directed an action at Law to be brought to try it.—Mannix v. Coates, 5 I. C. R. 142. (R.)

7. A., entitled to a portion of lands held for lives renewable for ever, under a lease of 1715, which had been renewed in 1787, made a lease for lives, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, to B., in 1795. A. afterwards assigned his interest to C. B. granted a rentcharge, and in 1816 devised his interest to his eldest son E., for life, remainder over. An ejectment was brought for non-payment of rent, in 1848. E. and his under-tenants were served with the ejectment, but none of the persons in remainder. E. gave consent for judgment. The last life in the renewal of 1787 died in 1835. A cause petition was filed in 1856 by the person entitled to the rentcharge, praying that the ejectment might be declared invalid, and for a renewal of the lease of 1795, against C.'s heir-at-law. Held, that E., and those entitled in remainder after him to the interest under the lease of 1795, were necessary parties to the suit.

Semble—That as E., during his life, represented the entire interest in the lease of 1795, and had given a consent for judgment, the eviction was valid.

But as the question as to the service of the ejectment was a legal question of difficulty, on which two Courts of Law had differed, the Court directed an ejectment to be brought notwithstanding the 22nd G. O. of 1857. Held, that if the eviction was valid at law, the petition should be dismissed.—Phibbs v. Cooper, 7 I. C. R. 422. (R.)

8. By letters patent of King Charles II, the fishery of the river of Galway from Lough Corrib to the sea was granted to P., under whom the petitioners claimed. The title of the Crown and its grantees to the fishery was deduced from the reign of King John. Acts of ownership, and convictions of persons who had trespassed on the fishery were given in evidence. The title of the petitioners had been established by the verdict of a jury in a prohibition suit at law to which some of the respondents were parties. The respondents admitted the right to a fishery in a part of the river, but contended that in other parts they and the public from time immemorial had exercised a right of angling; and they proved that for many years persons had been in the habit of angling in all parts of the river. The Court granted a perpetual injunction to restrain the respondents from fishing, without directing an issue or an action at law.—Ashworth v. Browne, 10 I. C. R. 421. (R.)

9. In a possessory suit issues may be directed.—O'Neill v. M'Erlaine, 16 I. C. R. 280. (R.)

10. The L. E. Court having made an absolute order to sell lands, two lessees of a portion claimed to hold under a lease for lives "renewable every thirty-one years after demise of said lives, at three grains of pepper-corn." This lease was impeached upon motion grounded upon (inter alia) affidavits of two experts, whose opinion was that the above clause had been interpolated after the execution of the lease. Hargreave, J., declined to grant an issue, but declared that the lease, when executed, did not contain that clause. Held, (reversing that order), that an issue should be granted; because the law presumed that the clause existed when the lease was executed, unless the contrary was proved to a jury's satisfaction.—Jones's Estate; Jones Montgomery, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 366. (C.A.)

LIII. 3. Issue: Devisavit vel non.

1. Counsel acting for a minor heir-at-law are justified in exercising their discretion whether or not he ought to take an issue of devisavit vel non?—Knipe v. M'Mahon, 4 Dr. & War. 295. (C.)

2. In cases relating to the devise of real estates, the Court intervenes only by reason of the existence of some impediment to proceeding at law, in order to have the rights of the parties submitted, by means of that intervention, to a legal issue before a jury. The Court cannot decide against the verdict of a jury, otherwise than by granting a new trial.

According to the earlier authorities, the Court would not bind the inheritance by one trial; but there is now no absolute rule requiring the Court as of course to grant a second trial of an issue devisavit vel non, unless it is satisfied that a second trial may afford more satisfactory grounds for the final adjudication between the parties.

Although, to sustain a case of fraud, and to show that a will has been made under coercion and influence, the evidence must be pointed to the very factum of the will, and directly show that the instrument the validity of which is disputed was executed under pressure of coercion and undue influence, the jury may, from circumstantial evidence, or from inference and presumption from such evidence, come to the conclusion that coercion and undue influence existed.

When the Judge who tried the case expressed himself not dissatisfied with a verdict in an issue devisavit vel non, finding against the will, and the Court concurred in the verdict, and no new evidence had been discovered, although some existed, which the party had not availed himself of, the Court refused to grant a new trial.—Rosborough v. Boyse, 3 I. C. R. 489; 6 I. Jur. 249. (C.)

3. When an heir-at-law files a bill to impeach a will (alleged to have been obtained by undue influence or fraud) of real estate, the Court of Ch. may, at its discretion, direct an issue devisavit vel non; or may merely remove obstacles which impede the heir in asserting his legal title.

The House of Lords will not interfere with the exercise of that discretion, unless it appears that injustice has been, or is likely to be worked thereby.—Boyse v. Rosborough, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (H.L.)—[S. c., 6 H. Lds. Cas. 2.]

4. The Court may grant a new trial of an issue devisavit vel non, on the ground of misdirection by the Judge, though no exception was taken to his charge at the trial.—Slack v. Busted, 6 I. C. R. 1; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 98. (R.)

5. E., seized of lands subject to mortgages, devised them to T., in whom the mortgages became vested. Held, that the Court had jurisdiction in a suit instituted by the heir of E., praying the ordinary redemption relief and an issue devisavit vel non, to grant such an issue.—Egmont v. Darrell, 14 I. C. R. 564. (C.)

LIII. 4. Practice on generally: Trial: Verdict: Proceedings on: its Effect.

6. When a Court of Equity directs an issue in a cause in which there are many parties, and selects some of them to conduct the trial, giving all leave to attend, all are bound by the result.

An order directing an issue "with the consent of all parties in the cause" is erroneous, so far as it purports to be with the consent of an infant party.

Quare—If the infant consents, is he bound? But if the order for the issue was a right order to be made, if the infant had not consented, it is immaterial whether he ought to be bound by the consent or not, especially as he was relieved from the effect of the consent by being allowed, on coming of age, to make a new defence.

Quare—Is it clear on the authorities that an infant deft., in a case such as this, is entitled, after coming of age, to file a new answer, and make a new defence?—Malone v. M., 3 I. E. R. 536; 2 Dr. & Wal. 491, 536; 8 Cl. & F. 179; West, 637.

7. The former practice as to striking juries is still to be followed, notwithstanding the C. L. P. Act (16 & 17 Vic., c. 113, sec. 112.)—that is, to bring the special jurors' list to the Master for the purpose of drawing the names to be inserted in the panel, the parties attending while the forty-eight names are being selected.—King v. K., 6 I. Jur. 129. (C.)

8. When the debtor against whom proceedings have been taken, under sec. 104, answers to a good defence on the merits, and states facts from which the Court may infer that there is a serious question to be tried, the Court will not compel him to enter into a bond until after the time within which the action at law may be tried.—In re M'Auley, 8 I. C. R. 212. (B.)

9. When the Judge of the Court of Probate directs issues respecting testamentary papers, the Court of Appeal will not vary his order, merely on the ground that the issues directed do not exclude all consideration of questions at law.—Newton v. N., 11 I. C. R. 239; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 1. (C.A.)

LIII. 5. Taking pro confesso.

10. An issue directed, by consent, to be tried by civil-bill appeal.—Harris v. Cullen, 1 I. E. R. 90. (C.)

11. A lease, made before the Statute of Frauds, and now lost, being proved to have contained an agreement respecting the amount of a fine to be paid, "upon the renewing of any life or lives," and having been seven times renewed, an issue was directed to try whether, at or before the making of the lease, there was an agreement for a lease for lives renewable for ever; and a second issue to try whether such lease contained any clause or covenant relating to a renewal, and independent of the stipulation touching the amount of fines.—Nangle v. Smith, 1 I. E. R. 119. (C.)

LIV. a. 1. Jurisdiction.

1. The Court is not bound to make an order for sale under the Incumbered Estates Act, if it would not decree a sale in a plenary suit.

Therefore, where by a deed between father and son, for large consideration from the son, his object being to preserve B. in the family, the lands of A. and B. were conveyed to a trustee in trust to sell A. in the first instance to pay off incumbrances and debts of the father; and as to B., subject to so much of the debts and incumbrances as should remain unpaid by the sale of A., in trust to raise a certain sum to pay the charges and incumbrances, and subject thereto to the father for life, remainder to the son in fee; the Court refused to make an order for the sale of B. on the father's petition, a part of A. remaining unsold.—Ex parte Kennedy, 11 I. E. R. 171. (R.)

2. Petition for a sale under the I. E. Act. A receiver was appointed. Motion that the Master, on an undertaking being lodged in his office, might set the house and lands, as the depreciation of property was so great, and the incumbrances amounted to £5600, on lands of which the rental was only £400, besides which an annuity affected them. Under those special circumstances the motion was granted, although the Legislature's intention was to bring the proceedings to as speedy a conclusion as possible.—Ex parte Johnson, 1 I. Jur. 182. (R.)

3. The Court refused to make an order on the petition when a decree had been obtained in the Court of Ch., declaring, in the absence of those interested in remainder, a deed fraudulent and void.

Semble—That in order to avoid clashing of jurisdiction, when a disputed suit is determined in a Court of Equity, as to one party, this Court will not entertain a petition when the question, as to parties not before the Court of Equity, must be tried in this Court de novo, and be as to them a new suit.—In re Carr, 2 I. Jur. 6. (I.E.C.)

4. The conuzor of a judgment being tenant for life of an estate in strict settlement, with ultimate remainder to himself and his heirs in tail male, a sale was refused. Held, that the above limitations, without even taking into account the effect of remaining intermediate uses, did not coalesce, within the meaning of the rule in Shelley's case, so as to constitute the respondent an owner of land within the 54th sec. The Court has not jurisdiction to convert defeasible into absolute titles.—In re Whalley, 2 I. Jur. 7. (I.E.C.)

5. Selling under proceedings as against some of the owners.—In re Bodkin, 2 I. Jur. 14. (I.E.C.)

6. A suit was instituted in the Court of Ch. for the sale of lands, and a petition presented in this Court for a sale of the same lands, a portion of which was not within the jurisdiction of the Commissioners. They ordered a sale of the lands within their jurisdiction, and granted a certificate that it would be for the benefit of all parties that the cause should proceed as to the portion which was not within their jurisdiction.—In re Biggs, 2 I. Jur. 28. (I.E.C.)

7. The owner showed as cause against a conditional order to sell, that he was improving the estate for the purpose of a sale; that the improvements would greatly increase the value; and further that, property being depreciated, the estate would sell at a gross under-value. Cause disallowed with costs, though a large majority of the creditors supported the application.—In re The Earl of Portarlington, 2 I. Jur. 45. (I.E.C.)

8. When a portion of the premises was intermixed with other premises, which the Court had not jurisdiction to sell, the Court refused to make the conditional order absolute, as to those premises which were intermixed, and over which they had jurisdiction.—In re Cairncross, 2 I. Jur. 69. (I.E.C.)

9. When, by a fatality, no notice was served to make absolute the conditional order, and cause had been allowed under the 68th G. Rule, the Court, on application by the petitioner in a proper case, made a new conditional order; cause to be shown forthwith.

It is the practice of this Court to allow affidavits to be used in reply, unless the opposite party be thereby surprised; in which event the case will be allowed to stand for rebutting affidavits.

An agreement had been entered into by petitioner and respondent, whereby the petitioner was appointed for one year to receive the rents as attorney for the respondent. He distrained for rent after the period for which he was appointed had expired, the respondent being himself then entitled to recover them. It was stated that, in consequence, the respondent was unable to get in the rents, which were his sole means of keeping down the interest of charges for which the petition for a sale was presented. Held that this was not a sufficient cause.—In re Wall, 2 I. Jur. 92. (I.E.C.)

1. When a mortgage deed contains a clause that if the rent is three months in arrear the mortgagee shall have power to sell, it is not cause against a conditional order for sale, that a receiver had fraudulently so mismanaged the property as to allow the interest on the mortgage to fall in arrear.—In re Lane, 2 I. Jur. 93. (I.E.C.)

2. A sub-lease, containing a t. q. covenant for renewal of lands held under a bishop's lease, though the sub-lessee may obtain the fee under the Church Temporalities Acts (3 & 4 W. 4, c. 37, and 6 & 7 W. 4, c. 99), is not a church-lease within the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 54.

Such a lease, being a lease for an absolute term of years, with a covenant for perpetual renewal, is a perpetuity within that sec.

If there be a doubt as to the jurisdiction of the Commissioners to sell the land or lease included in the petition, they will not order a sale, though their opinion be in favour of the right to sell.

When the lease is not one of the classes mentioned in the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 54, were the Commissioners to sell, their decision might not be conclusive, and the purchaser might be evicted by judgment of a Court of Law.—In re Slacke, 2 I. Jur. 157. (I.E.C.)

8. Though the Court can sell property in lots under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 24, it has not jurisdiction under the 37th sec. to apportion the head-rent between the several lots, unless the petition seek only a sale of part of the lease, or show a bona fide intention to sell a part only.—In re Wrixon, 2 I. Jur. 167. (I.E.C.)

4. This Court will not sell land for the purpose of paying off the arrears of a f. f. rent payable thereout.—In re Tipping, 2 I. Jur. 172. (I.E.C.)

5. When one undivided moiety was held by the respondent in fee, lessee for life of the other moiety, the Court refused an application on behalf of the respondent to sell, under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 36, his life interest in the second moiety.—In re Synge, 2 I. Jur. 175. (I.E.C.)

6. The Court will not sell discharged of a dower, when a decree in the Court of Ch. for sale of the lands contained no direction to sell discharged of it.—In re Thornhill, 2 I. Jur. 212. (I.E.C.)

7. In 1806, T. mortgaged D. and K. in fee to F., to secure moneys (and interest thereon) advanced by F., who, in 1826, filed a bill to raise the amount; but omitted all mention of K. In 1830, a final decree ordered a sale of D.

By indenture of 1836, and various mesne assignments, D., with all the benefit of the decree, became vested in the present petitioner, who, in 1837, filed a bill to carry the decree into execution. A final decree for sale was made in 1844. A receiver under the Court had been in possession of D.; but K. had always remained in the owner's possession.

The petitioner, these facts having been proved, moved to make absolute the order to sell K.; but the cause shown was allowed, with costs.—In re Davis's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 143. (I.E.C.)

8. Under the 37th sec. of the I. E. C. Act the Court has a discretionary power to apportion the head rent; but will not exercise it unless satisfied that the landlord will, not only suffer no loss, but be put to no serious inconvenience.

Semble—The spirit of the sec. is, that the Court shall apportion "head rents," and not "rack rents."—In re Hughes's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 152. (I.E.C.)

9. A bond, with warrant of attorney, was given to secure money. On the bond the parties endorsed that, although it was made payable in twelve months, the creditor agreed to accept payment by instalments until the whole debt, with interest, should have been discharged; but if any instalment should not be paid as therein specified, "or within the space of two months respectively, provided demand thereof should be previously made by the said, &c.; or upon such demand being made after the expiration of said two months, then this agreement to be wholly null and void."

A small arrear became due. It was very difficult to serve the owner with notice, as he was absent from Ireland. A petition to sell property omitted all mention of the endorsement. These facts were shown as cause against making absolute the order for sale. Held, that the property should be sold.—In re Rogers's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 192. (I.E.C.)

10. When a lease, manifestly under the value, was made, which the Court felt bound to sell discharged of, they sold subject to the sub-lease, directing the tenant to attorn to the purchaser.—In re Darcy, 3 I. Jur. 404. (I.E.C.)

11. When lands are under the receiver of the Court of Ch., this Court is unwilling to grant an injunction against waste, unless an immediate remedy appears to be called for. If the case is not urgent, the application should be made to the Court of Ch.—In re Brabazon, 4 I. Jur. 100. (I.E.C.)

1. The Court has not jurisdiction to sell lands held for three lives or 99 years, which ever should last the longest.—In re Assignee of Fuller, 4 I. Jur. 183. (I.E.C.)—[See Digest, p. 30, 5 I. Jur. for this case. Quere page in 4 I. Jur.]

2. When there were prior and puisne incumbrances affecting the inheritance, and an annuity of intermediate priority affecting only the life estate, the Court referred it to the Commissioner in Chamber to value and ascertain, and direct that a portion of the estate might be sold sufficient to discharge the prior incumbrances; such lands to be sold discharged of the annuity; and declared that the residue should be sold subject to such annuity.—In re St. George, 4 I. Jur. 183. (I.E.C.)

3. In 1853, A. purchased lands at a sale in the I. E. Court. The conveyance purported to give him the fee and inheritance of 1085 acres of the lands of B., described by reference to a map annexed to the conveyance, and in exact conformity with the rental, subject to a lease for lives renewable for ever. In 1854, A. purchased, likewise, at a sale in the I. E. Court, the lessee's interest in B., which the Commissioners conveyed to him as "the lands expressed to be demised by a certain lease," with the exception of 90 acres demised by a later lease. The conveyance purported to give 1085 acres. The late lessee, in the matter of whose estate the interest in the lease had been sold refused to give the purchaser possession of 45, part of the 1085 acres, on the ground that they were comprised in the 90 acres excepted in the conveyance. Commissioner Hargreave having refused an application for an injunction to put the purchaser into possession of the 45 acres, A. brought his ejectment on the title, and a verdict was found against him. The verdict was set aside by the C. P., on the ground of misdirection. A second trial was had, with a similar verdict; and, a bill of exceptions having been taken, the exceptions were allowed by the same Court, on the ground that A. was entitled to the 45 acres in dispute, if they were not comprised in the later lease. Held, that the Court would not interfere to prevent the legal operation of their own conveyance; and that, without deciding the question of jurisdiction, such jurisdiction, if it existed, should be used most sparingly.

Semle—When the purchase is infected with fraud, the equitable jurisdiction of the Court will attach to restrain the purchaser from profiting by his fraud.—In re Gould's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 387. (I.E.C.)

4. The Court has not jurisdiction to order a party to repay a sum over-paid to him, if the payment was made out of Court.—De Chabot's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 142. (L.E.C.)

5. Although the I. E. Court cannot act in opposition to, but is bound by, a final decree in Ch. (In re Lanauze, 11 I. E. B. 19), yet when that decree has prejudiced the rights of minors, the L. E. Court will retain the purchase-money to enable them to obtain redress in Ch.—In re Hunt's Estate, 11 I. C. R. 299; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 163. (L.E.C.)

6. The Court will not sell a right of way of which the existence is not clearly proved. When it is disputed, the alleged owner must establish it by an action at law.—In re Hoare's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 183. (L.E.C.)

7. The Court will not permit a married woman to dispose of any reversionary interest to which she may be entitled in a fund in Court.—In re Mahon, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 184. (L.E.C.)

8. The Court will not sell when the owner^{*} is not in possession of the lands, nor is any party deriving under him. The owner must, by action at law or otherwise, recover the possession before an order for sale will be made, or a petition entertained.

The Court will not sell the lands subject to an under-lease, when the lessee is not in possession thereunder.

A like practice prevails as to incorporeal hereditaments, rights, and easements.—In re Hendrick, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 242, 243. (L.E.C.)

9. A tenant, A., claiming a lease of lands part of this estate, and not being in possession, the Court refused to recognise the lease, stating that A. must first recover possession at law.

To an action of ejectment then brought, defence was taken, as to part of the lands, by two other tenants on the estate. No defence was taken to the residue. For the residue, A. marked judgment. On his motion, the Court allowed the lease as to that portion; but held that, not having defended the action was a breach of duty by the solicitor for the petitioner; and that he would be liable for the loss sustained by the estate, if the creditors applied to that effect.—In re Ronayne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 318. (L.E.C.)

10. Lands subject to heavy charges were settled, A. being made tenant for life. He incumbered the life estate. A puisne creditor filed a petition for sale. A. and the prior creditors showed cause against the order for sale; questioning the Court's jurisdiction. Held, that it had jurisdiction to sell, and would sell, protecting the interests of the prior life estate creditors so far as possible, and giving the owner an opportunity to relieve the fee from incumbrances, before the sale of the life estate.—In re Earl of Limerick's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 65. (L.E.C.)

11. A tenant for life of freehold estates, with power to appoint amongst his children, devised the estates to trustees to sell, and to divide the price among the children in specified shares. Order for sale granted upon the petition of the trustees.—In re Blackley's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 68. (L.E.C.)

1. A lessee in a perpetuity lease mortgaged his interest by assignment. Subsequently in 1831 mortgagor and mortgagee demised a part to C. for lives renewable for ever, at a yearly rent of £6, which was expressly reserved to the mortgagor; and afterwards, in 1836, demised the whole in perpetuity to D. at £55 rent, saving the existing under-leases. C. paid no rent from 1839. In 1861 D. brought ejectment to recover the rent; but failed, as the rent was reserved to the mortgagor, who had no estate at law.

The Court ordered D.'s interest to be sold, and the petitioner sought to sell it subject to C.'s lease. C. objected; because the rent, being reserved to the mortgagor, was a mere rentcharge, barred by non-payment for over twenty-years; because on the true construction of the deed of 1836 the reversion expectant on the lease of 1831 did not pass to D. Because even if the reversion passed, the rent did not pass, it not being a rent-service incident to the reversion, but a mere rentcharge requiring a separate grant, and the deed of 1836 contained no mention of the rent. Held, that the rent, though reserved to the wrong person, was reserved by lease for the use and occupation of land, and continued payable as long as that use and occupation under the lease continued; and that C., the tenant, could not in the L. E. Court raise the question of construction on the deed of 1836, that question of title being for the Court alone.

The tenant cannot look farther than is necessary to preserve his lease, nor do more than insist that the lands, if sold, shall be sold subject to his lease; but has no right to question the Court's jurisdiction to sell the lands.—In re M'Auley's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 414. (L.E.C.)

2. The L. E. Court has power to sell the interest created by a lease containing a covenant against assignment, when the lease has been deposited by way of equitable mortgage.—Ex parte Domville, 14 I. C. R. 19. (C.A.)

3. An order for the sale of lands having been made, the owner accepted a private offer, "subject to the approbation of the Court," but subsequently discovering that the yearly rental of the lands in respect of which the offer had been made, had been considerably undervalued, sought to have the approbation of the Court withheld. Whereas the proposer sought to be declared the purchaser of the lands, or at least to have their sale postponed, there being other lands ordered to be sold in the same matter, which were adequate to discharge the incumbrances. Held, that this was not a case in which the Court had power to enforce specific performance, but would exercise its discretion to postpone the sale of the lands upon the express understanding that bona fide proceedings should be instituted upon the private contract.—In re Tottenham's Estate, 15 I. C. R. 308. (L.E.C.)

4. A., entitled to a leasehold and fee-simple estates, devised the latter upon trust for his eldest grandson, B., for life, if he attained twenty-three; remainder to his sons in tail. If B. should not attain twenty-three, then upon trust for whichever of A.'s younger grandsons first attained twenty-three, for life; like remainder to his sons; remainder over. Having directed payment out of his leasehold estates of several legacies and annuities, A. bequeathed his residuary estate (which included his leasehold estates) to his seven younger grandsons, share and share alike. B. attained twenty-three, and died in 1849 without issue. By deed, reciting that A., by will, after devising several legacies, had bequeathed the residue of his property, comprising (among others) leasehold interests, to his seven youngest grandsons; and that C., one of them, was entitled thereunder to a seventh share of A.'s residuary estate, consisting (among others) of the lands thereafter mentioned; C. granted D. all his seventh share of A.'s residuary estate, and in particular all his estate and interest in his seventh share of the leasehold estates (which were specified), "and all the estate and interest of him, the said C., therein, or in any other lands which were part of the residuary estate of" A., unto D., his heirs, &c. Held, that C.'s contingent reversionary interest in the fee-simple estates passed thereunder.

E., another of A.'s grandsons, the solicitor employed to prepare that deed, purchased D.'s interest thereunder; and bought from his other brothers their respective shares in A.'s residuary estate. A judgment creditor of E. presented to the L. E. Court a petition to sell E.'s lands, including the fee-simple estates devised by A. Semble—That the Court had not jurisdiction to declare that C.'s reversionary interest in the fee-simple estates did not, by reason of E.'s fraud in preparing that deed, pass under it.—In re Rorke's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 409. (C.A.)

5. On the 19th April 1864, the Court of B. & I. granted protection from process to the person and property of K., a trader, unable to fulfil his engagements with his creditors. On the 21st April, that order being still in force, and K.'s property being in possession of the Off. Ass., R., a creditor who had full notice of the previous proceedings, entered judgment against K. in an action commenced before the 19th April. On the 23rd April, R. registered that judgment as a mortgage. On the 14th June, K.'s proposed composition was accepted by his creditors, and approved by the Judge. On the 11th October, the arrangement proceedings not having been finally completed, R. petitioned the L. E. Court to sell the lands mentioned in the judgment-mortgage. The conditional order to sell was made absolute in Jan. 1865. Held, that since the estate was in the Off. Assignee's possession and under the protection of the Court of B. & I., at the time when the judgment was registered as a mortgage, it was premature to make absolute the order for sale while the arrangement proceedings were still pending.

That absolute order was therefore set aside, without prejudice to R.'s right to renew his application to the L. E. Court to make absolute the conditional order; and R. was given liberty to apply, so soon as the Court of B. & I. should have determined K's application for a certificate.—In re Kennedy's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 104. (C.A.)

1. A policy of insurance on A.'s life was assigned as collateral security for money secured by mortgage of A.'s lands, which were subsequently sold in the L. E. Court. The policy having been for some time kept up out of the rents and profits of those lands, the L. E. Court ordered it to be sold for the benefit of A.'s unpaid creditors. Held, that the L. E. Court had jurisdiction to make that order.—In re Lynch's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 113; 10 I. Jur. N. S. 17. (C.A.)

2. When the owner is himself in possession of a portion of the land sought to be sold, on showing cause, under the 22nd sec., that half the net yearly income of such land or lease exceeds the interest of the incumbrance, the Court will allow him an occupation rent.—In re O'Hea, 2 I. Jur. 111. (I.E.C.)

LIV. a. 3. Petition: Preparing, Intituling, &c.

3. When there exists doubt as to the owner, the petition should be specially entitled in the names of those in whom the property appears to be vested.

When the petition is prepared with insufficient care respecting the title of the owner and the description of the lands, leave to amend will not be given: the petition will be dismissed.—In re Kennedy, 2 I. Jur. 122. (I.E.C.)

4. When there is doubt as to the owner, the petition should be specially entitled in the names of the parties in whom the property appears to be vested.

When there is not sufficient care in the preparation of the petition as to the title of the owner and the description of the lands, leave will not be given to amend; but the petition will be dismissed.—In re Bourke, 2 I. Jur. 122. (I.E.C.)

5. Quere—If there has been no laches on the applicant's part, will the I. E. Court dismiss, under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 18, a petition presented before the arrival of the time limited by the Court of Ch. for payment of a sum, on non-payment of which the bill in that Court was directed to stand dismissed with costs?—In re Ashe, 2 I. Jur. 186. (I.E.C.)

6. A petition was filed to sell premises, the subject of proceedings in the Bankruptcy Court, but did not rely on the order to sell made by that Court. This Court refused to transfer the proceeds of the sale here to the assignee, until the specific incumbrances had been discharged.—Welpley v. M'Namara, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (I.E.C.)

7. A dismissed petition cannot, even by consent, be reinstated. A new petition must be presented.—In re Balf's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 47. (I.E.C.)

LIV. a. 4. Sale, Order for; Staying Proceedings on; Carriage of; Bidders; Re-sale.

8. The owner of three classes of estates obtained a conditional order to sell the entire.

Another petitioner, whose incumbrance affected only one class, moved to make absolute his conditional order for sale. The Court stayed all proceedings on his petition; but gave him his costs; the owner undertaking to prosecute his petition with effect.—In re Green, 2 I. Jur. 28. (I.E.C.)

9. Two suits were instituted in Ch. In the first the ptf. in the second suit were defts., and in it their rights might have been fully ascertained. The second suit was plainly unnecessary, and was expensively conducted. The ptf. in the second cause having presented a petition for a sale, the Court, on application by the owner, who had also presented a petition, gave the carriage of the proceedings to the ptf. in the first cause, though not properly before the Court.—In re Wall, 2 I. Jur. 44. (I.E.C.)

10. When, on a motion to show cause, neither the party showing cause nor the petitioner appears, the party serving the notice is at liberty to enter a side-bar rule allowing the cause.—In re Foster, 2 I. Jur. 132. (I.E.C.)

11. The practice of the I. E. Court is to recognise only the actual bidder, when he bids in his own name. When he bids, with consent, in another person's name, the Court holds both accountable, unless the bidder has previously declared to the Court that he bids only as a trustee.—In re Stirling's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 229. (I.E.C.)

12. A sale by one Commissioner is always subject to a motion to the Full Court against its confirmation. If no such motion is made, the conveyance executed by two Commissioners is the final confirmation.

The solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings is entitled to his costs, in any motion relating to the confirmation of the sale; but, unless his conduct is impugned, he will not be allowed the costs of counsel.—In re the Earl of Kingston's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 404. (I.E.C.)

13. The owner employed an improper person to bid. The bidder failed to lodge earnest money; and another person was declared purchaser. The owner satisfied the Court that the bidder had been bona fide instructed to bid. Thereupon the Court directed the property to be re-sold upon the terms of the owner lodging within one week £1000, and undertaking to bid £9000, and pay all the declared purchaser's costs and expenses.—In re Waller, 4 I. Jur. 15. (I.E.C.)

1. Motion by the owner to effectuate an agreement to sell the lands for a sum which would leave payable to him a balance of £1000, after satisfying all incumbrances; and to transfer the carriage of the proceedings from the petitioner to the owner's solicitor. No interest was due.

Motion granted; petitioner's costs already incurred to be paid.—In re Bryan, 4 I. Jur. 76. (I.E.C.)

2. The Court will direct the petitioner to assign his securities on being paid principal and interest before the sale, a sufficient undertaking to pay the costs of the proceedings being given; but the carriage of the proceedings will not, as of course, be thereupon transferred to the owner. The Court will direct the matter to be entered in the chamber list, to consider who is the proper party to have the carriage of the proceedings.—In re Kearney's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 89. (L.E.C.)

3. Lands sought to be partitioned are not liable to duty when they form the subject of a petition for sale under the Act, or when they have previously been sold by the Court. A conveyance from the Court to a purchaser, under the 47th section of the Act, is considered equivalent to a sale.—In re De Moleyns' Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 112. (L.E.C.)

4. When the estate is charged with an annuity, subsequent creditors have a right to have the estate sold subject thereto; but if it is sold discharged therefrom, the Court will direct the annuity to be valued so as to release the funds for payment of subsequent charges.—In re Walsh's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (L.E.C.)

5. A creditor has a right to summon, by motion in chamber, the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings, before the Judge, to account for any apparent delay; but that motion should not be mixed up with a motion for the carriage of the proceedings on the ground of delay.—In re Tibbeado, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 243. (L.E.C.)

6. A motion for the carriage of the proceedings cannot be made before an absolute order to sell has been pronounced.

There being a large arrear of interest due on the petitioner's demand, the Court refused to transfer the carriage of the proceedings to the owner.

Such interest being in arrear, the Court will not grant to the owner, as against the petitioner, any indulgence.—In re Tottenham's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 87. (L.E.C.)

7. The solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings is the only person who can take any active steps towards the sale in a matter, unless the Court in any particular matter directs otherwise.—In re Frewen's Assignees, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (L.E.C.)

8. A petition for specific performance of a contract to sell an estate does not prevent a creditor on the estate from filing a petition for sale to realise his debt, since the proceedings in the former case will not necessarily eventuate in payment of the debt.

When there is unnecessary delay in a proceeding to carry into effect a contract for sale of lands, the incumbrancer's remedy is, to file a petition for sale to pay off his incumbrance.

The practice adopted in an ordinary case of a petition to sell, of applying for carriage of the proceedings, there being unnecessary delay, appears to be inapplicable to the case of a petition to carry into effect a contract for sale.—In re Fenton's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 161. (L.E.C.)

9. An estate, to which equities were attached, was sold discharged therefrom, in the I. E. Court.

Judge Dobbs refused, with costs, an application to set aside the sale, though no conveyance had been made. Held, that the application should have been granted.—In re Devereaux's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 101. (C.A.)

10. The L. E. Court made an absolute order to sell leasehold premises on a petition presented by a judgment mortgagee, who had registered the judgment as a mortgage, at a time when the estate, of which the premises formed a part, was in possession of the official assignees, and under the protection of the Court of Ch. Held, that the order for the sale should be set aside.—In re Kennedy's Estate, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 213. (C.A.)

LIV. a. 5. Service of Notice: Process, &c.

11. Service of a conditional order for sale having been substituted by leave of the Court on the attorney of the principal owner, who had left the country, the Court appointed a guardian on whom service might be substituted for minor owners who also were out of the country, and whose interest was the same as his.—In re Purcell, 2 I. Jur. 14. (L.E.C.)

12. A notice to show cause should state plainly the matter intended to be relied upon as cause, and not refer merely to a bill, answer, and decree filed in a particular suit.—In re Knox, 2 I. Jur. 147. (L.E.C.)

13. A purchaser professing to reside in England, and failing to complete his purchase, a conditional order for an attachment was granted: to be made absolute if the price was not paid before a specified time.

A letter directed to the professed address was returned through the Dead Letter-office, but the real address was unknown. Publication of the conditional order in an Irish newspaper, and in an English paper circulating in the neighbourhood of the professed residence, deemed good service of the order.—In re Wall's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 191. (I.E.C.)

1. When funds are realised by a sale directed by this Court, the mortgagee cannot insist upon his common law right to receive six months' notice.

Semble—The proceedings in this Court will be deemed to constitute such notice.—In re Lighton, 4 I. Jur. 35. (I.E.C.)

2. The Court refused a motion to rescind a side-bar order, obtained under the 18th Gen. Rule, allowing the cause shown against a conditional order for sale, the notice to set aside not being served till nearly two months after the side-bar order was obtained.

Such an order will not be rescinded unless notice of motion for that purpose is served immediately on the petitioner's solicitor becoming aware of the order.—In re Finlay's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 389. (L.E.C.)

3. Liberty must be obtained before notice of a re-hearing is served.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

LIV. a. 6. Abatement.

4. When a petitioner dies, and there is no person before the Court in a position to represent the deceased, the Court will not continue the proceedings under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 39.—In re Smith, 2 I. Jur. 175. (I.E.C.)

LIV. a. 7. Incumbrancers.

a. Who are, &c.

b. Settling Schedule of, &c.

LIV. a. 7. a. Who are Incumbrancers, &c.

5. The lands in this matter were conveyed by a deed (executed by the owner, and one of the creditors), upon trust (among other things), to collect the rents, &c., and thereout to pay the interest and principal, as therein mentioned, to the scheduled creditors. Held, that such creditors are "incumbrancers" within the meaning of the Incumbered Estates Act; and that such lands are under a "receiver" within the meaning of the 22nd sec. of that Act.—In re Roche's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 409. (I.E.C.)

6. Mortgagees and petitioners moved for a conveyance of the estates (which had not been offered for sale, or advertised) to them, in consideration of their demand. The Court granted the motion.—In re Lane's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 65. (I.E.C.)

7. When there are debts affecting the inheritance, a creditor, having a judgment affecting the life estate, is not an "incumbrancer" within the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77; and is not entitled to present a petition to this Court to sell the inheritance.—In re the Earl of Glengall's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 65. (I.E.C.)

8. When there are several general creditors, and there is a surplus after payment of the specific charges on the estate, the Court will not, though the owner consent, entertain an application for a general administration of the estate; but the general creditors must proceed in Ch., and the fund will be retained in Court to give them an opportunity to do so.

When a claim is filed, and inserted on the final schedule as a specific charge upon the estate, but the claimant fails to prove it as a specific charge, the Court will not permit him to maintain his priority as a specific incumbrancer as against general creditors, even when no objection has been filed to the claim.—In re Assignee of Bateman, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 162. (L.E.C.)

9. A creditor has a right to summon, by motion in Chamber, the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings, before the Judge, to account for any apparent delay; but that motion should not be mixed up with a motion for the carriage of the proceedings on the ground of delay.—In re Tibeando, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 243. (L.E.C.)

10. A tenant, A., claimed a lease of part of the estate. Not being in possession, however, the Court refused to recognise the lease, stating that A. must first recover possession at law.

A. brought an ejectment. Two other tenants on the estate took defence for part of the lands which A. sought to recover. For the residue no defence was taken, and A. marked judgment for it. On his motion—Held, that the leases to that portion should be allowed.

Held, that, in not having defended the action, the petitioner's solicitor had been guilty of a breach of duty; and that he would be liable for the loss sustained by the estate, if the creditors made an application to that effect.—In re Ronayne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 318. (L.E.C.)

11. When mortgaged lands form the subject of a petition for sale, and the day for repaying the mortgage money has not arrived, the mortgagee is entitled to have the lands sold subject to his mortgage; but the Court will not so sell them, if the redemption day is near, and the security is ample.

The mortgagee cannot, on this ground, show cause against the order for sale; the proper time for his intervention is, on the settlement of the rental before the Examiner.—In re Burke's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 35. (L.E.C.)

12. A petition for specific performance of a contract to sell an estate does not prevent a creditor on the estate from filing a petition for sale to realise his debt, since the proceedings in the former case will not necessarily result in payment of his debt.—In re Fenton's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 161. (L.E.C.)

13. A mortgagee proved under the arrangement clauses. The case having been turned into bankruptcy, his proof was—Held, not an abandonment, but an establishment of his right; the mortgaged property having been valued, and credit given for its worth.

This does not contravene the L. E. Court rule, that a specific incumbrancer, proving in an arrangement matter as a general creditor, cannot afterwards claim in bankruptcy on foot of his specific charge.—Re Wilson, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 328. (B.)

1. The Court will not carry out a contract for sale entered into by the owner, when the charges on the lands exceed the purchase-money, unless the incumbrancers consent: 45th Gen. Rule.—In re Cornwall's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 388. (L.E.C.)

2. The affidavit to register a judgment as a mortgage thus described the lands:—"The lands of C., C., and K., situate in the baronies of A. and M., and county of L." Held, not a compliance with the 13 & 14 Vic., c. 29, because that Act requires that, when the lands are situate in two or more baronies, &c., the same shall be distinctly stated.

The affidavit stated the amount of the judgment to be £71. 15s. 9d., besides £6. 4s. 8d., costs. At the moment of filing the affidavit, the costs, though ascertained, had not been inserted in the judgment roll, a blank having been left for the costs, which was filled up after the filing of the affidavit. Therefore the roll was perfect when the motion was heard, and the affidavit accorded with the roll. Held, that the Court would not enquire into the intermediate state of the roll, since it had been perfected properly and in conformity with the Court's practice.—In re H. Morrow's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 403. (L.E.C.)

3. A judgment creditor on a life estate having procured the assignment of incumbrances on the fee, the tenant for life sought to enforce his right to redeem the latter as against his creditor. Held, that his creditor's right in this respect was paramount to his own.—In re Cassan's Estate, 15 I. C. R. 313. (L.E.C.)

LIV. a. 7. b. Settling Schedule of, &c.

4. On the final settlement of the schedule of incumbrances, the owner cannot object to the validity of an incumbrance included in the schedule to his petition for sale.—Edgeworth's Estate; in re Davis, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 10. (C.A.)

5. If the final schedule is not lodged, the judgment creditor, who has obtained the charging order, should file a claim based thereon; and give notice thereof to the debtor, and to the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings.

If the schedule has been lodged but not settled, the creditor should serve a notice of motion to be heard on the hearing of the final schedule; that he be inserted in the schedule in his proper priority as a claimant on the sum coming to the judgment debtor.—In re Read's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 69. (L.E.C.)

6. An owner included, in the schedule to his petition to sell his estates, judgments as valid charges thereon. Upon the settlement of the final schedule—Held, that as the owner could not dispute their validity, so, his administrator and general creditors had no right to impeach them.—In re Read and others, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 161. (L.E.C.)

7. In a marriage settlement, a husband covenanted with his trustees, that his heirs, executors, &c., would, from his death, pay his wife a jointure of £40 a-year; and pay them £400 for the benefit of the children, if any. The husband became indebted to one of the trustees, who entered up judgment against him, and insured the husband's life for its amount. Upon sale of the trust-property—Held, that the assignee of that judgment was entitled to be placed upon the final schedule of incumbrances in priority to the settlor's wife and children; and that, in considering dealings between a trustee and his c. g. t., the length of time during which the trustee's acts have been acquiesced in with the knowledge of the c. g. t. is to be taken into account in favour of the trustee.

Ennis v. Smith, Jon. & Ca. 400, followed.

Evidence rejected by the Master in the early stages of a suit cannot be used upon appeal; nor can its rejection be questioned unless made a ground of appeal.—In re McKenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

8. Four judgments affecting B.'s estate were purchased by A., his solicitor, for less than the amounts due thereon. Two of them were assigned to him by a deed in which B. joined. A. bought the third shortly after B.'s death; and the fourth while he had carriage of the proceedings in a suit to administer B.'s estate, sold in the L. E. Court. On settlement of the final schedule—Held, that A. could not stand thereon as a creditor in respect of the judgments for more than he paid, with interest, and the costs of the assignments.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

9. The owners of the K. and S. estates (held by the same title), having contracted to sell S., by private sale, filed a petition in the L. E. Court, to sell K. On the settlement of the final schedule, E., a mortgagee of both K. and S., filed an objection claiming to be entitled to priority to the L. & C. Bank. The L. E. Court overruled that objection. Its decision was affirmed by the Court of Appeal in Ch. Both decisions were subsequently reversed in the House of Lords.

Pending the decision in the House of Lords the contract for the sale of S. was abandoned, and the owners filed a petition for the sale thereof in the L. E. Court. On the final schedule of incumbrances, E.'s mortgage was postponed to the claim of the L. and C. Bank. E. did not file any objection, deeming it useless to do so, in consequence of the previous decisions, and pending the decision in the House of Lords.

After the decision in the House of Lords in his favour, E. applied to the L. E. Court to have the final schedules in both matters amended, by inserting his mortgage in its proper priority. That Court refused so to amend the final schedule of the S. estate, on the ground that E. had filed no objection to that schedule. Held (reversing the decision below), that E. had an equity to have his objection to the schedule in the first matter treated as an objection to the schedule in the second matter, and that the latter schedule should be amended accordingly.—In re Burmester's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 48. (C.A.)

1. Upon a motion allowed to be made, after settlement of the final schedule of incumbrances in the L. E. Court, an order postponed an unregistered judgment to a registered deed, and to several intermediate registered judgments. Soon afterwards the owner of the unregistered judgment arranged with the owner of the registered deed, that the latter should withdraw his claim, and consent that the order should be rescinded. Held (reversing the decision of a Judge of the L. E. Court), that the order was not a final adjudication of the priorities of the parties, equivalent to a decree in Chancery; that it ought to be rescinded, and the priorities placed in the order in which they originally stood on the first schedule.—In re Scott's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 57. (C.A.)

2. A Judge of the L. E. Court has not jurisdiction to permit any party to file, after the specified time has expired, an objection to a final schedule of incumbrances.

An incumbrancer on the final schedule noticed a prior incumbrancer, claiming under a judgment mortgage, that, on the hearing of the final schedule, he would be required to produce proof of his judgment mortgage, and that it was duly registered so as to be a charge upon the lands.

The judgment mortgagee produced a certified copy of the affidavit made to register the judgment as a mortgage. The affidavit was right in point of form. No objection was filed. Held, sufficient proof of the validity of the judgment mortgage.—In re Flood's Estate, 17 I. C. R. 116; 11 I. Jur. N. S. 43. (C.A.)

LIV. a. 8. Purchaser's Rights, Liabilities, &c.

3. When the petitioner is a prior mortgagee over a property, and there is no probability of its ever paying him, and consequently, puisne creditors have no interest in it, the Court, on application, will convey it to the petitioner, treating him as mortgagee in possession, and giving him merely a parliamentary title.—In re Joyce's Estate, 4 I. Jur. 16. (I.E.C.)

4. When lands are sold under the I. E. Court, and the time for lodging the purchase-money is extended on the terms of the purchaser paying interest on the purchase-money from the time when it should have been lodged, he will be entitled to all rents accruing due after the date of the sale. If the tenants in such case have paid rents accruing due after the sale, to a receiver, previously appointed by an incumbrancer on the lands, the receiver will be ordered to refund them to the tenants, and to have credit for the same in passing his next account, even though the order discharging the receiver was not served till after receipt of the rents.—Hoops v. Kingston, 5 I. Jur. 231. (R.)

5. Semble—When a purchase is infected with fraud, the Court's equitable jurisdiction will attach to restrain the purchaser from profiting by his fraud.—In re Goad's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 387. (I.E.C.)

6. Parties, acting in trust for themselves and others, were declared purchasers by the Commissioners. The purchasers did not enter any declaration of trust in the Commissioner's book, but it appeared to be well understood between the owner of the estate, upon whose petition it was sold, and the purchasers, that they were purchasers in trust merely. Several of the c. q. trusts declined to complete the purchase. The purchasers were unable to do so; and a conditional order for attachment was made absolute by the Commissioners in Chamber. Upon appeal from that order—Held, that the practice of the Court, which makes purchasers upon the Commissioners' books responsible for the amount of the purchase-money, must be upheld to the full extent.—In re Knox's Estate, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 202. (I.E.C.)

7. All charges on an estate having been satisfied, the residue of the funds was paid to the owner. It subsequently appeared that the purchaser was clearly entitled to compensation on account of an error in the rental. On discovery of the error, the purchaser applied to the Court, which ordered the owner to bring back the sum to which the purchaser was declared entitled.—In re Fell's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 88. (I.E.C.)

8. Notwithstanding that the purchaser resides near, and knows the lands, the Court will grant compensation for an error in the acreage; but will not give it for a misrepresentation as to value; though it might discharge him on that ground if the misrepresentation amounted to fraud.—In re Egan's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 90. (I.E.C.)

9. The Court refused to grant compensation for an error in the rental which had been corrected before the sale, when the correction had been published before, and notified by the Court at the sale.—In re Browne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 142. (I.E.C.)—[Affid. ibid, 328. (C.A.)]

10. A rental simply stated that there was a valuable corn-mill on the lands. The tenant, under the purchaser's notice to quit, carried away the water-wheel, going-gear, three pairs of stones, flour-dressing machinery, &c. The Court gave compensation for two pairs of stones, because the purchaser was entitled to assume that he would get the stones as a part of the mill; and the tenant, having put up those two pair, was entitled to remove them. Compensation for the rest of the machinery was refused; as to part, because it formed portion of the freehold, and the purchaser should have prevented the tenant from removing it; as to the rest, because the Court had not any jurisdiction to sell it, and did not purport to sell it.

On a compensation motion, the Court will not allow the costs of creditors opposing the motion, out of the funds, when the estate is duly protected on the motion by the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings.—Clendinning v. Brett, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (L.E.C.)

1. A rental made no mention of an award in respect of drainage works made before the sale. The tenant, though primarily liable to pay the charge, had a clause of surrender at the end of every seven years. A sum was ordered to be retained in Court, and invested in government stock as an indemnity to the purchaser in the event of the tenant making default in paying the charge.

If the rental over-states a tenant's rent, the purchaser is entitled to compensation; which will not, however, be given for an error in the acreage, when the deficiency does not exceed one per cent. on the number of acres purchased.—In re Browne's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 185. (L.E.C.)

2. When a purchaser elects not to be discharged, but to apply for compensation, he must be content with the amount of his actual loss; and cannot complain of misrepresentation of value, which is only ground for discharge. In cases of over-statements of rents payable under tenancies from year to year, the Court taking into account the tenant's power to quit, allows a year and a-half's rent computed on the over-statement.—In re Usher's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 58. (L.E.C.)

3. One moiety of a f. f. rent was put up for sale, but the purchaser misunderstood the description in the rental, and whilst bidding considered he was bidding for the whole rent, and not a half only. The Court having regard to the fact that the sum bid was manifestly excessive, discharged the purchaser on the terms of his lodging in Court a sum sufficient to meet the expenses of another sale, and undertaking to lodge any further sum the Court might require, and paying the owner's costs of the motion.—In re Browne & Blackie's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 59. (L.E.C.)

4. In converting a lease for lives renewable for ever, the L. E. Court will not make any substantial increase in the rent by reason of the commutation of the covenant giving the landlord the right of pre-emption.—In re Jackson, 11 I. C. B. 145. (L.E.C.)

LIV. a. 9. Affidavits.

5. It is the practice of this Court to allow affidavits to be used in reply, unless the opposite party be thereby surprised.

If the opposite party be thereby surprised, the case will be permitted to stand over to give an opportunity of making rebutting affidavits.—In re Wall, 2 I. Jur. 92. (I.E.C.)

6. When a supplemental affidavit, without the admission of which the ends of justice would have been frustrated, was sworn on the evening preceding the motion, the Court offered to let the motion stand over, in order that the affidavit might be used at the hearing, if its reception was objected to now.—In re Bodkin's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 101. (I.E.C.)

LIV. a. 10. Costs.

7. Petition under the I. E. Act. Motion that the solicitor who prepared it should be allowed a fee larger than the ordinary one, as the petition was of greater length than usual. The Court refused to give any direction; but concurred in Master O'Dwyer's opinion that a fee for counsel should be allowed on petitions under this Act, they being in the nature of pleadings.—In re Darcy, 1 I. Jur. 212. (R.)

8. The abstract of title to a petition stated, contrary to the fact, that a jointure was secured by a trust term; and the petition stated that a greater sum was due for arrears of jointure than was so really; the petitioner was declared disentitled to costs as against the fund.—In re Purcell, 2 I. Jur. 100. (I.E.C.)

9. If a married woman, having separate property, petitions under the 12 & 13 Vic., c. 77, s. 38, as a femme sole, her solicitor will be personally responsible for the costs of the proceedings.—In re Knox, 2 I. Jur. 147. (I.E.C.)

10. A motion was discharged with costs, which had not been paid when it was renewed. It was allowed to be moved upon the solicitor's personal undertaking to pay them.

Afterwards liberty to withdraw it was given, the solicitor making the costs a lien upon other costs due to him.—In re Murphy, 3 I. Jur. 105. (I.E.C.)

11. Motion allowed to be moved, though discharged upon a previous day with costs, which were still unpaid.—In re Sweny, 3 I. Jur. 105. (I.E.C.)

12. The solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings is entitled to his costs in any motion relating to the confirmation of the sale, but will not, unless his conduct is impugned, be allowed the costs of counsel.—In re The Earl of Kingston's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 404. (I.E.C.)

13. This Court referred a case to the C. P. for the opinion of that Court upon a point of law.

The successful party now moved to be allowed the costs of two counsel upon the arguments in this Court and in the C. P., the case having been important.

The Court allowed the costs of one counsel here, and of two in the C. P.—In re Whitsitt, 4 I. Jur. 183. (I.E.C.)

1. A bill was filed against A. and B., and referred to the Master to ascertain the rights of parties, and to apportion the funds accordingly. He reported that on the 27th July 1819, there remained due to ptfs. in a previous cause, on foot of the demand therein decreed to them, a sum which, with post costs in said cause, amounted to the sum specified; and that for payment of said sum with subsequent interest, the funds mentioned in the decree in the present cause, as then remaining in the Bank of Ireland to the credit of the previous cause, were applicable. Held, that in the construction of this order the words "subsequent interest" did not apply to post costs.

That it is not open to counsel, upon appeal from the ruling of a Commissioner in Chamber, to argue questions which had not been raised below, or did not appear upon the notice.—In re Brownrigg's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 363. (I.E.C.)

2. When a petition is filed to sell an undivided share of any land, which is afterwards partitioned by order of the Court, the lien given by the partition order on the unsold portion for its proportion of the partition costs is a charge bearing interest at the rate of £5 per cent. per annum from the date of the order.—Fox v. Wybrants, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 165. (L.E.C.)

3. On a compensation motion, the Court will not allow, out of the funds, the costs of creditors opposing the motion, when the estate is duly protected by the solicitor having the carriage of the proceedings.—Cleddinning v. Brett, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 166. (L.E.C.)

4. A prior creditor allowed proceedings to be carried on to a sale; showed no cause against the order for sale; and pressed the petitioner on to a sale. The Court allowed the petitioner the general costs of the proceedings in the first priority, although the funds realised by the sale did not extend to the petitioner's demand.

When the order is to sell a life estate, there being charges on the fee, the costs of the proceedings will not be allowed in a higher priority than the demand.

The rule has not been applied to the case in which the petitioner is the owner. He will be allowed his costs of the proceedings out of the funds, though no surplus remains after payment of the charges.—In re Kennedy's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 34. (L.E.C.)

5. Lien for costs claimed by solicitor, upon deeds lodged in Court, it not being intended to proceed with the petition for sale of lands. Notice of motion served by the solicitor for an order directing the keeper of the deeds to hand them back. Held, that the proper course would have been to have served notice of motion for an order declaring the solicitor entitled to a lien, and for liberty to file a claim setting forth the particulars to be vouched before the Examiner; and in event of the sum found to be due not being paid, for an order to continue, and take the carriage of the proceedings.—In re Kelly's Estate, 9 I. Jur. N. S. 59. (L.E.C.)

6. When cause, shown by different parties, who represent but one estate, is allowed, the costs awarded are to be paid to the party who first shows cause.—In re Greene's Estate, 14 I. C. R. 325; 8 I. Jur. 348. (L.E.C.)

7. When an administrator has recovered a chattel interest in lands by a decree declaring his costs to be duly charged on the estate, his solicitor cannot file a petition in his own name to realise his own portion of those costs.—In re M'Alister's Estate, 16 I. C. R. 184. (L.E.C.)

LIV. a. 11. Re-hearing and Appeal.

8. It is not open to counsel, on appeal from the ruling of a Commissioner in Chamber, to argue questions not raised below, and not appearing in the notice.—In re Brownrigg's Estate, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 363. (L.E.C.)

9. A motion to re-hear an order or decision must be made within three months, and liberty must be obtained before notice of the re-hearing is served.

The application for liberty to re-hear may be made ex parte.—In re Johnstone's Estate, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 36. (L.E.C.)

LIV. MASTER, PROCEEDINGS BEFORE. See ACCOUNT, VIII.—PRACTICE, CHARGE AND DISCHARGE—PRACTICE, COSTS—PRACTICE, EVIDENCE — PRACTICE, STATE OF FACTS.

[Office of Master (except Receiver Master) abolished; 80 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 27-51; Masters' powers transferred to the Judges; 80 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 143, 144.]

10. The Master has jurisdiction to appoint a rent bailiff to assist the receiver, or a caretaker of plantations, if he conceives it for the benefit of the estate. The Court will not entertain such a motion.—Newton v. Obre, S. & Sc. 137. (R.)

11. The Master has not jurisdiction to tax costs under G. O. 201, except with the consent of both solicitor and client.—Massy v. Millar, S. & Sc. 425. (R.)

12. After decretal order, a third party coming into the Master's office by consent pro interesse suo, and then requiring strict proof of a deed previously admitted, may, it seems, have an enquiry, and put the parties to strict proof; but at the peril of costs, if the deed be finally proved as admitted.—Booth v. Purser, 1 I. E. R. 40. (C.)

1. The Master has jurisdiction, under G. R. 185, to direct proceedings to be taken against a party who, having been let into possession by a minor's father, refused after his death to surrender the possession.—In re Hunt, Fl. & K. 276. (R.)

2. Under G. O. 201, the Master has jurisdiction to tax mere conveying costs between solicitor and client.—Re Smith's Trustees, Fl. & K. 627. (R.)

3. Under an order referring it to the Master to enquire and report the parties' rights to a surplus fund (residue of the purchase-money of debt's real estate, sold under the decree for non-payment of a charge by title paramount), and of all persons having any charge or lien affecting it (the Master publishing advertisements for that purpose), it appeared that the sum, if any, due to one of the claimants could not be ascertained without taking a long and complicated account. The Master was of opinion that the order of reference did not authorise him to take that account. He refused to take it. Pending the reference, the Court, on motion, ordered that the Master should be a liberty to take the account, and gave farther directions on the subject.—Sullivan v. Delany, 6 I. E. R. 370. (R.)

4. The Master has jurisdiction, under G. O. 117, to transfer the carriage of the decree.—Forbes v. Pearson, 8 I. E. R. 35. (R.)

5. The Master has not jurisdiction to direct a receiver to proceed by civil-bill to recover arrears of rent.—Hamilton v. Jackson, 8 I. E. R. 581. (R.)

6. The respondent is not precluded from relying on the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, in the office, as a bar to more than six years' arrears of interest being recovered, though he did not rely on it in showing cause against the conditional order, and though the sum stated in the order was much more than the principal, with six years' interest.—Costelloe v. Burke, 2 Jon. & L. 665. (C.)

7. The Court must give credit to whatever the Master reports as having occurred in his presence.—Walmsley v. W., 3 Jon. & L. 556. (C.)

8. After the report and final decree, the Court will, at the instance of the party having the carriage, permit judgment creditors concurring in the sale, to come in and prove their demands, with liberty to surcharge, and falsify the accounts already taken, it being for all parties' advantage, and to save the expense and delay of a supplemental suit.—Clarke v. Jessop, 10 I. E. R. 40. (R.)

9. The sanction of the Master is not necessary to a petition under the Ch. Reg. Act 1850, s. 11, when a party interested, but not a petitioner, is under any of the disabilities mentioned in that sec.

Whether the rights of persons under such disabilities should be bound adversely, must be considered in each case.

It is indispensable in every petition under that sec. that the documents relied on should be fully set out in the petition, or that copies of such documents should be furnished to the Court and the parties.

A petition under that sec. prayed a declaration of the invalidity of an appointment under a power, and of the validity of a subsequent appointment. Held, that the donee of the power and an appointee (a femme covert), whose husband was a party, were necessary parties.—In re O'Reilly, 1 I. C. R. 208; 3 I. Jur. 208. (C.)—[See s. c., 1 I. C. R. 497. (C.)]

LVI. 1. a. 1. On what Facts Enquiry is made: when a Reference will be directed: generally.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 51.]

1. A direction to trustees to spend at their discretion "in the service of" the testator's "Lord and Master, and, I trust, Redeemer," £2000 annually, until the testator's son attained age—Held, a good charitable bequest.

From its temporary character, and the discretion intended to be given to the trustees, the Court declined to refer it to the Master to approve of a scheme.—Lady Powerscourt v. Lord Powerscourt, Beat. Rep. 572. (C.)

2. The Court will appoint a receiver under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, over a reversion in fee expectant on a term of years. Against an application for a receiver, respondent showed as cause that the coznor had, before the rendition of the judgment, conveyed all his estates to respondent. It was alleged that the conveyance was voluntary, and void as against creditors. Held, that an enquiry into the consideration for the deed should be directed.—Costello v. Jones, 2 Jones, 352. (E.E.)

3. A purchaser under the decree having, under colour of the injunction to put him into possession, dispossessed persons who claimed adversely to the title of the parties in the cause, the Court ordered a writ of restitution to issue to restore them to the possession; and referred it to the officer to ascertain the amount of damages sustained by them in consequence of the ouster. The purchaser was ordered to pay such damages, with full costs; the applicants undertaking not to bring an action.—Anderson v. Barry, 2 Jon. 631. (E.E.)

4. In proper cases the Court will refer it to the Remembrancer to settle conditions of sale.—Bennett v. Beamish, Jon. & Car. 178. (E.E.)

5. On the receiver's affidavit stating the facts fully, and on notice to all the parties in the cause, and no objection raised, an order will be made for the receiver to accept a surrender, &c., from an insolvent tenant, without putting the parties to the expense of a reference.—Davidson v. Armstrong, S. & Sc. 135. (R.)

6. In a possessory suit, if there is a clear contradiction touching an important fact in conflicting affidavits, a reference to the Master will be made on the subject. Bills praying an injunction generally require an answer.—Sinclair v. Marquis of Donegal, S. & Sc. 374. (R.)

7. There was a decree to sell the whole lands. A reference to settle conditions of sale of a moiety was refused, because, when a good title can be made only as to a moiety, the Court cannot, on motion, direct that moiety only to be sold when a decree to sell the whole has been made. The proper course, is to set down the cause for further directions. The Court will not set up for sale lands the title to which it knows is bad.

Semble—If the owner, and the creditors interested in the produce, do not object, the Court will allow a party to apply to stand in the place of a purchaser discharged because of bad title.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 414. (R.) —[Affd.: 1 Dr. & Wal. 265. (C.)]

8. A reference touching the propriety of abating the tenants' rents, and forgiving their arrears, applied for by the receiver alone, was refused; but was afterwards granted upon the concurrence of the parties.—Evans v. Taylor, S. & Sc. 681. (R.)

9. A reference—to determine whether a receiver over impropriate tithes should proceed against the defaulters by bill in equity or otherwise?—was granted upon the receiver's motion; the ptf. concurring.—Callaghan v. Reardon, S. & Sc. 682. (R.)—[See Callaghan v. Reardon, 1 Cr. & Dix, Notes of Cas. 231. (R.)]

10. A reference—whether any sum should be expended in repairing premises held under the Court?—was refused; because prima facie a tenant is bound to repair the demised premises, and the motion was a voluntary application on the receiver's part.—The Duke of Dorset v. Crosbie, S. & Sc. 683. (R.)

11. A motion on the receiver's part, for a reference, whether it would be for the parties' benefit that proceedings should be taken to impeach certain leases, refused; it not being part of a receiver's duty to bring forward such a motion.—Clarke v. Fisher, S. & Sc. 684. (R.)

12. A tenant applied for a reference, whether a composition should be accepted for the arrears of his rent? granted at his expense, and upon other very strict and special terms.—Fitzgibbon v. Flynn, S. & Sc. 687. (R.)

13. There was in Court a clear surplus fund produced by a sale under a decree in a foreclosure suit. The Court, on motion of ptf., a creditor by judgment subsequent to his mortgage, referred it to the Remembrancer to enquire and report who was entitled to the surplus, and whether the ptf. had any and what lien upon it; and, if so, whether there were any, and what prior liens thereon?—Mackay v. Martins, 1 I. E. R. 331. (E.E.)

1. The receiver, under the Sheriffs Act, applied for an attachment against a tenant for not paying rent. It appeared that the respondent leased the premises to the tenant, and that a declaration of trust was entered into, contemporaneously, to the effect that the tenant held in trust for A., who had an incumbrance affecting the respondent's estate prior to any of the judgments which formed the subject matter of the petitioner's claims. The Court directed a reference to the Remembrancer to enquire and report as to A.'s right.—Monaghan v. Kirwan, 2 I. E. R. 408. (E.E.)

2. A creditor who, by lying by, permits the executor, having then assets to pay debts, to pay a legacy, does not thereby lose his right to compel that legatee to contribute to pay his debt, if the executor afterwards wastes the assets. But the executor's assets must first be resorted to. His insolvency not having been proved.—Held, that the legatee was entitled to an enquiry on the point, even after a decree to account, and a report under it.—Mannix v. Drinan, 3 I. E. R. 108. (C.)

3. On motion on a landlord's behalf for liberty to proceed at law, notwithstanding the appointment of a receiver, the Court will not enter into any question of equities between the landlord and tenant; but will, in a proper case, refer it to the Master to enquire and report whether any proceedings should be taken in defending the ejectment, or in relation thereto.—Cramer v. Griffith, 3 I. E. R. 230. (R.)

4. In a suit for an account of an intestate's personalty, the bill sought to charge the administrator with wilful default, and contained charges to that effect. The decree directed ordinary accounts only. Held, that the Court would, nevertheless, direct an enquiry respecting wilful default, if there appeared on the Master's report facts to warrant it.—Cuffe v. C., 3 I. E. R. 469. (C.)

5. Motion, for a reference to the Master to ascertain the amount of interest due upon a demand since the date of the allocating report, refused; because an affidavit ascertaining the sum suffices.—Mahon v. Dawson, Fl. & K. 178. (R.)

6. In proceedings under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court will not refer it to the Master to ascertain the priorities of the different judgment creditors, but will itself decide the question upon motion to draw out of Court the money brought in by the receiver.—Hinton v. Gill, Fl. & K. 183. (R.)

7. On a bill filed to impeach a voluntary settlement as void against creditors, ptf. proved the existence of only one debt, and that of small amount, of the date of the settlement. There were not circumstances to induce the Court to suspect that the settlor was then largely indebted. An enquiry respecting the amount of his debts then was refused.—Manders v. M., 4 I. E. R. 434. (E.E.)

8. The Court, having continued an injunction to the hearing, on the terms of ptf. entering into security by recognizance for mesne rates, made an order, as in the cause, after the bill had been dismissed at the hearing, referring it to the Master to enquire and report the amount which ptf. was liable to pay for mesne rates, so as to enable deft. to obtain an order on ptf. to pay the sum due, and, in default, to put the recognizance in suit.—Callaghan v. C., 4 I. E. R. 441. (R.)

9. When estates and other property, forming a mixed fund, are settled, subject to a power of appointment, the Court, when the parties entitled to that fund are numerous, will not, as against a purchaser of part thereof, in which purchase one object of the fund acquiesced, act as against that purchaser, without knowing all the dispositions of that fund, and will direct enquiries accordingly.—Thompson v. Simpson, 1 Dr. & War. 459. (C.)

10. In a suit to rectify an instrument, deft. is entitled to an enquiry respecting the nature and existence of all written documents bearing upon the question, and deposed to be in existence, but not produced.—Mortimer v. Shortall, 2 Dr. & War. 363: 1 Con. & L. 417. (C.)

11. When a question arises in consequence of estates in Scotland being devised to A., the Court will not adjudicate upon that question until it has been ascertained, by reference to a Master, whether the estates did pass by the Scotch laws.—McCall v. M'C., 2 Con. & L. 184. (C.)

12. A direction, touching the charitable trusts upon which real property devised is to be applied, contained in a codicil, referred to by the will, but not attested, does not bind the Master upon a reference to settle a scheme. If proper, it should be adopted by him.—Att.-Gen. v. Madden, 2 Con. & L. 519. (C.)

13. A reference, to ascertain what sum is due from an infant for penal fines for a non-renewal, cannot be obtained on petition. A bill must be filed.—In re Colthurst, 5 I. E. R. 322; 3 Dr. & War. 35; 2 Con. & L. 35. (C.)—[Rev., 4 I. E. R. 444; Fl. & K. 515. (R.)]

14. Under an order of reference to the Master, to enquire and report the rights of the parties to a surplus fund (residue of the purchase-money of the deft.'s real estate, sold under the decree to pay a charge by title paramount), and of all persons having any charge or lien affecting the same; the Master publishing advertisements for that purpose. It appeared that the sum (if any) due to one of the claimants could not be ascertained without taking a long and complicated account; and the Master, being of opinion that the order of reference did not authorise the taking of such an account, refused to take it. On motion, pending the reference, the Court ordered the Master to take the account, and gave further directions on the subject.—Sullivan v. Delany, 6 I. E. R. 370. (R.)

1. A bill prayed accounts, and an injunction to restrain the deft. from proceeding in an ejectment, because one of the lives, upon which the ptf.'s interest depended, still existed.

Semble—There could not be an absolute decree for ptf.s. without having previously had an enquiry as to the existence of the alleged subsisting life.—O'Donnell v. Nolan, 4 Dr. & War. 153. (C.)

2. The Masters have not jurisdiction to examine viva voce any of the parties in the cause.—Cashel v. Kelly, Dr. Rep., temp. Sugden, 262. (C.)

3. S. was entitled with her brother and four sisters, to a lease for 31 years, as one of the next-of-kin to her mother, one of whose personal representatives she was. The landlord made a lease for 51 years, expressed to be made in consideration of the surrender of the former lease. It described the lands as late in the possession of the mother, and then in the possession of S. and one of her sisters, her co-administratrix. An endorsement on the lease stated, that it was made in trust for S. and her brother and sisters. S. married. The landlord leased to her husband the same lands for 40 years, to commence after the expiration of the 51 years. Held, that the new lease was a graft.

Although a ptf. is bound to prove his whole case at the hearing, yet, if there be no failure of title, but an omission in the proof of it, the Court may, in its discretion, direct a reference to the Master to enquire into it.—McAlister v. Walsh, 8 I. E. R. 250. (C.)

4. When an incumbrancer, to whom money was ordered to be paid, before payment assigns his charge, the assignee cannot obtain an order for payment of the sum ordered, to himself, upon affidavit merely; but must take a reference at his own expense.—Huggard v. Lynch, 8 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

5. A petition, in 1844, under the 1 W. 4., c. 69, stated that, in 1823, V. devised real estate to a trustee to pay debts; and, after payment thereof, in trust for the petitioner; that V. died in 1824; and that thereupon the petitioner entered; that many years ago the petitioner and the trustee sold part of the estate, and paid all the debts; that the trustee had died; and that his heir was a minor. The petition prayed a conveyance of the legal estate.

The Court directed enquiries—whether the minor was a trustee for the petitioner alone, discharged of debts and the trusts of the will.—In re Barry, 2 Jon. & L. 1. (C.)

6. V. devised a house in trust for, and appointed it to the use of a charity school for females. In time, the premises became ruinous, and unsuited for the purpose of such a school; but were valuable for commercial purposes. There was no fund for repairing the house.

The trustees presented a petition under the 52 G. 3, c. 100. The Court refused to refer it to the Master to enquire whether it would be for the benefit of the charity to sell the house; but granted a reference, whether it would benefit the charity to set the house, and apply the rent in procuring a suitable place for carrying on the school?—In re Suir Island Female Charity School, 2 Jon. & L. 171. (C.)

7. In a suit against trustees by a husband, who covenanted to effect a policy of insurance with a respectable Insurance Company, and to assign the same to trustees; but who insured with a Friendly Society, the rules of which subjected the insured to the danger of expulsion, and did not allow an assignment, but allowed a nomination, nearly tantamount to it; and whose capital was not proved; it was referred to the Master to ascertain whether the covenant was fulfilled; the ptf. to pay the costs.

Semble—The covenant was not fulfilled.—Courtenay v. C., 9 I. E. R. 329; 3 Jon. & L. 519. (C.)

8. When a bill is filed to raise two charges, the prior charge affecting the inheritance, and the puisne affecting a term, it will be referred to the Master to enquire and report how much of the produce of the sale, after paying the prior charge, represents the produce of the sale of the term.—Hutton v. Mayne, 9 I. E. R. 348; 3 Jon. & L. 586. (C.)

9. An application to transfer the carriage of the proceedings from a party in the cause, is for the Master, in the first instance, under the 117th G. O. This Court will not entertain it except on appeal.—Lindsay v. Spottiswood, 10 I. E. R. 5. (R.)

10. When a final decree is made at the original hearing of a cause set down to be heard pro confesso, for the amount claimed by the bill, liberty will be reserved thereby to the deft., if he disputes the amount claimed, to apply to the Court for a reference to enquire and report the amount due on the securities.

A cause was set down to be heard pro confesso. A personal decree was granted against an executor, the bill stating that he had received assets and promised to pay.—Buist v. St. Lawrence, 10 I. E. R. 425. (R.)

11. The appointment of a person as receiver over a kind of property the management of which he does not understand, with an undertaking to act under the direction of a person who does not understand it, is improper.

The appointment of a receiver who acts under the directions of a deft. is objectionable.

A reference to appoint a receiver sent back to the Master, though the Master's selection had been affirmed by the Master of the Rolls.—Lupton v. Stephenson, 11 I. E. R. 484. (C.)

1. Motion, before hearing, for a reference to ascertain priorities and take accounts, refused; it appearing that there was another suit for a sale of the same lands set down for hearing in the Chancellor's list, in which the same accounts must be taken.—M'Dermott v. O'Connell, 1 I. Jur. 106. (R.)

2. Under a common order, directing the reference of a solicitor's bill for taxation, the Taxing Master has no jurisdiction to decide a question of retainer.—Belas v. Norris, 1 I. Jur. 267. (R.)

3. When a receiver dies, it is of course, to obtain an order of reference for the appointment of a new receiver.—Wright v. O'Brien, 2 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

4. Bill filed to raise a charge; plea of another suit pending. The plea, not having been set down for argument, was deemed allowed. The deft., who pleaded, moved to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution. The ptf. was permitted to take an order of reference to the Master to ascertain the truth of the plea, although the time for setting down the plea for argument had expired.—Sadler v. Whalley, 2 I. Jur. 171. (R.)

5. A reference to the Master was granted to enquire whether the receiver might not be permitted to give security by the British Guarantee Association.—Hobhouse v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. 172. (R.)—[See Wise v. O'Grady, 2 I. Jur. 212. (R.)]

6. The Court will not in future entertain an application touching payment, by the purchaser, of costs occasioned by his overruled objections to title. The Master has jurisdiction under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, to determine the question of costs.—Neville v. Fitzgerald, 2 I. Jur. 256. (R.)

7. Reference to enquire whether the purchaser under a decree had been put into possession of all the lands. Report: that he was entitled to £60 compensation, which he moved should be allocated to him, with costs of the motion and reference.

Cross-motion: that he should pay ptf.'s costs of a prior reference on which his objections to the title had been overruled.

The Master certified that there were not any grounds to justify those objections.

The Court declared that the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, gave the Masters jurisdiction to decide such questions of costs.—Beddy v. Smith, 2 I. Jur. 266. (R.)

8. When a tenant of the Court replevied a distress made by the receiver, who entered a rule to declare in the replevin suit, but subsequently offered the tenant the costs of the rule, which the latter declined to receive, the Court ordered the proceedings in the replevin suit to be stayed; and directed a reference to the Remembrancer to report what sum was due to the tenant: the order to be without prejudice to any question as to the liabilities of the sureties in the replevin suit, or the costs of that suit, or of the motion.—White-law v. Sandys, 12 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

9. The particulars of sale stated that the timber on the estate would be included in the purchase. To the timber on a very small portion of the lands no title was made. There being no misrepresentation, the Court referred it to the Master to enquire whether the timber on that portion was material to the possession and enjoyment of the estate?—Stewart v. The Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 534. (R.)

10. When the Master reports bad title on but one of several objections thereto, it is proper to send the case back to the Master to review his report, with a direction, that he shall regard the decision of the Court.—Gray v. Strangman, 5 I. Jur. 113. (C.)

11. The Irish Drainage Act, 5 & 6 Vic., c. 89, ss. 76, 79, gives the costs of the investment in government stock of the purchase-money of lands taken by the Commissioners of Public Works, as well as the costs of a subsequent purchase of lands.

The Court will not refer it to a Master to approve of a purchase, unless a particular purchase is stated.—King v. The Commrs. of Pub. Works, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 76. (R.)

12. The Masters have jurisdiction to make orders for substitution of service in 15th sec. cases.

In those cases the M. R. will not make such orders.—Splaine v. S., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 816. (R.)

13. A widow filed a bill for dower against allenees of her husband. To make out her title to dower, the petitioner was obliged to give in evidence a deed, conveying the estate to the person from whom her husband claimed, and reciting that the legal estate was outstanding in trustees. The petitioner also gave in evidence orders of the Court of Ch., to show that such recital was mistaken. Held, that she was entitled to a reference to ascertain of what lands she was dowable.—Kernaghan v. M'Nally, 11 I. C. R. 52; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 51. (C.A.)

14. When the Master had in his discretion settled the entire of a fund upon a wife and children, the Court refused on appeal by the petitioners, assignees in bankruptcy of the husband, to interfere with that discretion, or to charge the fund with their costs. Appeal motion refused, with costs.—James v. Smith, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 837. (R.)

1. The Masters have not jurisdiction to re-hear causes referred to them under the 15th sec.—[Nison v. Peard, 12 I. C. R. 30, is overruled by Sloan v. M'Callen, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 201].—Cooke v. Franklin, 16 I. C. R. 469. (R.)

LVI. 1. a. 2. Respecting Infants, &c.

2. A female minor, having married without assent of the Court, applied with her husband, that the funds to which she was entitled should be transferred to him, he undertaking to make a proper settlement. The parties being poor, the Court dispensed with a reference; and upon the production of a draft settlement, which the Court approved of, and the husband undertaking to execute it, made the order.—In re Bakers, 8 I. E. R. 108. (R.)

LVI. 1. a. 3. In Matters Testamentary.

3. When there is a gift to a number of persons as a class, the course of the Court is to refer it to the Master to enquire who are the members constituting that class, before it decides upon their rights.—Kimberly v. Tew, 5 I. E. R. 389; 4 Dr. & War. 139; 2 Con. & L. 866. (C.)

LVI. 1. b. Proceedings on a Reference.

4. On a reference to enquire what is due for rent and renewal fines, the Master is not warranted to take an account of penal fines incurred for non-renewal.—In re Colthurst, 5 I. E. R. 322; 3 Dr. & War. 35; 2 Con. & L. 35. (C.)—[Rev. 4 I. E. R. 444; Fl. & K. 515. (R.)]

5. A direction, respecting charitable uses upon which real property devised by a will is to be applied, contained in a codicil referred to by the bill, but not attested, is not binding on the Master when settling a scheme; but, if proper, should be adopted by him.—Att.-Gen. v. Madden, 2 Con. & L. 517. (C.)

6. A joint judgment against two cannot be proved under a decree to account in a suit instituted to administer the real assets of the conuzor who died first; the surviving conuzor not being, as such, a party to the suit.

The case does not fall within the 28th G. O. of March 1843.—Hatchell v. Sutton, 2 Jon. & L. 21. (C.)

7. The Court must give credit to what the Master reports as having occurred in his presence.—Walmsley v. W., 3 Jon. & L. 556. (C.)

8. When a second incumbrancer's demand would have exhausted the entire fund in a creditor's suit, the Court refused to allow him to pay off the first incumbrance and take a conveyance without the expense of a sale. All parties consenting, it was referred to the Master to ascertain the value of the debt and estate; and if it would not be beneficial to have a sale, directed the conveyance to be made as asked.—Lynch v. Kelly, 9 I. E. R. 342; 3 Jon. & L. 625. (C.)

9. On appeals respecting receivers' accounts, it is the practice in this country to entertain objections to the amount of the items, though the Master may have adopted no erroneous principle.—Beytagh v. Concannon, 10 I. E. R. 351. (C.)

10. The original decree, pronounced before the G. O. of 1843, contained no directions to take an account of subsequent incumbrances. A decree on a bill of supplement and revivor, made in 1846, also omitted to direct such an account. The Court refused to amend the latter decree, under the 103rd G. O., by adding the direction, as it is not matter of form.

Quære—Whether the 102nd G. O. applies to supplemental suits?—Bradley v. Davis, 11 I. E. R. 134. (C.)

11. An order made on petition under the 102nd G. O. should contain a direction to the Master to advertise for creditors, when the original decree only directed an account of incumbrances prior to and contemporaneous with the ptf.'s demand.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 12 I. E. R. 308. (R.)

12. When objections to a Master's report are filed, and allowed, the objector, if he neglects to get a Master's order for payment to him of the costs occasioned by the objections, and subsequently moves the Rolls for payment of them, must pay the costs of the motion, even though allowed costs of the objections.

When objections are argued in the office, the Master should make a ruling under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, touching the costs. If he reserves that question, the M. R. will not make any order concerning them, except upon a special certificate of the Master.—Pepper v. Foster, 5 I. Jur. 177. (R.)

13. In 1810, two judgments on a joint and several bond against D. and B., to secure £2200, and, in 1812, another judgment to secure £1000 against D., were executed by X., as trustee for the Mayo Infirmary. In 1819, a joint and several bond to secure £3200 was executed by D. and B. to X., who gave warrants to satisfy the judgments. In 1823, two deeds were executed by D. and B.; by the first of which they conveyed lands in trust, to sell with their consent, or the consent of the survivor, and to stand possessed of the purchase-money, on trusts declared by the second deed, viz., to apply £8275 as D. and B. should appoint; in default of appointment, to pay £3000 due to X., the trustee of the Mayo Infirmary (a party to the deed in another character), on a judgment against D. and B., and to pay the surplus, after payment of legacies, to B. and his heirs; and, until the sale took place, to pay the rents as D. and B. should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to keep down the interest on the £3200, and the legacies, and to pay the surplus to D. for life, and, after his death, to B., his executors, &c. No sale was had. In 1826, D. died. In 1827, X. died, without having entered judgment on the bond of 1819, and an undertaking to act under the direction of a person who does not understand it, is improper.

The appointment of a receiver who acts under the directions of a deft. is objectionable.

A reference to appoint a receiver sent back to the Master, though the Master's selection had been affirmed by the Master of the Rolls.—Lupton v. Stephenson, 11 I. E. R. 484. (C.)

1. Motion, before hearing, for a reference to ascertain priorities and take accounts, refused; it appearing that there was another suit for a sale of the same lands set down for hearing in the Chancellor's list, in which the same accounts must be taken.—M'Dermott v. O'Connell, 1 I. Jur. 106. (R.)

2. Under a common order, directing the reference of a solicitor's bill for taxation, the Taxing Master has no jurisdiction to decide a question of retainer.—Belas v. Norris, 1 I. Jur. 267. (R.)

3. When a receiver dies, it is of course, to obtain an order of reference for the appointment of a new receiver.—Wright v. O'Brien, 2 I. Jur. 20. (R.)

4. Bill filed to raise a charge; plea of another suit pending. The plea, not having been set down for argument, was deemed allowed. The deft., who pleaded, moved to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution. The ptf. was permitted to take an order of reference to the Master to ascertain the truth of the plea, although the time for setting down the plea for argument had expired.—Sadlier v. Whalley, 2 I. Jur. 171. (R.)

5. A reference to the Master was granted to enquire whether the receiver might not be permitted to give security by the British Guarantee Association.—Hobhouse v. Hamilton, 2 I. Jur. 172. (R.)—[See Wise v. O'Grady, 2 I. Jur. 212. (R.)]

6. The Court will not in future entertain an application touching payment, by the purchaser, of costs occasioned by his overruled objections to title. The Master has jurisdiction under the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, to determine the question of costs.—Neville v. Fitzgerald, 2 I. Jur. 256. (R.)

7. Reference to enquire whether the purchaser under a decree had been put into possession of all the lands. Report: that he was entitled to £60 compensation, which he moved should be allocated to him, with costs of the motion and reference.

Cross-motion: that he should pay ptf.'s costs of a prior reference on which his objections to the title had been overruled.

The Master certified that there were not any grounds to justify those objections.

The Court declared that the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 12, gave the Masters jurisdiction to decide such questions of costs.—Beddy v. Smith, 2 I. Jur. 266. (R.)

8. When a tenant of the Court replevied a distress made by the receiver, who entered a rule to declare in the replevin suit, but subsequently offered the tenant the costs of the rule, which the latter declined to receive, the Court ordered the proceedings in the replevin suit to be stayed; and directed a reference to the Remembrancer to report what sum was due to the tenant: the order to be without prejudice to any question as to the liabilities of the sureties in the replevin suit, or the costs of that suit, or of the motion.—*Whitelaw v. The Court will not refer it to a Master to approve of a purchase, unless a particular purchase is stated.—King v. The Commrs. of Pub. Works, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 76. (R.)

12. The Masters have jurisdiction to make orders for substitution of service in 15th sec. cases.

13. In 1810, two judgments on a joint and several bond against D. and B., to secure £2200, and, in 1812, another judgment to secure £1000 against D., were executed by X., as trustee for the Mayo Infirmary. In 1819, a joint and several bond to secure £3200 was executed by D. and B. to X., who gave warrants to satisfy the judgments. In 1823, two deeds were executed by D. and B.; by the first of which they conveyed lands in trust, to sell with their consent, or the consent of the survivor, and to stand possessed of the purchase-money, on trusts declared by the second deed, viz., to apply £8275 as D. and B. should appoint; in default of appointment, to pay £3000 due to X., the trustee of the Mayo Infirmary (a party to the deed in another character), on a judgment against D. and B., and to pay the surplus, after payment of legacies, to B. and his heirs; and, until the sale took place, to pay the rents as D. and B. should jointly appoint; in default of appointment, to keep down the interest on the £3200, and the legacies, and to pay the surplus to D. for life, and, after his death, to B., his executors, &c. No sale was had. In 1826, D. died. In 1827, X. died, without having entered judgment on the bond of 1819, and before the judgments of 1810 and 1812 were satisfied. In 1832, B. and the trustees of the deed of 1821 mortgaged to the ptfs., who had notice of the deed of 1823, but not of the bond of 1819; and who, without enquiring whether the £3200 had been paid to the Mayo Infirmary, merely required the judgments, of 1810 and 1812, which they supposed to be the judgment referred to by the deed of 1823, to be satisfied. Judgment was entered on the bond of 1819 in 1838, and assigned to A., in trust for the Mayo Infirmary. A., in a foreclosure suit, filed by the ptfs., proved the judgment, and was, by the final decree, decreed to be paid. The executor of X., after the decree, obtained permission to prove his claim under the deed of 1823, on the usual terms of making up a report at his own expense. Held, on objections to the report, that the order was irregular, and that the report could not be confirmed on motion, as that would vary the final decree, by reporting to the executor of A., as trustee of the Mayo Infirmary in the priority of 1823, the same demand which had been decreed to A. as trustee of the Mayo Infirmary in the priority of 1838.

That a trust was created by the deed of 1823 in favour of X., on which the £3200 was charged on the lands.

That the ptfs. had notice that the £3200 was due to the Mayo Infirmary under the deed of 1823; and, having neglected to enquire whether it had been paid, could not ward off the claim, by reason of the inaccuracy in the description of the security under which it arose.

That X. having executed the deed, though not made a party thereto, as trustee for the Mayo Infirmary, the doctrine of Garrard v. Lord Lauderdale (8 Sim. 1) did not apply, and that he might have enforced the trust created in him.—Gurney v. Lord Orammore, 4 I. C. R. 470. (R.)

1. An appeal does not properly lie upon the rulings of a Master. The order itself ought to be made up before the appeal is brought.—Jones v. Stokes, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (R.)

2. The Court will not hear an appeal against a Master's rulings in a 15th section case. The order must be made up.—Cullen v. Nicholson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 212. (R.)

3. In a suit by bill and answer after decree, the solicitor for the deft. died. No solicitor had been named in his place. The Court, on the application of the deft. having the carriage of the proceedings, allowed him to proceed in the suit before the Master, serving the other defts. (and such as resided out of the jurisdiction by substitution of service or otherwise) as the Master should direct.—De Morin v. Henry, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 300. (R.)

4. Evidence, rejected by the Master in the early stages of a suit, cannot be used upon appeal; nor can its rejection be questioned unless made a ground of appeal.—In re McKenna's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 330. (C.A.)

5. Under the 51st G. O. of the 19th of May 1857, if the final order in a cause petition be not obtained within the time limited by the Master, the petition is not dismissed without an order to that effect.—Moore v. Keogh, 10 I. C. R. 501, not followed.—Corker v. C., 15 I. C. R. 304. (C.A.)

LVI. 1. c. Reference as to Title.

6. Though the purchaser objects that there are several outstanding judgments not proved in the cause, this Court will, at the instance of the party having the carriage of the decree, refer it to the Master to ascertain the sums due thereunder, and to allocate the purchase-money, without prejudice to the purchasers insisting that it shall not be paid out until a clear title shall have been made, and under peril of the costs of reference in default of such title being made.—Greene v. Elliott, 1 I. E. R. 207. (R.)

7. In future, the Court will, in cases of specific performance, add to the reference as to whether a good title can be made, a direction to the Master to enquire and report at what time a good title was shown.—Enraght v. Fitzgerald, 2 Dr. & War. 43; 1 Con. & L. 181. (C.)

8. The Court will not order a reference to a Master to ascertain the amount of interest accrued due upon a demand since the date of the allocating report; an affidavit ascertaining that sum being sufficient.—Mahon v. Dawson, Fl. & K. 178. (R.)

9. In proceedings under 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court will not refer it to the Master to ascertain the priority of the different judgment creditors, but will itself decide the question upon motion to draw the money brought in by the receiver.—Hinton v. Gill, Fl. & K. 183. (R.)

10. When a party objects to a Master's report touching title, the proper course is, to file exceptions, and set them down in the cause list for hearing.

After proceeding before the Master on a reference touching title, the ptf. cannot rely on the purchaser's previous acts as binding him to his purchase, notwithstanding a report of bad title.—Harwood v. Bland, Fl. & K. 540. (R.)

11. The Court will not entertain an application that further searches should be furnished to a purchaser. That application should be made to the Master in Ch.—Lawler v. Drew, 7 I. E. R. 202. (R.)

12. Although a ptf. is bound to prove his whole case at the hearing, yet, if there be no failure of title, but an omission in the proof of it, the Court may in its discretion direct a reference to the Master to enquire into it.—McAlister v. Walsh, 8 I. E. R. 250. (C.)

1. After exceptions have been allowed to the Master's report of good title, in a suit for specific performance, the practice is, not to discharge the purchaser; but, at ptf.'s request, to refer it back to the Master to receive his report, and to enquire whether a good title can be made to the lands.—Stewart v. Marquis of Conyngham, 1 I. C. R. 534. (R.)

LVI. 1. d. Respecting Scandal, Impertinence, Prolixity, and Insufficiency.

2. The ptf. being resident out of the jurisdiction, and his bill having been reported prolix, the Court restrained him from proceeding in the cause until he paid the costs of the reference, and the report of prolixity, though the deft. had neglected to compel him to give security for costs.—La Touche v. Lawlor, 2 Jon. 629. (E.E.)

3. If a party suffers the Court to make an order upon an affidavit, he cannot afterwards refer it for prolixity, though he himself has not taken any subsequent step in the cause.—Robinson v. Warner, Jo. & Car. 50. (E.E.)

4. The limitation of the time within which a pleading should be referred for impertinence and prolixity under G. R. 61, of 1834, does not extend to objections for scandal, as to which the Court will extend the time as much as possible.—Everard v. —, 1 I. E. R. 421. (R.)

5. Under the circumstances, the Court ordered a reference, to enquire and report whether it would be for the infant's benefit that the suit should be defended in his name, or in that of his trustee; and, if to be defended, what funds were properly applicable to the defence; but, if not to be defended, on what terms it should be settled amicably?—Hare v. Mountcashel, 2 I. E. R. 241. (R.)

LVI. 1. e. Whether two Suits are for the same object.

6. The 19th G. O. of Nov. 1834, respecting plea and demurrer, does not apply to a plea of the pendency of another suit for the same subject-matter, when the only question respecting the plea touches its truth.

Such a plea should not be set down for argument; but the ptf. should serve notice of a motion to refer to the Master the question of fact:—Whether the two suits are for the same subject-matter?—Howlett v. Lambert, 3 I. E. R. 472. (R.)

LVI. 2. a. Form of Master's Report or Certificate.
[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, ss. 32-39, as to Certificate of Chief Clerk.]

7. When lands are decreed to be sold subject to an annuity, that is conclusive evidence that the annuity is prior to the claims of all persons claiming under the decree. A report, on the reference to ascertain priorities, found that the arrears of the annuity were posterior to some of these claims. Held, erroneous, and varied accordingly.—Sparrow v. Cooper, 1 Jones, 72. (E.E.)

8. When it has been referred to the Master to report whether an infant is a trustee within 1 W. 4, c. 60, the report should state the Master's reasons for coming to the conclusion that he is a trustee.—In re Purdon, 1 Dr. & War. 500. (C.)

9. The respondent, in the affidavit made by him to show cause against the appointment of a receiver upon a judgment on a bond in a penal sum, admitted that the entire sum due by him on foot of the judgment was a specified sum, exceeding the amount of the principal mentioned in the bond, and six years' interest thereon; and did not rely on the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, as a bar. Held, that a report, finding that the principal, with six years' interest thereon only, was due on foot of the judgment, was erroneous, it being contrary to the admission in the affidavit.—Tristram v. Harte, 3 I. E. R. 386; Long. & T. 186. (E.E.)

10. It was referred to the Master to enquire and report whether there was any and what sum due on foot of a judgment, and whether a fund in Court in a cause, to which the judgment creditor in question was not a party, and allocated by the report under the decree, to a demand on foot of a subsequent judgment, was properly applicable (having regard to the decree) to pay the sum, if any, which might be due on foot of the judgment. The Master, by his report, found a variety of facts, whereby it appeared that there was a serious question whether or not the demand was barred by the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 40, and further found the sum due, if the demand was not barred; but whether it was barred or not, and if not barred, whether the fund in Court was applicable to it (having regard to the decree), he submitted for the consideration of the Court, as questions of difficulty, on which he had not taken upon himself to decide. Held, that this report was irregular; that, pursuant to the order of reference, the Master ought to have decided one way or other, to the best of his ability, and have given the Court, and the suitors concerned, the benefit of his judgment.—Barrett v. Bermingham, 4 I. E. R. 537. (R.) [See Fl. & K. 656.]

1. When a necessary party is not before the Court, a report of good title, the ptf. undertaking to file a supplemental bill, and obtain a decree against such party, is irregular.—Plumptre v. O'Dell, 4 I. E. R. 602. (R.)

2. A minor, ward of Court, was entitled to the fee of lands, subject to a lease for lives renewable for ever upon the payment of a fine of £15 on the fall of each life. He was also entitled to a sub-lease in the same lands, granted by the first lessee, for lives renewable for ever upon payment of a fine of £15 on the fall of each life. The sub-lease contained a proviso, that if the sub-lessee should neglect to nominate a new life, and pay the fine within six months after the fall of each life, he should pay a fine of twenty shillings for every month during which he should so neglect to pay. No renewal of either lease had been taken out from the time the minor's ancestor had become entitled both to the fee and to the sub-lease, a period of nearly thirty years. A petition was presented in the minor matter by the first lessee, praying a reference to the Master to ascertain whether it would be for the benefit of the minor that a renewal should be executed of the first lease, and that he should accept a renewal of the sub-lease; and for an account of what was due for rent and renewal fines; and an order was made accordingly. Subsequently, a second petition was presented by the same person, praying for an account of what was due for renewal fines, septennial fines, and penal rent, by the minor, and an order of reference was made upon that petition, in the same terms as the former order. Held, that the Master was not warranted under those orders in taking an account of penal rent.—In re Colthurst, 5 I. E. R. 322; 3 Dr. & War. 35; 2 Con. & L. 35. (C.)—[Rev. 4 I. E. R. 444; Fl. & K. 515. (R.)]

3. A bill was filed by the representatives of the mortgagor of a chattel interest, against the representative of the mortgagee, who, as well as the debt., had been in possession for some time in respect of two mortgages from the same person, praying an account of the sums due on foot of the mortgages; and also an account of the rents and profits received by the mortgagee and the debt., respectively, whilst in possession; and for redemption. The debt., by answer, set up an account stated and settled between the mortgagor and mortgagee, but at the hearing gave no evidence in support of it, save a recital in the second mortgage deed, that a sum was then due on foot of the former mortgage. The decree directed an account in general terms of the sums due on foot of the two mortgages. The Master's report found, that the ptf. was bound by the stated and settled account. Held, that he was wrong, as a general account had been directed, and no special direction to adopt this recital, as a stated and settled account.—Fitzpatrick v. Mahony, 1 Jon. & L. 84. (C.)

4. Under a decree for an account of the personal estate of a deceased person, who died seized of real estates, the Master should take an account of the rents of the real estate which were due at the death.

A report, finding the amount of the personal estate, but not including an account of such rents, will be imperfect.—Bowen v. Evans, 6 I. E. R. 569; 1 Jon. & L. 178. (C.)—[Affid.: 2 H. L. Cas. 257.]

5. A report of good title, ptf.'s solicitor undertaking to procure a signature, is informal.—Magawley v. Brady, 9 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

LVI. 2. b. Settlement and Signature of Report.

6. Semble—That although the Master's report in favour of a judgment creditor may not constitute an acknowledgment, yet it confers a new right to receive the money, and thus forms a new terminus, whence the bar of the statute will run.—Barrett v. Bermingham, 4 I. E. R. 537; Fl. & K. 556. (R.)

7. A report of good title, ptf.'s solicitor undertaking to procure a signature, is informal.—Magawley v. Brady, 9 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

8. A fee to counsel for setting a draft report, is not allowed in taxation of costs between party and party.

In allowing the costs of attested copies, it is discretionary with the Taxing Master whether he will allow for the copy of the whole or a part only of a document.

Practice before the 1st G. O. of April 1847, as to fees to counsel in the Master's office.—Clanmorris v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 144. (C.)

LVI. 2. c. Filing and Obtaining: in what time.

9. Under a decree to account a creditor filed a charge on foot of a judgment. The charge was disallowed, because barred by the Statute of Limitations. The creditor then issued a sci. fa. against the inheritor the conuzor's heir. The fund being deficient, no defence was taken to the sci. fa.; and the judgment was revived. The creditor then got permission to file a charge, and obtain a report at her own expense, but the Court directed the officer, in considering the Statute of Limitations, not to act upon the judgment of revivor, so far as regarded the rights of the other creditors who had proved under the decree.—Broune v. Lynch, Jo. & Ca. 195. (E.E.)

LVI. 2. d. Review and Amendment of Master's Report.

1. A report was directed to be amended according to the final decree, by substituting a statement that the debt. was seized in fee of premises decreed to be sold, instead of for lives renewable for ever.—Hatchell v. Lord Cremorne, S. & Sc. 675. (R.)

2. After a final decree pronounced but not served, the Court permitted the ptf. to amend his charge and proceed before the Remembrancer, the Remembrancer to be at liberty to amend his report if he should think fit; and the Registrar to be at liberty to amend the decree, according to the amendment of the report; all to be done at ptf.'s expense.—Cotter v. Murphy, Jo. & Ca. 245. (E.E.)

3. The Court will not direct the Remembrancer to amend his report, when it is correct according to the state of the matters at the time of the making thereof.—Kavenagh v. Murphy, Jo. & Ca. 273. (E.E.)

4. A judgment creditor having obtained a decree for sale in the Court of Ch., the lands having been sold under a prior decree of the Court of Exchequer, was allowed to file a charge under the decree to account in the Exchequer, on foot of his demand as decreed in Ch.; and the Remembrancer and Registrar were directed to amend the report and final decree by inserting his demand when proved.—Pidgeon v. D'Alton, Jo. & Ca. 276. (E.E.)

5. Respondent, in his affidavit to show cause against the appointment of a receiver upon a judgment on a bond in a penal sum, admitted that the entire sum due by him on foot of the judgment was a specified sum exceeding the principal in the bond, with six years' interest, and did not rely on the 3 & 4 W. 4, c. 27, s. 42, as a bar. A report found that the principal, with six years' interest only, was due on foot of the judgment. Held, erroneous, the report being contrary to the admission in the affidavit.—Tristram v. Harte, 3 I. E. R. 386; Long. & T. 186. (E.E.)

6. A party quarrelling with a report of bad title should move to set it aside, not to send it back to the officer to be reviewed.

The notice of motion should state the grounds upon which the party seeks to set aside the report.—Vincent v. Thwaites, 4 I. E. R. 689. (E.E.)

7. The Court will not review a Master's taxation of costs unless he has erred in principle.—Darley v. Nicholson, 2 Dr. & War. 86; 1 Con. & L. 391. (C.)

8. The Master may, in the exercise of a sound discretion, refuse to declare the highest bidder to be tenant of lands set up to be let under the Court. But when the Master did not declare the highest bidder to be the tenant, the Court, upon the bidder's application, reviewed the circumstances of the case, and declared him to be tenant at the rent offered by him.—In re Costellos Minors, ex parte Dillon, 2 Jon. & L. 245. (C.)

9. When, by mistake in the draft report under a decree to account, a judgment was entered as of 1834 instead of 1833, and the Master seeing it so entered found the priorities accordingly, and a final decree was made confirming it—Held, that the error could not be corrected under the 103rd G. O.: but liberty was given to go before the Master to have the report amended nunc pro tunc.—O'Brien v. Creagh, 8 I. E. R. 557. (C.)

10. The Court must give credit to what the Master reports as having occurred in his presence.—Walmsley v. W., 3 Jon. & L. 556. (C.)

11. This Court has power on motion to review a report confirmed by the operation of the 137th G. O.—Evans v. O'Dell, 11 I. E. R. 340. (R.)

12. The Court will review the exercise of the Master's discretion in reports under the 145th & 146th G. Os. It is the Court's duty to consider both the state of the property, and the interests of the parties.—Hutchins v. H., 1 I. C. R. 146; 3 I. Jur. 232. (C.)

13. The Master's report, unobjected to, stood confirmed by lapse of time. A case having subsequently been decided overruling the principle of the report, the Court, upon motion, sent the report back to the Master for reconsideration.

Semble—Exceptions are unnecessary if the objections to a report appear on its face.—Vignoles v. V., 4 I. Jur. 123. (R.)

14. In an administration suit, the bill did not seek to charge the executors with wilful default; and the decree directed only the ordinary accounts. Facts appeared upon the Master's report sufficient to warrant such an enquiry. Held, that the report could not be sent back to the Master with a direction to enquire as to wilful default.—Irwin v. Knox, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 8. (C.)

15. There being several objections to the title, and the Master having reported a bad title on but one, the proper course is to send the case back to the Master to review his report, directing him to have regard to the decision of the Court.—Gray v. Strangman, 5 I. Jur. 113. (C.)

1. The Court, adopting the rule at law on a motion to set aside a verdict as against the weight of evidence, will not on appeal reverse the Master's decision on a question of fact, or direct a further enquiry, merely because a doubt may exist that the decision was right.—Gillespie v. Croker, 15 I. C. R. 182. (R.)

LVI. 2. e. Confirmation of Report: its Effect.

2. The Master reported that the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for Ireland were proper persons to be appointed new trustees of properties devised for charitable purposes.

Form of order, confirming this report, and appointing them to be such trustees.—In re Gore's Charity, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 536. (C.)

3. Pursuant to an order of reference in a minor matter, to report the nature and amount of the minor's fortune, the Master reported according to his construction of a will. The Court refused to declare the rights of the claimants under the will, or to confirm the report.—In re Corkers, 3 Jon. & L. 377. (C.)

4. The Court must give credit to what the Master reports as having occurred in his presence.—Wulmsley v. W., 3 Jon. & L. 556. (C.)

5. A purchase deed contained a covenant for quiet enjoyment, free from quit-rent and crown-rent. A contemporaneous deed of indemnity conveyed lands to a trustee and his heirs, upon trust, to permit the vendors and their heirs to take the rents and profits, until the purchaser and his heirs, or any person deriving under him, should be molested, &c., by reason of judgments and incumbrances, or any of them, or any judgment or incumbrance affecting the lands, or any of them, or until some suit at Law or in Equity should be commenced or proceeded on against the purchaser, his heirs, or assigns, or the purchased lands and premises, or any part thereof, for the recovery of or on account of the said or any other incumbrance or incumbrances; and immediately after any such molestation, &c., out of the rents of the indemnity lands, by sale, &c., of a competent part thereof, to raise and levy from time to time, such sums as might be sufficient to discharge the said and all other incumbrances affecting, or that might affect, the lands. In 1827, quit-rent and crown-rent were claimed, and paid out of the purchased lands. In 1828, the indemnity lands were mortgaged by persons claiming under the vendors. In 1839, a report finding that there were no incumbrances, except those named in the report on the indemnity lands, was made, and confirmed by a decree in a suit in which the sums then paid for quit-rent and crown-rent might have been, but were not claimed. In 1858, an order permitted the owner of the purchased lands to go before the Master, and file a charge in respect of his demand for quit-rent and crown-rent, accrued since the date of the report and decree. Held, that the claimant was not precluded by the finding in the report and decree from proving his demand.

That the demand was not barred by the Statute of Limitations.

That the trust in the indemnity deed to indemnify the purchaser was not void for remoteness.—Massy v. O'Dell, 10 I. C. R. 22. (R.)

LVI. 2. f. Separate Report: what acts may be done without waiting for the General Report.

6. In 1800, Blackacre was sold by A. to B. A., by the deed of purchase, covenanted for quiet enjoyment against quit-rents and all other incumbrances. By deed of even date, A. conveyed G. and other lands to C., as trustee, on trust, to indemnify B. against all incumbrances affecting Blackacre, which was liable to quit-rents amounting to £16 per annum. In 1835 the bill was filed in this suit, praying a sale of G. and other lands, to pay incumbrances prior and subsequent to the sale in 1800. D., the heir of B., was made a deft. in that suit, as mortgagee of certain of the lands comprised in the deed of indemnity, and also as purchaser; and the deeds of purchase and indemnity were put in issue in the cause. D., by answer, did not make any claim in respect of quit-rents issuing out of Blackacre. In 1839 a report and final decree for sale was made. In 1858, there being a fund in the I. E. Court, the produce of G., which the Commissioner declined to make applicable to payment of quit-rent, F., the heir, and personal representative of B. and D., applied in this Court, alleging that D. and F. had, since 1827, and down to 1857, paid quit-rents, contrary to the covenant; and asking leave to go in before the Master and obtain a separate report as to his rights against the fund in Court, under the deed of indemnity. Counsel on behalf of F., waiving all right to prove for payments made anterior to the date of the final decree.—Held, that F. was entitled to go in before the Master and prove his claim in respect of payments since the date of the order, without prejudice to any defence arising out of the construction of the deeds.—Massy v. O'Dell, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 360. (R.)

LVI. 2. h. 1. General Orders.

7. The selection of a commissioner to take evidence is vested in the discretion of the Master. The Court will not vary his appointment on a charge that the commissioner is interested in the success of the ptf., because of his friendship for ptf.'s solicitor, payment of whose costs depends upon his succeeding in the suit.

G. O. 105, in limiting the discretion of the Master, applies to cases in which an examination of witnesses is to be held in one place only.—Malone v. O'Connor, S. & Sc. 429. (R.)

LVI. 2. h. 2. When Exceptions are Proper or Necessary: Obtaining Leave.

1. J. devised all his estates, real and personal, to trustees, first, to pay all his debts, &c., then to the use of his son, C., for life, remainder to C.'s issue; if C. died without issue, to W. for life: remainder to such of W.'s children as should be living at her death, in equal shares. C. died without issue. W. had several children alive. In a suit by J.'s creditors to carry into execution the trusts to pay debts, and praying a sale of the real estate, it was set up for sale. Three of the children were then out of the jurisdiction. The highest bidder excepted to the report of good title, on the ground that the absent children would not join in the conveyance, and were not bound by the decree. Held, that the exceptions were irregular, being exceptions—not to the title, but to the conveyance; but that the purchaser would not be compelled to complete his purchase, since the objection for want of parties was fatal.—Oldham v. Wilkins, 1 I. E. R. 59. (R.)

2. At the hearing, an incumbrancer set up a claim to priority inconsistent with the Master's finding. Held, that though, if the right claimed would follow necessarily on the reported facts, the Court would act upon it, without any exception having being taken, it would not do so if the right would have been liable to be encountered before the Master by evidence, if claimed before him.—Brownlow v. Earl of Meath, 2 I. E. R. 383; 2 Dr. & Wal. 674. (C.)

3. When a party objects to a Master's report touching title, the proper course is, to file exceptions, and set them down in the cause list for hearing.

After proceeding before the Master on a reference touching title, the ptf. cannot rely on previous acts of the purchaser, as binding him to his purchase, notwithstanding a report of bad title.—Harwood v. Bland, Fl. & K. 540. (R.)

4. J., possessed of a term of years in A., died intestate, and indebted, in 1791, leaving two children, H. and T. Without obtaining administration, H. entered on A., and acted as sole owner thereof. In 1802, he obtained administration to J., and died in 1809. Soon after J.'s death, T. went to reside in England where he died in 1805, without having claimed any interest in A. In 1807 there was filed against H. a bill to foreclose a mortgage of A. After H.'s death, that suit was altered into one to administer his assets. T.'s personal representative was not a party thereto, nor was any claim advanced by him, or on his behalf, to a moiety of A., after payment of J.'s debts, until 1818. Held, that under a decree to take an account of H.'s personal estate, the Remembrancer was not warranted in reporting that the whole of A. was H.'s personal estate.—Scott v. Knox, 4 I. E. R. 397. (E.E.)

5. Leave given to file exceptions nunc pro tunc, on payment of costs, under peculiar circumstances.—Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 8 I. E. R. 317. (C.)

6. Exceptions by parties not interested in supporting them, though so taken to save expense, are objectionable.—Smith v. Chichester, 12 I. E. R. 519. (C.)

7. An objection in point of law, patent on the report, may be taken at the hearing on further directions, though no exception has been filed.—Finucane v. Studdert, 1 I. C. R. 140; 3 I. Jur. 114. (C.)

8. Semble—Exceptions are unnecessary if the objections to a report appear on its face.—Vignoles v. V., 4. I. Jur. 123. (R.)

LVI. 2. h. 3. Form of Exceptions to Master's Report.

9. Exceptions to report should not be prolix or argumentative; but should state concisely the fault imputed to the report.

When wilful default is not referred by the decretal order—Semble, no exception can be taken to the report for not finding it.—Booth v. Purser, 1 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

10. It is right that a general objection should be taken to a report, in addition to objections specially pointing out the questions intended to be raised; as such general objection may prevent the Court being embarrassed by any technical difficulty arising from the frame of the special objections. But the attention of the Master should be called by objections to the points upon which the report is complained of; and the Court should be enabled from reading the objections to understand the precise grounds upon which it is contended that the report is erroneous. It is quite impossible from reading these objections to understand what were the points raised before the Master. I wish however to be understood, that I do not desire to encourage a course sometimes adopted, and even more objectionable, of filing a vast number of objections to the report, raising the same points.—Gardiner v. Blesinton, 1 I. C. R. 68; 3 I. Jur. 116. (R.)

11. Objections and exceptions to reports should state the exact proposition which the Court is called on to decide.

When a receiver is appointed over tithe rentcharge, the funds realised by him are applicable in the first instance to the repairs of the church.—Cullen v. The Dean and Chapter of Killaloe, 2 I. C. R. 183. (R.)

LVI. 2. h. 3. Form of.

1. Leave given to file an exception to the officer's report (of bad title) nunc pro tunc.—Conyers v. Crosby, 7 I. E. R. 301. (E.E.)

2. In a rental under which lands were sold, a part was thus described:—"Term for which demised; under an article of agreement for lease for four lives, bearing date 1804, and one year." The sale took place in Jan. 1845. On the 9th of April the purchaser's solicitor received a copy of the article, and then first discovered that the agreement was for a lease to commence after the expiration of a then subsisting lease, which did not expire until 1843. On the 24th of Oct. he lodged objections to the title, and subsequently swore that he was misled by the statement in the rental. Held, affirming the report, that the mis-statement was ground for discharging the purchaser, not for compensation. That the delay in lodging the objection disentitled the purchaser to his costs.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 44. (R.)

3. Lands were set up as held under a clear and indefeasible title in fee. It appeared that they had been conveyed forty years before, reserving a right to cut turf and quarry limestone, to tenants of another estate, although the right had never been since exercised, and there were no turf-bogs worked or quarries open on the estate. It did not appear that there might not be turf, and there was no proof that there was not limestone. Held, a good objection to the title, and the purchaser discharged.

The rental at the sale contained an obscure statement, leaving it doubtful whether a tenant held for lives named in 1804 or 1843; it proved to be the latter, and the purchaser swore he had been misled. Held, a sufficient ground for discharging the purchaser.

A delay of seven months held no waiver of an objection to the title, which turned upon a question of fact.

Observations on clearing a title by showing the non-existence of rights under a reservation or onerous covenant not stated; and on the duty of being careful and explicit in preparing for a sale.—Martin v. Cotter, 9 I. E. R. 351; 3 Jon. & L. 496. (C.)

5. When the report of the Master, under an order to take preliminary accounts under the 36th G. O. is excepted to, the exceptions are to be brought before the Rolls; and not set down to be heard before the Lord Chancellor.—Leech v. Law, 11 I. E. R. 186. (C.)

6. The person filing exceptions is bound to have an office copy of the exceptions in Court when they are to be argued.—Bohan v. Cambie, 10 I. C. R. 466. (C.)

7. Exceptions to a Master's report cannot be opened by senior counsel without a junior.—Brereton v. Barry, 14 I. C. R. 374; 8 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (C.)

10. A motion for an order upon a receiver, to pay over a sum in his hands, is not strictly a money motion. Such a motion was moved, when the Court was in money motions, in the absence of counsel who had a brief to oppose it. The motion was re-heard.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 417. (E.E.)

1. The Court will not hear a motion founded on documents. Counsel must be furnished with a brief, and the solicitor be in attendance with the documents.—Curtis v. Darcy, 6 I. E. R. 149. (R.)

2. When there is a notice of motion served for the hearing of the cause, it is in the discretion of the Court whether the motion or the cause shall first be heard.—Stock v. Aylward, 8 I. C. R. 429; Dr. Rep. temp. Napier, 378. (C.)

LVIII. 2. What may be effected by Motion.

3. The application to restrain a solicitor from acting against a former client may be made by motion in the cause in respect of which such injunction is sought. It need not, necessarily, be made by petition.—Biggs v. Head, S. & Sc. 335. (R.)

4. Decree to sell the whole lands. Reference, to settle conditions of sale of a moiety, refused; because, when a good title can be made to a moiety only, the Court cannot, on motion, direct that moiety only to be sold, when a decree to sell the whole has been made. The proper course is to set down the cause for further directions.—Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 414. (R.)—[Affirmed: Dr. & Wal. 265. (C.)]

5. On motion, the Court will order a sheriff to pay such a sum of money as it appears has been lost in consequence of his refusing or neglecting to execute, with due diligence, an attachment issued out of this Court and directed to him.—In re Comyns, 1 I. E. R. 72. (R.)

6. An application under 1 W. 4, c. 60, to appoint a person to convey, in the place of an absent trustee, who had been discharged by a decree, ought to be by motion in the cause in which the decree was pronounced, a petition for that purpose being unnecessary.—Callaghan v. Egan, 1 Dr. & Wal. 187. (C.)

7. When it appears by the bill, that the ptfs. are resident out of the jurisdiction, the motion, that proceedings may be stayed until the ptfs. give security for costs, is a motion of course.—Yarborough v. Brazier, 2 I. E. R. 463. (R.)

8. In proceedings under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, the Court will not refer it to the Master to ascertain the priorities of the different judgment creditors, but will of itself decide the question upon motion to draw out the money brought in by the receiver.—Hinton v. Gill, Fl. & K. 183. (R.)

9. The Court will not appoint a Commissioner Extraordinary, unless a petition has first been presented.—In re Armitstead, 2 Dr. & War. 55. (C.)

10. A judgment creditor obtained a charging order on funds reported to his debtor in the cause. After the expiration of the six months from the date of the order, the Court directed the funds to be transferred to the creditor, on motion, without a bill having been filed.—Burke v. B., 7 I. E. R. 174. (R.)

11. The Court will not entertain an application that further searches shall be furnished to a purchaser. That application should be made to the Master.—Lalor v. Drew, 7 I. E. R. 202. (R.)

12. It is not necessary to present a petition for an order for liberty enrol a decree, if six months have elapsed from its making. The application may be made by motion on notice in the cause.—[See G. O. 103; Ch: G. O. 95. (E.E.)] Lord Trimleston v. Farrell, 1 Jon. & L. 161. (C.)

13. After notice of motion by deft. to dissolve an injunction on an answer filed, ptf., on the eve of the vacation after H. T., filed exceptions to the answer. The Court refused to entertain the motion.

Quære—In cases of waste, can deft. move to dissolve the injunction?—Perse v. Queely, 9 I. E. R. 151. (R.)

14. Though a bill has been filed on the authority of a reported decision, which is afterwards reversed, the Court has not jurisdiction, on motion, under G. R. 82, to order that the bill shall be dismissed, without costs.—Cronin v. Murphy, 1 I. C. R. 233. (R.)

15. The application for leave to enrol a decree pronounced more than six months before, may be made either by motion or petition.—Hamilton v. H., 1 I. C. R. 253. (C.)

16. A., having filed a cause petition against B. his tenant, to enjoin him from using the demised premises as a shop, contrary to his covenant, was evicted by his head landlord, in consequence of a breach of the same covenant contained in the head lease. A. applied to have his petition dismissed without costs, as further proceedings were useless. Held, that the costs of the cause petition could not be in such a case decided on motion.—Fortune v. Doyle, 5 I. Jur. 58. (R.)

17. A sum having been lodged in Court as security for costs, a motion to increase it, because it was insufficient to cover the costs already incurred, was refused with costs.—Shannon v. Fagan, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (C.)

LVIII. 3. Notice of Motion.

[See 30 & 31 Vic., c. 44, s. 85: G. O. (1867), 91-97, 106, 110, 112, 113, 118, 119, 120, 122, 125, 136, 138, 143, 168.]

18. Notice of motion for liberty to issue and execute a sequestration upon a decree, is not necessary.—Monk v. Lawlor, 1 Jones, 554. (E.E.)

19. Notice need not be given to every deft. of a motion to take a bill pro confesso under G. O. 46, against another deft. If the deft. against whom the motion is made has appeared, or adopted an appearance, it is right to give his solicitor notice.—Denis v. Deane, S. & Sc. 127. (R.)

1. Notice of motion to take a bill as confessed against some defts. under the 46th G. O., need not be given to another deft. for whom a parliamentary appearance has been entered.—Tarrant v. Allen, S. & Sc. 676. (R.)

2. When, during more than a year, no proceeding in a cause has been taken, the notice of a motion to dismiss the bill under the 93rd G. O. must be served upon the ptf. personally.—Nolan v. Adamson, S. & Sc. 701. (R.)

3. A notice of motion should state fully the matter of the application, so that if the Court says, "Be it so," the officer may be enabled, by following the notice, to frame the order. A notice of motion was for leave "to amend in the several particulars specified in an affidavit:" the Court refused to make any order.—Curren v. Walsh, 1 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

4. When a notice of a motion is personally served on a party out of Court, it should be of a motion to be made on a particular day, and not "on the first opportunity."—Creed v. C., 2 I. E. R. 32. (R.)

5. Notice of a motion for liberty to execute a sequestration upon a decree, is necessary, when it is sought to execute it against lands.—Welsh v. W., 2 I. E. R. 360. (E.E.)

6. A motion, to renew an order in a cause, must be upon notice.—Brown v. Lynch, 2 I. E. R. 411. (E.E.)

8. A notice of motion, to have a receiver's account sent back to be reviewed, must specify the items objected to. To refer for them to the affidavit to be used upon the motion, does not suffice. A motion to vacate the recognizance, at the same time that the receiver applies to be discharged, is premature.—D'Arcy v. Sherry, 2 I. E. R. 411. (E.E.)

9. A notice of a money motion, moveable the last of the eight equity days, is too late. It must be served in time to be moved on the last day but one.—O'Ferrall v. Madden, 2 I. E. R. 416. (E.E.)

10. On an application for liberty to issue a sequestration for the costs of dismissing a bill, if the applicant be proceeding against personal property, notice of the motion need not be given.

Secus—When the applicant is proceeding against real property.—O'Brien v. Foley, 2 I. E. R. 418. (E.E.)

11. A motion, to invest the one-fourth of the purchase-money in $\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. stock, must be upon notice.—Lee v. Poole, 2 I. E. R. 419. (E.E.)

12. If deft. have not appeared, it is not necessary to give him notice of a motion for liberty to execute a sequestration on the decree against deft.'s real estate. The motion will not be granted, if the annual value of the real estate be not stated in the affidavit.—Edwards v. Plunkett, 3 I. E. R. 502. (E.E.)

13. The notice of motion to make a consent a rule of Court should set forth the substance of the consent.—Smith v. Martin, 4 I. E. R. 168. (R.)

14. A party, moving to set aside proceedings, as irregular, is not bound to specify in his notice the particular irregularity complained of.—Heron v. Stokes, 4 I. E. R. 277. (C.)

22. Every notice of motion for a particular day should state that the motion would be moved at the sitting of the Court.—Graves v. G., 1 I. Jur. 155. (R.)

23. Motion that several documents mentioned in the notice, being in the Master's office, might be read at the hearing; and that the deft. should deposit with the Registrar, to be read in evidence at the hearing, the deeds and documents mentioned in the notice. Motion refused with costs, the notice being irregular; but without prejudice to the service of a proper notice specifying the documents in a schedule.—Donegal v. Gregg, 1 I. Jur. 201. (R.)

1. A notice of motion for liberty to amend is no answer to a motion to dismiss the bill for want of prosecution under the 82nd G. O. (1843).—Mark v. Willington, 11 I. E. R. 269; Seaver v. Fivey, 1 I. Jur. 258. (R.)

2. If a cause is out of Court, it is sufficient, in the Exchequer, to serve the notice to have the bill dismissed for want of prosecution, upon the solicitor. Secus—At the Rolls.—Dogherty v. D., 2 I. Jur. 110. (E.E.)

3. A notice to show cause should state plainly the matter intended to be relied upon as cause, and not merely refer to a bill, answer, and decree filed in a particular suit.—In re Knox, 2 I. Jur. 147. (I.E.C.)

4. When a respondent has not appeared in a 15th sec. cause petition, a motion for an order of reference to appoint a receiver is not an ex parte application to be moved at the Master's sitting.

How notice of such a motion should be served and listed.—Frankan v. O'Neill, 5 I. Jur. 358. (M.O.)

5. A notice of motion must be properly entitled in the matter of the statute under which the application is made.—Foster v. Higgins, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 75. (R.)

6. When it is sought to substitute service of the summons and notice of a cause petition upon a party out of the jurisdiction, by serving his solicitor on record in other matters, notice of the motion should be served on the solicitor.—Bradford v. Roche, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 75. (R.)

7. A party, who desires to serve, out of Term, a notice of motion, must apply to the Court for liberty to do so, on an affidavit stating the pressing circumstances which necessitate the motion.—Pilsworth v. Nash and Nolan, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 78. (P.)

8. A motion to transfer to the jurisdiction of the Assistant-Barrister a suit commenced in the Probate Court, and over which, if not commenced there, he would, under the terms of the Act, have had jurisdiction, should be made on notice to the opposite party.—In re O'Donnell, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

9. To a plea denying that A. had died intestate, and propounding a will; the ptf., without serving notice, moved for leave to file special replications. Held, that the deft. should be served with two clear days' notice of the motion.—Meek v. M., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (P.)

10. To a notice of motion asking costs, the opposite party replied by a counter-notice, offering what was sought, except costs, about which it said nothing. The Court gave the moving party the costs properly and necessarily incurred by him up to the service of the counter-notice.

There is no such thing as a general authority to file petitions. When a suit is instituted in the name of a next friend, the authority from him should be filed according to the 3rd G. O. of 19th May 1857.—Geoghegan v. Harding, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 211. (R.)

11. Liberty to file a petition of revivor merely, may be obtained by motion of course: notice ought to be served when it is sought to file a petition of revivor and supplement.—Williamson v. Tuckey, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (R.)

12. A notice of motion is required for a conditional order to assign an administration bond.—Russell v. R., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (P.)

16. Liberty to file a petition of revivor merely may be obtained by motion of course: notice ought to be served when it is sought to file a petition of revivor and supplement.—Williamson v. Tuckey, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 276. (R.)

LVIII. 5. Motion: when and how made.

17. When an affidavit is filed as cause against a conditional order, a motion to make the order absolute may be made, notwithstanding the expiration of ten sitting days since it was filed, unless the opposite party has proceeded to tax his costs.—Lloyd v. Armstrong, 1 I. E. R. 75; Jon. & C. 73. (E.E.)

18. A motion for an order to take preliminary accounts should not be made in a suit that is either abated or defective; or in respect of accounts, the taking of which would prejudice any question in the cause.—Thompson v. Maxwell, 5 I. E. R. 448. (R.)

19. That a motion, if granted, will have the effect of postponing the hearing of a cause already in the list, is no reason why it should not be heard at the Rolls. This Court (Ch.) will not entertain such a motion when the case is called on.—Crawford v. Scott, 2 Con. & L. 412. (C.)

1. A motion for an abatement of rent in a minor matter should not be made to the Court.—Alston v. Alcock, 1 I. Jur. 282. (R.)

2. When a notice of motion is served for the hearing, it is in the discretion of the Court whether the motion or the cause shall be heard first.—Stock v. Aylward, 8 I. C. R. 429; Dr. Rep. temp. Nap. 378. (C.)

8. Semble—Motions on the Petty-bag side of the Court must be made in Term.—The Queen v. Swan, 16 I. C. R. 21. (C.)

LVIII. 6. Form of Motion: Proceedings on.

4. When a purchaser moves, on consent, to lodge a promissory note in part payment of his purchase-money, the consent and note should both specify the rate of interest payable on the note.—O'Connor v. Richards, 8 & Sc. 160. (R.)

5. An affidavit, made to resist a motion, may be used on the motion, notwithstanding that it has been referred for impertinence and scandal, and that the reference is still pending.—Birch v. Ait, 1 I. E. R. 228. (R.)

6. A motion, for an order on a receiver to pay over a sum in his hands, is not strictly a money motion. Such a motion having been moved while the Court was hearing money motions, and in the absence of the opposing counsel, it was re-heard.—Anon., 2 I. E. R. 417. (E.E.)

7. The Court will not hear a motion founded on documents, unless counsel be furnished with a brief, and the solicitor be in attendance with the documents.—Curtis v. Darcy, 6 I. E. R. 149. (R.)

8. On motions to extend receivers, the only persons entitled to be heard are the petitioner and the debtor, and not the parties who have appointed or previously extended the receiver.—Walsh v. W., 11 I. E. R. 607. (C.)

9. The rule against re-hearing an appeal motion is not inflexible. It is a sufficient ground for refusing the motion, that the case has already received anxious consideration.—Lady Langford v. Mahony, 11 I. E. R. 819. (C.)

10. A motion for an abatement of rent in a minor matter should not be made to the Court.—Alston v. Alcock, 1 I. Jur. 282. (R.)

11. The M. R. declined to make a consent a rule of Court, on the ground that the effect of the consent was to vary a decree of the Lord Chancellor, and that he had no jurisdiction to vary such a decree. The motion was removed before the Lord Chancellor. Held, that a copy of the Rolls order must be taken out, and that the new motion was in fact an appeal.—Tennant v. T., 5 I. C. R. 228. (C.)

12. A motion to pay money out of Court should be entitled in all the causes respecting which the fund is to be distributed.—Powell v. Sullivan, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (R.)

NE EXEAT REGNO, WRIT OF. See WRIT, 4.

LIX. NEW TRIAL.

1. When Granted.

2. How obtained: Proceedings on.

LIX. 1. New Trial: when Granted.

18. After the trial of an issue to determine who was heir of A.—Held, that a new trial should be granted, because the case made at the trial differed from that made in equity: that the verdict on the first trial should not be given in evidence on the second: that the costs of the first trial should not be allowed to the party obtaining the verdict, but should be reserved: and that manifestations of applause by some of the jury at the close of the speech of one of the counsel was not a sufficient ground to change the venue.

On granting a second trial of an issue, it is not the practice in England, and ought not to be the practice in Ireland, to take any notice of the verdict on the first trial, either by setting it aside, or giving it in evidence.—O'Connor v. Malone, 6 Cl. & F. 572.—[Rev. 2 Dr. & Wal. 491. (C.)]

14. Before a Judge will be called on to furnish his notes of the trial of an issue, the Court must be satisfied that they are necessary for the purposes of the motion.—Hungerford v. Jagoe, 1 Jon. & L. 691. (C.)

15. The Court directed an issue to try whether C. was a lunatic when certain instruments were executed. At the trial, a memorial of a deed, executed by C., was produced as evidence of C.'s acts. The deed was not produced, nor was its non-production accounted for. On motion for a new trial—Held, that the memorial had been properly received in evidence.

After the execution of the deeds, C. was found a lunatic by a commission. Orders and a report in the lunacy matter, containing recitals and statements which were not evidence, and which might influence the jury in finding their verdict, were sent to the jury. The Judge informed the jury that those recitals and statements were not evidence, and cautioned the jury to disregard them. On motion for a new trial—Held, that it should not be granted on that ground.—Creagh v. Blood, 8 I. E. R. 34; 2 Jon. & L. 509. (C.)

16. From the circumstances under which a letter of license has been signed, it may be inferred that it was not a concluded agreement binding upon the person signing it—e. g., when it was only in course of signature by the creditors generally, and it was not intended to operate unless signed by an influential overpowering body of the creditors, which it was not.

A jury having found upon an issue that a letter of license executed under such circumstances was not a concluded binding agreement, the Lord Chancellor refused to disturb the verdict.—In re Semple, 3 Jon. & L. 488. (C.)

1. The Lord Chancellor sent a case to a Court of Law. There had been two verdicts, in an ejectment on the title, establishing the right of the ptf. in the Equity suit to freehold property devised to him away from the heir-at-law, who claimed as devisee under a subsequent will, which both verdicts found to have been executed when the deviser was mentally incompetent. No complaint was made of the last verdict. Held, although character was involved, and the trials took place in a county remote from the residence of the parties and their witnesses, and different from the venue of the lands, the deft. having consented to the locality fixed for the trial, and the consent being made a rule of Court, that sufficient investigation had taken place.—French v. Ff., 2 I. Jur. 177. (C.)

2. The Commissioners of the I. E. Court ordered the sale of a property, the petitioner's right to which was founded on a verdict obtained by suppressing a material document at the trial of an action of trespass to try an alleged right of the appellant to a way claimed by the petitioner. This action was brought under the Commissioners' direction. The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council directed a new trial at which that verdict should not be given in evidence; and stayed the sale in the meantime.—In re Cooper's Estate, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 321. (P.C.)

3. Whether the Judge, before whom an issue directed by a Court of Equity has been tried, has or has not misdirected the jury, one verdict does not bind the Court of Equity, which may, for its better satisfaction, direct a new trial.—Boyse v. Rossborough, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 265. (H.L.)—[S. c., 6 H. L. Cas. 2.]

4. A creditor relied, as ptf., on a will which gave his debtor, sole next-of-kin and heir-at-law of the testator, all the testator's property. That debtor's son relied on a will, posterior in point of apparent date, which gave him all the property. The ptf. disputed the signature to this will; and replied that it was in fact executed before the other will. The case was twice tried at Belfast. The first jury gave no verdict; the second condemned both wills, the Judge certifying himself not dissatisfied with the verdict. Notwithstanding this certificate a new trial was granted; because the verdict was not so satisfactory as that final judgment should be entered upon it; and because it placed the parties on unequal terms. The ptf.'s position being as favourable as if his debtor's will had been established, whereas the deft.'s right, if any, was for ever concluded.

Costs of the former trials reserved.—Hurst v. Campbell, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 305. (P.)

5. Verdict against an alleged will. Conditional order for a new trial refused; the evidence being conclusive that undue influence had been practised on the testator by the person chiefly benefited, who was most active in directing the preparation of the will, and in preparing it.—Moloney v. Casey, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 156. (P.)

6. When there is not any allegation of surprise, mistake, accident, or newly-discovered evidence, a new trial is not considered requisite, even when the title to an inheritance is involved.—Campbell v. C., 9 I. Jur. N. S. 39. (P.)

7. An executor and residuary legatee propounded a will, of which the defts. impeached only the residuary and executorial clauses. A minor intervenient, a legatee in a former will, being cited to see proceedings, appeared by solicitor; but did not plead. At the trial, a verdict was taken, by consent, in favour of the will, except the residuary and executorial clauses. The jury expressed a strong opinion against the whole will. A curator was appointed for the minor; and the Court, on the curator's motion, set aside the verdict as to the rest of the will; and directed a new trial, on terms.—Kelly v. Dunbar, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 151. (P.)

LIX. 2. How Obtained; Proceedings on.

8. The verdict had on the first trial of an issue should not be given in evidence on the second trial. The costs of the first trial should not be allowed to the party obtaining the verdict, but should be reserved.

On granting a second trial of an issue, it is not the practice in England, and ought not to be the practice in Ireland, to take any notice of the first verdict, either by setting it aside, or permitting it to be given in evidence on the second.—O'Connor v. Malone, 6 Cl. & F. 572.—[Rev. 2 Dr. & Wal. 491. (C.)]

9. Before this Court will call upon a Judge to furnish his notes of the trial of an issue directed in the cause, the counsel for the party desiring to impeach the proceedings at the trial, must state on his own responsibility a case for that purpose. If this statement satisfies the Court that the notes are necessary for the purposes of the motion, it will then call upon the Judge to furnish them.—Hungerford v. Jagoe, 1 Jon. & L. 691. (C.)

8. A notice of a money motion, moveable the last of the eight equity days, is too late; it must be served in time to be moved the last day but one; and the consent of all the parties interested in the funds will not vary the rule.—Anon. 2 I. E. R. 417. (E.E.)

9. Upon an application for liberty to issue a sequestration for the costs of dismissing a bill, if the party be going against personal property, notice of the motion need not be given. Secus—when the party is going against real property.—O'Brien v. Foley, 2 I. E. R. 418. (E.E.)

10. When it appears by the bill that the ptfs. reside out of the jurisdiction, the debt's motion, that proceedings may be stayed until the ptfs. give security for costs, is a motion of course.—Yarborough v. Brazier, 2 I. E. R. 468. (R.)

12. A debt. cannot vary the title of the cause in a notice or affidavit used upon a motion in the cause.—McKiernan v. Kernan, 4 I. E. R. 275. (R.)

13. When an application is made to extend a receiver from one cause to another, the notice of motion and affidavit should be entitled in both causes.—Tenant v. Watson, 4 I. E. R. 700. (E.E.)

14. When a parliamentary appearance has been entered for a debt. upon service effected in this country, he may afterwards, without any order obtained for that purpose, be served out of the jurisdiction with the monthly notice to press.—Curtis v. C., Fl. & K. 268. (R.)

15. Quære—Is the service of notice under the 15th G. O. a waiver of any right to seek relief against the party?—Harpur v. Boyd, 8 I. E. R. 456. (R.)

16. Notices never discharged on the first day of Term. — v., 8 I. E. R. 521. (E.E.)

17. A notice of motion served on the ptf. by the debt., did not appear in the list. On an application by the ptf., the notice was discharged with costs under the 128th G. Rule of this Court.—Bigley v. King, 10 I. E. R. 174. (E.E.)

18. An amendment was made, and notice of it served on the same day on which notice of motion to dismiss the bill was served. The Court not being satisfied as to which notice was first served, refused the motion to dismiss the bill; but made the ptf. pay the costs, and put him under terms to file a replication within two days after a full answer to the amendments.—Nolan v. Power, 10 I. E. R. 200. (R.)

19. The Court refused to allow a purchaser to lodge his promissory note in lieu of the three-fourths of his purchase-money, upon the allegation that there would be a large surplus, and the inheritor consenting, notice not having been given to all the creditors.—Gardiner v. Blesinton, 11 I. E. R. 357. (R.)

20. A judgment creditor, having a receiver, is not entitled to notice of a petition by a mortgagee to extend him to the mortgage.—Goldsmid v. Lord Glengall, 11 I. E. R. 608. (C.)

21. An order to take a bill as confessed may be made if an answer is filed when the motion is moved, though none had been filed when the notice of motion was served.—Hilhouse v. Tyndal, 12 I. E. R. 316. (R.)

22. Notice that a cause petition was "set down in the list of causes for hearing before the Lord Chancellor under the Court of Ch. (Ir.) Reg. Act, 1850," was served upon a respondent. The petition was set down in the list of causes under the 15th sec. The Court being of opinion that such a notice was likely to mislead, refused to make a summary order under that sec. and transferred the petition to the general list.—Livesay v. Maxwell, 1 I. C. R. 254; 3 I. Jur. 250. (C.)

23. When funds are realised by a sale directed by this Court, the mortgagee is not entitled to insist upon his common law right to receive a six months' notice.

1. The Court will not allow a deed to be taken out of the Master's office to prove it in the cause, without notice to the parties.—Wyse v. W., 4 I. Jur. 100. (R.)

2. Except in very plain cases, a cause petition under the Ch. Reg. Act cannot be amended, without notice to those respondents who have entered appearances.—O'Brien v. Tredennick, 4 I. Jur. 135. (R.)

3. A cause petition for the distribution of assets had been filed, in which B., a minor, and others were respondents. The minor had come of age, and a side-bar rule had been entered to proceed against him. A notice under the Act and Rules, according to the annexed form, was directed to be served, binding him with all the proceedings already had.

The minor had been served with notice of filing the petition, and an appearance had been entered for him; the notice directed to be served did not contain a copy of the prayer of the petition, as in the case of M'Cormick v. Murphy, 5 I. Jur. 220.—Geraghty v. Rorke, 6 I. Jur. 106. (R.)—[Overruled by Naughten v. N., 6 I. Jur. 309. (R.)]

4. Liberty was given to amend a cause petition by annexing a statement to the effect that there were six younger children of a marriage, instead of five.

The sole respondent was a minor, when the petition was filed, and had subsequently attained age. The usual side-bar rule for liberty to proceed had been entered. The Court refused to give liberty to serve him with notice under the 32nd G. O. of 1851, as that order did not apply to a minor who was named a respondent in the petition.—Naughten v. N., 6 I. Jur. 309. (R.)

5. Notice of filing a cause petition was directed to be served on a respondent who was of unsound mind, and out of the jurisdiction, by serving the keeper of the lunatic asylum, and the friend of the lunatic in London. And liberty was given to petitioner to appoint a guardian ad litem if respondent's friends should neglect to do so.—Bell v. Johnston, 7 I. Jur. 89. (R.)

6. Semle—The Court has not jurisdiction under the Trustee Relief Act to order service of notice of the petition on parties residing out of the jurisdiction.—Ex parte Bernard, 6 C. R. 133; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 226. (R.)

7. A conditional order will be made absolute in the office, although an affidavit has been filed, if a notice of motion to show cause against the order has not been served.

But a more proper course is, for the party who has obtained the order, to apply to the Court on notice, to make it absolute, notwithstanding the affidavit.—Stevenson v. Moore, 7 I. C. R. 462. (R.)

8. Parties going to trial must give under the 44th Rule (Contentions) regular notice, besides the eight-day notice given under the 40th Rule; which latter notice was deemed sufficient notice of trial.—Crossley v. Andrews, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 137. (P.)

LXII. 1. Orders generally.

1. The general rule, that an affidavit filed for cause, and notice thereof duly given, shall be cause against making a conditional order absolute, does not apply to a conditional order obtained as of course in the office.—Murphy v. Meade, Hay. & J. 720. (E.E.)

2. An order dismissing a bill cannot be enrolled.—O'Brien v. Manders, Fl. & K. 628. (R.)

3. Form of order upon an application for liberty to read, on the trial of an issue, depositions taken in the cause, and made by a witness whom illness disabled from attending the trial.—Lynch v. L., Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 538. (C.)

4. A continuing order, for payment of balances out of Court from time to time by a receiver, refused; no report ascertaining the amount due having been obtained.—Alexander v. Abernethy, 7 I. E. R. 308. (E.E.)

5. The rule to change an attorney, on payment of costs, is not an order under the 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 29.—Emmet v. Marnane, 8 I. E. R. 522. (E.E.)

6. When a petition has been referred to the Master, under the Ch. (Tr.) Reg. Act, 1850, s. 15, he has power to direct the service of notice, under the 32nd G. O. of 1851, for the purpose of binding persons by the proceedings in the cause.—Stanley v. S., 5 I. C. R. 416. (C.)

7. Orders under the 1st sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, and the 32nd order of July 1851, should state the character and right in which the parties to it are to be bound.—Swan v. Doak, 6 I. C. R. 55. (R.)

8. A minor may be bound by an order under the 1st sec. of the Ch. Reg. Act, and 32nd order of July 1851. Form of such order.—Fry v. Johnson, 6 I. C. R. 56. (R.)

9. An order of reference under the Ch. Reg. Act, s. 15, in an administration suit, cannot be obtained without a personal representative being named as a party.—Cleary v. C., 8 I. C. R. 264. (C.)

LXII. 2. Construction and Effect of Orders.

10. Motion for an order to take preliminary accounts should not be made in a suit that is either abated or defective; or in respect of accounts, the taking of which would prejudice any question in the cause.—Thompson v. Maxwell, 5 I. E. R. 448. (R.)

11. A. claimed land under a valid lease of 1735, and under a lease of the same and of other land made in 1831, by C., the owner of one-third only of the estate, who had obtained a renewal of the order, and acted as sole owner of it. The other two-thirds were vested in B., whose right thereto was afterwards established by decree, subject to a lease subsisting in 1804. A., being abroad, was not a party to the suit. After the decree, he applied to be examined pro interesse suo as to his title under the leases of 1735 and 1831, and was allowed this only upon consenting to be made a deft., and to be bound by the decree and other proceedings. Held, that, under this order, he could not set up his title under the lease of 1831, and that he could not have the order varied; but that to obtain relief against C., A. should institute a new suit.—Peed v. Cussen, 4 Dr. & War. 199; 2 Con. & L. 384. (C.)

12. An order to take the bill pro confesso against one deft., only establishes the facts stated against him, and those claiming under him; but any point of law arising on the facts is still open.—Simmonds v. Pullas, 8 I. E. R. 335; 2 Jon. & L. 489. (C.)

13. Though trustees are protected in acting under the decision of a competent tribunal, the protection does not extend to persons receiving payments out of a fund for themselves; and though the decision has been long acted on, it is no protection to such persons against the claims of others not bound by it.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

14. In a suit to raise an incumbrance, a deft. omitted to put in issue by her answer a deed of a certain date, under which she claimed an annuity. Upon motion founded upon an affidavit, stating that the omission arose from inadvertence, but not stating any of the circumstances under which the deed was executed, she obtained liberty to prove the deed, and to rely on it at the hearing, although it had not been put in issue in the cause. Held, that, under that order, evidence that the deed was executed upon a day different from that on which it bore date, was inadmissible at the hearing, and that evidence of its execution merely could be then received. The Court, however, in the decree, declared that the deft. should be at liberty to rely before the Master on the deed in relation to such rights as she might claim.—Ramsay v. Huffington 13 I. E. R. 185. (C.)

LXII. 3. Entry and Drawing up of.

1. An appeal does not properly lie upon the rulings of a Master; the order itself ought to be made up before the appeal is brought.—Jones v. Stokes, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (R.)

LXII. 4. Showing cause against; Suspending or Discharging,

2. The General Rule—that an affidavit filed as cause, and notice thereof duly given, shall be cause against making absolute a conditional order—does not apply to conditional orders obtained as of course in the office.—Murphy v. Meade, H. & J. 720. (E.E.)

3. When an affidavit is filed as cause against a conditional order, a motion to make the order absolute may be made, notwithstanding the lapse of ten sitting days since the affidavit was filed, unless the opposite party has proceeded to tax his costs.—Lloyd v. Armstrong, 1 I. E. R. 75; Jon. & Ca. 73. (E.E.)

4. In this Court, when an affidavit is filed as cause against a conditional order, the party should move upon the affidavit. Otherwise, the conditional order will be made absolute in the office, as of course.—Singleton v. Kyle, 1 I. E. R. 327. (R.)

5. When the time for showing cause against a conditional order expires on the last of the eight days after Term, the Court will not make it absolute upon a certificate of no cause, until the first day of the next ensuing Term.—Alexander v. Abernethy, 3 I. E. R. 384. (E.E.)

6. The affidavit of the person against whom process of sequestration has issued will not be heard as cause against a conditional order obtained in the cause, such affidavit not stating any irregularity in the proceedings.—Creed v. C., Long. & T. 581. (E.E.)

7. Neither a person in contempt, nor a third person, will be heard to show cause against making absolute a conditional order for a receiver on process.—Creed v. Moore, 4 I. E. R. 684. (E.E.)

8. Injunction order in a possessory suit set aside, on the ground that ptf. had not stated his case fairly.—Dease v. Plunkett, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 255. (C.)

9. A conditional order, out of date, which was not served on all parties, must be discharged; and a new conditional order issued, and served on all parties.—Barron v. Power, 7 I. E. R. 300. (E.E.)

10. An affidavit filed, and notice of it, is not "cause shown" against an order to appoint a receiver, unless moved on pursuant to notice.—Jameson v. Scarry, 9 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

11. Leave given to show cause after the appointment of a receiver, on an affidavit stating that the respondent had been informed and believed that the ten days for showing cause, mentioned in the conditional order for the appointment of a receiver, were Sitting-days in Term; the respondent paying the costs of the absolute order, and the costs consequential thereto.—Cassidy v. Hopkins, 10 I. E. R. 208. (R.)

12. The Court will not, on the client's application, set aside an order made on consent, signed by the client's solicitor, on the allegation that he acted without authority; there being no case made of fraud or misrepresentation.—Connatty v. O'Reilly, 11 I. E. R. 333. (R.)

13. A possessory bill was filed to restrain the deft. from cutting turf for sale, on the allegation that he was tenant to the ptf. of lands adjoining the bog, with a limited permission to cut turf for use in the bog which ptf. claimed as his. On the affidavits showing cause, the tenancy of the lands was admitted; but it appeared that the deft. and his predecessors had long claimed the disputed right over the bog, the ptf.'s title to which was vaguely stated. In 1807 an injunction had been obtained in a similar suit, restraining the tenant from cutting turf at all. Held, that an injunction could not be obtained in this suit, as, if the tenant was a mere trespasser, it was not sustainable to establish a disputed right, there being no triennial possession, and the allegation of a limited permission could not be strengthened by the order of 1807, which set up a different claim.

An order, on showing cause against an injunction obtained on a possessory bill, allowing the cause to stand over with liberty to amend the bill by putting in issue matter not stated in or exactly consistent with it, cannot be made; such a motion being analogous to the final hearing of an ordinary cause.

The rule, as to using supplemental affidavits on such motions, considered.—Congleton v. Mitchell, 12 I. E. R. 34. (C.)

14. An order, made ex parte to amend a demurrer, after a copy of it had been ordered, and signed by the officer, set aside, it being doubtful whether the copy had been actually taken out, and the order being grounded on a statement that it had not.—Keatinge v. Garde, 12 I. E. R. 310. (R.)

15. A party showed cause against making absolute an order adverse to a will in which during ten years he had acquiesced. The Court made absolute the order, with liberty to him to have his rights determined upon such motion as he might be advised to make.—In re Beecher's Estate, 3 I. Jur. 199. (I.E.C.)

1. Premises having been sold, the ptf., the first incumbrancer, was declared the purchaser. The incumbrance being for a larger amount than the purchase-money, the ptf. was allowed to lodge her promissory note for one-fourth of the purchase-money; the sale to be thereupon confirmed nisi; she when the time expired, to lodge her promissory note for the remainder of the purchase-money.—Hammond v. Mitchell, 6 I. Jur. 249. (R.)

2. A conditional order will be made absolute in the office, although an affidavit, has been filed, if a notice of motion to show cause against the order has been served.

A more proper course is, for the party who obtained the order to apply to the Court on notice, to make it absolute, notwithstanding the affidavit.—Stevenson v. Moore, 7 I. C. R. 462. (R.)

LXII. 5. Service of Orders.

3. A conditional order may be served on a Sunday.—O'Leary v. Cavanagh, Hay. & J. 373. (E.E.)

4. If a party has appeared in a cause, it is unnecessary to apply for liberty to serve him with an order of the Court, although he resides out of the jurisdiction.—Smith v. Rooney, Jo. & Car. 104. (E.E.)

5. A deft., out of the jurisdiction, was directed to execute the conveyance in pursuance of the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, s. 8. On hearing the messenger coming to the room wherein he was sitting, deft. ordered the door to be barred. The messenger heard deft.'s voice, but did not see him. Standing outside the door, the messenger in a loud voice stated the object of his visit; and offered to leave copies of the decree, order, and conveyance, with deft.'s son and daughter, who refused. The son forcibly turned the messenger out of the house. The messenger then sent to deft.'s residence a notice and copy of the order, with an explanatory letter (which there was evidence that deft. received), appointing a time and place for deft. to execute the conveyance. Deft. did not execute the conveyance. Held, that this was good personal service of the copies of the order and decree, and a sufficient tender of the conveyance, within the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78. Piers v. P., S. & Sc. 89. (R.) —[See Pasley v. Roberts, S. & Sc. 104, n.]

6. An order made in the presence of the party, on a motion, wherein he appeared by counsel, need not be served on him, to ground an attachment for non-compliance.—D'Arcy v. D'A., 1 I. E. R. 407. (R.)

7. Service of the order for hearing, on a servant, at the registered lodgings of the deft.'s attorney, is not sufficient.

The order must be served either on the attorney's servant, or upon the landlord or landlady of his registered lodgings; but service on the landlord's servant is not good service.—Crosthwaite v. Murray, 2 I. E. R. 823. (E.E.)

8. It is not necessary to serve personally an inheritor with an order to furnish a rental.—Watkins v. Lloyd, 5 I. E. R. 244. (E.E.)

9. Before an attachment for non-performance of a decree or order of the Court can issue, personal service of that decree or order must be effected.—Whisler v. Aylward; In re Fitton, Dr. Rep. temp. Sugden, 1. (C.)

10. When a receiver, against whom an order for an attachment has been made, conceals himself so that his residence is unknown, service of an order to put his recognizance in suit will be substituted on his solicitor with whom he is in communication.—O'Farrell v. M'Con, 7 I. E. R. 63. (R.)

11. Every decree and order must be served on the party to obey it, pursuant to the 104th G. O., before any attachment can issue for disobedience thereof. A solicitor issued an attachment without having served the order on the party. The Court set aside the attachment, with costs against the solicitor.

An order to perform an act "forthwith," means, within a reasonable time.—Mackinnon v. Palmer, 7 I. E. R. 203. (R.)

12. The conditional order to confirm a sale must be served on the inheritor, even if he have not appeared in the cause.

Although, as a general rule, the time for showing cause against a conditional order does not run when the Rolls Court is not sitting, the Lord Chancellor will, under particular circumstances, direct the officer to issue the side-bar rule to lodge the remaining three-fourths of the purchase-money, though the conditional order to confirm the sale had not been served until after the Rolls Court had risen for the vacation.—Copeland v. Conway, 3 I. C. R. 486. (C.)

LXII. 6. Amendment of Orders.

13. A creditor, who had obtained a report and allocation order in the cause, died. The funds reported to him were allocated to his executor, without any special order or variation of the allocation order.—Roberts v. Hughes, 6 I. E. R. 306. (R.)

14. The title of an order to extend a receiver was amended by inserting the words "and another," it being admitted that they had been left out by mistake; although the alteration deprived the ptf. in the suit in which the receiver was originally appointed of the funds in the receiver's hands.—Corbet v. Mahon, 10 I. E. R. 201. (R.)

LXII. 7. Short-day Order.

LXII. 8. Stop Order.

15. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, ss. 23, 24, are to be read in connection. The charging order under that statute is first a conditional order ex parte, to be made absolute: which last is the order contemplated by s. 23.—In re Dunscombe, 9 I. E. R. 4. (R.)

3. Strangers: when they may be heard.
4. Attorney-General.

LXIII. 1. Party Plaintiff: his Rights, Duties, &c.

1. The Court appointed a solicitor to act for a number of minor ptf's. On application of some of those who had attained age, the Court varied the order of appointment, and permitted them respectively to name their own solicitors.—Bennett v. Wheeler, 1 I. E. R. 16. (R.)

2. When a matter was within a ptf.'s knowledge, and great expense was incurred because he stated it incorrectly, he must pay all that expense.—Field v. Lord Donoughmore, 1 Dr. & War. 227. (C.)—[Rev. 2 Dr. & Wal. 630. (C.)]

3. A creditor, ptf. in an administration suit to carry out the trusts of a voluntary deed, including personal estate, is entitled to his costs in the first instance, he having put the personal estate in a train to be realised.—O'Dowda v. O'D., 11 I. E. R. 464. (C.)

4. When, pending a suit, a deft. becomes insolvent, the provisional assignee of the Insolvent Court is properly made a party to the suit by supplemental bill.—Roddy v. Molloy, 13 I. E. R. 90. (R.)

LXIII. 2. Party Defendant: his Rights, Duties, &c.

5. A motion to take a bill off the file, the suit having been instituted without ptf.'s authority, cannot be made by deft.—Wheeler v. Bulwer, Hayes, 479. (E.E.)

6. When no proceedings have been taken against a deft. within a year, the cause is, as to him, out of Court, though, within that time, proceedings have been taken against other defts.—Bartley v. Davis. Fl. & K. 620. (R.)

7. Defts. who, by persisting in an unfounded claim, have caused the suit to be proceeded with, may be decreed to pay the costs of their co-defts. and of ptf., so far as the suit was properly instituted.—Glynn v. Locke, 5 I. E. R. 61; 8 Dr. & War. 11; 2 Con. & L. 21. (C.)

8. It is not deft.'s right to file his answer after a decree on sequestration against him, on paying the costs thereof.—M'Curtney v. O'Neil, 5 I. E. R. 159. (E.E.)

9. When a judgment creditor, served with notice under G. O. 15, enters a common appearance under G. O. 18, he is a deft. in the cause as if he had been served with subpoena to appear and answer. Aliter, if the appearance entered be a special one under G. O. 19.—Bryson v. M'Cluskin, 6 I. E. R. 77. (R.)

10. Costs cannot be given to a deft. who sets up a defence that fails. From the tenant's conduct in this case, and because the bill contained an unproved imputation on the landlord, specific performance of the covenant to renew was decreed, without costs.—Fitzgerald v. O'Connell, 6 I. E. R. 455; 1 Jon. & L. 134. (C.)

11. A defective rental, furnished by deft., will be ordered to be amended in order to ground an attachment in case of non-compliance.—Young v. Atrell, 8 I. E. R. 159. (R.)

12. When a deft. in a cause has been found by commission a lunatic, the Court will not appoint a Clerk in Court to answer in the cause.—Dooley v. Harding, 1 I. Jur. 330. (R.)

13. Quære—Can a deft., who has not the carriage of the decree, bid at the sale in the Master's office, without an order permitting him to do so?—Munns v. Feris, 11 I. E. R. 253. (R.)

14. A creditor who has obtained a receiver under the Judgment Acts is a necessary answering party in a cause seeking a sale of the lands. The receiver cannot be extended from the matter to the cause, unless the creditor has filed his answer, and has had notice of the motion to extend.

When it is sought to extend a receiver from one matter to another, or from a matter to a cause, in which a receiver only is prayed for, the debtor only, and not the creditor who has obtained the receiver, should be served with notice of the motion.—[Walsh v. W., 1 I. E. R. 609, observed on.]—Le Grand v. O'Neill, 2 I. C. R. 569. (R.)

15. After a decree to account in a suit against B. and C., the executors of A., in a suit for the administration of A.'s assets, B. died. B. had received part of the assets of A.; it was alleged, but not proved, that he died insolvent. Held, that the cause could not proceed until the representative of B. was brought before the Court.—M'Namara v. O'Kelly, and M'Mahon v. O'Kelly, 5 I. C. R. 288; 2 I. Jur. N. S. 280. (C.)

16. A., having devised all his property to his wife, and having contracted to sell the lands, died. Held, in a suit for specific performance by the purchaser, that the heir-at-law of A. was not a necessary party to the conveyance, as he had no legal estate in the lands; no equitable estate; and no right to institute a suit to set aside the contract, having regard to the will of A. devising all his property to his wife who, if the contract was set aside, would be entitled to the lands; and, if the contract was not set aside, would be entitled to the purchase-money.—[Roberts v. Marchant, 1 Ph. 370, explained.]—[Fowler v. Lightburne, 11 I. C. R. 495; 6 I. Jur. N. S. 93. (R.)]

LXIII. 3. Strangers: when they may be heard.

1. The assignee of W., an insolvent, having sold a policy of insurance on the life of W., who shortly afterwards died, some creditors, who intervened in the Insolvent Court, alleged that the sale had been made at an undervalue, by collusion between the assignee and the insolvent; and the produce of the policy was brought into the Insolvent Court. The purchaser filed a petition against the assignee and the intervening creditors, praying that the produce of the policy might be paid to him. Held, that, as against the creditors, the petition must be dismissed, with costs; but the petition was allowed to stand over, in order to have a new assignee appointed.

That the creditors were entitled to the costs of the affidavits filed by them, impeaching the sale.—[O'Reilly v. Fannin, 6 I. C. R. 166. (C.)]

2. Leave refused to one, not a party to the suit, to intervene in the Master's office in taking the account, though he was the only person beneficially entitled in the result of it; his interest, however, being represented by the petitioner.—[Connor v. Burke, 17 I. C. R. 207. (R.)]

LXIII. 4. Attorney-General.

3. In incumbrancers' suits, the Attorney-General, made a party in respect of a recognizance, sufficiently represents the parties interested in it for all purposes. It should be reported an incumbrance, though the condition be not broken.—[Delany v. Firman, 12 I. E. R. 304. (C.)]

4. The Attorney-General, made a party, in respect of a recognizance or otherwise, cannot be made a notice party, but must be required to answer.—[Fawcett v. Biggs, 12 I. E. R. 305. (C.)]

5. Petitions for receivers on tenants' and receivers' recognizances should be entitled in the Queen's name: the Att.-General should be the petitioner.—[The Queen v. Cruise, 2 I. C. R. 65. (C.)]

LXIV. PAUPER. See PRACTICE, COSTS; PRACTICE, EVIDENCE.

6. An application to sue in forma pauperis in this Court must be made on an affidavit that the ptf. is not worth £5, except the matter in question in this suit.—[O'Donnell v. M'Mahon, 9 I. E. R. 471. (R.)]

7. The ptf., an executrix, being also a devisee and legatee, the Court made an order that she might sue in forma pauperis.—[Flattery v. Anderdon, 11 I. E. R. 586. (R.)]

8. Order made in a cause petition matter, giving leave to the petitioner to carry on the suit in forma pauperis after the matter had been set down for hearing.—[St. Clair v. Crawford, 2 I. C. R. 557. (R.)]

9. A person suing in forma pauperis, appealing from the judgment of the M. R., must lodge £10.—[Wall v. —, 3 I. Jur. 285. (C.)]

10. A party suing in forma pauperis, and succeeding in his suit, is entitled to dives costs as against the deft. The solicitor may have his costs taxed as dives costs, though there are no special directions in the decree, and though the fund produced by the sale decreed is not sufficient to pay the ptf.'s demand without costs.—[Woodrooffe v. Murphy, 6 I. Jur. 1. (R.)]

11. A ptf., suing in forma pauperis, having obtained a final decree, entered a rule to change her solicitor, who moved that the rule be rescinded, and the carriage of the decree restored to him, or that ptf. should pay him the costs incurred. The Court refused the motion, without prejudice to any lien which he might have on the fund.—[M'Ghee v. Mahon, Fl. & K. 93. (R.)]

LXV. PAYMENT: ORDER FOR.

12. On personal service of deft. with the decree directing him to pay ptf. a specified sum, and on demand of payment by a third person, under power of attorney, it is enough to show deft. that power. To ground a motion for a sequestration for not paying the money pursuant to the decree, it need not appear that at the time of service of the decree, and of the demand, a copy of that power was left with deft.—[Vereker v. Gort, 2 I. E. R. 239. (R.)]

13. When an incumbrancer, to whom a sum is ordered to be paid, before payment assigns his charge, the assignee cannot obtain an order for payment of that sum to himself upon affidavit merely; he must take a reference at his own expense.—[Huggard v. Lynch, 8 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)]

14. Orders to pay or transfer funds to trustees should direct the payment or transfer to be made to them personally, and should not contain the words "to their attorney lawfully authorised."—[In re Fishbourne, 9 I. E. R. 340; 3 Jon. & L. 584. (C.)]

15. In the Exchequer, upon motion to pay a sum on account of costs, although notice had been served on all the parties, the Court only granted a conditional order.—[Alexander v. Molloy, 2 I. Jur. 236. (E.E.)]

LXVI. 1. On Admissions.

1. An executor, admitting assets, and ordered to bring them in, cannot rely on his own demands, set forth in a charge under the decree, but not proved, as cause against the issuing of an attachment for not complying with the order; nor will the Court extend the time for bringing in the money until after the Master reports, an unreasonable delay having already occurred.—D'Arcy v. D'A., 11 E. R. 407. (R.)

2. When, in an administration suit, the executor, by his answer, admits that there are assets still outstanding, lent by testator on personal security, the Court will not, before the hearing, compel the executor to bring the money into Court, or give security to abide the decree.—Costelloes v. Cantwell, 6 I. E. R. 386. (R.)

3. The debt, in the original suit, after a decree that she should lodge in Court a sum when ascertained by the Master, died. The suit was revived against her executors, who admitted assets by their answer, and the amount was ascertained by the report. Upon motion by the ptf., the executors were compelled to bring in the money, without waiting until the cause should be heard.—Mackinnon v. Palmer, 7 I. E. R. 74. (R.)

4. A party having obtained probate to a will, which was afterwards cancelled, on the ground that the alleged will was a forgery, under that probate possessed himself of personal property of the deceased. On administration obtained by another party, and bill filed against the executor for an account and payment of the personal property of the deceased, in his answer the deft. admitted having received certain moneys, but alleged that he had paid them away under the provisions of the will. An application by the administrator, on motion, that the deft. should pay into Court those sums admitted by him to be received, and alleged to be improperly paid away, was refused.—Auld v. Stewart, 8 I. E. R. 399. (E.E.)

LXVI. 2. By and in case of Executors, &c., Trustees, and Receivers.

5. To indemnify a trustee or executor who lodges funds in Court under the Trustee Indemnity Act (11 & 12 Vic., c. 68), they must be lodged to the credit of a particular trust. When they have been improperly lodged, the Court will not make an order.

Practice under this and the corresponding English Act.—In re Godfrey's Trust, 2 I. C. R. 105. (R.)

LXVI. 3. On Interpleaders.

LXVI. 4. On Obtaining and Continuing Injunction against Proceedings at Law, and Commission to Examine Abroad.

6. A., in consideration of being permitted to become an intestate's administrator, agreed to deposit the share of C., a minor, one of the next-of-kin, in the hands of a trustee for him. A. deposited £180 with B., in trust for C., subject to the final settlement of the administration account. Afterwards C.'s share was ascertained to be £156. A. proceeded at law to recover the £180 from B., and refused a tender of the difference between £156 and £180. Upon a bill filed by C. against A. and B., and before appearance by A., the Court allowed B. to lodge the £180 in Court to the credit of the cause; and, upon his doing so, restrained A. from proceeding further with his action.—Fleming v. F., 2 Jon. 810. (E.E.)

LXVI. 5. In Cases of Partners.

LXVI. 6. In Cases of Vendor and Purchaser.

LXVI. 7. Payment into Court in other Cases, generally.

7. When lands were decreed to be sold, subject to a charge, application upon consent to lodge the sum charged in Court refused.—— v. — 8 I. E. R. 514. (E.E.)

8. On motion to transfer funds from the Court of Ch. to the I. E. Court it is necessary to produce on the motion at the Rolls Court a certificate of the Commissioners of the I. E. Court, showing that there is a fund in that Court to be distributed to which the funds in Ch. can be transferred; otherwise such motion will be refused.—Bagge v. Barron, 7 I. Jur. 242. (R.)

LXVII. Payment out of Court.

9. Under the words "reasonable costs, charges, and expenses," in the 2 & 3 Vic., c. 61, s. 29, the Court will award all necessary costs incurred by parties in obtaining payment out of Court of the purchase-money of lands required for the purposes of the commission, or of having it invested upon trusts similar to those to which the lands so required were subject.—In re Nav. Commrs. of the Shannon, 3 I. E. R. 355; Fl. & K. 13. (R.)

10. When a consent is in the nature of an allocating order, there must be an affidavit that it has been signed by all the creditors who have proved in the cause.—Cooke v. Briscoe, 3 I. E. R. 28; Fl. & K. 39. (R.)

1. When the surplus in Court is small, the Court will, on an affidavit that it is not incumbered, allow it to be paid out.

If the surplus is considerable, there must be a reference.—Seymour v. Sirr, Fl. & K. 236. (R.)

2. Dividends of small amount, which have accrued due on a sum of stock (ordered to be transferred to a party) between the date of the order and of the transfer, were ordered to be paid to the party's attorney, who was authorised to accept the transfer. The application was made shortly after the transfer.—Pidgeon v. D'Alton, 3 I. E. R. 134. (E.E.)

3. When an application is made to draw out of Court, money which has been made the subject of a settlement, the settlement itself must be produced in Court.—Batt v. Cuthbertson, 3 Dr. & War. 58. (C.)

4. A charging order had been obtained by a judgment creditor upon funds reported to his debtor in the cause. The Court, after the expiration of the six months from the date of the order, directed the funds to be transferred to the creditor, upon motion, without a bill being filed.—Burke v. B., 7 I. E. R. 174. (R.)

5. A sequestration having issued against the deft. for non-performance of a decree to pay money to the ptf., the sequestrator seized the rents and profits of his lands. The ptf. and a prior incumbrancer both applied for the funds in the sequestrator's hands. Held, that the prior incumbrancer was entitled to them. Sequestration is neither in form nor in substance an execution; it is founded on default of performance of the decree of the Court, and gives no right in the funds levied to the party at whose instance it is sued out.—Burne v. Robinson, 7 I. E. R. 188. (R.)

6. A receiver having been appointed in the matter of a judgment creditor, a continuing order for payments out of Court from time to time was refused, no report having been obtained ascertaining the amount due.—Alexander v. Abernethy, 7 I. E. R. 308. (E.E.)

7. The Court will distribute a fund in Court payable to a personal representative, upon a Diocesan probate, if the intestate had not bona notabilia.—Graves v. G., 8 I. E. R. 36. (R.)

8. The ptf. having filed an interpleader bill, and brought the money into Court, dismissed the bill with costs by side-bar rule before any of the defts. answered. Held, that the ptf. was entitled to draw the money so lodged.

Quere—In such case are the defts. entitled to their costs out of the money lodged in Court?—M'Kiernan v. Kernan, 8 I. E. R. 145. (R.)

9. On a motion for payment out of Court of part of a party's demand, the costs of the application refused.—Massey v. O'Dell, 8 I. E. R. 509. (E.E.)

10. When an incumbrancer to whom money was ordered to be paid before payment assigns his charge, the assignee cannot obtain an order for payment of the sum ordered, to himself, upon affidavit, merely, but must take a reference at his own expense.—Huggard v. Lynch, 8 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

11. By the decree of this Court a femme sole, a subject of Great Britain, was decreed entitled to a sum to be realised by a sale of lands. Before the sum was realised, she intermarried abroad with a subject of the Austrian Empire, and continued to reside with him in that empire. The sum being realised, and in Court, an application made on their behalf, that the money should be paid out to the attorney for them, on a warrant executed abroad by them, and on an affidavit, stating that, by the laws of the Austrian Empire, the sum would be at the absolute disposal of the wife, was granted: the Court not requiring that the husband should thereout make any settlement on the wife, or that any commission for her separate examination should issue.—Hutchinson v. Cathcart, 8 I. E. R. 394. (E.E.)

12. When persons are entitled to a fund in Court upon the contingency of a childless female of advanced age, having children, the Court will order it to be paid out to them, on their entering into security by recognizance to refund the money, if children should be born.—In re Commissioners of Wide Streets, 7 I. E. R. 484. (R.)

13. Orders for the payment or transfer of funds to trustees should direct it to be made to them personally, and not contain the words "to their attorney lawfully authorised."—In re Fishbourne, 9 I. E. R. 340; 3 Jon. & L. 584. (C.)

14. The G. S. & W. Railway Co. having purchased settled lands, the tenant for life conveyed them to them under their Act, and he and the tenant in tail applied to draw the purchase-money out of Court. No disentailing deed had been executed. Held, that the money was to be considered as bound by the limitations affecting the land, and to be dealt with as subject to be invested in lands, to be settled to the same uses as the sold lands; and that a disentailing deed was necessary to enable the parties to draw the money.—In re Gt. S. and W. Railway, 9 I. E. R. 482. (R.)

15. Petition matters under the Judgment Acts should be revived before funds can be paid out in them.—Cloncurry v. Piers, 9 I. E. R. 407; 3 Jon. & L. 573. (C.)

16. When a petition is presented under the Mortgage Act, the mere impeachment of the mortgage by affidavit, without showing probable grounds for such impeachment, is not sufficient to prevent the Court from making the usual reference to appoint a receiver.

Semble—If a bill should be filed to impeach the mortgage, the Court would not distribute the fund received by the receiver until such suit was disposed of.—[The case of Cosgrave v. Gannon, 3 I. E. R. approved of].—Whaley v. W., 11 I. E. R. 276. (R.)

1. Though trustees are protected in acting under the decision of a competent tribunal, the protection does not extend to persons receiving payment out of a fund for themselves. Though the decision has been long acted on, it is no protection to such persons against the claims of others not bound by it.—Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 I. E. R. 287. (C.)

2. A tenant at will having agreed to give possession of lands to a R. Co. for £23, subsequently refused to give possession unless his sister, who, he alleged, had an equal interest in the premises, was also satisfied. The money was offered to be paid on his giving possession, but was not formally tendered. The Company having lodged the sum agreed on in Court to the separate credit of the tenant solely, alleging in the warrant his refusal to accept it as the reason for the lodgment—Held, that the tenant was entitled to draw the entire money out of Court, but refused to give any costs, holding each party to have been in default.—In re S. E. Ry. Co., 12 I. E. R. 398. (E.E.)

3. The Court has not jurisdiction on motion, without a petition, to pay out funds lodged under the Trustee Relief Act.—Ex parte Stock, 5 I. C. R. 341. (R.)

4. A solicitor, applying for an order to a receiver to pay over money to a party in the cause under a decree, should be prepared with a certificate that the sums are correctly made up.—Buchanan v. Hoare, 5 I. Jur. 142. (R.)

5. The wife's equity to a settlement, against the assignee of her chose in action, is an obligation attaching not on the property, but upon the right to receive it. Therefore a plenary suit is not necessary to enforce it; and it may be insisted on, in a motion to distribute the fund.

The amount to be settled is discretionary with the Court, and depends on the circumstances of each case.

Husband and wife assigned the chose in action of the wife. A decree was pronounced in a suit to which the assignors were not parties, declaring the rights of the assignees inter se to the fund. Held, that the wife was not bound by the decree, and might, notwithstanding it, insist on her equity to a settlement.—Marshall v. Gibbings, 4 I. C. R. 276. (R.)

6. Husband and wife being domiciled in Scotland, where a wife has no equity to a settlement, the Court ordered a fund, the property of the wife, to be transferred to them, or their attorney thereto lawfully authorised, without requiring the wife to appear to waive her equity.—In re Molyneux, 5 I. C. R. 346. (R.)

7. Trust funds, the subject of a settlement, were lodged in Court, and an application was made, by a party to whom the dividends thereof had been assigned, for an order to draw them. The trustee was not allowed his costs of attending on the motion, there not being such difficulty in the case as rendered his attendance necessary.

A notice to draw dividends of a fund in Court should state from the Accountant-General's account the amount of the sum sought to be transferred.—In re Dowden's Trusts, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 38. (R.)

8. A person having been accused of embezzling money from his employer, and having sums of money lodged to his own credit in bank, an injunction was granted upon petition, restraining the officers of the bank from paying out this money to the accused, the petition alleging that it was the money of the employer. An order was now made, upon motion, directing the payment of £30 out of these sums, to the attorney of the accused, for the purpose of defraying the expense of the defence of the accused upon the criminal charge—the attorney undertaking to account for same if called on by the Court to do so.—Allen v. M'Kenna, 1 I. Jur. N. S. 234. (R.)

9. Under the Juvenile Convict Prisons Act 1856, the provisions of which are adopted from the Railways Act (Ireland) 1851, lands were taken, which were vested in an Archbishop in right of his See. A claim of right of common over these lands was made by adjoining proprietors. The arbitrator found the substantial value to be in the commoners, and awarded to the Archbishop one shilling as compensation for his interest. The Archbishop traversed the award, without having obtained a certificate, and without the compensation having been paid into Court. To that traverse the commoners were not parties, but it was resisted by the Commissioners of Public Works; and by the verdict on the traverse, a sum exactly equal to that awarded by the arbitrator to the commoners was found as compensation to the Archbishop. A conditional order to enter the verdict for the Commissioners was obtained, and on the motion to show cause against that order, an order was made on the suggestion of the Court, that the Commissioners should bring the money into the Court of Chancery, and that the motion should stand over until the next term. The money was brought into Court, and the cause was afterwards allowed with costs.

On petitions presented by the Archbishop and the commoners, to obtain payment of the money out of Court—Held, per the Lord Chancellor, that the traverse was irregular, and a nullity, having been taken without obtaining the certificate required by the statute; that the verdict could not be taken as conclusive of the amount payable to the Archbishop; and that the right should be tried on an issue.

Held, on appeal, that the Lord Chancellor's judgment was right, and ought to be affirmed.—In re Juvenile Convict Prison, 7 I. C. R. 532. (C.A.)

1. A motion to pay money out of Court should be entitled in all the causes with respect to which the fund is to be distributed.—Powell v. Sullivan, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 74. (R.)

2. Lands were sold in the I. E. Court, and the proceeds brought in to a cause pending in the Court of Ch. to be administered. W., the first incumbrancer, was not made a party to the suit; and the fund was paid out to P., a puisne incumbrancer. Held, that P. was liable in a suit instituted to make good to W. the amount which he had so received.—Walker v. Power, 9 I. C. R. 527; 5 I. Jur. N. S. 13. (C.A.)

3. When money is set apart in order that proceedings may be instituted in the Court of Ch., and those proceedings are taken accordingly, the money will not be paid out while that suit remains pending.—In re Murphy's Estate, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 69. (L.E.C.)

4. A draft award stated, and the arbitrator certified under the Railways Act (Ir.), 1851 (14 & 15 Vic., c. 70), a sum as the sum to be deposited in respect to certain land required by a Municipal Corporation for the construction of water-works. The Corporation lodged the money, and went into possession. The award awarded a smaller sum. Pending a traverse, the Court refused to refund the difference to the Corporation.—In re the Dublin Corporation Water-works, 17 I. C. R. 16. (R.)

LXVIII. 1. General Orders concerning Petition.

5. An application under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, to appoint a person to convey in the place of an absent trustee, who has been discharged by decree, ought to be by motion in the cause in which the decree was pronounced. A petition for that purpose is not necessary.—Callaghan v. Egan, 1 Dr. & Wal. 187. (C.)

6. In proceedings under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, all the circumstances giving the Court jurisdiction should be stated in the petition, since a supplemental affidavit cannot be read.—In re Hartford, 2 Dr. & War. 292; 1 Con. & L. 394. (C.)

7. Petitions presented in lunacy matters, after the lunatic's decease, ought to state the fact of his death.—In re Briscoe, 2 Dr. & War. 501. (C.)

LXVIII. 2. What is effected by Petition.

8. In minor matters a party cannot come in to show cause against a conditional order obtained on petition, without a further petition for that purpose.—In re Cummins, 1 I. E. R. 9. (R.)

9. In all petition matters, except those under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, every application after the original motion must have a new petition for that purpose.—Johnston v. Anketell, 1 I. E. R. 15. (R.)

10. A petition matter being called on, there was no attendance on petitioner's part. The notice of the appearance was therefore struck out of the list. Held, that the matter could not be moved without a new petition.—Scott v. Denroche, 1 I. E. R. 372. (R.)

11. In a petition matter under the Judgment Act, a receiver having been appointed, the Court on motion decided a serious question of estate, viz.:—Whether a respondent under a limitation in marriage articles had an estate for life, or an estate tail?—Brennan v. Fitzmaurice, 2 I. E. R. 113. (E.E.)

12. In an administration suit, the report, but not the bill, made a case for charging the executor with interest upon the balance in his hands. Held, that the proper mode of bringing the question before the Court was, to present a petition stating the special matter, and praying that the cause may be set down to be heard for further directions.—Cleary v. C., 3 I. E. R. 562. (E.E.)

13. The 3 & 4 Vic., c. 105, s. 21, disallows the costs of any further petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, or that Act, presented during the sitting of the Court. After an order made on the original petition, such further petition should not be received. Any fees taken in the office in respect of it are illegal.—Keene v. Bannon, 4 I. E. R. 521. (R.)

14. The Court will not appoint a Commissioner Extraordinary without a petition having been presented.—In re Armitstead, 2 Dr. & War. 50. (C.)

15. A reference to ascertain what is due from an infant for penal fines for a non-renewal, cannot be obtained on a petition. A bill must be filed.—In re Colthurst, 5 I. E. R. 322; 3 Dr. & War. 85; 2 Con. & L. 35. (C.)—[Rev. 4 I. E. R. 444; Fl. & K. 515. (R.)]

1. An application to take money out of Court must be by petition.—In re Ponsonby, 5 I. E. R. 263; 3 Dr. & War. 27; 2 Con. & L. 30. (C.)

2. When a petition for a receiver has been presented under the Mortgage Act, deft. cannot show cause without filing a petition. If the petition has not been filed, the Court has not jurisdiction even to give costs against the respondent of a motion to show cause.—Pukenham v. Darcy, 7 I. E. R. 476. (R.)

3. V. bequeathed an annuity payable out of her personal estate, and disposed of the residue. In an administration suit, it was ordered, pursuant to the decree, what a specified amount of $\frac{1}{2}\%$ per cent. stock, the dividends on which equalled the annuity, should be set apart to answer it. The stock was reduced to $\frac{1}{2}\%$ per cent., and the dividends became insufficient. There was other stock in bank standing to the credit of the cause. On petition, and without a re-hearing, the Court ordered a sufficient amount thereof to be set aside to answer the deficiency.—Comrs. of Ch. D. & B. v. St. Lawrence, 9 I. E. R. 560; 3 Jon. & L. 561. (C.)

4. When an order that the Master, or any other person appointed by the Court, should convey in the name of a deft., under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, s. 8, cannot be made contemporaneously with the decree at the hearing of the cause, in consequence of the party to whom the conveyance is to be made not being then ascertained—(e. g. when lands are by the decree directed to be sold), an application under the 1 W. 4, c. 60, that the Master should execute a conveyance in the name of such deft. must be made by petition.—Newman v. Fitzgerald, 13 I. E. R. 65. (R.)

LXVIII. 3. Proceedings on generally.

5. In a cause in which a petition is presented in Vacation, but so near the Term that the application might as well be made in Term by a regular motion in the cause, an order will not be made on the petition.—Corcoran v. Sparrow, 1 I. E. R. 15. (R.)

6. A solicitor who has answered a petition presented against him, is not entitled to dismiss it with costs until after one clear Term from the date of his answer.—Bucke v. Murphy, 8 I. E. R. 373; Fl. & K. 173. (R.)

7. An affidavit to verify a petition under the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 55, made by the petitioner's agent will not suffice. The petitioner himself must make it.—Phelan v. P., Fl. & K. 177. (R.)

8. Under the 5 & 6 W. c. 55, the verifying affidavit may be sworn before the petition is filed.

Semble—When under an Act an affidavit in a petition matter required by the Act may be sworn before the petition is filed, an indictment for perjury in that affidavit may be sustained.—Clendinning v. O'Malley, 2 Dr. & War. 210; 1 Con. & L. 363. (C.)

9. When a petition is ordered to stand over, a new petition need not be presented before bringing the matter again before the Court. But, if any new fact has occurred, on which the Court should adjudicate, a supplemental petition, stating that fact, is necessary.—In re Gavacan, 2 Dr. & War. 432. (C.)

10. It is not necessary to entitle a petition in the matter of the Act of Parliament under which it is presented; and if it be entitled in the matter of a wrong Act of Parliament, and the Court can see, from the matter of the petition itself, that it has jurisdiction to make the order prayed under the authority of a public statute, the reference to the Act in the title will be rejected as surplusage.—Hunter v. Edmonds, 6 I. E. R. 123. (E.E.)

11. An application, to amend a petition verified by affidavits, refused. — v. Steele, 8 I. E. R. 511. (E.E.)

12. An order was obtained on petition against a minor, not a party to the cause, to execute the conveyance. The minor refused to obey the order. Held, necessary to present a further petition to obtain an order, that an attachment should issue against the minor, that a person appointed by the Court should execute in his name.

Semble, the 4 & 5 W. 4, c. 78, does not apply to minors.—Moore v. Grogan, 9 I. E. R. 472. (R.)

4. Withdrawing and Waiving.
5. Allowing and Overruling, when: their Effect.
6. Amending.
7. Of former Suit: Reference on.
8. When ordered to Stand for Answer.

LXIX. 1. When Plea is proper: Filing: Leave to Plead, when necessary.

13. Time to plead to a bill will not be given, unless a special case is made. Terms on which time may be given.—Gethin v. Cochrane, Hay. & J. 217. (E.E.)

14. An objection to a bill of revivor should be taken by plea or demurrer; but, if ptf. misrepresents the character which he fills, the objection may be taken at the hearing.—Stuart v. Burrowes, Dr. Rep. temp. Sug. 265. (C.)

1. A party, supposed to be the personal representative of a former deft., was served with a subpoena to revive and answer. He did not discover the character in which he was made a party until after the time to plead had expired. Notwithstanding G. O. 64, the Court allowed him to plead, since an answer would not prevent the suit being revived against him.—Lewin v. L., 9 I. E. R. 638. (R.)

2. The rule, that immaterial matter cannot operate to make a pleading double, prevails in equity as well as at law.—Daly v. Kirwan, 10 I. E. R. 312. (R.)

3. A deft. to a bill of revivor appeared. Subsequently an order to revive was obtained. Within a month from his appearance the deft. filed a plea. Held, that the order to revive did not preclude the filing of the plea.—Hamilton v. H., 1 I. Jur. 241. (C.)

4. Liberty given to a deft. to plead double to a bill to which she had not entered an appearance; she undertaking to adopt the parliamentary appearance filed by the ptf., and to pay the costs of the motion.—Fitz Gerald v. F., 2 I. Jur. N. S. 181.

LXIX. 2. Jurat of: Attestation & Signature of.

5. A plea that ptf. was discharged as an insolvent debtor under the 53 G. 3, c. 138, must be verified by oath.—Corbally v. Kirwan, 2 Jones, 170. (E.E.)

LXIX. 3. Setting down and Argument of.

6. It is deft.'s duty to set down his plea to be argued. If ptf. admits the validity, but denies the truth of the plea, the Court will allow him to file a replication.—Wilson v. W., 5 I. E. R. 514. (E.E.)

7. When ptf. sets down a plea for argument, and does not appear when the case is called on, the plea will be allowed with costs.—Walker v. Daly, 9 I. E. R. 460. (R.)

LXIX. 4. Withdrawing and Waiver of.

LXIX. 5. Allowing and Overruling; when: Effect of.

8. An order, allowing a plea of the Statute of Limitations, does not put the cause out of Court.—Howlett v. Lambert, Fl. & K. 593. (R.)

9. A plea may be good in part, and bad in part, with respect to the quantity of the bill covered by it, but not with respect to the defence made thereby. The plea must be overruled, if part of the defence is bad.

Ptf.'s bill sought a revivor against a deft. in several characters. Deft. pleaded to the whole relief. The Court was of opinion that ptf. was entitled to revive against deft. in one character. Held, that the plea should be overruled.—Fitzmaurice v. Sadlier, 12 I. E. R. 136. (R.)

LXIX. 6. Amending.

LXIX. 7. Of Former Suit: Reference on.

10. When ptf. denies the truth of a plea, he must, within the time limited by G. R. 19 (of 1834), for setting down the plea for argument, serve a notice that he will move for an order of reference to the Master to enquire into the truth of the plea.—Howlett v. Lambert, Fl. & K. 226. (R.)

LXIX. 8. When ordered to stand for Answer: Practice on.

PRELIMINARY OBJECTIONS. See PRACTICE, HEARING.

LXX. PRIORITY OF SUIT. See PRACTICE, CROSS-BILL.

LXXI. PRISONER. See PRACTICE, ATTACHMENT—PRACTICE, HABEAS CORPUS.

11. Deft., having been arrested under process of contempt for not answering, was not brought to the bar of the Court within the time required by the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, rule 2; but remained in custody without praying for his discharge. Whilst so in custody, ptf. in the equity suit caused him to be detained under a ca. sa. The Court discharged him both from the arrest under the process of contempt, and from the detainer.—Chester v. Barrett, 2 Jones, 579. (E.E.)

LXXII. PRIVILEGE FROM ARREST. See BANKRUPTCY, VII—PRACTICE, WRIT—SOLICITOR.

12. A solicitor is privileged from arrest going to, tarrying at, and returning from Court, whilst he is in attendance on a motion or cause.

The arresting party, if aware of the existence of the privilege at the time of the arrest, will be ordered to pay the costs of the solicitor's application to be discharged, besides any other costs which may be incurred by his detention.—In re O'Neill, S. & Sc. 78. (R.)

13. A solicitor's privilege from arrest is not confined to those cases in which his personal presence is indispensable.—In re Keane, S. & Sc. 81. (R.)

14. An attorney is not privileged from arrest in execution, when he comes to Court to perform an act for his client which a clerk could do equally well.—Sabnon v. Kiernan, S. & Sc. 83, note. (R.)

1. A general clerk of the Clerk of the Pleas in the Court of Exchequer is an officer entitled to privilege from arrest under a ca. sa., going to, tarrying at, and returning from his office.—Kane v. Stewart, S. & Sc. 84, note; 2 Jones, 630. (E.E.)

2. If a solicitor be bona fide attending a motion or other proceeding in Court for his client, he is privileged from arrest. But when he is merely looking for his counsel in Court to consult him touching the course to be pursued in the cause, he is not privileged from arrest.—Longfield v. Carpenter, 1 I. E. R. 349. (C.)

3. Deft. being in attendance at the Quarter Sessions, pursuant to his recognizance to prosecute, was arrested under a commission of rebellion for not answering ptf.'s bill. The Court discharged him.—Graves v. McCarthy, 2 Jones, 626. (E.E.)

4. The deft. having been arrested under process of contempt, for not answering, was not brought to the bar of the Court within the time required by the 5 & 6 W. 4, c. 16, rule 2; but remained in custody without applying for his discharge. Whilst so in custody, the ptf. in the Equity suit caused him to be detained under a ca. sa. The Court discharged him from the arrest under the process of contempt, and from the detainer.—Chester v. Barrett, 2 Jones, 579. (E.E.)

5. Under an order of reference, the Master directed that the ptf., resident in the county of Galway, should file a charge, and verify it by his affidavit. The ptf.'s solicitor accordingly wrote to him requiring his presence in Dublin upon the subject. Consequently the ptf. came to Dublin on the 24th of Nov. 1839, and was detained from day to day in giving the required information and assistance for the preparation of the charge, and in waiting for the direction of counsel respecting it, until the 24th of Dec. following, when the charge, having been approved by counsel and engrossed, was ready to be filed. The ptf. being in debt, and fearful of being arrested if he should go down to Court to verify the charge, an appointment was made between him and his solicitor that, on the 24th of Dec. the solicitor should accompany him to the house of the Master's Examiner, that he might there make the required affidavit. On that day the ptf., when on his way to the office of his solicitor for the purpose of keeping the appointment, was arrested under a ca. sa. Shortly afterwards a number of detainers upon him were lodged with the sheriffs. Held, that he was privileged at the time of the arrest, and should be discharged.—Brown v. McDermott, 2 I. E. R. 438. (R.)

6. A principal deft. having come to town for the hearing of a cause in the Lord Chancellor's list, and having been on his way from his hotel to his solicitor's office was arrested under a ca. ad resp.—Held, that he was privileged, and should be discharged, although he had deviated and remained a little for his amusement. That although the cause for which the deft. came to town was to be heard by the Lord Chancellor, yet as it was generally depending in Chancery, the M. R. might make the order allowing the deft. privilege, and ordering his discharge.—Mahon v. M., 2 I. E. R. 440. (R.)

7. A cause being set down for hearing, and in the Lord Chancellor's list for the day, the ptf. attended in Court until it rose, but that cause was not called. Upon leaving Court, he called at his place of business, and remained there about an hour and a half, sorting his papers, and making other preparations for the hearing of the cause, and, when proceeding from thence homewards, was arrested under a ca. sa. for a large amount. Held, that he was privileged from arrest, and should be discharged. That he was entitled to apply to the Rolls Court for his discharge.—Ahearns v. McGuire, 2 I. E. R. 437. (R.)

8. O., a party and solicitor in the cause, having been in attendance in the Master's office, upon a summons in the cause, left the office, and was arrested on a ca. sa., near Carlisle-bridge, which was out of the direction of, and beyond his residence in, Jervis-street. Held, that the deviation deprived him of his privilege from arrest. The question in such cases always is, Whether the person arrested was, at the time of the arrest, bona fide engaged in the business he was called on to execute?—In re Owen, 6 I. E. R. 125. (R.)

9. A party in a suit, who was arrested under an execution while returning home from Court, where he had been assisting his solicitor in the discharge of duties which were the proper business of his solicitor, is not privileged from arrest.—Flattery v. Anderson, 6 I. E. R. 518. (R.)

10. A solicitor, not keeping a clerk, arrested on civil process, in the bona fide discharge of his client's business, will be ordered to be discharged, although a clerk might have done the same business.

Semble—That even if he did keep a clerk he would be entitled to his discharge.—In re Ahearne, 2 Dr. & War. 141; 1 Con. & L. 250; 4 I. E. R. 337; 2 Dr. & War. 142. (C.)

11. O., a party to and solicitor in the cause, having been in attendance in the Master's office on a summons in the cause, left the office, and was arrested on a ca. sa., near Carlisle-bridge, which was out of the direction of, and beyond his residence in, Jervis-street. Held, that the deviation deprived him of his privilege.

In such cases, the question always is—Whether the person arrested was, at the time of the arrest, bona fide engaged in the business which he was called on to execute.—Heron v. Stokes, 6 I. E. R. 125. (R.)

12. A person going to the Master's office to swear a discharge is privileged from arrest.

The affidavit in support of a motion for the discharge of a person arrested under such circumstances, should state the hour when the business was done, and where and when the arrest took place, in order to show that there was not any unnecessary delay.

The application should be made to the Court of which the arrest is a contempt.—Phelan v. Byrne, 2 I. Jur. 60. (R.)

1. A suitor coming from the country, whose attendance at the hearing of the cause is material, is privileged from arrest on civil process during the period that his absence from home is necessary.—Squire v. Blake, 2 I. Jur. 122. (R.)

2. A solicitor was arrested on the direct way from the Taxing Master's office, but it appeared that before his arrest he had deviated considerably from the direct way. Held, that he was not entitled to be discharged.—Walsh v. Wilson, 1 I. C. R. 610; 3 I. Jur. 275. (R.)

3. A respondent in a matter, who was his own solicitor, and who came from the country to attend in the Master's office to the letting of lands in his own occupation, was held to be privileged from arrest during his stay in town.—Lawlor v. Scollard, 2 I. C. R. 146. (R.)

4. A receiver, who had come to Dublin to attend to a motion, in which a charge of a criminal nature was made against him, was arrested for debt on the evening of the day when the motion was disposed of. The Court ordered that he should be discharged.—Brabazon v. Teynham, 2 I. C. R. 563; 5 I. Jur. 74. (R.)

5. Though an appellant comes to London so long before attendance at the hearing of his cause requires his presence that he would not be discharged out of custody, if then arrested, he will nevertheless be discharged, if not arrested until his cause is actually on the paper.—Persse v. P., 5 H. L. Cas. 671.—[See s. c., 7 Cl. & F. 279; 3 I. C. R. 196. (C.); 5 H. L. Cas. 682.]

6. A party coming to town to attend the conduct of a cause, does not possess any general privilege from arrest. Such privilege will be extended to him during the time that he bona fide remains in town to attend the hearing of the cause, or other proceedings, at which his presence is required for the due administration of justice.—O'Connell v. O'C., 3 I. Jur. 342. (R.)

7. A party who acts bona fide as his own solicitor in a matter, and who comes from Cork to Dublin to attend a summons in the Master's office in that matter, is privileged from arrest during his necessary stay in Dublin.—In re Lalor, 4 I. Jur. 276. (R.)

8. A party brought up to town to attend on a summons before the Master, is privileged from arrest while going to the Four-courts to swear an affidavit to verify a cause petition in another suit, and while returning straight to his lodgings.

When a party comes up to town to be examined viva voce before the Master, respecting a discharge filed by him in the office, and remains till the hearing, when he is ordered to amend his discharge, and is arrested in town the day after this order to amend is made, he will be privileged from arrest, if it appear that it was necessary for him to remain in town to verify the discharge when amended.—West v. Farrel, 5 I. Jur. 153. (R.)

9. A petitioner came from the Isle of Man for the purpose of attending at the hearing of his cause, which was expected to come on immediately, and was arrested under a writ of ca. sa. while proceeding to his solicitor's office upon business connected with the case. Held, that he should be discharged.

Distinction, as to protection from arrest, between the cases where a suitor resides in Dublin, and where he comes to town to attend at the hearing of his cause.—Norris v. Duckworth, 2 I. Jur. N. S. 95. (R.)

10. The Court of Probate in Ireland has not power to compel the attendance of witnesses, residing in England, at the trial of a cause in this country. If their attendance is necessary, the proper course is to obtain a direction for the trial of the issue in a Court of Law.—Potts v. Batty, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 45. (P.)

11. Semble—The Court has power to bind the rights of insane persons, though not so

1. When the heir-at-law successfully resists probate of a will of real estate, the Court of Probate has not jurisdiction to charge the real estate with the costs of the litigation.—Newton v. N., 13 I. C. R. 245. (C.A.)

2. Administration will be granted to a person interested in a term of years created for trust purposes; but the administration will be limited to the trust term alone.—In re Ryves, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 184. (P.)

3. Application by the solicitor of deceased for administration under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78, without citing next-of-kin, refused; the applicant not being a creditor or having any apparent right to the assets. This sec. only applies to cases in which there is a defunct personal estate to administer.—In re E. Gibbon, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 184. (P.)

4. It appearing by an affidavit that the husband had been in the habit of ill-treating his wife; that he had deserted her; that she had not heard from him after he left her; and that she was ignorant of his residence; the Court dispensed with his signature to an administration bond.—In the Goods of Wilson, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 351. (P.)

5. W. died leaving children. His widow renounced administration. The eldest son, who was of full age, resided abroad. Administration for the use of the younger children, minors, was granted to their uncle.—In re Woodward, 4 I. Jur. N. S. 269. (P.)

6. V. bequeathed all he "died possessed of, to his wife, for the use of herself and his children." The Court was moved to grant administration to the widow, without her giving security, or that the security should be measured at a low amount. The children were not wards of Ch. The Court offered to grant administration upon the conditions that the children were made wards of Ch., and a sum of money lodged.—Cochrane v. C., 5 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (P.)

7. Nothing short of an actual renunciation will come within the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 84.—In the Goods of Usher, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 72. (P.)

8. When one of the next-of-kin has the consent of the majority of the next-of-kin that he be appointed administrator, and is in other respects unobjectionable, the fact that he claims an interest in some property adversely to the intestate's estate, is not a sufficient objection to disqualify him.—Maqueen v. Barron, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 70. (P.)

9. Administration, as in case of intestacy, granted when a party, cited to bring in a will and show cause why it should not be condemned, appeared and lodged it, but proceeded no further. No costs were ordered against him.—Germain v. O'Dwyer, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 91. (P.)

10. Notwithstanding that sureties for an administratrix as curatrix of minors have, after due notice and no objection made, entered into the necessary security, the Court will, on affidavits of their insolvent circumstances, entertain a motion to require the administratrix to give justifying security, or in default to cancel the administration, and give it to another party.—O'Rourke's Goods, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (P.)

11. When, by a private arrangement, the intestate's widow had consented with another party, who had lodged a caveat, that he should get administration; but afterwards herself applied for it, the Court refused to disturb the arrangement, and gave administration to the caveator; but allowed her costs.—Currygan's Goods, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 116. (P.)

12. A testator left all his property to the then R. C. Bishop of K., to be by him disposed of in the most charitable way he might think fit, and appointed the Bishop executor. The Bishop died before the testator, who left his will unaltered. The Court refused to give administration c. t. a. to the Bishop's successor, without notice to the next-of-kin.—Tierney's Goods, 6 I. Jur., N. S. 167. (P.)

13. In a Ch. suit a sum was reported to belong to the intestate's wife, and to be a charge on lands respecting the sale of which proceedings were pending in the L. E. Court. The intestate and his wife had gone to Australia, where she died in 1852; no tidings of him had since been heard.

On motion of his next-of-kin, administration of his goods, &c., limited to substantiate proceedings in the L. E. Court, and a similar grant respecting his wife's goods, were granted to the applicant. The enquiries and advertisements to entitle the party to a general grant to be in the meantime proceeded with.—In re Ramsey's Goods, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 248. (P.)

14. The contents of a lost will must be detailed in hæc verba in the affidavit to support a motion for probate. The motion should be for probate of the will as contained in the affidavit of A., and not as contained in a draft or copy. The next-of-kin must have notice of the motion.—In re Coghlan's Goods, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 271. (P.)

15. A testator, V., desired the name of his principal and residuary legatee to be written as a third witness to his will, under a mistaken idea of protecting his rights. The legatee signed the will.

On discovering his error, V. ordered the name to be struck out as a witness. Lines in different coloured ink were drawn over the name, but it was not obliterated. On consent of all the next-of-kin in this country, probate, omitting that name, was decreed to the executors.—In re Harlin's Goods, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 271. (P.)

1. The Court cannot, under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78, set aside the right of the next-of-kin to administration, merely because she is the mother of a person who claims as his own the property of the intestate.—M'Loughlin v. Feeny, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 323. (P.)

2. Without the sanction of the Master in Ch., or the consent of the parties interested in the fund, the Court will not order an administration bond to be assigned to a petitioner in a Ch. matter, who is entitled to a share of the assets, for the administration of which the petition has been presented; the respondent being the administrator, and a final order having found a sum due by him which could not otherwise be made available.—In the Goods of Fitzpatrick, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 86. (P.)

3. A next-of-kin, or party entitled to distribution, seeking to establish his interest in the assets, either on the construction of the will, or by way of donatio mortis causa, to the exclusion of the other next-of-kin, must do so clearly by affidavit. Failing to satisfy the Court, the general rule will prevail, that the person having the majority of interests will be preferred; and he who has an interest adverse to the assets will be passed over.

Seem—In administration suits brought by married women, their husbands should be parties.—In re Mahony's Goods, 7 I. Jur., N. S. 107. (P.)

4. A case showed a pressing necessity for immediately raising a personal representative to revive in Ch. an abated suit, pending for hearing in the Lord Chancellor's list. The Court limited the time for extracting administration to less than fourteen days.—Phillips v. Hassard, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 126. (P.)

5. V., by will, dated 5th Nov. 1819, expressly revoked a will dated 10th Sept. 1819; and by codicil of even date gave his property (subject to annuities) to his nephew, and added:—"Trusting to his performance of my wishes contained in a will signed at, &c., on the 10th September 1819, and which, if I live and perfect by legal advice, I intend to be my last will." Held, that this passage incorporated the first will, and should form part of the probate, as forming, together with the other will and codicils, the testator's last will.—Bell v. Att.-Gen., 7 I. Jur. N. S. 203. (P.)

6. An administrator became of unsound mind, but was not so found by inquisition. The Court granted administration de bonis non, limited during the administrator's lunacy, and directed the original letters of administration to be impounded, and their effect to be suspended until further order.—In the Goods of Halliday, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 206. (P.)

7. The Court will order an administration bond to be assigned, to be put in suit against sureties, when satisfied that a substantial breach of the condition has occurred; but will not require such evidence thereof as would be necessary to satisfy a jury. Applicant's laches, in not enforcing his rights against the principal, will not disentitle him to an assignment.—In the Goods of De Morin, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 266. (P.)

8. Though more than seven years had elapsed since the supposed deceased was heard of, the Court would not dispense with the advertisements usually required in cases of applications for administration when the death is presumed.—In the Goods of Armstrong, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 402. (P.)

9. About £70, balance of a pension which the pensioner had assigned to a creditor as security for an annuity, remained due to the pensioner at his death. £38. 2s. 0d. was due to the creditor. The Court refused to grant to the creditor administration limited either to the £70, or to receiving and giving a discharge for £38. 2s. 0d., part of the £70.—In re Fleming's Goods, 8 I. Jur. 39. (P.)

10. A will was proved in an English Diocesan Court. There were in this country no assets except a legacy for the legatee's life, which the trustees in the will had lodged, under the Trustee Relief Act, in the Irish Court of Ch., which declared the legatee entitled to the dividends of the invested legacy. Administration, c. t. a., was granted to the legatee, limited to receiving the dividends on the legacy for her life.—In re Airey, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 113. (P.)

11. The personal representative of a deceased administrator preferred as grantee of a grant de bonis non to the original intestate's next-of-kin, who was an aged and delicate lady; the property being very large, and requiring to be managed by a person of active and business habits, the grantee himself having a considerable interest in the assets.

Seem—Independently of the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78, the Court could pass over the next-of-kin.

Security not required for assets brought into the Court of Ch.

A caveat, lodged by a person who had no right to prevent the issue of a grant of administration, dismissed with costs.

Seem—A petition by way of peremptory exception in an interest suit is irregular; and, having an erroneous title, was dismissed with costs.—Flood v. Bradley, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 114. (P.)

12. Administration refused to a creditor who had cited next-of-kin to accept and refuse, though the estate was insolvent, and considerable delay in applying for a grant had occurred on the part of the next-of-kin; but the creditor was allowed his costs out of the estate.—Forster v. Murphy, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 135. (P.)

1. Administration of the goods, &c., of a felo de se granted to the Crown's nominee, though there was a will appointing executors.—In re Ure's Goods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 136. (P.)

2. That the assets consist principally of a farm which requires the superintendence of an active and intelligent farmer—Held, no ground, in choosing an administrator, for passing over the intestate's widow, who was advanced in life. A joint grant never forced by the Court.—Kelly v. K., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 137. (P.)

3. A will, on its face rational, was made by a person, who was sworn to have been at its date of unsound mind, and who was soon afterwards confined as a lunatic in an asylum, where he died.

The Court, reciting in the order its opinion of the invalidity of the will, granted administration as in case of intestacy, to one of the next-of-kin.—In re Goods of Holmes, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 159. (P.)

4. The wife of an alien can dispose by will of her chattels real situated in the United Kingdom, as a femme sole; and when probate, limited to such property as she had power to dispose of, had been granted, it was amended on motion, by making it a general grant irrespective of the power.—Goods of Chatauvillard, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 197. (P.)

5. An executor, who, before the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, had renounced, was not permitted to retract and accept a grant of administration de bonis non c. t. am. Having become next-of-kin, he was allowed to take a grant in that character.—Goods of Givens, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 197. (P.)

6. A notice of motion is required for a conditional order to assign an administration bond.

An order to assign refused, when the two sureties sought to be made liable had signed for payment and as a matter of form, but had declined to act when the officer explained to them their liability, and had been rejected by him, though a third person afterwards signed the bond, and administration had issued.—Russell v. R., 8 I. Jur. N. S. 198. (P.)

7. Deceased's father had not been heard of for twenty-six years, and was believed to have died long since. Deceased died recently. Administration to the son's goods granted, without extraction of a grant to the father.—In re Lindley's Goods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 217. (P.)

8. When an applicant for administration c. t. a., would be beneficially entitled to the whole assets under the will, if valid, made in America, and proved there by the executors, who gave the applicant a power of attorney to take the grant; and would, if the will were invalid, be entitled to a moiety, the Court required justifying security for only one moiety.

Deceased had originally been domiciled in Ireland; but had, as was alleged, acquired an American domicile, and had returned and died here in itinere.

Semble—He never lost his domicile of origin; or, if he did, it was revived by his return to this country.—In re Sullivan's Goods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (P.)

9. In a case of administration on presumption of death, it is unnecessary to negative in the affidavit for administration the existence of the persons who, if alive, would, at the time of the deceased's death, have had interests prior to those of the applicant, if he is unable so to negative their existence. To negative it at the time of swearing the affidavit suffices. Grant made under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78.—In re Sloane's Goods, 8 I. Jur. N. S. 314. (P.)

10. After probate issued, assets of the testator were discovered in Scotland. Held, that under the 21 & 22 Vic., c. 56, s. 14, there might be written on the probate a memorandum that, at the death of the testator, his domicile was in Ireland.—In re the Goods of Mackay, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 80. (P.)

11. An executor having renounced, administration c. t. a., was granted to a residuary legatee. Held, that the grant could not be impeached on the ground that it was made in terms to the residuary legatee named in the will; the residuary legatee not being specifically named in that exact character, but being in law and construction residuary legatee, and the grant being 45 years old.

It is unnecessary to apply to revoke a grant which has expired by the death of the administrator.

Charges of fabrication and fraud, made in a petition, failed. It was dismissed with costs.—Stubber v. S., 10 I. Jur. N. S. 153. (P.)

12. In 1836 a bachelor went to Australia. He corresponded regularly with his family until 1849; but for the next fifteen years was not heard of. His father died intestate in 1853, and administration was taken to his goods. Enquiries for the son had not been advertised; but a person in Australia made an affidavit rendering it almost certain that the son was dead. Under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78, the Court granted to his brother, one of the next-of-kin, administration of his goods, without requiring the publication of advertisements, the father's administrator consenting.—In re Hamilton's Goods, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 155. (P.)

13. Administration was required merely to make title to a term vested in the deceased as mortgagee. There were no other tenants, and most of the next-of-kin consented. The Court gave a grant limited to the premises comprised in the term, although the party was entitled to a general grant.—In re Ward's Goods, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 180. (P.)

14. A creditor obtained administration limited to two policies of insurance, without the will, though a will then existed; but the widow, who had it, did not appear, when cited, or lodge the will. The next-of-kin also were cited, but did not appear. There were no other assets.—Costello v. Elliott, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 180. (P.)

1. Bequest to A. of a residue to be by him disposed of in such public or private charities as he should think fit. Semble, that the gift is void, and cannot be carried out either in Ch. or by the Crown. Therefore, administration c. t. a. was granted to the next-of-kin, as beneficially entitled to the residue; A. and the executors having renounced.—Goods of Burrowes, 10 I. Jur. N. S. 277. (P.)

2. The mutual will of a domiciled Hanoverian subject and his wife, not attested, having been on the husband's death duly decreed for in the proper Court in Hanover, this Court granted administration of his goods, with a certified translation of same, to the nominee, under a power of attorney from the widow, (no executor being named, and there being no issue save a minor), who was by the Hanoverian law the party entitled in her own right, and as the minor's guardian.—In the Goods of Reitzenstein, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 60. (P.)

3. It is not ground for the Court passing over the surviving executor, that he is old, and in embarrassed circumstances, and without interest; but the grant was ordered to be impounded for fourteen days.—Watson v. W., 11 I. Jur. N. S. 311. (P.)

4. A., an officer in the Bombay Staff Corps, being in England on leave, left his lodgings in London on Feb. 4, 1866, in a cab, with his luggage, stating to the landlady that he was going by the Irish mail train to Ireland, where his relations resided. He was never afterwards heard of; nor could any news be obtained of his luggage, though advertisements had been published, and enquiries made, in every quarter. Held, that a grant of administration c. t. a. might be granted to his brother on giving security, and in the renunciation of the executor named in the will, since the Court could not dispense with justifying security.—In re the Goods of McCreedy, supposed deceased, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 311. (P.)

5. The Court will not grant administration to the goods of a deceased person who left surviving several children and next-of-kin, supposed to be dead; but will require the applicant to take out in the first instance a grant to one of such children.—In re the Goods of Galligan, widow, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 312. (P.)

6. M., sole next-of-kin of a deceased brother and sister, being of weak mind, and advanced in age, a commission to enquire into the state of her mind was granted; but was directed not to issue until further order. It was never acted on. An order in Chancery expressly authorised her to manage and receive the income of the property of the deceased brother and sister.

This Court refused to grant to her nominee letters of administration limited to the income thereof only, and during her life only, under the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, s. 78; one of the persons who, if M. was dead, would have been her next-of-kin, opposing the motion. This Court directed, however, that an application to the Court of Ch. should be made to appoint a person to apply for administration.—Lawler v. Metcalf, 11 I. Jur. N. S. 379. (P.)

LXXII. 3. Affidavits.

7. If a will has been lodged in the Principal Registry, and no further proceedings taken thereon, and afterwards a party desires to have it transferred to the District Registry, to prove it there; the affidavit on which the motion is grounded should state that no proceedings have been taken to prove the will in the Principal Registry.—In re Draper, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 42. (P.)

8. When the ptf., heir-at-law of deceased, resided in America, and knew nothing of the case, the Court allowed his solicitor to make and file an affidavit of scripts.—Murray v. Mulligan, 5 I. Jur. N. S. 313. (P.)

9. When a citation to accept or refuse administration c. t. a. has issued, and no caveat has been lodged, the contentious business begins with the issue of the citation, after which all affidavits, &c., should be entitled in the cause, and not in the goods of the deceased.—In the Goods of Spilliesy, 6 I. Jur. N. S. 168. (P.)

LXXII. 4. Appeals.

10. Since the passing of the 20 & 21 Vic., c. 79, appeals from the Court of Prerogative, standing in the Court of Delegates, are transferred to the Court of Probate.—Anderson v. Preston, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 183. (P.)

11. When notice of an appeal is lodged, and no further step taken within the proper time, the party in whose favour the decision has been pronounced may elect to take the probate in a District Registry, upon making the affidavit rendered necessary by the 50th sec. of the Act.—Patrick v. P., 3 I. Jur. N. S. 303. (P.)

LXXII. 5. Appearance.

12. When a party has been cited under the old practice, and has not appeared, the Court will, on motion, order him to enter an appearance, and, in default, will permit the other party to proceed.—Armstrong v. Moore, 3 I. Jur. N. S. 204. (P.)

13. A next-of-kin served an executor with a citation to accept or refuse probate. No appearance was entered within the specified time; but the ptf.'s solicitor knew that the executor was preparing the papers for the purpose of taking out probate. The Court set aside a side-bar rule entered by the ptf. that the deft.'s non-appearance be taken as a renunciation.—Hoey v. Redmond, 7 I. Jur. N. S. 126. (P.)
